The official involuntarily started back: it was evident he had a lunatic before him. He rang a bell, and the captain of the division, the police surgeon and all the constables obeyed the summons. In a moment the room was packed with a crowd of persons, all anxiously looking toward the surgeon, who in such cases has the first word.

"Just so," the latter said, addressing the stranger; "I could tell at the first glance that you were dead. Do you happen to remember your name?"

"Certainly," the maniac replied; "my name is Berthold Schwarz."

"And your address?"

"The grave."

"Who is your murderer?"

"Columbus."

"The same who discovered America?"

"Yes."

"Then allow me to congratulate you. We have captured the smart chap. Come, and I will show you his cell."

"Directly," said the madman in reply to the surgeon's diplomatic little speech, and began fumbling in his pocket, from which he quickly produced a thick packet of neatly bound almanacs.

"Gentlemen, when I was alive I used to sell these almanacs; they are the best sold in this country and only cost threepence apiece. You will admit that these handsome little volumes ought not to be left to molder in the grave, and, as we appear to be on such friendly terms, perhaps the gentlemen will not object to buy the lot."

Too Exacting.

"Miss Isabel," began the youth nervously, "do you play the guitar?"

"No," replied the maiden. "I never tried to learn it."

"Mandolin?"

"I detest the mandolin."

"Can—can you do fancy needlework?"

"Not at all. Fancy needlework is a trade."

"Are you a stamp collector?"

"I have no fads, Mr. Spoonamore."

"You—pardon me—you can cook?"

"Oh, yes. I can do almost any kind of cooking."

"Bread, for instance?"

"My bread has taken the premium at more than one fair."

"Can you—can you darn stockings?"

"I can."

"Sew on buttons?"

"To be sure."

"Keep a house clean and neat?"

"Why, I think so. I do most of our own housekeeping."

"Miss Isabel," said the young man eagerly, "will you marry me?"

"I will not, Mr. Spoonamore. I fear I would not suit you. I can't chop wood nor spade up a garden. Our kitchen girl, Betty, though, would make an admirable wife for you. Shall I go and send her in?"—Chicago Tribune.

Scene at an Inquest.

A verdict reminding us of the result of the famous Ravachol trial was lately given in Texas. A man had been shot dead in a little town on the upper Colorado. An inquest was held on the body. The jury examined it minutely and asked the doctor:

"Where did the bullet strike him?"

"In the heart."

"Just in the middle?"

"In the very center."

"Who shot him?"

"Jake Daniels."

A dozen witnesses deposed that Jake had fired the shot, and Jake himself acknowledged the fact. The jury spent some time in consultation.

"Well, gentlemen of the jury," said the coroner, "what is your verdict?"

"Your honor, we have come to the conclusion that Jake Daniels is the best shot in the district!"—Tagliche Rundschau.

So Would She!

"Now, Georgie, suppose trains to leave a certain depot one hour apart and you get there fifteen minutes after one of them had gone. How long would you have to wait?"

Georgie (with primary arithmetic decision)—Don't know.

"Don't know! What would you do, then, in such a case?"

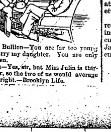
"I'd ast de ticket agent!"—Chicago News Record.

Worse Still!

Mistress—Oh, Mary, see this mirror I have broken and think of the bad luck I shall now have for seven years!

Maid—What, that little bit of a mirror? But think of me—I have just broken the big mirror in the parlor.—Fliegende Blatter.

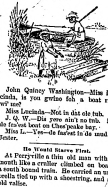
A Strong Argument.



Mr. Bullion—You are far too young to marry my daughter. You are only eighteen.

Tom—Yes, sir, but Miss Julia is thirty-four, so the two of us would average about right.—Brooklyn Life.

Fast.



John Quincy Washington—Miss Lucinda, is you gwino foh a boat ride wi' me?

Miss Lucinda—Not in dat ole tub.

J. Q. W.—Dis yere ain't no tub. It's de fas'est boat on Ches'peake bay.

He Would Starve First.

At Perryville a thin old man with a mouth like a cruller climbed on board a south bound train. He carried an umbrella tied up with a shoestring, and an old valise.

He sat down on a cross seat near the door, deposited his property and beckoned to a train boy who who was passing with a basket of sandwiches.

"Got anything ter eat, young feller?"

"Sandwiches—ham, chicken and tongue."

"Are they fresh?"

"Certainly."

"There ain't no 'certainty' about it," objected the old man emphatically; "the sandwich business is ticklish in hot weather."

"They're fresh," said the boy impatiently; "only been made an hour."

"I'd rather like a chicken sandwich," remarked the old man, "if I knowed I wouldn't draw a wing."

"No wings, sir; all clear meat."

"'Spose you let me see one of them sandwiches."

"Can't sir; they are all wrapped up. Take one?"

"How much do you ask fer em?"

"Ten cents."

"Not by the dozen, young feller; how much for one?"

"Ten cents."

"Great day 'n mornin," gasped the old man, horror stricken, "ten cents fer two bites of bread and a smell of chicken? I'm hungry enough to eat a pickaxe, but I'm game, and I tell you, boy, before I pay ten cents for one little sandwich, I'll set here and roll my eyes and swoller all the way to Bowltermer."—New York Tribune.

The Right Man After All.

A head adorned with shaggy and unmanageable whiskers was thrust out of the window and a voice that fitted the beard inquired:

"What is it?"

"Oh, is this Mr. Higgins?" came a still, small voice from the shade of the doorway below.

"Yes."

"Please come right up to 414 —— street just as quick as you can, and bring your instruments."

"Oh!— — —! I ain't no doctor. I'm a carpenter. Dr. Higgins lives two doors below," and the window came down with a slam that told of former experiences of the same kind on the part of the humble artisan.

But Carpenter Higgins had not got comfortably back into his bed before the bell rang again, and uttering some remarks that were afterward expunged from the record he rose once more and went to the window.

"Well, what the deuce do you want now?" he ejaculated.

"Please, sir," said the little voice, "it's you we want. Pa and ma is shut up in the foldin bed, an we can't get 'em out."—Detroit Tribune.

Her Way.

Witherby—My wife got a dress here yesterday, and it hasn't been delivered yet.

Clerk—Yes; I remember the circumstances. We didn't deliver it because she went out without paying for it.

Witherby—But she might have known you wouldn't send it without the money.

Clerk—That's probably why she asked you to call.—New York Herald.

The Modern Way.

The modern dramatist writes very differently from the old masters. Shakespeare makes Hamlet's father's ghost remark to Hamlet that he could if he would make the young man's hair resemble quills upon the fretful porcupine. The terse, nervous writer of the modern drama would make him say, "I could pompadour your hair while you wait."—Boston Transcript.

Needed More.

"Now, my son," said the father grimly, at the close of a brief but lively interview in the woodshed, "you stand corrected."

"I've got to!" blubbered the boy. "It'll be a week before I'll be able to sit corrected."—Chicago Tribune.

Pipes and Tobacco.

Collectors of tobacco pipes, of whom there are no small number, seldom experience much satisfaction or pleasure in smoking the curious and unfamiliar pipes in their collections. It is necessary to have not only the pipe, but the appropriate tobacco, and to be familiar with the manner of smoking in order to successfully carry on experiments of this kind.

Even the familiar porcelain pipe of the German student, which people buy for its associations or the beauty of its painted bowl, is seldom understood, and few know that the ashes should be allowed to remain in the bowl in order to make it smokable, nor that the coarse, common tobacco called "No. 6" is appropriate for it. The Turkish and Persian water pipes, too, are difficult to manage. They require the fragrant yellow tambake, that must be soaked in water, wrung out and put in the bowl with a live coal or pastelle of camel's dung on top. This pipe is now relegated to the elders, for all the younger generation in western Asia smoke cigarettes.

In eastern Asia, where the pipes retain the small bowl, like those originally introduced from Europe, fine cut tobacco is generally smoked. Japan and China both use this finely cut tobacco.—Philadelphia Ledger.

REVERIE.

A sky of blue and white,
Fleecy clouds slow-stealing,
Distant chimes sweet pealing
Soft music to their flight,
Until every feeling
In my heart breathes delight.

A sea of Heaven's hue,
Changeful, ever glancing,
Sunlight gayly dancing
Over blossom blue,
Deeper, more entrancing
Where shadows linger true,

A silent, stately throng—
White sails idly straying,
Wind's breath gently swaying
Each light-winged cra t along.
Sea-gulls o'erhead playing
On pinions free and strong,

Afar an island town,
Chimneys tall, dark seeming,
Gold-tipped spires bright gleaming
On surging spirits down.
Little thought of dreaming
Where cares on quiet frown,

But thou, O seas, and I,
Sweetest peace are knowing;
Winds to us are blowing
No saddened thought or sigh.
Would that our hearts' glowing
Might in the world's heart lie.

A LITTLE SACRIFICE.

Lydia sat in the porch looking down into the orchard, all pink with apple-blossoms. A warm May wind blew the curls on her forehead to and fro, and made her too drowsy to read "Middlemarch" had sunk into her lap, with one finger between the leaves to keep the place, and she was half-asleep when the sound of voices from the sitting-room behind her floated out, and became a part of her day-dream.

"Seems to me," said a high-pitched tone, which she knew to be that of a neighbor, "seems to me you aint lookin' jest up to the mark this spring, Mis' Marcy."

"Well, I don't know as I am feelin' any too spry," returned the gentle old voice of Lydia's grandmother. "I expect it's this dreadful hot weather comin' on all of a sudden so. I've been thinkin' I'd start in takin' some brimstone and molasses three mornin's and then skip three. Anybody needs a little medicine in the spring. I don't seem to have much of any appetite, and I'm weak as a rag."

"Maybe it's the cookin' of that hired girl from the city, that you ain't used to," suggested the neighbor. "How does she take hold? Is she much of a hand?"

"Well, Lyddy's satisfied with her, and she knows more than I do about the way they do things nowadays. She's visited the governor's folks and round among her schoolmates a good deal, and she's seen just how things ought to be. I guess they set a pretty good table to Governor Cobb's."

"I guess they do," said the neighbor.

"But it's kind o' hard for an old woman like me to get used to newfangled ways. There ain't nothin' relishin' to me in such little warmed-over messes. I declare, I'd like nothin' better for my dinner than a good rye and Injun cake and a nice hot cup of tea!"

"I'd like to know what in the world there is to hender you havin' it?" cried the neighbor, sitting up right.

"Well, Lyddy she says it aint the fashion to have tea for dinner, and I give in to her sooner'n to make a fuss. You see, Mis' Seavey, young folks is young folks. When Lyddy come home from boardin'-school last fall I could see 'twas hard for her."

The old lady paused.

"The house ain't new," she resumed. "Why, I've lived here myself, winter and summer, goin' on sixty year. Our ways here aint like city ways, and she wanted to ask some of her mates up here; but I could tell 'twas mortifyin' to her to think of their comin' to such a poor old place, and me, too, so behind the times.

"So I just says nothin', and let her go ahead her own way, fixin' things up. Goodland, Mis' Seavey! I just wish you could see the best parlor!"

"What has she done to it?" asked Mrs. Seavey.

The village did not think much of Lydia since she had returned from school, a tall, stylish girl, with "more airs than a music-box," as the ladies declared at the Sewing Circle.

"Why, the chairs and the tables is all twisted every which way. Looks as if a high wind had been blowin' through. The blinds is all left wide open, and the sun streamin' in, a-fadin' out the carpet like everything. Body Brussels, too, Mis' Seavey!"

"Good land!" said Mrs. Seavey.

"She's got out some of the best chiny and stood up the plates on the mantel-piece, and more of 'em hangin' on the wall. There's old shawls a-danglin' in the doorways. That picture of father, painted when he was a young man, she's took down altogether. She says it's awful."

"Dear suz!" cried the neighbor.

"But I'm sure the minister used to set a sight by that picture. I never come in when he was here but I found him lookin' at it. She's stood some plants on the floor by the windows. She's—well, I can't tell you all. She wants we should set there common every day. I don't know what her grand-father would say if he could see it. I expect he would turn over in his grave."

Poor Mrs. Marcy was quite out of breath as she poured out her soul. To have the sacred best parlor profaned had been a sore trial, which it took all her love for Lydia to bear. To set there "common" would have been to her as wicked as to carry her knitting to the meeting-house.

"She wants I should dress up every afternoon in my best black silk and the white net cap Sarah Sheldon made me. That silk's to good to set around in. It's only been turned twice, and I've kep' it nice for funerals and when I do go to meetin', though that ain't often now. Why, it'll get all shiny in no time if I go to puttin' it on every day, let alone my feelin' like a fool all rigged up so when there ain't no occasion. Lyddy, she's different. Young folks ought to rig."

"Well, I never!" gasped Mrs. Seavey. "Why, you just take my breath away! Do you mean to say you're going to give in, and let that highfalutin critter ride over you rough-shod? I guess in my own house I should eat what I wanted and set where I wanted and wear what I wanted. Here you are a-worryin' yourself into your grave just because Lyddy wants to be fashionable!"

Grandma's voice trembled as she interrupted.

"Now, Mis' Seavey, I don't want you to think I'm complainin.' At my time o' life it's hard work tryin' to git into new ways. But land! you can git used to anything. It makes Lyddy happy. Poor child! It's hard for her to be penned up here in the country. There ain't a prettier-appearin' girl, in New York or Boston I'll be bound."

Mrs. Seavey bounced up in wrath.

"Pretty-appearing! What's pretty appearing, I'd like to know, when she's pesterin' your life out, and just as selfish as she can be? I've got to run back now, for John's comin' home to dinner, but I'm just goin' to stir you up a mess of rye, and Injun cakes, and if you don't have some of 'em for your dinner, and a dish of tea, too, I'll come in bimeby and give your Lyddy a piece of my mind. Good-by!"

Off she trudged, burning with a sense of the old lady's wrongs, and trying to peep into the reconstructed parlor as she went through the entry.

Lydia sat quietly after the voice had died away, no longer sleepy, but half-amused, half-sad. She had been thoroughly discontented at the homely old farm-house after her very modern home at school. It really seemed to her she had shown nobleness of soul in choking down the despair in her heart, and trying to make the best of things.

The parlor especially she looked upon quite as an artistic triumph. But no amount of talking and scolding could put the Marcy household on a stylish footing. Plain and old-fashioned it was, and so would remain in spite of all her efforts.

"Grandmother is so obstinate!" Lydia had groaned in her own room. The little talk she had now overheard put a new aspect upon it all. She saw as if a veil had fallen from her eyes how her grandmother had been sorely bewildered by the new ideas, and how the sweet old soul had struggled silently to come into harmony with a strange order of things, with an unselfishness that made Lydia's trials seem trifling.

"Oh, dear me!" Lydia sighed. "What a selfish creature I have been! I do love to have pretty things around me, and to live in a nice way, but I am young, and can find happiness outside of chairs and tables. Grandma is too old to change. Dear grandma! she is a blessed saint. She shan't put up with my whims a day longer!"

In a generous impulse she sprang up and entered the sitting room.

Mrs. Marcy had dropped in her turn into a doze in her chair. Lydia noticed with a pang that the wrinkled face, in its frame of soft silver hair, looked thin and careworn. She stopped to leave a soft kiss of repentance on the pale cheek.

Then she flew to the best parlor, and in a very little while had brought back its old prim order. She pushed the hair-cloth chairs back stiffly against the wall, closed the blinds at the windows, and took away every æsthetic touch she had given.

Last, but not least, out of the closet under the stairs she dragged the despised portrait of her ancestor in the gaudy militia uniform. Laughing quietly at its grotesqueness, she hung this work of art up on its old nail, where it was easily the most prominent thing in the room.

When all was done, a gloomier and more forbidding apartment had never been seen, but just as it was, grandma loved it.

When the old lady awoke, the sun was streaming in across the sitting-room floor, and the bell was ringing for dinner. Lydia appeared in the doorway with a bright smile, prettier than ever.

"Come, grandma," she called, "dinner is ready, and Mrs. Seavey has just sent in little Katie with some delicious cakes for you."

A great pleasure flitted over grandma's face as she stepped eagerly toward the dining-room, leaning on her cane.

"I do believe they're rye and Injun," she exclaimed as delightedly as a child, helping herself from the well-filled plate.

"I thought perhaps you might like a cup of tea, too," added Lydia, getting up from her place to put the cup down by her grandmother, and trying not to see the scorn of the hired girl from the city, who had a great contempt for dinner at noon and tea at dinner.

Lydia laughed and chatted cheerfully until the meal was ended, and Mrs. Marcy breathed a long sigh of satisfaction.

"I declare!" Mrs. Mercy said, raising from her seat at last, "I don't know as I've ever had anything taste so good to me. Those cakes of Mis' Seavey's were just beautiful, and I do enjoy some hot drink in the middle of the day. It kind o' goes to the spot."

Lydia drew her gently along until, through the open door of the parlor, her glance fell upon grandpa's picture back in its old place on the wall.

"Why, Lyddy!" she whispered, with a start of surprise. "Why, Lyddy!"

"Yes," answered Lydia, merrily. "I suppose the parlor is better the way you used to have it. It goes better with the rest of the house. So I put all the things back again as they were."

Grandpa's eyes wandered lovingly over the stiff and solemn room. A mist came on her spectacles, and as she took them off to wipe them, her thin old hands were trembling so that she could hardly hold them.

"Somehow," she said to herself, with a sort of sob in her throat, "somehow I can't help feeling as if I'd been off on a visit and was just a-gettin' home."

Lydia threw her arms around her grandmother, giving her such a hug that the glasses flew across the room, and the black cap was hopelessly unsettled.

"Oh, grandma!" she cried, with a deeper meaning than grandma knew, "we've both got home, and like the people in the fairy tales we're going to stay here and be happy ever afterward!"—Youth's Companion.

There are two systems in use for intensifying the lights of the lamps used in floating or fixed beacons. By the catoptric system the light is reflected by a silvered copper parabolic reflector, by means of which the beams of light are brought into parallel rays sent in the direction desired. By the dioptric system the diverging rays of light are bent in the direction required by refraction, the flame being placed in the focus of a glass lens, by means of which the diverging rays are bent parallel to each other so as to form one solid beam of light.

PROHIBITION PARTY

The National Convention of the Prohibition Party Select Their Candidates.

Gen. John Bidwell for President and J. B. Cranfill for Vice-President.

CINCINNATI, Special—The national convention of the Prohibition Party assembled in this city June 29, for the nomination of candidates for president and vice-president.

It was 10:50 a. m. when the proceedings opened by the playing of the hymn "America" on the immense organ, aided by a bugle band on the stage. The audience rose and joined in singing the hymn.

Chairman Dickie, of the national committee, then called the convention to order and introduced Dr. J. G. Evans of Hedding College, Ill., who formally opened the convention with prayer. Rev. Dr. Lockwood of Cincinnati then, in behalf of the city and of the State of Ohio, welcomed the delegates. Prof. Dickie responded to the address. He said the Prohibitionists knew precisely what they were here for, and exactly where they were going, and there was no danger that any obstacle would divert them from their relentless purpose.

"We are here," he said, "to put candidates in nomination and to keep them in the field until the polls are closed next November."

This reference to "no fusion" was loudly applauded. They are also here, he said, to make a platform as unequivocal as the best English could make it, and which should be on both sides of no question; which should say exactly what it means, and mean precisely what it says. He closed by naming

EX-GOV. ST. JOHN AS TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN.

Wild cheering, the waving of flags and handkerchiefs greeted the mention of the name of ex-Gov. St. John. The shouting was renewed again and again as the noted Kansan stepped forward and assumed the gavel. Ex-Gov. St. John said:

Members of the convention, I return my sincere thanks and shall ever be grateful for the distinguished honor of being chose to preside as temporary chairman of this magnificent political convention—the greatest and grandest moral force and brain power that ever convened on American soil.

It represents a party that dares to do right because it is right and condemn the wrong because it is wrong. It stands for peace, prosperity and happiness to every home and death to every saloon in the land. It demands for women equal pay in the shop and equal say at the polls. A free ballot for the white men of Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Iowa, as well as for the black men of Mississippi, Louisiana and South Carolina. That North and South, East and West, black and white, rich or poor, every human being should have protection to life and property. That the expenses of the government be levied upon the wealth instead of the necessities of the people. We claim that any system which imposes a high tariff on the food, fuel and clothing of the poor and lets the diamonds of the rich come in free is legalized robbery under the guise of protection and ought to be forever abolished. That all money should be issued by the general government and every dollar, whether gold, silver or paper, should stand upon an equality before the law for all purposes and that the coinage of both metals should be free. [Applause.] That railway and telegraph lines should be under the control of the government to be operated at cost in the interest of all the people. [Applause.] That president, vice president and United States senators should be elected by direct vote of the people, and that the term of the president be extended to six years, with no second successive term for any man. Here we are and we have come to stay. From this hour on let no fusion, no deals, no compromise be our motto.

THE FIRST FIGHT IN THE CONVENTION

occurred on the question of adopting the temporary rules prepared by the national committee. These provided that only delegates present should be entitled to vote. This would have deprived a number of far off states, and especially those in the extreme South, of a part of their representation in the temporary organization, as all their delegates could not come on account of the expense. J. B. Cranfill of Texas took the lead in behalf of these delegates. He said that if the rules were adopted it would leave control of the convention in the states around Cincinnati. It would cost $3,500 to send the thirty-five delegates of Texas here, and they could not afford it. The temporary rules would probably be the permanent rules. He moved that each delegation have right to cast its full vote, whether all delegates were here or not.

Prof. Dickie said that it was a matter of no concern, as permanent rules would be reported before important business was done. The same battle need not be fought twice. After a lively tilt Cranfill carried his amendment on a rising vote, and then the rules with this amendment were adopted.

On motion of Cleghorn of Wisconsin, the roll of states was called and each delegation announced the members it had selected for representation on the committee.

There was another campaign tune sung by the quartet, and then, on motion of Prof. Dickie, the convention adjourned until 4 o'clock, after giving directions to the committees to proceed at once to the work assigned to them. J. P. Pinkham of Minnesota, J. C. Templeton of Montana, A. M. Barnum of North Dakota, J. A. Lucas of South Dakota and J. F. Smith of Wisconsin are on the platform committee.

The new national committee, which immediately elected Samuel Dickie chairman, includes W. J. Dean and J. P. Pinkham of Minnesota, E. E. Saunders and H. H. Mott of North Dakota, Prof. A. R. Cornwall and H. H. Roder of South Dakota and S. D. Hastings and E. W. Chaflin of Wisconsin.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Soon after 4 o'clock the convention was called to order for the afternoon session, a big audience being present. Rev. Father Martin Mahoney of St. Paul, a Catholic clergyman, then offered prayer and formally opened the session.

The presentation of the report of the committee on permanent organization recommending Col. Eli Ritter for permanent chairman and Sam Small for permanent secretary and reinstating the rule voted down in the morning, giving states votes only for delegates present, was the signal for a fight. Rev. Sam Small presented a minority report signed by fifteen states recommending that each state delegation be permitted to cast a full vote to which it is entitled. He made a vigorous speech in favor of the minority report, and protested against depriving these states of their full vote as a monumental injustice. The majority report blotted out states and made the Prohibition national convention simply a mass meeting of men with money enough to get here. The Prohibition party was against monopolies.

David Morgan of Minnesota was astounded at Mr. Small's speech. He had seen only a corporal's guard at Prohibition conventions under the old rule. When one man could vote for a whole state only a corporal's guard ever came to Prohibition conventions.

A FEW FELLOWS WITH LITTLE BRAINS

did all the voting, and told the other fellows to stay at home, it was not necessary for them to go to the convention. He wanted Prohibition conventions well attended, and was opposed to a few fellows running the machine. The question was discussed pro and con for nearly an hour by about a dozen delegates and apparently half the convention wanted to talk, as the ceasing of every speaker was greeted by scores of delegates shouting for recognition. Mr. Cushing of Maine said that Maine had given the last house of representatives a speaker who made a considerable reputation as a counter of heads, but Thomas B. Reed never undertook to count men who are not present.

Finally the debate was closed by Chafin of Wisconsin moving the previous question, but even this did not quiet the delegates, and the hall was full of the interjections and points of order. A roll call by states on the adoption of the minority report finally brought the matter to a focus. It resulted in the defeat of the minority report—350 to 721—and then the majority report was adopted, so that absent delegates will have no vote. The idea that a precedent as to representation in future national conventions was being settled, had far more to do with the outcome than presidential preferences. After the announcement of the result of the roll call, the convention adjourned until 8 p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

Singing and prayer by Rev. David Tait, a Quaker preacher of Chicago, opened the evening session. Col. Eli Ritter of Indiana, who was selected for permanent chairman, was escorted to the platform to succeed Gov. St. John as presiding officer. His appearance was greeted with loud cheers. Col. Ritter's address was received with great favor.

There was nothing remaining before the convention, and Albert Dodge of Michigan said that when the women were organized for prohibition the party would have the greatest factor beneath the Stars and Stripes, and he moved that Mrs. Gougar be heard on the work of the White Rose league. It was carried and Mrs. Gougar addressed the convention. Adjourned till to-morrow.

SECOND DAY.

The first business after the usual opening ceremonies was the consideration of the platform. Two reports were presented and after a long and spirited discussion the report of the majority was accepted after knocking out a clause favoring the free coinage of silver. The report as adopted is as follows:

The Prohibition party in national convention assembled, acknowledging Almighty God as the source of all true government, and his law as the standard to which all human elements must conform to secure the blessing of peace and prosperity, presents the following declaration of principles:

The liquor traffic is a foe to civilization, the enemy to popular government and a public nuisance. It is a citadel of the forces that corrupt politics, promote poverty and crime, degrade the nation's home life, thwart the will of the people and deliver our country into the hands of rapacious class interests. All laws that under the guise of regulation legalize and protect this traffic or make the government share in ill-gotten gains are "vicious in principle and powerless as a remedy." We declare anew for the entire supression of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of alcoholic liquors as a beverage by federal and state legislation, and the full powers of the government should be exerted to secure this result. Any party that fails to recognize the dominant nature of the issue in American politics is undeserving of the support of the people.

No citizen should be denied the right to vote on account of sex, and equal labor should receive equal wages without regard to sex.

Railroad, telegraph and other public corporations should be controlled by the government in the interest of the people, and no higher charges allowed than necessary to give fair interest on the capital actually invested.

Foreign immigration has become a burden upon industry, one of the factors in depressing wages and causing discontent, therefore our immigration laws should be revised and strictly enforced. The time of residence for naturalization should be extended and no naturalized person should be allowed to vote until one year after he becomes a citizen.

Non-resident aliens should not be allowed to acquire land in this country, and we do favor the limitation of individual and corporate ownership of land. All unearned grants of lands to railroad companies or other corporations should be reclaimed.

Years of inaction and treachery on the part of the Repulican and Democratic parties have resulted in the present reign of mob law, and we demand that every citizen be protected in the right of trial by constitutional tribunals.

All men should be protected by law in their right to one day's rest in seven.

Arbitration is the wisest and most economical and humane method of settling national differences.

Speculations in margins, the cornering of grain and products, and the formation of pools, trusts and combinations, for the arbitrary advancement of prices should be suppressed.

We pledge that the prohibition party, if elected to power, to ever grant just pensions to disabled veterans of the Union army and navy, their widows and orphans.

Recognizing and declaring that prohibition of the liquor traffic has become the dominant issue in national politics, we invite to full party fellowship all those who on this one dominant issue are with us agreed, with the full belief that this party can and will remove sectional differences, promote national unity and insure the best welfare of our entire land.

We stand unequivocally for the American public school and are opposed to any appropriation of public moneys for sectarian schools. We declare that only by united support of such common schools, taught in the English language, can we hope to become and remain an homogeneous and harmonious people.

OTHER PARTIES DENOUNCED.

We arraign the Republican and Democratic parties as false to the standards reared by their founders: as faithless to the principles of the illustrious leaders of the past to whom they do homage with the lips; as recreant to the "highest law" which is as inflexible in political affairs as in personal life, and as no longer embodying the aspirations of the American people or inviting the confidence of enlightened, progressive patriotism. Their protest against the admission of "moral issues" into politics is a confession of their own moral degeneracy. The declaration of an eminent authority that municipal misrule is "the one conspicuous failure of American politics" follows as a natural consequence of such degeneracy, and is true alike of cities under Republican and Democratic control. Each accuses the other of extravagance in congressional appropriations, and both are alike guilty; each protests when out of power against the infraction of the civil service laws, and each when in power violates those laws in letter and spirit; each professes fealty to the interests of the toiling masses, but both covertly truckle to the money power in their administration of public affairs. Even if the tariff issue as represented in the Democratic Mills bill and the Republican McKinley bill is no longer treated by them as an issue upon great and divergent principles of government, but is a mere catering to different sectional and class interests. The attempt in many states to wrest the Australian ballot system from its true purpose, and to so deform it as to render it extremely difficult for new parties to exercise the rights of suffrage is an outrage upon popular government. The competition of both the parties for the vote of the slums and their assiduous courting of the liquor power and subserviency to the money power has resulted in placing those powers in the position of practical arbitrators of the destinies of the nation. We renew our protest again these perilous tendencies and invite all citizens to join us in the up building of a party, as shown in five national campaigns, that prefers temporary defeat to an abandonment of the claims of justice, sobriety, personal rights and the protection of American homes.

The convention then adjourned till the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The hall was crowded to suffocation at the evening session. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Hagans of Indianapolis, and then Chairman Ritter announced that the roll of states would be called for nominations for president. When California was reached, ex-Gov. St. John of Kansas took the stand at the request of the delegation and presented the name of Gen. John Bidwell of Chico, Cal. L. B. Logan of Ohio nominated Gideon T. Stewart, and a New York delegate nominated W. Jennings Demorest. The ballot resulted: Bidwell 590, Stewart 139, Demorest 179. Minnesota cast 22 votes for Bidwell, 1 for Demorest and 3 for Stewart; Montana, Bidwell 3, Demorest 1; North Dakota, Bidwell 3; South Dakota, Bidwell 3; Wisconsin, Bidwell 32, Stewart 6. Bidwell's nomination was then made unanimous.

The following vice presidential candidates were presented: Sam Small of Georgia, William Satterlee of Minnesota, Joshua Levering of Maryland, J. B. Cranfill of Texas and Thomas Carskadon of West Virginia. Small withdrew before a vote was taken, saying he was no man's fool and knew before he was here many days that the ticket had been made up. The ballot gave Levering 330 votes, Cranfill 350, Satterlee 26 and Carskadon 21. Before the votes was announced changes were made and Canfill received 416 votes, nine more than enough to win. The convention then adjourned sine die.

Herbert Spencer.

Herbert Spencer, who lives quietly in Regent's Park among his books and with the society of a few old friends, is described by the Paris Register as "a singularly modest man, with gentle voice and almost feminine grace. He dines away from home often, haunts the Athenæum club and occasionally visits a place of amusement. Comic opera is his delight. He finds in it an offset to his lucubrations upon the data of ethics. Life is very pleasant to him. Fancy a man about five feet nine inches tall, wearing gray trousers, a black frock coat, a low-cut white waistcoat, highly polished shoes with cream colored overgaiters, an old-fashioned stand-up collar and a black cravat—eyes gray and soft, mouth firm, cheeks pinky white, bushy iron gray whiskers encircling the neck—and there you have Herbert Spencer, the English philosopher. No matter how fine the day, he carries an umbrella. Mr. Spencer tells with genuine amusement of a letter he received not long ago from a wild West American publisher, asking how much he would take for the exclusive right to publish his poem 'Fairie Queen' in the states."

Ward off disease by removing the cause of it. It's with the liver or the blood, nine times out of ten. A sluggish liver makes bad blood—and bad blood makes trouble. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure blood. It invigorates the liver and kidneys, rouses every organ into healthful action, and cleanses and renews the whole system. Through the blood it cures. For Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Scrofulous, Skin and Scalp Diseases—even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages, it's a certain remedy.

Nothing else is "just as good." Anything "just as good" could be sold just as this is. It's the only blood-purifier that's guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or the money is refunded.

The catarrh that isn't cured costs $500. Not to you, but to the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. They promise to pay you the money, if you have an incurable case.

They don't believe that you have one.

A RELIABLE SUPERSTITION.

The Fatal Number Thirteen Is Solemnly Discussed and Fixed.

Several men were talking of superstitions so common among all classes of people. As a matter of course, one of the things touched upon was the supposedly fatal number thirteen. An old colored man who happened to be within hearing distance felt moved to remark:

"I want's to tell you gem'men not to make fun o' dat dar thirteen bus'ness. I ain't superfishus, but I tell you don't you eat at no table whar dar's thirteen. I done do dat, and I hope to die if pretty near ever one of dem ain't dead and buried."

His hearers expressed surprise at his remarkable statement and asked for particulars.

"Well, some of dem got killed and one thing an' another, and some jest nachelly died. But dey is pretty near all gone to-day."

"How long ago did this thirteen at-table incident occur?"

"Now, lemme see. Been about thirty year since the war, ain't it? Well, I specs it must a happened fifteen or twenty years before the war broke out. But it makes me feel about as oneasy as though it was only yistorday. I specs I'll be the next most any day."—Chicago Times.

The Romance of a Locket.

In an interesting volume recently printed for private circulation, called "Recollections of Octogenarian," Mr. Carrick tells the following curious anecdote:—"Lady Hester Stanhope had a warm friendship for my uncle (Sir John Moore). She sent me a sword and a drum when I was four years old, with a note saying 'When you are a man come to me and I will give you a real sword for your dear uncle's sake.' The physician's who travelled with her in the East recorded that she said to him she had never known but three really great men. They were her uncle, William Pitt; her brother James Stanhope; and Sir John Moore. The last two were both killed in the Battle of Corunna. She got a lock of the hair of each, and set them in a gold locket, with the coat-of-arms and the name of each respectively. In 1814 Lady Hester determined to live permanently in Syria, and sent for her possessions—this locket being among them. The ship containing her valuables sailed and was heard of at Cyprus; soon after one of those Mediterranean squalls came on, and nothing more was ever heard of ship, crew, or cargo. Thirty years elapsed. Lady Hester had long been dead, when a letter came to the Admiralty from the Consul at Jaffa saying that an Arab had picked up on the beach a gold ornament with Frank characters. . . This was the long-lost locket; and Lord Stanhope kindly giving up his claim to it, it became Sir Graham Moore's, and is now in my possession."

Cowed by a Broker.

An amusing story is told of the marquis de Mores, who recently was successful principal in another duel—it is difficult to say how many he has fought. The narrator of the story was dining at the Maison Doree with a stockbroker, well-to-do fellow, who cuts a very presentable figure in Parisian life. While the couple were engaged with their fish, the marquis de Mores entered, and favored the stockbroker with a most affable bow, to which the man of money responded with an almost contemptuous nod. "How is it," asked his companion, in amazement, "that you dare affront such a man—the most inveterate fire-eater in Paris?" "Ah, mon ami," replied the broker placidly, "six months ago I should not have ventured to do it, but now it is different. If the marquis were to challenge me he knows that I should post him on the bourse for the sum he owes me. I am quite safe until he pays me, which will be, I hope—never. C'est tout!"—London Figaro.

When You Think of It.

Mamma—"Mamie was telling me a queer thing just before she went to bed. She said that yesterday to-day was to-morrow. Did you ever think of it?"

Papa—"Yes; and to-morrow to-day will be yesterday. How does that strike you?"

Flustered.

Every man to his trade! Many an old soldier, who has faced the cannon's mouth without flinching, would find himself fairly "frightened out of his wits" if he were called upon to face an audience.

A Northern general, famous as a fighter, was at a regimental reunion sometime ago, says the New York Recorder, and was expected to propose a toast to the regiment. He made a rambling but highly eulogistic speech, and concluded by saying:

"Here's to the gallant One Hundred and Twenty sixth New York, the last to reach the field, and the first to leave it."

He sat down amid shouts of laughter, and then, seeing that he had made some mistake, he undertook to rectify it.

"Gentlemen," he said, "you must forgive my slip of the tongue. The toast I wished to propose was: Here's to the gallant One Hundred and Twenty-sixth New York equal to none."

There was another burst of laughter, and the general rose for the third time, but his words were lost in the general merriment, and the toast was honored as he had already proposed it.

No Comparison.

"Wadsleigh, you look down-hearted."

"I am—I played the devil yesterday."

"Lucky dog! Cheer up—I played the races."

Large as a Dollar

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy, sickening and disgusting. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not effect a cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores commenced to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of

The Claus Spreckels Sugar Company of San Francisco has written a letter to the treasury department stating that the Pacific coast is being flooded with sugar, the production of cheap labor from Hong Kong, China. The letter states that the sugar is raised in the province of Hong Kong by Chinese labor and is refined in Hong Kong, a free port, by Chinese laborers who work for 10 cents per day. As there is no duty on sugar under the new tariff law, the Spreckles company says it will be impossible for it, with the American standard of wages, to compete with the Chinese sugar which is produced by an English company, and asks if the reciprocal provisions of the tariff law cannot be invoked for its protection. Secretary of the treasury Foster replied to the letter stating that as Hong Kong is a free port and no discrimination is shown against the United States, the matter is not a subject of executive action, but rather, for congressional action.

BULLETS AND BLOOD

Bloody Fight Between Striking Iron Workers and Pinkertons at Homestead.

Eleven Strikers and Nine Detectives Killed and Many Seriously Wounded.

Capital and labor have clashed at Homestead, Pa., and the town is red with blood. Never in the bloody history of riots in this vicinity, save the great railroad riots of 1877, has there been such carnage and such a battle. The 300 Pinkertons who came in a boat to Homestead early this morning have desolated many a hearth and their shots have aroused such desperation that it is safe to say that before the men would now allow the mill to be operated by non-union men they would burn it over their heads.

The story of the battle is hard to tell. In the dark mist of early morning, when the town was quiet, the rumor of the arrival of the boat load of Pinkertons reached Homestead. The word was sent along the line and the streets in almost an instant were crowded with men, women and children, hurrying in the direction of the works' landing. Some were only half clad. On the maddened mass rushed, some to return without even a tear in their eyes, others to part forever on the battle ground. Mothers stood with babes in their arms wondering what would be the result if the Pinkertons made an attempt to land. The most horrible forebodings have been realized and there are many homes in distress, many mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers and sweethearts with tears running down their cheeks, mourning the loss of some one who fell by the bullets from that boat.

The landing of that boat will ever be remembered at Homestead, and for some generations to come the fathers will tell their children of the bloody battle of the Monongahela. When the boat was sighted by the multitude of workingmen and their families, a feeling such as was never felt before stole over the anxious waiters. As it came near, the feeling became more intense. The crowd stood motionless until it became known that they were going to land. As if by an unseen power of humanity made a rush and 100 feet of the high fence was seen to crumble like paper. The men were in the yard and close behind them were their families.

A more determined body of men never entered a battle. The sight of their wives and children seemed to give them courage. Their only thought was of home, and no class of men would die for home sooner than these workingmen. The men resembled a drilled army more than a howling mob, as all lined the bank evenly. There they stood for an instant, watching every move of the Pinkertons. Suddenly a form was seen to break from the ranks of the workingmen and move toward the water's edge. Almost instantly a flash was seen on the boat, followed by a report, and a form was seen to roll down the bank. One man had met his fate. The shot was the signal for an attack, and opened one of the greatest wars between capital and labor that the Keystone State ever witnessed.

What followed after the first shot can only be realized by those who were present. The air was filled with the

of both parties. The battle was at its height, and regardless of the rapid firing the howling of the workmen could be heard above all. The sight of their fellows falling at their sides gave them new life and courage, and although their firearms were not equal to the improved Winchesters of their enemy, they drove them back. The workingmen had won the first battle. The dead and wounded were carried to the rear and cared for by the women, while the men stood their ground and kept up a constant attack upon the boat. The Pinkertons' firing dropped off after they were driven back, and all but a few men took refuge in the boat's cabin. The others were soon at their side. The cabin was a poor fortress, as the balls from the few rifles on the shore penetrated its frail side, and the Pinkertons were at the mercy of the men until the boat pulled into the middle of the river. When at a safe distance from the bullets of the now maddened men, they looked after

THEIR FALLEN COMRADES.

The dead were laid on the cabin floor, while the wounded were placed on cots and given such medical attention as was at hand. The sight of dozens of dead and wounded seemed to make them more determined to accomplish their purpose of going into the mill. The captain of the Pinkertons ordered the dead and wounded taken to Braddock, and the Little Bill towed the barges to the river bank, where they were moored. The boat then withdrew and was soon on its way to Braddock with her load of mutilated humanity.

No sooner had the boat left the barges, when the second attack was made. The barges containing the Pinkertons proved a valuable fort, and, with their bodies concealed and their excellent guns, they had a great advantage over their enemy. The workingmen were still lined along the river bank within full view of the men in the barges. The firing was rapid for some minutes, the Pinkertons getting the best of the fight. When they saw several men fall, and many wounded retreat, they RUSHED FOR THE LANDING.

They jumped over the sides of the barges and up the banks toward the mill. The men seemed to expect this, and the report of their guns rang out. The Pinkerton men were scattered, and fell never to rise again. When they saw their mistake, after it had cost the lives of some of their party, a stampede occurred. When the Pinkertons retreated to their barges, they scrambled over the sides faster than they left it a few moments before. During this attack at least three Pinkertons met death, but how many were mortally wounded could not be learned. The workingmen lost but one man, a Slav. Several were wounded, and were cared for by the women in the rear. There was a lull for many minutes after that. It was only to refill cartridge belts, for the fighting blood could not be cooled.

The sun rose gloriously, and from a distance the day in Braddock was as serene and quiet as a Sunday. Jack Morris stood up at the pumping station and looked out of a window. It was 8:15 o'clock and not a shot had been exchanged for thirty-six minutes. A moment later a Pinkerton ball and he fell headlong out of the window, and forty feet below his bones were broken on the shore. Six men rushed down the bank and dragged his body up. James Ryan was shot in the arm while doing it. Then the fight reopened and continued in a desultory manner for an hour and a half. Three men were killed and many slightly wounded. The men shot often into the barges and a cannon ball struck one of them. The gunner was shot. The men standing in the mill had entrenched themselves and when the bullets went through they took advantage of every bar of iron, and every pile had men behind it armed with guns and revolvers.

It was a thrilling sight to witness the regular army line move fearlessly to the river front when the Little Bill came down. Not a man who had a gun hung back, and many hundreds who had only clubs, sledges, picks, etc., brought up the rear. They were shot at by two hundred rifles and several were wounded, a cannon ball of their own friends devastated their ranks, but not one faltered. And when repulsed, the Little Bill backed out into the river, defiance went up from the men. None of these men were drunk—most of them had not tasted a drop of liquor. The saloons, like other business houses, are closed. The men are determined, and on every side, as the day grows, the expression is heard: "Before the mills run non-union they will have to be rebuilt."

A HOARSE YELL OF TRIUMPHANT

Many of the wounded on the shore were spectators, and two of the killed were not employed at the works. William Foy, who is dying at Dr. Osborne's office, was employed in the mines near here, and went to the river as a spectator, and also to look after his father, who was one of the strikers and who was in the attack. Andrew Streigel, the twenty-one-year-old boy who was killed, was a driver for a brewery, and joined his brother in the attack. His brother, Henry Streigel, and Peter Foster, the Slav, are at H. Williams' undertaking establishment. It had been turned into a morgue. Streigel lived in the same house which has been turned into a morgue.

After a lengthy conference of the amalgamated leaders a meeting of the locked-out men was called. It was attended by 1,000 men, many of whom carried muskets. The national officers of the amalgamated association made a strong appeal to the men, while the cannons roared outside.

The big form of President Weihe loomed up, and as loud as his voice was he was almost unable to be heard. He pleaded with the men to withdraw, and assured them that the barges containing the deputies would immediately be removed. Assistant President Garland then took a position on top of a furnace and at the top of his voice said:

> Men, for God's sake and your families' sake, and for your own sake, listen to the pleadings of cool-headed men. We have positive assurances that these deputies will be sent away, and all we want is the statement that you will not do any more firing.

P. H. McEvoy, vice president of the Mahoning and Shenango district, said:

> "There has been an awful slaughter of human life here to-day, and by all means further sacrifices should be avoided. I am a stranger in town, but from to-day's action I know full well if you continue doing as you are, the state militia will be ordered out before dark and you will be defeated. In case the militia come, you will lose ten men in every instance where you have so far lost but one. You have gained just achievements over Frick, and now aren't you willing to allow these boats to return?"
> "Yes, we will, if they show the white flag," was the reply of the excited men.

At this juncture President Weihe again attempted to address the crowd, but instantly there was a loud report, and with one accord every man rushed pell mell to the scene. Even while the appeals were being made, strong-hearted men were endeavoring to pump oil on the barges. It was useless to continue the meeting, and it adjourned.

While the men were waiting for night all to burn the barges and the men in them, Hugh O'Donnell, the leader of the strikers, grasped an American flag and mounting a pile of iron made an impassioned speech for mercy for the Pinkertons lying like caged wolves in their barge. The extraordinary power of O'Donnell over the strikers became manifested at once. A few people demurred and cried out: "Let's burn them," but they were silenced. "Let's turn them over to the sheriff and make information for murder against them," said the leader.

This was received with cheers and when a striker waived his hands and asked the Pinkertons to surrender there was an immediate response from the boat. Capt. Hein, the leader, had fled. Many others escaped when the Little Bill came down the river and the remainder were terror stricken. They were mostly green men in labor troubles and

EXPECTED TO BE KILLED.

In an incredibly short time the leaders of the strikers came on deck. Then began a strange scene. The strikers crowded into the boats, capturing rifles and stealing and looting everything. They were mad with rage.

The first man taken off the barge was dying, shot through the side; then one by one the strikers followed in charge of an alleged guard, each man carrying a valise. The guards carried Winchesters taken from the Pinkertons. Six Pinkertons were reported killed and many were dangerously wounded. The guards took the men a mile to a rink. There were 209 of them and probably two-thirds of them were by the time they reached the improvised jail. They were compelled to run a gauntlet composed of men and women. They were knocked down with stones, struck with clubs, knocked almost into insensibility and otherwise maltreated. When they reached the improvised jail medical attention was needed by a large number. They were generally glad, however, that they were not killed. None expected to leave Homestead alive.

They claim they were miserably misled, and that they came from different towns; were strangers to one another, and had been told that they were wanted as watchmen. In proof of this each man wore a badge with the inscription: "Watchman, Carnegie Company, Limited." They were huddled in the rink absolutely terror stricken, fearing a lynching from an immense crowd of people gathered outside. There seems to be little danger of this, however, as they are guarded by fifty of the locked out men armed with Winchesters.

LATER.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 7.—After the carnage of yesterday the town of Homestead to-day was almost as quiet as a sleepy country village, and the sad duty of a decent interment to three of the five striking workmen, who were instantly killed in the battle that raged fiercely along the beautiful banks of the Monongahela, was the chief evidence of the storm of yesterday. Up to 8 o'clock to-night absolutely nothing has occurred to mar the peace which was profound.

The strikers are masters of the situation to-day, and the best evidence that they could possibly produce of their intention to protect the property and not turn the town into a hell, where anarchy and destruction rule, lies at the scene of last night's battle, where the immense plant of the firm of Carnegie, Phipps & Co. stands practically uninjured, and at a distance shows no signs of the fearful work of the preceding twenty-four hours. The ruin that was incident to yesterday's preparation for warfare has been repaired, dismantled fences around the works have been rebuilt, the yard has been cleaned of all debris and inside the works the old watchmen of the firm peacefully perform their customary patrol. Their statement is the best that can be said in behalf of the striking men and they can honestly assert that they only protected their right—that is to prevent the introduction and protection of non-union workmen.

They are orderly and careful observers of the peace. No property has been destroyed, no pillage except that attending enacted after the surrender last night, has been attempted, no disorder has occurred, and all the members of the firm are absent. In this borough, where every man is a mill worker, only one opinion is expressed. The darkest story of the whole affair is that of the running of the gauntlet after the surrender, and the brutality inflicted upon the defenceless Pinkertons.

Careful inquiry among eye witnesses show that the reports of it were not exaggerated, and all that the men can say cannot extenuate it. The women were the most virulent and savage after the surrender, and it was due largely to their acts and to their goading of the men that the leaders were unable to restrain the mob. Tales innumerable are told of the scenes along the line of the gauntlet. The Madame Du'arge of the movement was a woman who stood near headquarters and outdid all the men. That the more intelligent and conservative men realize that the mobbing of the defenceless cannot but injure their cause is shown by their sensitiveness to the publications of the subject.

BAKER NOMINATED.

The Alliance Party of Minnesota Nominated Gen. Jas. H. Baker for Governor

Leaving the Rest of the Ticket to Be Decided Upon By a Committee.

The Alliance Party of Minnesota was called to order in St. Paul on the 7th inst., by chairman Phelps of the state central committee who announced that George W. Sprague of Fillmore had been decided upon for temporary chairman and Albert Warren for secretary. Secretary Warren then read the call for the convention. Mr. Sprague then took his seat thanked the delegates and appointed the following committees:

Credentials—A. T. Foster, Blue Earth; F. C. Harrison, Otter Tail; P. Johnson, Ramsey.

Resolutions—Frank Hoskins, Otter Tail; Gen. J. H. Baker, Blue Earth; W. W. Erwin, Ramsey; Capt. Nelson, Hennepin; Prescott of Grant; Herman Ash, Minneapolis.

Permanent Organization—J. B. Hompe, Otter Tail; A. M. Gardiner, Blue Earth; H. Schram, Grant.

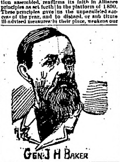
Order of Business—Carrington Phelps, Hennepin; J. La Due, Rock; J. M. Dukes.

Senator Hompe, in behalf of the committee on permanent organization, moved that the temporary organization be made permanent, and the motion was adopted.

THE PLATFORM.

The following platform was adopted by the convention:

The Alliance party of Minnesota, in convention assembled, reaffirms its faith in Alliance principles as set forth in the platform of 1890. These principles gave us the unparalleled success of the year, and to discard, or substitute ill-advised measures in their place, weakens our cause and alienates our people. We, therefore, re-declare our faith in the following propositions:



GEN. J H BAKER

First—We affirm our hostility to every species of class legislation, and demand that such as now exists shall be swept from the statutes. Equal justice to every citizen and special privilege to none, should control the letter and spirit of all legislation.

Second—We denounce the present cunningly devised scheme of a protective tariff as the most vicious form of class legislation, with a sole purpose in its use to build up some interest at the expense of all the others; and, therefore, we insist on radical reduction of tariff taxation.

Third—We demand a gradual increase of the national money for the people, to the minimum of $50 per capita; and as a part of this increase we favor the issuance of legal tender treasury notes in sufficient volume to transact the growing business of the country on a cash basis without damage or advantage to any class; such notes to be a legal tender in payment of all debts, and to be paid out by the government for all purposes and to all classes of the people; and we insist that silver shall have all the rights in coinage, and the qualities of legal tender which gold possesses, as our fathers did before us.

THE WHEAT QUESTION.

Fourth—The wheat question is the paramount issue in this state, and by its importance overshadowing all other interests. We call especial attention to the minority report made by E. J. Moore, of the committee appointed by the last legislature to investigate the public elevators of the state. The evidence is sufficient to convince unprejudiced minds that the price of wheat is arbitrarily fixed each day and sent to producing points throughout the Northwest; also that the powerful combine embraces this entire continent, reaching to Liverpool and thence to continental Europe. To meet this gigantic trust the efforts of individual enterprise are futile, and all the national laws of supply and demand are ignored. Therefore we invoke the power of the state, and ask our next legislature to make sufficient appropriation for the erection of elevators at deep water on Lake Superior where grain can be stored, unmixed, at a nominal cost by individual producers awaiting sale and shipment to the markets of the world. We call attention to the report of the chief inspector, which shows that over $80,000 of a surplus has accumulated from the weighing and inspection of grain. We ask that this fund be applied to this purpose. We also ask that whatever change is made in the grain laws that the inspecting and weighing of grain by the state shall be extended to the country stations. It is of the utmost importance to the wheat producers of this state that all farmers have equal facilities for reaching the tracks of railroads at country stations and that a law be passed making it the duty absolute of every railway corporation, company or association now or at any future time operating a railroad or acting as a common carrier, to furnish side track facilities for erection of private elevators or warehouses of a capacity of not less than 5,000 bushels each for the storage of grain awaiting shipment on such line of railway, and to permit and allow such elevators to be erected and controlled by any person, association or corporation desiring to erect, maintain, control and operate the same for said purpose, and further making it the duty of such railway to receive, transport and carry over its line promptly all grain offered for shipment in car lots without previous storage and as offered.

THE "PASS" MUST GO.

Fifth—We insist that all forms of discrimination by railway corporations, including free passes, transient rates and terminal charges shall cease; and we demand such a schedule of charges as shall be based on actual cost with necessary expense and not on watered stocks; and we believe that both the state and nation should control such corporations with renewed vigor and force.

Sixth—We demand a radical reform in the present unequal system of taxation; that hidden property be made to pay equal taxes with visible property; that mortgage indebtedness be deducted from the tax on realty; that an equitable system of graduated tax on incomes shall be established, and also a residuary tax upon great estates.

Seventh—We favor a material reduction of interest, and demand that severe penalties be attached to the practice of usury.

Eighth—We ask of congress the passage of laws prohibiting the alien ownership of lands, and if possible to reclaim all so held by alien and foreign syndicates, and all held by railroad companies in excess of that absolutely necessary, and that these and all other lands be held for actual settlers only; and we favor protection to our forests.

Ninth—We believe that the government should own and operate the telegraph and telephone lines as part of the postal system.

Tenth—We favor laws for the suppression of option gambling and the abolition of all forms of trusts and combines.

CAPITAL VS. LABOR.

Eleventh—We demand the repeal of all laws which place capital above labor; and we favor an equitable lien law, a better convict labor law, a factory inspection law, an employers' liability act, the prohibiting the employment of children under fifteen years of age, free text books for public schools, and the eight-hour work day on all national, state or municipal work.

Twelfth—Regarding life as more sacred than property we hold that neither corporations nor private persons shall be permitted to retain in their employ armed bodies of men to take life for the sake of defending property.

Thirteenth—We demand a more vigorous immigration policy, to the end that European paupers, criminals and vicious classes shall not be permitted to enter this republic, and that protected interests shall be prohibited from importing labor to compete with free American labor.

Fourteenth—We insist that all great officers of the government whose duties directly affect the interests of the people, shall be made elective by the popular vote, and the president and vice-president of the United States should not be eligible to a second term.

Fifteenth—As the improvement of the public highways is of the most vital importance to all the people of the state, we therefore demand an immediate revision of our road law; and as an aid to such improvement, without increasing the farmers' taxes, we favor the appropriation of one-half of all moneys from the sale of liquor licenses so long as such laws exist, and a state tax on inheritances for the benefit of the fund for the betterment of the public roads.

Sixteenth—We hold the war for the union to be closed, and its issues adjusted, therefore we oppose force bills, and all other measures calculated to reopen the fountains of bitterness, or renew fraternal strife.

Seventeenth—We do not belive that the Union soldier should receive all reward in gratitude, but that he richly deserves liberal pensions and tender care for his illustrious services.

Eighteenth—We favor the nationalization of the liquor traffic, the co-operative union of all the agricultural and laboring classes in this state and nation for the purpose of carrying into effect these principles, and we call upon every thoughtful and conservative member of the Alliance in Minnesota to assert his manhood and preserve his consistency in standing by the old and approved principles for which he has hitherto so nobly contended, and thus again secure success and save the Alliance from destruction by internal foes.

CARNEGIE HELD RESPONSIBLE.

Gen. Baker had additional resolutions to offer touching upon the present difficulties at Homestead, which were presented later in the afternoon and adopted. They were as follows:

Whereas, our fellow-laborers at Homestead, Pa., have been shot down by hired Pinkertons while engaged in a strike for living wages,

Whereas, Carnegie & Co.'s conduct in the affair is in keeping with the policy of the entire plutocratic ring of the country; and

Whereas, The strikers had exhibited long-suffering forbearance, seeking to adjust the pending difficulties without loss of property or life, until it became necessary to defend themselves against the armed detectives; therefore,

Resolved, That we hold Carnegie & Co. responsible for this bloody affray.

Resolved, That the event, deplorable as it is, but reveals the stern fact that something is wrong in the relation of labor with capital, and that it becomes the duty of orderly people, irrespective of party, to dispassionately inquire into the cause of such trouble, with a view to adjust them without recourse, if possible, to arms.

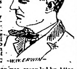
Resolved, That in the event of a strike or lock-out the state or national government should take possession of the property involved so as to prevent loss or bloodshed, leaving the civil authorities to settle the troubles satisfactorily to all parties concerned.

BAKER NOMINATED.

This brought the convention face to face with the great question whether it should proceed to the nomination of a state ticket. The delegates were not prepared to air their views in open convention, so after a few moments of hesitation, one anti-Donnellyite moved that the convention take a recess for three-quarters of an hour, which meant that the entire convention should go into executive session in a back room. The recess was ordered, and for over an hour they remained in close conference. The discussion was general, and each delegates was given an opportunity to express freely his views on the situation. They paid their respects to Donnelly for his departure from the faith, and denounced his policy and his leadership of the People's party. When the question came to a vote all except four or five were in favor of making a nomination for governor.

It was nearly 6 o'clock when the conference came to an end, and on the convention reassembling Mr. Erwin moved that they proceed with the nomination for governor. Senator Hompe was on his feet instantly.

"Without any preliminary remarks or commendation," commenced the Otter Tail statesman, "I will proceed to nominate a man who is worthy of our encomiums—Gen. J. H. Baker."



The nomination was seconded by Attorney Erwin, and the Blue Earth man was elected the nominee of the party on a rising vote.

There were cries for Baker from various parts of the hall, and the general stepped forward to make his formal acceptance, which he claimed must be upon certain conditions.

GEN. BAKER TALKS.

"It is the unexpected which always happens, and certainly this is unexpected to me," said Gen. Baker. "The platform which we have adopted was carefully considered in our committee meeting. It meets with my hearty endorsement and approval, and I would not consent to any change from those principles adopted in 1890. The Alliance made a matchless campaign, and I had the honor of bearing no unimportant part in the contest. In advocating those principles I had the honor of espousing the same as adopted here to-day. We must be consistent, and there is no reason why we should depart from them. It is apparent that the reform forces in the state are not united, and no one regrets it more than I. You will pardon me if I say I cannot accept this nomination except conditionally. I will not, I dare not, and I cannot permit my nomination to come in the way of the harmony of the reform forces in the state."

WANTED A RECONCILIATION.

The general then proceeded to unfold his scheme for establishing this harmony. He believed it would be best to pause here and appoint a committee on conference to reconcile, if possible, the two factions at next week's convention of the People's party. If a reconciliation could be accomplished he would be willing, he said, if it was found necessary, to retire from the field. His resignation he would place in the hands of the state committee.

Gen. Baker, on taking his seat, was loudly applauded. A Wilkin county delegate said that his county had favored the nomination of Owen, but in view of his late action Wilkin county was for Baker. Indeed, very few of the delegates profess to understand the position of Mr. Owen, and he is not the popular man he was several weeks ago. They feel that he may have been making a bid for the People's party nomination. Attorney Erwin requested the chairman to appoint a state executive committee of the Alliance party of twenty-five members—a new state central committee—this committee to be instructed to wait upon the state central committee of the People's party at the convention next week, as suggested by Gen. Baker. In the event of a conference the committee is to have full power to act as it may seem best for the Alliance party. If no conference is granted the committee will then proceed to fill out the state Alliance ticket, with Gen. Baker at the head. The People's party will then be responsible for any fight which may be made.

Chairman Sprague then announced the following

STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE:

John B. Hompe, Otter Tail; John Diamond, Blue Earth; W. H. Hixson, Grant; George W. Sprague, Fillmore; R. J. Hall, Stevens; R. H. McGhee, Chisago; Carrington Phelps, Hennepin; Capt. A. H. Nelson, Hennepin; W. W. Erwin, Ramsey; A. T. Foster, Blue Earth; Nels Anderson, Otter Tail; Thomas Ward, Ramsey; C. G. Johnshrud, Freeborn; J. B. Dukes, Hennepin; A. L. Gardner, Ramsey; S. H. Harrison, Mower; Albert Warren, Lincoln; Frank Hoskins, Otter Tail; P. A. Peterson, Steele; Charles Canning; St. Louis; A. R. Green, Dodge; ex-Senator Mathias Nachbar, Scott.

On a motion of S. H. Harrison of Mower county it was decided that in case the two parties did not harmonize the members of the state central committee should be empowered to organize congressional district committees, selecting one member from each county to act with those on the state committee. Before an adjournment was taken the convention was addressed by Walter Muir, an Alliance leader of North Dakota, and Prof. Dobby, editor of the Progressive Age of Minneapolis.

After the convention adjourned the new state central committee met and organized. On the motion of Carrington Phelps W. W. Erwin of St. Paul was unanimously elected chairman. Albert Warren, the former secretary, was reappointed temporarily, and will discharge the duties until a permanent secretary is elected.

LOST HIS HEAD.

Ravachol, the French Anarchist and Murderer, Guillotined in Paris.

Large Crowds of Excited but Orderly People Witness the Execution.

PARIS, July 12.—Ravachol, the anarchist, murderer and thief, was executed this morning. He was awakened at 3.40 o'clock by the jail officials at Montbrison and informed that the day of his execution had arrived. Ravachol replied:

"It is well."

"Have courage," said an official.

"It would be unfortunate, indeed, if I had not," retorted Ravachol.

When the prisoner arose from his bed he was offered the choice of changing his prison clothes for the clothing he had worn during his trial.

"Do you want help?" asked a bystander.

"Thanks, I can dress myself," Ravachol replied, adding laughingly, "You see I am quite swell. One would think I was about to be going to a ball."

As he placed his feet in his shoes he noticed that he had forgotten his socks. He said: "It is wrong not to put on socks, as I have damp feet. 'Tis not easy to lace these shoes." He then asked for a drink of water and drank it at a gulp. After these preparations in the cell had been completed Ravachol was taken to the office of the prison, where he was asked if he had any wish to express. "Yes," he replied, "I want to address the crowd. I have a few words to say." The magistrate, whom the French law requires to be present, said: "There won't be any crowd." Ravachol looked disappointed and exclaimed: "Ah, procureur."

HAD NO USE FOR RELIGION.

The prison chaplain here asked if Ravachol wished to see him. Ravachol replied that he had no need of his services; that he never had any religion. Notwithstanding this answer the chaplain approached Ravachol, saying:

"I come to bring you for the last time the consolation of religion and to put before you the image of Christ, whose law you disregarded."

"I don't care a rap for your religion," said Ravachol. "I don't want to see your crucifix. If you show it to me I will spit upon it. All of you people encourage superstition, and try to make people believe what you cannot prove."

Deibler here approached Ravachol and began to bind his arms behind his back. Assuming an air of banter the prisoner said: "This is civilization; this is progress." Turning to the chaplain he said: "Religion! what folly. How the world is besotted." Deibler here took hold of him and pushed him toward and into the van that was in waiting, which at once started for the guillotine. In some way the knowledge that this notorious criminal was to be put to death became known, and gathered about the place where the guillotine was set up, eager to see the end of the man who, for a time, by his dynamite outrages terrorized Paris. The approaches to the scaffold were guarded by lines of troops, who kept the way clear for the condemned man and the executioner's party. Slowly the van passed through the lines of silent troops and drew up near the spot where the instrument of death had been erected. As Ravachol descended from the van, silence fell upon the crowd. Once alongside the guillotine the prisoner was seized by the assistants of M. Diebler, the executioner, who, with the celerity attained by long practice, soon bound him hand and foot. His elbows were drawn back behind him and bound together, his shirt was opened at the neck and turned down, and in a moment his unresisting form was pushed upon the sliding plank that carries the body forward in a reclining position, so that the neck is directly under the knife. Just as he was slid forward Ravachol shouted, "I have something to say." Diebler paid no attention whatever to this, but proceeded to let the knife drop. Just as the heavy blade started on its fatal journey Ravachol shouted, "Vive la Republique," and a second later his severed head was lying in the basket placed in front of the guillotine to receive it. After the morbid curiosity of the crowd had been fully satisfied by seeing the end of Ravachol they slowly dispersed. There was no single incident among the crowd worthy of note.

CHOLERA VICTIMS.

Many Deaths Reported Daily in the Cities of the Caucasus.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 12.—On Friday 191 new cases of cholera and 32 deaths were reported in Astrakhan, 62 cases and 16 deaths in Saratoff, 130 cases and 57 deaths at Baku. 6 deaths in Tiflis and nine new cases in Tearisin. Two thousand emigrants from infected districts are quarantined in the roadstead at Astrakhan. They are in a miserable condition, being without medical attendance and food and water being scarce. The Caspian flotilla is seizing all vessels that try to evade quarantine. Large numbers of the inhabitants are fleeing from Astrakhan and Saratoff. It is reported that the governor of Astrakhan shot down three rioters with his own revolver. The police of Baku, whose demand for an increase of wages has been rejected, are quitting the service. The absence of the czar at present is unfortunate, as nobody has authority to overrule the red tape which delays imperative measures and decisive action. Baku is almost deserted. The populace stormed the railway stations, helped themselves to tickets when the officials refused to supply them and traveled on the roofs of the railway carriages.

Elevated Track Scheme.

CHICAGO, July 12.—An elaborate scheme for abolishing grade crossings in Chicago was laid before the council to-night in the final report of the elevated terminal commission. The commissioners come out flatly in favor of a general system of track elevation, and declare their belief that the plan is the only feasible one. They recommend that the terminals be removed from the down-town district. The sale of property now in use in that section of the city is advocated and figures are given showing that the proceeds from such sales would build termini in less objectionable parts of the city, elevate tracks and leave the companies a handsome balance.

Will Abolish Commissions.

CHICAGO, June 12.—A committee of the Chicago & Ohio River Traffic association had a conference to-day with Vice President Harahan, of the the Illinois Central, on the subject of passenger commissions in southern territory. It is understood that the result was entirely satisfactory, the Illinois Central readily consenting to act in harmony with the association lines in abolishing commissions. As the Chicago & Eastern Illinois had already agreed to the arrangement there now appears to be no obstacle in the way of an immediate adoption of the proposed reform.

Yesterday three diffrent agents representing as many different firms met with about sixty of the town clerks and chairmen of the boards of supervisors from various towns in the county to look over the devices manufactured for voting under the new law—known as the Australian system. All agents explained the many different booths from common cloth to steel, and gave their prices. A few of the townships placed orders—but only a few.

The chances for the election of this reform ticket are increasing every day The masses are rallying to its support in every state. The bosses of the old parties are losing their intimidating power. The party lash is arousing the indignation of those who have too long been slaves to party. The National Republican most heartily indorses and supports the People's party ticket. Bravely let every heart respond to the call of duty and labor for its triumphant election.—Preston National Republican.

He appears in his native costume, sings Japanese songs and gives a short speech in his native tongue. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

St. Paul News: Gen. Clarkson does not think that Mr. Carniegie is in the right in his contest with the Homestead workingmen. In an interview upon the subject he said that "Carnegie's vast fortune had been made by his workingmen and he had written much about the responsibilities of wealth. Now was his opportunity to sustain his reputation as a philanthrophist. His workingmen must be right in their contentions, There have been no such convulsions in business as could possibly make these great reductions necessary. Mr. Carnegie should settle the difficulties at once and be generous to those men. He has discussed the beauties of co-operation in magazine articles, and he should now put his theories into practice."

It seems to be almost certain that the Republican ring headed by Governor Merriam will have Knute Nelson nominated for governor at the Republican state convention the last of this month. Mr. Nelson will get the nomination because he is a Norwegian and the Republican leaders openly claim that if he is nominated they will be able to stampede nearly all of the Norwegian voters out of the People's party and back into the Republican ranks. This is a rank insult to the Scandinavians of the state and we believe that they will resent it next fall in a manner that will make Knute very tired.

Mr. Gladstone will probably return to power with about a third of the majority behind him that he supposed he would have. Had the Irish people been united on the subject of home rule, the Liberals would have had easy sailing, but the sharp divisions and the revolutionary feeling in Ulster against an Irish parliment, foreshadow such distracting turmoil that the Tories, pledged to give Ireland no more independence than can be helped, have secured a good many votes from people who dread agitation and are tired of the Irish question. It is perfectly evident that so long as Ireland doesn't get home rule in something more than a shadowy way, the thorn will lacerate John Bull's side. The English government, whatever it may be, will ultimately have to follow Disraeli's advice and give Ireland by legislation all that may be accomplished by a revolution.—Minneapolis Journal,

SHORT LINE TO SPOKANE,

About August 1st regular daily passenger service will be inaugurated between St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Spokane, Wash., on the Great Northern extension. For the present mixed trains run Sundays and Wednesdays each way, 512 miles, between Havre, Mont. and Spokane. This new route will be the short line from the east to Spokane and eastern Washington, and is the only line to the Flathead Valley. It also opens up the famous Kootenai country. The roadway is in most perfect condition, and has lowest grades of any transcontinental line. See Agent S. S. Buzza for further information. Do not forget to write to your eastern friends about half fare excursions on the Great Northern Aug. 30th and Sept 27th.

Every one, who as a boy, lived in a wild cat country or where the ghosts of the departed were believed to walk this solid earth at night, remembers the same experiance of whistling to keep up courage when passing haunted spots—whether to scare away ghosts or "varments." Well, that experiance is what the average republican politician of North Dakota is now repeating daily. The thing that haunts him like an apparition from the accuser's court of purgatory—is the Independent party—and whenever he nears the woods, or passes over a coulie—he whistles and sings with all the energy of terror-trepidated organs. Of course the Independents will take fright thereat like the cayotes and hover far off on the crest of the hills mocking the politician in the vale—but it is the hope of the latter that they may never come near enough to show the igneous humor in their eyes or the flash of angry teeth.—Grand Forks Herald.

Norman County Herald: The United States department of agriculture has just issued a bulletin giving experiments with sugar beets during the year. The trials were made in Minn., Wis., N. D., S. D., Io., and Mont., states in which the profitable raising of sugar beet has been a matter of speculation, The average per cent of sugar in the beet ranges from 11.05 in Wis. to 13.46 in Mont. Minnesota has an average of 13.38 and is exceeded only by Mont. and S. D. With the exception of beets raised in Missoula Co. Mont, containing 15.82 percent of sugar Polk county stands the the highest of all its beets averaging 15.42 per cent. But the beets raised in Polk county were larger in size than those raised in Mont., and it being a known fact that a heavy growth decreases the percentage of sugar Polk county can safely be said to stand at the head of every county heard from. This demonstrates the superiority of Red River Valley soil for production of sugar beets—a fact which has been for a long time well known to a few who have made experiments with the saccharine root, Justice Hanson has been having a busy week of it so far. The first case of the week was upon complaint of J. C. Dahl, Martin Williams was arrested for allowing his horse to run at large in the village. A jury trial was asked for, the trial coming off yesterday. The jury brought in a verdict of guilty and Mr. Williams was fined five dollars and costs. We understand that the case will be carried to the district court. The next in order was a warrant for Hans Frettem, drunk and disorderly. Frettem had been in a fight and Justice Hanson assessed him $10 and costs, The next was the other man in the fight, Peter Lindbloom. Peter cashed in five dollars and costs. Peter rather got the worst of the fracas as Frettem broke a beer glass in his face inflicting some very ugly wounds. The next in order was the arrest of George Williams upon complaint of Hans Frettem. George put Hans out of the saloon in a rather forcible manner after the row, leaving several unmistakable signs of violence on Hans' face. Justice Hanson thought that Williams was justified and discharged him assessing the costs to Frettem. Thus endeth the week up to to-day.

SELECTIONS

THE RICHEST OF NATIONS.

No Other People Can Match Dollars with the Cherokee Indians.

T. M. Buffington, president of the Cherokee senate, and C. C. Boudinot, nephew of Colonel E. C. Boudinot, the famous Cherokee statesman, have rooms at the National.

Mr. Buffington attracted no little attention in the lobby of [illegible] by his magnificent phy[illegible] [illegible] about 6 feet 4 inches in height, and weighing close to 200 pounds. Mr. Boudinot, while not as tall as his friend, is a magnificent representative of the Cherokee race, standing fully six feet, and weighing about 180. The two gentlemen are not full blooded, but very light, the parents of each being half white.

They are in the capital as the representatives of the Cherokee tribe to ratify the sale of the Cherokee strip to the government. The land sold compromises 622,000,000 acres and the price agreed upon by the contracting parties is $1.42½ per acre. This will make the Cherokees, who number about 30,000, the richest nation or race of people in the world. The Osage tribe comes next in wealth, as the money they have deposited with the government for the sale of lands gives them an interest of $62.50 per capita each quarter.

"Few people in the states realize that we have a little world practically among ourselves," said Mr. Boudinot, "but we have one of the most complete governments in existence. Our land is the most fertile, and we raise all the grains of the west, and in the southern portions we raise cotton and tobacco. We receive about $150,000 interest from the federal government, and with that we support ours. We have our own congress, the house of representatives having forty members, and our senate, of which Mr. Buffington is president, eighteen. Our laws are all printed in both English and Cherokee. We have had a written code of laws for seventy years, and also an imperfect system written in 1808. We have our judiciary, composed of minor courts as well as district and supreme. All proceedings, however, are carried on in the English language.

"The Cherokee is the most civilized of all the Indians. We have always been farmers, and have had the government in our debt instead of them supporting us. The Cherokees originally were found in east Tennessee, North Carolina and northern Georgia by De Soto, who mentions them. Our traditions, however, tell us that. We had 81,000 acres of land given us then, which we sold back in 1838. In 1817 a large part of our people left and went to Arkansas. Eventually all went there and finally succeeded in uniting once more on our present reservation in 1838. In 1807 we adopted the Shawnees, and in 1868 the Delawares.

"We today own land in Alabama about 12,000 acres, and other lands in Arkansas. We sold the Oklahoma strip some few years ago, and have also sold the outlet of 622,000,000 acres for $1.42½ the acre to the government, which contract we are now here to ratify. We will leave the money with Uncle Sam and draw the interest, and will use it upon our roads. We have spent many thousands upon them already, but want to make them perfect. The word Cherokee is pronounced 'Chal-o-gee.'"—Washington Post.

Why the Eggs Did Not Hatch.

Since he visited the last poultry show in New York, Andrew Meredith, of Cornwall-on-the-Hudson, has been impressed with the idea that his hens have been wasting their time in hatching out ordinary farmyard eggs. He wanted to improve his breed of fowl; so about a month ago he purchased a setting of Langshans for four dollars from a Buffalo dealer, and placed them under an "old reliable" Plymouth Rock hen. He set her in a room over his barn and allowed nobody to disturb her. After the hen had sat for nearly a month with the dogged perseverance of her kind, without any results, Mr. Meredith began to entertain dark suspicions about the probity of the Buffalo man, and yesterday he lifted then hen from her nest to examine the eggs.

He was shocked to find a large black snake coiled among a lot of broken shells. The reptile was half torpid. It had eaten all the eggs, and the hen had sat upon it, probably, for at least a fortnight, and kept it warm and comfortable while it digested its food. After Mr. Meredith had killed it she wanted to sit on its dead body.—Exchange.

A Big Snake Vanquished by a Bird.

Walter Fewell witnessed a novel fight between a gopher snake and a kingbird. The contest was fought to a finish in the road near the creamery. The snake was a large one and capable of swallowing his feathered opponent with ease, but the bird was too active for him and came out winner. The bird would hover over the snake but a foot or two above its head, and would strike it on the head from time to time, the snake all the while trying to seize the bird, but unable to do so on account of its rapid movements. After some twenty minutes his snakeship gave up the fight in disgust and hurried away to avoid the thrusts of his tormentor.—Visalia Times.

Old Theaters in Hungary.

A series of prints at the Vienna Musical exhibition illustrates the history of theaters, in Hungary, which dates back to very remote times. In the accounts of 200 years ago it is mentioned that an English troop of actors played English dramas in Hungary at the court of Francis Rakoczy when he resided with great pomp and splendor in Transylvania. The actors had come all the way from England in carts and carriages, carrying all their property with them.—London News.

A Church Strikes Oil.

"The best paying church I know of is probably a little country church in Washington county, Pa.," said A. L. Rutledge, of Pittsburg. "It's a Presbyterian church and is near McDonald. Two years ago McDonald was a milk station. Passing by there on a train all one could see were a few hundred milk cans on the station platform and the little church on the hillside, with its little parsonage alongside. Well, oil and coal and natural gas were discovered around McDonald, and today there is an ideal oil town there, with miners' camps scattered about.

"Productive? Why, oil wells were struck that flowed 25,000 barrels a day. There was no tankage big enough to hold the supply and the oil was allowed to run down the hillside and into the streams. Outsiders banked up the creeks and scooped enough oil out of the dams they made to net them $100 a day, carrying the oil away by the bucketful. Natural gas? Why, the pressure was so strong that the greatest difficulty was experienced in boring the oil wells. The gas formed a cushion that it was absolutely impossible in some cases to drive the augers through.

"Derricks were put up all about the little church. The pastor did not enjoy any increase of salary and the church income did not grow until some of the enterprising elders conceived a brilliant idea and carried it out. They bored for oil on the church lot and they struck it—struck it rich. At first the oil poured out at the rate of 1,000 barrels a day. The society grew rich, of course, and the income is still flowing in smooth as oil, and the little church on the hillside is one of the wealthiest religious organizations in the state."—Chicago Tribune.

A Whirlwind in Kensington Gardens.

On a recent Sunday afternoon a curious phenomenon was witnessed by those persons who were walking in Kensington Gardens. A rough, grating sound suddenly filled the air. It appeared to come from the north side of the park, and those who looked in that direction in order to discover its cause saw an immense column, a dozen feet or more in diameter and nearly a hundred feet in height, rapidly approaching them. It was a genuine whirlwind on a small scale. The column appeared to consist of sand, gravel, dust, leaves of trees and twigs of wood, and it approached with a centrifugal motion. As it swept onward it was seen to be quite opaque, any object which it passed being hidden from view.

An unfortunate lady who was in the Broad Walk in Kensington gardens suddenly found herself caught in the grasp of the strange monster. People at a short distance from her lost sight of her for a moment, and then she became visible again, but it was seen that her dress was flying wildly in the air, and that she herself was positively revolving just as the column itself had done. Fortunately no damage was done.—London Tid-Bits.

What Was It?

A bird, the body of which was about the size of that of a quail, whose plumage was of "changeable black"—changing from black to green and blue and purple; whose beak was an inch in length, pointed with yellow and based in scarlet, and over which was a bony disk of blue; whose tail was the length of that of the mocking bird, and whose legs were long and slender like those of the snipe—altogether a strange bird for this section of country, was given Prosecuting Attorney Elliott by Frank Baker, of Concord Settlement, Saturday. It was alive and "chipper" when Elliott got it, but after it was placed in a cage that night it beat itself almost to death against its prison bars, and on Sunday it died. It was probably a species of the rail.—Charleston Democrat.

Venerable Trees.

A very interesting work is in course of publication by M. Gadeau de Kerville on the ancient trees of Normandy. The most remarkable trees yet described are two yews of La Haye de Routot, in the department of Eure. They are, respectively, about 31 and 27 feet in circumference at the base of the trunks and about 57½ and 47½ feet high. Their ages are estimated by the author to be not less than 1,500 years. A chapel has been constructed in the hollow trunk of one of these trees about 10 feet high and 6½ feet deep.—Popular Science Monthly.

Americans in China.

There are at present in China only 1,022 citizens of the United States, nearly half of them women. Of this number 400 reside at Shanghai, 186 at Tien-Tsin and 75 at Canton. Nearly one-half, 506 in all, are missionaries, 28 are in the diplomatic and consular service, 6 are mining engineers, 23 are in mercantile occupations, 28 are in the Chinese customs service, 73 are seafaring men, 7 are ministers, 3 are machinists, 2 are professors and 345 are "unclassified."—Washington Star.

A Russian Band.

There is now playing in Paris a Russian horn band, each horn being capable of producing a single note only. So perfect is the training that the band produces the effect of one equipped with ordinary instruments, and even running scales with the rapidity and precision of a violin.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A New Electric Railroad System.

Edward H. Brown, a member of the Salem (Mass.) common council, has invented a method of operating electric street railways which does away with the present unsightly and dangerous poles and overhead wires, all wires being securely buried underground.—New York Telegram.

Olive Oil Adulterated.

Of thirteen samples of California olive oil examined by the board of horticulture only two were found to be pure. The oil of sunflowers and cottonseed enters largely into the adulteration.—Chicago Tribune.

The Raised Hat.

The hat proper—that is, the raised hat—was first made in England by Spanish hatters about 1510, having been introduced into France a century earlier.—All the Year Round.

"August Flower"

"I am Post Master here and keep a Store. I have kept August Flower for sale for some time. I think it is a splendid medicine." E. A. Bond, P. M., Pavilion Centre, N. Y.

The stomach is the reservoir. If it fails, everything fails. The liver, the kidneys, the lungs, the heart, the head, the blood, the nerves all go wrong. If you feel wrong, look to the stomach first. Put that right at once by using August Flower. It assures a good appetite and a good digestion.

COLD WATER.

It Is Said to Have Remarkable Qualities as a Tonic.

"On the advice of an eminent physician I have tested pure cold water as a 'bracer' and found it the greatest thing in the world," said an old rounder at the Lindell. "I heartily commend it to every man who stays out with the boys late o' nights and dallies with the rosy until his head whirls around, his legs get weak and his stomach revolts. When you wake up the next morning with a throbbing head and excited nerves I invite you to touch the button and have the boy bring you a lemonade glass full of cold water instead of a cocktail. Sip the water slowly—an hour is not too long to devote to it and you will be astonished at the wonderful bracing effect it has upon you. The doctor explained to me that the cold water, sipped slowly, tends to contract the arteries and thus force a rush of blood to the head. A vigorous circulation is thereby set up, and in a little while the last remnant of the night's 'jag' is driven out of the system. I am also told that the brain and nerve stimulating effect of pure, cool water has for centuries been demonstrated in India. That semi-heathen country, you know, is the mother of chess. The natives of East India are to-day the greatest chess-players in the world. When they start into a game they squat flat on the earth around the board and never rise until the game is finished. Sometimes they play for 48 hours on a stretch without sleep or food, and the only stimulant they use is pure, cool water, which they continually sip.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Selling a Wife for a Mark.

The Berlin correspondent of the 'New York Herald' telegraphs: "Germans have laughed often enough at stories about English workmen selling their wives for pots of beer, and the like, and it is now the turn of the English to laugh or grieve at a story told before the Lignitz tribunal. A workman sold his lawfully wedded wife to a small tradesman, or rather lent her for two years at the moderate price of one mark. The tradesman, well satisfied with his bargain, lived happily with the woman. At the end of fifteen months the husband demanded an additional fifteen marks, asserting that in handing over his wife he had overlooked the fact that she had an excellent set of teeth. The tradesman, however, would not budge a single pfennig beyond the original mark until the husband went into the court. The wife was then ordered to return to her lord and master, who evidently values her as an Arab values an elephant—for her ivory."

Sound Advice.

A sensible bit of advice was given by a colored man, not long ago, to a quarrelsome friend. It was in a brick yard, and two of the workmen had a dispute which ended with blows.

In the skirmish one of them was hurt, and the employer, who saw the end of the fight, and was a man of more temper than discretion, advised him to get a warrant for the other's arrest.

While the matter was under discussion, a colored man who had seen the whole affair made his way to the injured party, and said:

"You don't want t' get no warrant, Jim! You get yo'self two pieces of plaster, good big ones, an' put one piece on yo' hade, an' de oder on yo' mouf, and you'll be all right!"

CLOSED.

The crimson dawn breaks through the clouded east,
And waking breezes round the casement pipe;
They blow the globes of dew from opening buds,
And steal the odors of the sleeping flowers.
The swallow calls its young ones from the eaves
To dart above their shadows on the lake,
Till its long rollers redden in the sun,
And bend the lances of the mirrored pines.
Who knows the miracle that brings the morn?
Still in my house I linger through the night,
Light robes the world, but strips me bare again.
I will not follow on the paths of day,
I know the dregs within its crystal hours;
The bearer of my cups have served me well;
I drained them, and the bearers come no more.
Rise, morning, rise for those believing souls
Who seek completion in day's garish light.
My casemen. I will close, keep shut my door,
Till day and night are only dreams to me.
—Elizabeth Stoddard, in Harper's.

HOW HE TOLD HER.

SHE'LL have to go; ain't no way out of that. She'll have to skip," said Dave Kenney. He squinted in a crosseyed manner at a bit of cracker on his tawny, scraggy beard and transferred it carefully to his mouth. There was a wedge of cheese on his left knee.

When the Fence Corners School Board—originally Fennett's Corners, but thus aptly abbreviated—had a meeting it was by general agreement in old Hank's grocery, where crackers and mayhap a herring might relieve its tedium. But to-night there was an alleviating interest.

"About the size of it," said Silas Saunders. He preferred tobacco and rolled a quid under his tongue. "This ain't no place for her here. Why, I wouldn't answer for the consequence if she stayed; there ain't no tellin' what might happen nor what cussedness them boys might be up to. Look at Corny Rouke, six foot two or three if he's an inch and chuck full. He's always been the one to put the teachers out and there ain't no doubt but what it's his idea this time. Barricadin' the schoolhouse right out bold the first day of school; now, who but Corny would have thought of that?"

There was something of contemplative admiration in his tone.

"Goin' to be done, whoever's doin' it," said Kinney, exploring his cracker bag. "Goin' to get in at 8 o'clock to-morrow mornin' and shut up the door and fasten the windows, and any teacher that gets in will have to get in through the keyhole or a crack; that's what they said."

He had told it before; he had called a meeting for the purpose of telling it. But it was interesting to dwell upon. There was an impressive silence.

"Well, we'll have to give her notice. You're just the one to do it, Thornton—eh?" Saunders observed to a third member of the board. He was himself uneasy. "She got along first-rate with the summer term," he added. He appeared to feel a vague and impotent regret. "Needs the money, I should judge."

"She needn't have made no calculations to teach no winter term here—not to Fence Corners," Kinny responded, with some contempt. "If there hain't been a winter for five years but what there has been a rumpus, and generally school shut up; why, she needn't have looked for there going to be."

It was unanswerable; but the storekeeper offered a weak suggestion over his motley counter.

"I should think that gang ought to be broke up," he said.

He expected no rejoinder, and got none. The school board's attention was centered upon no such whimsical irrelevancy.

"Reckon you're the one to notify her, Thornton," said Saunders again.

He wriggled unquietly on his stool.

Thornton sat motionless. Whether in fact or by trick of the oil-burning lamp on the counter his good-looking face, with its heavy mustache, appeared pale. He sat with his arms crossed on his knees and his eyes on the floor silent.

"Just so," said Kinney, with an air of impartial decision. "You can get it off better than Saunders or me, Thornton. You're a better lookin' man, anyhow and you're better rigged up," he concluded with a polite amiableness.

They made an attempt at a careless dismissal of the subject. Kinner got up and threw his cheeserind into the stove. Thornton passed his hand over his mouth and swallowed hard.

"You can just put it easy," said Kinney, encouragingly. "You can tell her just how it is, and that it's for her own good and ain't to be put off nor avoided. You can tell her she done first class, the summer term. Why, you can tell her just what you're a mind to," cried Kinney, magnanimously.

Their colleague rose. He was a tall and powerful young fellow, but there was an odd laxity in his movements now as he went toward the door. He held his hat brim to his lips, too, and turned his face from the light. Hanks stared at him till the door closed.

"I suppose you've found out that Jim Thornton's about the bashfulest feller in town, ain't you?" he queried.

There was no response.

"And you've probably suspicioned, same as other folks, that he's kind of sweet on that schoolma'am, or would be if he dared?"

The school board was silent.

"Well, he concluded with a grin, half of disgust, half of admiration, "you couldn't have hired me to be that mean to a yaller dog—not a yeller dog."

* * * * * * *

Thornton made his way up the road through a warm and lightly falling snow that whitened and beautified it, dark as it was, from the infrequency of buildings and hubbly with the frozen mud. He forgot to put his hat on till he met a man in a wagon, who stared at him. His face and hair were damp with melted flakes. He went slowly, almost creepingly, for there was in his heart a terrible, sinking dread of what he must do. It was almost more than he could master.

Where was she? Bissel's; he knew she boarded at Bissel's, and it was not far; he could see its light through the snow-laden trees. The pain at his heart was all but physical; he winced, and kept his hand on his nervous mouth; there was a mist in his eyes, which grew into tears. He was not surprised at them, nor ashamed of them; he wiped them off mechanically with his rough, strong hand. He did not know whether they were from pity for her or himself; he was not clearly conscious of either, but of a dull happiness such as he had never known.

He looked down at his clothes with a feeling of shame; they were not his best ones. He had a ready-made suit at home, but these his mother had made. He wished they looked better. The light in Bissel's window cast its long shadow on the whole ground. It waved there, shrinking and lingering; then it pushed on and up to the door.

It was not the custom of Fence Corners to rap; it would have been looked upon as a useless formality. He stepped into Bissel's large scantily furnished, rag-carpeted best room. He gasped as he stood there. He had vaguely hoped for a little reprieve, but she sat there by the lamp, alone, bending over some work. She rose at his entrance and came forward a little to offer her hand; but he did not see it, and she dropped it back in awkward haste.

"Wont you take a chair?" she asked.

She brought one forward. Thornton sat down. He dropped his hat as he did so, and picked it up with a red face. Then he sat still. He would have tried to speak, but he knew he could not; his tongue felt thick and immovable.

"It is snowing, isn't it? asked the school-teacher; she bore the marks of diffidence herself in her timorous voice and look.

Thornton nodded; it was all he could do. He stared at her fixedly, almost vacantly. His mind wandered back and strove to anchor itself on something. Once he had spent an evening at Bissel's, on the occasion of a party, and taken her hand in one of the games; once he had overtaken her, in a wagon, on her way to school, and given her a lift. That was all. He thought it might have been less hard for him if there had been something more, but that was all his morbid self-distrustfulness had allowed him.

The ticking of the clock on a stand in the corner filled the silence. It was a round, nickle clock, and it ticked so loudly as to force itself upon them.

"That's my school clock," said the teacher. "I am all ready for to-morrow. There are my books over there with it, and the register."

The School Director dropped his miserable eyes to the faded stripe in the carpet at his feet, but he did not see it; his hat shook with the trembling of his hands.

"I've been thinking how many I'd be likely to have," the teacher went on. "I had 25 this summer; there's always more in winter, ain't there?"

He managed to say yes. His eyes were wandering about the room now, his lips parted as if for air. He saw a new pane in the window, clumsily puttied—a break in the cane seat of a chair—a camphor bottle on the melodeon—a small tub filled with asters still in bloom. He continued looking at these.

"They are real late, ain't they? said the girl. "They are mine. I potted them nicely, and I guess they'll last best part of the winter; I have heard they will if taken care of. Do you want one?"

She put down her work and went and picked one. Then with a shy laugh she took her scissors and went back to the table.

"Maybe your mother would like a few she hasn't got them, has she?" she said.

She made a bunch and tied it with black thread. Thornton watched the slight girl in a cheap and well-worn dress, her dark hair in a girlish braid. This she was, but who could say what he saw? His agony rose, culminated as she turned to him; he clutched his hat till its stiff brim cracked. She was coming toward him with the flowers.

"There, maybe she'd like a few," she repeated, faint heartedly; but he did not hear her. He felt his face aflame like fire, a choking in his throat. He struggled to speak, and did make an inarticulate sound at which she looked at him in surprise. He looked down at her pitifully and then fell stumbling on his knees at her feet and buried his face in her skirts and groping for her hands, pulled them down till they pressed his throbbing head and rested there, her happy wondering tears falling upon them.

"Bashful?" said Dave Kinny to the storekeeper. "I'd like to know your idea of bashfulness. Why, Jim Thornton walked out of this store that night and up to Bissel's straight as a string, and told that schoolteacher that, owin' to circumstances that he didn't have no control over, she couldn't have the school this winter, and likely there couldn't nobody else neither, and if it'd be any consideration to her she could have him; told her right up and down and made no bones of it. If Thornton's bashful, why, the fellow to him is what I'd like to see."

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Nine persons are injured in a street railway accident in St. Paul.

Hon. Reuben Wells of Preston died recently aged nearly 90.

In a row near St. Paul a white man is shot and killed by a colored woman.

The Diamond saw mill, the second largest mill in Minneapolis, is burned, the loss being $70,000.

Fred Boerner, a saloon keeper before license was voted out at Buffalo has opened up an original package house.

A special election was held at Echo and incorporation was carried by a majority of 38.

Anderson Monsons, fourteen years old, was drowned in the river while bathing, being taken with cramps.

Material for the construction of the telephone line at Redwood Falls has arrived and the line will soon be in operation.

A Prohibition ratification was held at Excelsior at the town hall, and was well attended. Dr. Satterlee addressed the meeting.

Willard Aldelf was arraigned in court at Stillwater, charged with shooting Peter Law. He waived examination and was held to the grand jury in $750 bonds.

While riding a railroad bicycle in Montana, M. F. McCan was struck and instantly killed by an engine. Mr. McCan was one of Houston's prominent merchants.

Herbert Floyd, son of A. Floyd of East Brainerd, was drowned while boating at Rice Lake. He was sixteen years of age.

The White Caps have appeared in Roslve, Goodhue county. Notices have been sent to several residents there warning them to move away or they will suffer the death penalty.

The Great Northern railway have commenced operations on a new iron bridge across the Mississippi river at St. Cloud. They will employ 100 men on the construction.

Gen. James H. Baker is nominated for governor by the Minnesota Alliance convention, which leaves the rest of the ticket to be filled out by the state committee. W. W. Erwin is chairman of the latter.

The barn, granary, several hogs, machinery, hay and feed, belonging to Ed Powers, a farmer, four miles south of Woodstock, burned recently. The origon of the fire is unknown. Loss, about $500; insurance, $200.

A Brainerd Special says: One Johnson, a Norwegian, was drowned while crossing a swollen creek near Rice lake, just north of the Northern mill site. He was 57 years old, a laborer by occupation and leaves a family.

Hon. Henry Keller, of Sauk Center has purchased the old brewery property, and will erect a 200-barrel steam flouring mill thereon. The mill will be built in a first-class manner and fitted with all the latest improvements in milling.

Andrew Monson, a boy 13 years old, was drowned while bathing near the pump house at Red Wing. He was learning a younger brother how to swim, when he became frightened and hung to Andrew, holding him down until too late to rescue him.

While Walter Bernhart and Alfred Jensen were crossing Lake Miltona near Alexandria, their skiff was accidently overturned, and Bernhart being unable to swim, drowned. Jensen reached shore in safety by swimming.

James Holmes, a young farmer of the town of Freedom, Waseca county, and his nephew, Eugene Holmes, aged 14, were drowned in the Little Cobb, on the farm of the former. The boy was seized with a cramp while in bathing and his uncle rushed in to his aid. Being unable to swim and the water deep both were drowned.

A third flowing well has been struck at Marshall, Cox & Son having found at a depth of 255 feet a vein that flows 15 feet above the surface. The water is soft and wholesome. There is talk of experimenting with a 1,000-foot well in the hope of getting a supply for a water works system.

Haying is now under full head way in Rice county, and the largest yield for years is expected. Corn, which a week ago was in very poor condition is now growing finely, and if the weather holds dry, will pull through all right. All grains are growing fast, and the prospect of a heavy crop this fall is good.

Two farmers living seven miles east of Northfield, William Ahern and Timothy Flynn, got into a dispute over some grass. After some words Flynn struck Ahern, knocking him down. He defended himself with a pitchfork, whereupon Flynn snatched up a scythe which was lying near and struck Ahern on the left arm, nearly severing the hand.

The St. Cloud city council voted to bring against E. T. Sykes & Co., of Minneapolis, proprietors of the waterworks system for non-fulfillment of their contract; and the bill of $3,830, for hydrant rental for the past six months, was tabled. The council made a test some time ago and found the system so poor that it was deemed necessary to bring suit in order to make the company come to time.

The body of a middle aged man was found near the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern track 15 miles southeast of Luverne by trainmen. An inquest was held. Nothing was found on the body by which it could be identified. He was a middle aged man, heavy set and sandy complexion. The man is presumably a tramp who fell from a train and was killed.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Mrs. W. R. Bierley, wife of the editor of the Grand Forks Daily News, gave birth to triplets, all girls. One has since died.

An official canvas gives Prof. Taylor of Emerado a plurality of 10 votes for county superintendent of schools, receiving 602 votes, Prof. Trask 573 and A. McNeal 241.

The police pulled Milt Smith and two females at Devils Lake for keeping a house of ill-fame outside the city. This is one of the many such houses rumored to have been established lately.

The United States court in session at Devils Lake was adjourned. The grand jury found five indictments against residents of other parts of the state. The names are not given as they are not yet under arrest. No cases will be tried here this term.

The United States court began its session at Devils Lake recently. Judge Edgerton, of South Dakota, presiding. The only civil case is O'Brien vs. the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad for $6,000. It was continued by filing an amended answer. The principal business is criminal. The grand jury is expected to be in session some time.

The Minneapolis & Northern Elevator at Grafton, with its contents, 20,000 bushels of wheat, was burned recently. A terrible gale was blowing from the south and it was with difficulty that W. C. Leistkow's roller mills and Lewis' lumber yards were saved. The capacity of the house was 125,000 bushels. Loss on building $20,000, insured.

Beef cattle do not harden this season as in dryer years, and shipments will be nearly two weeks late, commencing not earlier than 20th of July. Small owners are going to have more for the market than last years, but the big cattle men have not as much by 50 per cent. It may be about even in the aggregate.

The second annual encampment of the North Dakota Veterans' association was held at Camp Lookout, Spiritwood lake, a few miles from Jamestown. Senator J. H. Worst of Emmons county, delivered the oration. Gov. A. H. Burke and other prominent speakers were present. Five thousand people attended. Pleasure boats and a neat steam barge were provided.

WISCONSIN.

The mill of the Benoit Lumber Company, at Benoit, was totally destroyed by fire. Loss $12,000.

The Eau Claire county Republicans have named George B. Shaw as their candidate for congress for the Seventh district.

Near Glidden, Karl Kiver stabbed Wm. Wolf in the breast twice with a dirk knife, inflicting wounds from which he died in a few minutes. The tragedy occurred during the progress of a dance.

A Pope named Adolph Smith committed suicide at Washburn by hanging. He was about thirty-five years old and married. His wife is now en route from the old country.

The secretary of state published notices of election. This was done for the purpose of cutting off an appeal to the supreme court on apportionment law, which was passed on the extra session of the legislature which has just closed.

Company C. Third regiment, national guards, has received orders to report at Camp Douglas for annual encampment, July 17. The company will start for the front fifty strong under command of Capt. Goss.

Iron ore shipments from Ashland for the past week aggregate 73,114 tons. The Tilden mine leads in individual shipments with a total of 14,050 tons. Total shipments from Ashland for the season up to date amount to 737,535 tons.

The suit of the Nortons, of Kentucky, vs. the city of West Superior to recover the purchase price of $150,000 on certain lands negotiated for park purposes, but not accepted, was begun in the United States court at Madison. The papers were served on City Attorney Perkins.

William McMann was shot dead by John Flynn, a bartender at Fifield. A quarrel had been progressing between McMann and Dick Murray. The bartender warned them to cease. McMann refused. The bartender immediately shot at him three times, each ball taking effect. McMann was at one time deputy sheriff of Price county and a policeman at Phillips three years.

A. A. Hogan and Harry Hogan, bricklayers, were seriously injured at West Superior. Harry was working on the third story of a new building. The scaffold fell, carrying with it another scaffold lower down, on which A. A. Hogan was working. Harry had both legs broken and received internal and spinal injuries which will probably be fatal. The other came out with three broken ribs and bruises.

The inquest on the death of William Anderson, the wealthy lumberman whose body was found in the Chippewa river, was completed at Eau Claire. The jury returned a verdict that he came to his death at the hands of persons unknown. An intimate friend of the deceased after the inquest informed the magistrate that he believed Anderson might have had $5,000 in his pocket when murdered and he believed he could furnish a clue to the murderer.

IOWA.

Fire at Elgin, Iowa destroyed the livery barn of August Holser. Eleven horses were burned. Cause of fire unknown.

Thirteen officers and privates of the Salvation Army arrived in Dubuque recently. They are under command of Capt. Kemp and they will remain here for a week, holding meetings in the various churches.

Robert Innes, wife and a 4-year old child, while attempting to ford Cedar creek at Hiteman, were drowned, the horse and buggy being swept down stream with them.

A Chinese gardener named Lee was found dead, hung in his cabin near Dayton. From the story told by his partners and the evidence of the surroundings it is a case of suicide.

News comes from Alto that one James Burr, alias Charles Williams, was thrashed with black snake whips and tarred and feathered by a party of enraged farmers with whom Burr had been stopping.

A boat containing four young men returning to McGregor from Prairie du Chien upset and John Gannon, single, aged 25 years, was drowned. The others escaped by swimming. Gannon's body was recovered.

Application for permanent injunction to 11 saloons at Mystic was made before Judge Burton at Ottumwa and the cases set for July 19. Mystic has a Red Ribbon Club which has been stirring up the natives in that section.

The dress of the 6-year-old daughter of O. M. Olsen, of Dayton, was fired on the Fourth from a lighted cracker and the child fatally burned before the flames were extinguished. She died in terrible agony.

Wm. Glew, of Farley, and his two sons were engaged in plowing corn. At noon the old man bantered the boys for a foot race to the house. When near the house Joseph, the youngest son, aged 18, fell on his face. On picking him up he was found to be dead, having ruptured a blood vessel.

The old feud between the Krueger and Lowenberg families at Dahlonega has again broken out and Ed Lowenberg and his brother are nursing serious bullet wounds which Carl Kruger inflicted with a revolver. The Lowenbergs assaulted young Krueger and his brother with the above results. It is feared that Ed Lowenberg's wound will prove fatal.

In East Dubuque about 9 o'clock the other evening Miss Anna Johnson left her father's house to get a bucket of water. While dipping the bucket she was assaulted by a man, who threw her down and accomplished her ruin. Returning home she gave the alarm and the villian was speedily caught. He was lodged in jail at Galena. He was 55 years old and gave the name of Silas Wright.

Laurence Powers and his son Anthony were driving to Dubuque when the team became unmanageable in driving down a steep hill near Rockdale and ran into a wagon in which were five sisters of Mt. St. Joseph. Powers and his son were thrown to the ground, the latter receiving fatal injuries. The sisters were also thrown out. One of them had her shoulder bone broken and others were more or less hurt.

The Premier Had Dined.

A young short-hand writer was once told to report a speech by Sir John Macdonald. Now it happened that the Canadian Premier had come to the House from a dinner party, and his speech in matter and form was of a decidedly postprandial character. The youthful reporter, however, could not believe it possible that Sir John should want editing, and took down every word. His editor, on seeing the copy, told him it would not do, and as it was not wanted for the next morning he was advised to go and see Sir John and get him to correct it. The reporter, on being shown in, found Sir John as usual, exceedingly affable. Having explained the object of his visit, the reporter was desired to read his notes aloud. This he did, while Sir John lay on a sofa listening with a face of extreme solemnity to his own incoherencies and correcting them as occasion required. When the notes were finished the Premier rose, laid his hand on the young man's shoulder, and began in, the most fatherly of tones:

"I see exactly what has happened. Now, my dear young friend, I am an old man and you are a young one, and you will therefore not mind if I give you a piece of advice as to the practice of your profession. My advice is this: Never attempt to report a speech unless you are perfectly sure that you are sober."

Cycling Considered Immoral.

They have evidently a "short way" with bicyclists in the dominions of the Sultan. That despotic and not-to-be-trifled-with monarch is said to have forbidden all bicycling in and near his capital, on the ground that the pastime is "immoral and dangerous to the State." Despotic rulers never explain, of course; otherwise it would be interesting to inquire of the Sultan where he considers that the "immorality" comes in. Nor is it altogether easy to see how the "danger to the state" is supposed to arise. Being a comfortable distance from the Golden Horn, I am emboldened to hint that his Sultanic Majesty has rather overdone it. If he had been content to justify his opposition to the "devil's chariot"—as they say the bicycle is called in Turkey—on the score of danger to individuals, he would have had plenty of sympathizers beyond the limits of his own country. As things stand, I think we might do worse than pack off a few thousands of our cyclists to Constantinople!

Not an Upstart.

Public men, if they are to be successful must learn to stifle personal predjuices. Prince Talleyrand, who shifted his politics so skillfully that he served under several distinct and contradictory political systems in France, learned this lesson very early.

When M. Theirs, who was of humble origin, began to rise in the world, Talleyrand treated him with great consideration. This greatly displeased a high-bred lady of the prince's acquaintance.

"What!" she exclaimed; "do you receive this upstart?"

"Madame," Talleyrand answered, "he is not an upstart. He has got up!"

Wake Up.

Yes, wake up to the danger, which threatens you if your kidneys and bladder are inactive or weak. Don't you know that if you fail to impel them to action, Bright's disease or diabetes awaits you? Use Hostetter's Stomach Bitters without delay. It has a most beneficial effect upon the kidneys when sluggish, and upon the bowels, liver, stomach and nervous system.

GEN. SCHOFIELD recieved a telegram from Gen. Wheaton, commanding the department of Texas, saying he has no information of the revival of the Garza movement, or of any political uprising whatever along the Rio Grande.

WHENEVER I see Hood's Sarsaparilla now I want to bow and say

'Thank You'

I was badly affected with Eczema and Scrofula Sores, covering almost the whole of one side of my face, nearly to the top of my head. Running sores discharged from both ears. My eyes were very bad, the eyelids so sore it was painful opening or closing them. For nearly a year I was deaf. I went to the hospital and had an operation performed for the removal of a cataract from one eye. One day my sister brought me

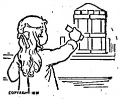
THE British steam schooner Eliza Edwards has been seized by customs officers off Point Loma, Cal. It is alleged that the schooner, which cleared from Vancouver June 22, is engaged in smuggling opium and Chinese.



Made well—the weak, nervous or ailing woman who takes Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's a medicine that's guaranteed to help her. It's an invigorating, restorative tonic, soothing cordial and bracing nervine—and a certain cure for all the functional derangements, painful disorders or chronic weaknesses that affect women. For ulcerations, displacements, bearing-down sensations, everything that's known as a "female complaint," it's an unfailing remedy. It's a peculiar one, too. Peculiar in composition, peculiar in its cures, and peculiar in the way it's sold. It's guaranteed to give satisfaction, in every case, or the money is refunded. You pay only for the good you get.

It's the big, old-fashioned pill that makes the most disturbance—but it's one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets that does the most good. Mild and gentle, but thorough and effective—the smallest, cheapest and easiest to take. They cleanse and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

Senator Higgins introduces a Canadian retaliation bill.

A resolution is introduced in the senate providing for a senatorial investigation of the Homestead trouble.

Secretary Charles Foster has sent to the house the draft of a bill empowering the secretary of the treasury to define and establish an anchorage ground for vessels in Chicago waters, to adopt suitable rules and regulations in relation thereto and prescribing a penalty for their violation.

The secretary of state has received official assurance of Russia's acceptance of the president's invitation to participate in an international monetary conference. All the other European countries having previously taken similar action, nothing now remains but the formal preparation for the conference.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

A $1,500,000 fire occurs at Christiansand, Sweden.

Eighteen persons are reported to have lost their lives on the lake at Peoria, Ill., a cyclone striking an excursion steamer.

A school building was destroyed by fire at Berkamsted, England. Eight children perished in the flames.

The damage to the powder and chemical works at West Berkley, Cal., which exploded recently is estimated at over $200,000, and probably $25,000 more damage was done in San Francisco and Oakland by windows breaking.

At Sparta, Wis., the upper story and roof of the state school for dependent children was burned. Loss, $15,000. Mrs. Dederick, a matron was badly burned while trying to save $400 which she had in her trunk.

The yellow fever is raging in Vera Cruz, Mex., and many deaths from the dread scourge are daily reported. It is feared that this year, owing to the exceptional dryness of the season, the plague will make greater ravages then ever.

A severe electrical storm struck Kansas City recently with a play of lightning that has seldom been equaled. Three houses were struck and two men knocked insensible, but both recovered. The houses were set on fire, but were saved.

While Mrs. Carr, aged fifty, and her two little girls, aged respectively six and four years, were walking on the tracks of the West Shore railroad near the West Haverstraw station they were struck by an express train which instantly killed the woman and one of the children and fatally injured the other. The tragedy was witnessed by many horrified people.

PERSONAL MENTION.

The report that Lottie Collins, the well known London concert hall singer, died suddenly is incorrect; she is alive and well.

Baron Winmarleigh (John Wilson Patton) died in London, aged ninety years. He was chief secretary for Ireland in 1868. The title which was created in 1874 expires with the baron's death.

W. W. Astor, who has been suffering from the effects of a chill due to exposure to a shower while boating, is much better, and his physicians declare themselves satisfied with the progress which he is making toward recovery.

SINS AND SINNERS.

The wife of Mr. Strickler of Waco, Neb., poisoned him and his brother. No cause has been assigned for the deed. Both are in a precarious condition.

At Houston, Tex., a sixteen-year-old boy named Baker has been sentenced to imprisonment for life for the murder of two Jewish peddlers. He and an accomplice chopped their victims to pieces.

Jeptha D. New, a member of the Indiana appellate court and a candidate for re-election, has committed suicide. Judge New served one term in congress as the representative of the Third district. He was a cousin of John C. New. No cause assigned.

One of the robbers who held up the Santa Fe train in the Indian Territory recently has been captured. On his person was found a large amount of money and the watch which was stolen from the express messenger.

Richard Kitchell, colored, is under arrest at Greenville, Ga., for grave robbery, and the story is a peculiar one. A few days ago the grave of Mrs. Almand was opened and the index finger of the right hand removed from the body. Mitchell is a gambler, and the testimony shows that he took the finger for a luck bone impelled by a gambler's superstition.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

President Diaz of Mexico has been re-elected.

An epidemic of cholera prevails in Siam and has resulted in several thousand deaths.

Smallpox is epidemic in Victoria, B. C., there being over forty cases reported, and in consequence there is a general panic.

Advices by the steamship Empress of China state that the Japanese organ Jigu has been suppressed by the imperial authorities for writings of a seditious character.

The recent flood in Fukushima submerged 1,000 houses, swept 600 bridges away, drowned thirty-five persons and inundated four thousand acres of ice.

A Hamburg advice says: The Langes graneries were damaged by fire to the extent of $350,000. The flames spread to a number of houses in the vicinity. One of the buildings, owned by Frau Donnes, contained many valuable works of art and a rare library, which were destroyed.

The French chamber of deputies has, in spite of the opposition of M. Rouvier, minister of finance, resolved, by a vote of 243 to 240, to prolong only until Dec. 31 next the existing duties on petroleum. The government demanded that the duties be kept in force until March 31, 1893, in order to allow the execution of measures rendered necessary by the reduction of the duties voted in 1891.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

The Democrats of the Twentieth Illinois district have nominated Judge Benjamin W. Polk for congress.

Hon Samuel Fessenden has been invited to become the chairman of the national Republican committee, but sent a reply declining the honor.

Henry C. Payne, of Milwaukee, whose name is prominently mentioned in connection with the chairmanship of the Republican national committee, says that under no circumstances will he accept the position.

THE TOILERS.

The strike at Homestead, Pa., is likely to extend to all of the union mills of the Carnegie company.

A resolution denouncing the Pinkertons was adopted by the Retail Clerks' National Protective Association in convention at Cleveland.

The Champion mine at Ishpeming, Mich., has closed down, throwing several hundred men out of work. The Lake Superior mine may close down soon, throwing out 3,000 men.

The striking miners f[illegible] I[illegible]aho [illegible] up and kill non-union men, imprison and hold mine owners as hostages, destroy railroad tracks and bridges and declare that they will fight the federal troops.

The Kansas City Bolt and Nut works have closed down and will not reopen until the result of the Carnegie lockout is known. One hundred men are thrown out of employment.

The lumber shovers' strike against the stevedores is practically at an end at Buffalo, N. Y. The union men returned to work on boats that they had deserted. The firm employing stevedores will continue to do so.

The Chicago district executive board of Turners adopted resolutions justifying the Homestead strikers in resisting the Pinkerton guards with force, and condemning Carnegie, Frick and Pinkerton as murderers and enemies of the public.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

H. W. Edwards has been appointed engineer of maintenance of the Western division of the Great Northern road.

The Omaha has announced its intention of cutting rates west in order to meet the competition of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific to Helena.

Earnings of the Milwaukee during the first week of July amounted to $749,850 against $538,796 for the corresponding week of 1891, an increase of $111,054.

President Egan, of the Chicago Great Western, speaks very encouragingly of the wheat outlook in the Southwest. In Kansas the wheat harvest will reach 70,000,000 bushels, and to this must be added nearly 10,000,000 bushels of last year's crop, which still remains undisposed of. In Southern Iowa the prospect is not so flattering, owing to the excessive rains.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Amateur sports in Chicago are booming.

Louis Whistler will play first for Louisville.

Clarkson and Stovey will play with Baltimore.

Great cricket is being played in Canada this summer.

Bassett has succeeded Kuehne in the Louisville team.

It is said that Cincinnati takes better care of its gods of the bleachers than any city in the league.

Jack Crooks is covering himself with glory and has been highly complimented by the people of St. Louis.

Gypsy Gleason, of England, knocked out Jack Davis, of Portland Or., in seven rounds on an island near Burlington. Five-ounce gloves were used, and Marquis of Queensberry rules governed. The fight was for $350, and was exciting throughout.

The California Athletic club has telegraphed Jack Dempsey an offer for a match with Billy Maber, the Australian lightweight. Maber says he will fight at 140 pounds, and will allow a few pounds to Dempsey, who by right belongs to the welterweight class. It is not believed, however, that Dempsey could be induced to enter the ring again.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The Portuguese minister at Washington has made application for space in the Woman's building at she World's Fair for exhibits from the women of Portugal.

In June more than 90,000 people, or a daily average of 3,100, visited the World's Fair ground and paid 25 cents each to see the sights. The largest attendance on one day was 12,033 on May 29.

At the World's Fair an oyster exhibit will be made by the shell fish commission of Connecticut. An oyster bed, models of oyster boats, the system of dredging, etc., will be shown.

The Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar club of Troy, N. Y., is arranging for an excursion to the World's Fair for its members and their friends to the number of fifty. The party will charter drawing room cars and live in them during the entire visit.

New York will have one of the finest state buildings at the World's Fair. It will be 90 feet wide by 200 feet long, and three stories high. Inclusive of donated material and decorations the structure will represent an expenditure of more than $150,000.

The Exposition authorities have appropriated $175,000 for the purpose of providing orchestra music for the World's Fair. They also set apart $12,500 for the entertainment of distinguished composers and orchestra leaders who have been invited.

Just back of the New York building at the World's Fair, in a depressed area, will be spread out flat an immense topographical map of that state. It will be 36 feet long and 26 wide, and will show the mountains, forests, rivers, towns and all of the great natural and artificial features of state scenery.

OTHERWISE.

Sensational rumors from Cœur d'Alene prove false. The troops are now in control, and no further trouble is feared.

The Jewish rabbis of the country, in conference in New York, unanimously decide in favor of cremation.

The million dollar subscription for the Chicago university is completed, with $12,000 to spare.

J. E. Nason, general contractor at Sioux City, has failed. The liabilities will exceed $60,000; assets less than $40,000.

The failure of the Ainslie Milling company of Portland, Ore., is reported. It is stated the liabilities are about $590,000. The assets exceed the liabilities by about $200,000.

Owing to the prevalence of smallpox at Victoria, B. C., the Pacific Coast Steamship Company ordered its steamers to discontinue calling there. Port Townsend, Tacoma and Seattle have established a quarantine against Victoria.

President J. B. Haggin, of the Anaconda Mining company, has decided to have the entire output of his mine refined in America instead of Europe, and has arranged to have the product of the mine undergo the electrolitic treatment at Baltimore.

The Western Union Telegraph company has refused to credit further the State of Kentucky. There is no money in the treasury and the June telegraph bill is unpaid. The Western Union will take no telegrams unaccompanied by the cash, and there is no money for such use.

WASHBURN FIRM.

He Combats Filibustering Tactics on the Option Bill in the Senate.

Belief That the Bill Will Yet Pass, Despite All Opposition.

Washington, Special, July 19.—The opponents of the option bill have demonstrated their strength in the United States senate. The character of the opposition to-day was such as was seldom indulged in in that dignified body, and all the filibustering that was carried on only served to strengthen the anti-option bill. After the deficiency bill had passed, the anti-option bill was, on motion of Mr. Washburn, taken up, and thus became the regular order. The opponents of that measure then interposed dilatory motions, which were also designed to oust the anti-option bill from its position of precedence. The friends of the measure were strong enough, however, to resist all these efforts, and when the senate adjourned the anti-option bill was the "unfinished business" to come up at 2 o'clock to-morrow.

Senator Washburn after the adjournment said he did not anticipate the filibustering tactics to be renewed against the bill to-morrow. If on the motion to fix a day for final adjournment the friends of the bill can muster enough strength to vote down that motion, they can insure the passage of the anti-option bill. That will be the supreme test. On every other vote thus far it has been shown that a very large majority of the senate is in favor of the bill, and its passage is assured if a vote can be reached. There was some talk to-day that the discussion of the bill would be endless. Some senators go to the length of saying it would take six weeks to consider it. But if the adjournment cannot be prevented the filibusters and long-winded talkers will cease and a vote be taken early.

AT MAPLEWOOD PARK.

A Quiet Day but an Interesting Programme.

Waseca, Special, July 19.—A quiet day but a good programme at Maplewood Park. There were two lectures and one entertainment. The lectures were "Co-operation of Churches in Community Work," by Rev. Frank Russell, D. D., at 11 a. m., and at 3 p. m. Rev. J. W. Frizzell of Waseca on "The Rise of Modern Democracy." The entertainment at 8 p. m. consisted of recitals by the celebrated elocutionist, Prof. S. T. Ford. The Itinerants' club continued at its two sessions the study of the "Book of Acts." The cooking school, a notable feature of the assembly conducted by Mrs. W. M. Hays, professor of domestic economy in the North Dakota Agricultural college, at its afternoon session, discussed "Rolls and Buns." The singing before the lecture was by the Campus male quartet. The boys have become very popular. The programme for this week includes entertainments by Frederick Emmerson Brooks, the poet humorist of California, and D. W. Robertson of New York city. This combination is said to be equal to the "Whitcomb Riley and Bill Nye" combination. Rev. Joseph Cook will be here on Saturday and gives three lectures, and preaches on Sunday.

KNIGHTS AT ASHLAND.

Biennial Convention of Catholic Knights Now in Session.

Ashland, Wis., Special, July 19.—Delegates to the Catholic Knights' biennial convention are beginning to arrive, and about 200 are now in the city. The streets and many of the business houses are gaily decorated and the early morning hours will see the city in holiday attire. The exercises for to-morrow will consist of the celebration of grand mass by Rev. Father Fabian Richtienne, pastor. After the services at the church the delegates will return to the convention hall in the Knight block, when an address of welcome will be delivered and will be responded to by M. L. Snyder of Waukesha.

President J. H. N. Wigman of Green Bay, State Secretary Callahan of Neenah, Assemblyman Theodore Knapstein, New London, J. V. Canavan, county clerk of Outagamie county, G. F. Moeskes, probate judge of Outagamie county, and Sheriff M. P. Walsh of Milwaukee and Sheriff Gayner of Waukesha county are among the notable Knights already here.

AT REST ISLAND.

The Day's Proceedings at Woolley's Famous Resort.

Lake City, Minn., Special, July 19.—The attendance on the meetings at Rest island to-day was rather limited on account of a heavy storm which occurred this morning. This afternoon John C. Collins, secretary of the International Association of Christian Workers, gave an interesting account of labors of that society, which has its headquarters in New Haven, Conn. Its affairs are managed by a special committee of business men residing in different parts of the country, among whom are senator Hawley of Connecticut, J. V. Farwell of Chicago and Franklin Carter, president of Williams college. The association keeps rooms in different for boys who have been accustomed to spending their evenings on the streets. These rooms are supplied with books and games. The association has been existence four years, during which time it has assisted 20,000 boys. It labors thus far being chiefly confined to Connecticut and Massachusetts. Twenty-five clubs have been organized in different cities. Penny savings banks have been provided for the boys, and the total savings thus far amount to $4,000.

Jack O'Brien, a young man who was rescued from the slums of New York through Mr. Woolley's influence, told about his experiences. Rev. Falke Gjerston of Minneapolis preached a sermon in the evening. Miss Willard, who was expected to take part in the convention, cannot attend on account of the serious illness of her mother.

The laying of the corner stone of Willard cottage has been postponed until next Sunday.

Acres of Grain Damaged.

Zumbrota, Minn., July 19.—A very heavy storm occurred this morning and hundreds of acres of grain lies flat and will be heavily damaged.

An Iowa Park Sold.

Sioux City, Iowa, July 19.—A deal has been closed by which the 700-acre park adjoining the Big Soo river on the west side of the city is sold to Chicago parties, together with eight miles of electric railway for $600,000. It is believed that the Chicago & Northwestern road is the real purchaser.

CONDENSED TELEGRAMS.

The senate passed the deficieny bill yesterday.

The American Pharmaceutical association is in session at the Profile House, N. H.

The nomination of A. D. Brown as postmaster of Madison, Minn., has been confirmed.

Mrs. Marie Nevens Blaine, the divorced wife of James G. Blaine, Jr., has arrived in New York from Europe. Her health is still very poor.

The Scotch societies of Chicago deny that Robert Burns Hutchinson, the descendant of the Scotch poet, has been wantonly neglected by them as reported.

The Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies resumed yesterday the dissemination of Chicago board of trade quotations, the old trouble having been removed.

Lester Gale and W. E. Turner, cashier and bookkeeper of the City Savings bank of Nashville, Tenn., who decamped with $12,000 of the bank's funds, have been arrested in Mexico.

WITH NON-UNION MEN.

Operations at Hughes' and Patterson's Iron Works Resumed.

Philadelphia, July 19.—Hughes' and Patterson's iron works, after a lock-out since July 1 of the Amalgamated iron and steel workers who had been its employes, resumed work this morning in one of the two mills which it operates with a score of hands, constituting about 40 per cent of all the men employed when the plant is in full operation. Throughout the day there was not the slightest indication of trouble or violence on the part of the locked-out mechanics.

BEAVER FALLS MILLS.

Strikers at This Point Receive but Little Sympathy.

Pittsburg, July 19.—The Beaver Falls employes of Carnegie kept their threat and did not go to work this morning. Consequently the mill did not resume. The men are orderly and stand about the streets talking in low and guarded tones. Many of the strikers think the move made last Friday was not wise, and admit this, but remain firm in their determination to adhere to the stand taken. Everything was quiet at Beaver Falls to-night. The residents of the town were opposed to the movement, and the strikers have but little sympathy. Notices warning all persons to keep off the company's property have been posted about the works.

RIOT AMONG HUNGARIANS.

Trouble With Railroad Laborers at Woodbridge, N. J.

New Brunswick, N. J., July 19.—The rioting has broken out afresh among the Hungarian railroad workers at Woodbridge. The Reading railroad officials have notified Sheriff Ackler, of Middlesex county, that the rioters are destroying railroad property and that the civil authorities have been overpowered and are unable to handle them. Sheriff Ackler dispatched sixty deputies to the scene of the troubles. The rioters received them quietly, but claim that money is due them from the railroad contractors. The latter, however, deny this. All is quiet now and no further trouble is expected.

A Little Scrimmage.

Berlin, July 19.—Two thousand Socialists were returning from a picnic yesterday near Wilmersdorf, when they were met and restrained in an officious manner by a force of Berlin policemen. The Socialists became incensed at what they deemed unnecessary and offensive interference, and soon developed the disorder the police seemed bent on exciting. A struggle ensued between the police and the people, the Socialists stoutly maintaining themselves against the officers. The police as they were pressed back drew swords and cut at the mob. The Socialists, however, were too numerous, and repulsed their uniformed antagonists. The latter were soon reinforced and the struggle renewed, this time resulting in the defeat and dispersion of the Socialists, many of whom were wounded. Women and children were in the melee. The police made several arrests of those who were most active in resistance.

Arabs at War.

Tangiers, July 19.—A sanguinary battle occurred a few days ago between the followers of the two Arab chiefs Malemoa and Mohator, both belonging to the Kabyle tribe, but hostile to each other. The fight was of a most stubborn and desperate character, even the women taking part. About three hundred were killed. Chief Malmoa's party got the worst of the battle and fled across the frontier into Spanish North African territory. The Spanish troops turned out and drove the fugitives back over the line into the territory of Morocco. The defeated party then scattered in all directions to escape from their unrelenting foes who, at last accounts, were in full pursuit bent upon extermination.

Gov. Pattison at Homestead.

Harrisburg, July 19.—Gov. Pattison left to-day for Homestead in a private car attached to the Western express. The governor will return the latter part of the week.

Increased Wheat Prices.

Washington, Special, July 19.—C. Wood Davis says there is not the least danger of the defeat of the option bill. He called attention to the fact that the almost certain passage of the bill had increased the price of wheat 2 cents a bushel because the "shorts" are finding it very hard to cover. Senator Washburn said to-night that the methods adopted by the opponents of the bill this afternoon were never resorted to even by the opposition to the force bill who felt their all depended upon the defeat of that measure. He thinks it indicates that the opponents know that they cannot by argument convince the senate that the bill is not a good one.

KEEP SINGING AS YOU GO.

  Was walking on the street,
And as I passed I heard her sing
  In silvery tones and sweet.
Cold winter reigned, and yet her song
  Rang out amid the snow;
I turned and said, "That's right, my dear;
  Keep singing as you go."

We parted then, each to our ways
  But lingers with me yet
The thought her song suggested then,
  Nor soon shall I forget.
Amid the coldest of life's cheers.
  Yes, e'en amid its woe,
One rule will sweeten all—'tis this:
  Keep singing as you go.

'Twill sweeten not alone your heart,
  But some others lift
From depths which seem too great for them,
  Though they know not the gift.
Ah! would you fill a blessed place
  And good on men bestow,
Then cheer the coldest walks of life
  By singing as you go.

—Brooklyn Eagle.

A PAIR OF CHESTNUTS.

I was the most reckless, hard riding, good for-nothing young scamp of a subaltern who ever carried her majesty's commission. The one redeeming point about me was the fact that I loved Lena Vereker, and in spite of my faults she loved me in return. That was the best time in my life, and the downward grade commenced with the advent of a new fellow in the regiment, Saxby Bracewell by name. Under his auspices the card table flourished exceedingly. Like some few other men, he possessed an extraordinary faculty for games of skill. Until he came I had always been put forward by my brother officers as their show man for riding, athletics, billiards, fencing, shooting, or tennis, but before this new light I went down as a farthing dip before a gas jet. And yet I would never consider myself beaten but challenge him again and again, and, needless to say, there was always "something on, just to give it an interest." So things went on. Play became heavier. The colonel looked glum, my seniors spoke warningly. Mr. Vereker did not seem so frankly glad to see me when we met and was more chary of his invitations, and Lena looked pale and anxious.

Then came the day when I woke to find myself a ruined man, obliged to send in my papers, and, hardest of all, compelled to say a long good-by to Lena, who, dear little soul, promised to keep true until I should come back from Australia a rich man (for that was the goal on which I placed my hopes). Yes, I thought then that fate could not have a blacker turn to serve me, but I knew otherwise when, on a lonely Australian station, I read in a scrap of an English newspaper I had somehow picked up of the grand marriage festivities between Lena, daughter of Edward Vereker, Esq., of Colne Abbey, and—I could hardly believe my eyes—Capt. Saxby Bracewell, of the Black Dragoons, and only son of Sir John Bracewell.

I did not know till then how the secret consciousness of Lena at home waiting for me had buoyed up my spirit, but with that last blow all energy or wish to retrieve my fallen fortunes seemed to leave me.

But now, oddly enough, that I had no wish for money things took a turn. My flocks and herds throve apace, gold quartz was found on my station in sufficient quantity, and near a stream, to justify the formation of a gold mining company named "Golconda Junior," and in a marvelously short space of time I found myself in possession of an income which if any one had formerly told me would one day be mine I should have laughed him to scorn.

Then I found myself back again in London—the same old London—and yet there was a difference. I saw no faces that I knew, or who seemed to know me. The young ones seemed to me so young, and the elders—but there, unconsciously as it were, I turn my steps toward Tattersall's.

As I near the well remembered entrance a man jumping out of a hansom knocks up against me.

"I'm sure I beg your par— Why, bless my heart! can it be? Yes, it surely is yourself! Jim, old fellow, welcome back a thousand times! Who would have thought of meeting you? and you are just the very man I wanted."

And Phil Blake, late captain in the Black Dragoons, and one of the cheeriest and kindest hearted of men, grasped my hand and shook it with all the enthusiasm of his nature.

"And how's yourself? and what are ye doing? and where are going?" were the questions rapidly poured forth, as taking my arm he led me on to the doorway. "Come in here and give me the benefit of your judgment. I know nobody whom I'd trust before you in the matter of horse buying. There's a pair of horses to be sold here to-day, and the price asked is so ridiculously low that, considering their make and shape, I fancy there must be something queer; but for the life of me I can't discover anything. They'll make a grand pair of leaders. By the way, do you know I've got up coaching as a business; up one day down the next? My line is between Barrackville and London. It pays expenses and leaves a little over. Rather a pretty bit of country, too, but of course you'll know it all well."

"Yes," I said shortly. "St. Runwald's, my old uncle's place, is on the road," and I could not repress a sigh as I thought of the old place which had teen mine for a couple of months and then had to go to the hammer with everything else.

"Ah, to be sure. Sorry I spoke, my dear fellow," stammered my companion, who had the kindest heart in the world, and would not have hurt a fly if he knew it.

I was about to ask if he knew who owned St. Runwald's now, in order to relieve him and show my sang froid, but Phil, catching sight at that moment of a well known dependent of the place, we were soon deep in the mysteries of finding out all the evils that horseflesh is heir to.

However, our combined forces could discover nothing seriously amiss, and Phil Blake added to his stud a pair of exceptionally good and cheap horses. We celebrated our revived friendship by a little dinner at the club, and after an evening at the play we parted, I promising to make the journey down to Barrackville with Phil some day soon.

Imagine then my surprise when a few days later I received a note by a mounted messenger (it was Sunday, and consequently no postal service) from Phil Blake, and the contents still more surprised me.

The Silver Flagon, Victoria Place.
Saturday Night.

Dear Lauriston—As ill luck will have it, here I am overtaken by a bad attack of influenza, and misfortunes never coming singly, my head man, who usually takes the ribbons when I am otherwise engaged, has got an ugly kick on the knee which quite incapacitates him. It is all awfully annoying, especially as every seat on the coach is booked for Monday, and our friends, the new chestnuts, are to take their places in the team, and the last stage into Barrackville. Now, my dear fellow, I confidently appeal to you for help. Will you take the coach down to Barrackville on Monday? and if possible, I will go down on a late train and meet you there in order to do the return journey on Tuesday. I know of old your skill with the ribbons, and would rather put you in charge than any other man on such short notice. Kibble, the guard, will show you the line of "march."

Then followed directions as to time, stoppages, changes, etc.

Well, the end of it of course was that Monday morning about 10:30 found me turning under the archway of the Silver Flagon. On inquiry I learned that Phil Blake was decidedly better, and hoped to be able to get down to Barrackville by the evening express. As I smoked the very excellent cigar offered me by mine host of the Silver Flagon I was conscious of a really pleasurable feeling of excitement such as I had often told myself I should never feel again.

The yard presented quite a lively scene—passengers of all sorts and conditions hurrying into their various coaches; for the Silver Flagon is a favorite coaching rendezvous. The Barrackville coach—"The lightning" by name—was being rapidly got ready. It was one of Holland's best make, and the shining dark green panels and brass mountings were receiving the last polishing at the hands of the men. The travelers began to gather. Rugs, coats and umbrellas were stowed away, spare traces and straps, etc., looked to. Then the horses are led out—as likely looking a team as any man could wish to drive.

"Take your places, ladies and gentlemen, please!" shouted the guard in stentorian tones.

I threw away the end of my cigar, buttoned my gloves, rammed my hat firmly on, said a word to the head hostler as to the bitting of the leaders, glanced comprehensively over the quartet, then gathered up the reins and swung myself on to the box.

The guard performed a fine fantasia on the horn.

"Give 'em their heads, William. Let 'em go!" and with a fine dash and clatter we were off; up Waterloo place, Regent street, by Regent's park, and so out to the country beyond.

Until then I had given no attention to the lady who occupied the box seat. I could see that she was dressed very neatly and quietly; no feathers or flowers or ribbons to blow about and appear dishevelled and untidy. From the top of her jaunty little hat to her well fitting brown gloves all looked thoroughly fit and workmanlike.

I immagined she must be well-to-do, for a very neat Victoria had brought her to the Silver Flagon, her maid had an inside seat and I heard the man servant say he would be down in Barrackville in time to meet the coach on its arrival there. Since the day Lena Vereker threw me over I had quite eschewed ladies' society, and I felt glad enough that my horses gave me quite as much as I knew to hold them. Their exuberance of spirits, the outcome of the Sunday rest was delightful when one had got them properly together, and I felt that if we were horsed for the country stages in the same style I should not regret having taken up the role of stage coachman. I began to form plans for a partnership with Phil Blake and extending our operations further afield when my heart seemed to stand still, for a voice whose well remembered tones I could have sworn to anywhere said:

"I am so glad, coachman, we have such a lovely day for our drive!"

It was a simple sentence enough, but the blood rushed up to my head, and I don't know what I should have done if my attention had not been diverted by the near leader shying violently at a gypsy van by the roadside, necessitating some slight punishment. What in the world should I do? for of all embarrassing positions—Here was I for the next few hours bound to sit beside the woman I had once hoped to marry, and who was the wife of the man by whom I was ruined. I could not sit speechless for six hours; I must say something occasionally. Evidently she did not recognize me, as how, indeed, should she after nearly ten years' interval, and as we had come together under such different circumstances? Growing more accustomed to the position, when next she spoke I was so far master of the situation that I began to take an interest in talking to her, and I noticed with pleasure how little changed she was.

For the last stage my friends the new chestnuts were put on as leaders. Our route now lay close past dear old St. Runwald's and sadness that I could not shake off made me silent and indisposed for talking. What memories did the sight of the well remembered scenes recall! There was the exact spot under the seared elm where I took my first fence on my little unmaned pony, and there was the bend in the avenue where I last saw my dear old uncle standing as he waved his hand to me in farewell. I wonder whether the man who owns it now has made the old rose garden give place to a more modern style? I wonder——

But here I am recalled to what is going on around me by the conversation of some young fellows who have the seats behind me.

"Jolly old place, St. Runwald's. Who owns it now? D'ye know?"

"Not quite sure. Used to belong to old Sir Peter Lauriston, and he left it to his nephew, a young fool in the black dragoons, who went the pace and lost everything at cards."

"I remember," said another; "the affair made rather a noise, did it not? for the winner took not his house and lands, but also succeeded to the affections of his intended wife."

A roar of laughter followed these words. I dared not glance at the figure beside me, but I heard an intense whisper of "Oh! it is not true, it is not true!"

"Who was the lucky man?" asked the first speaker.

"Sir Baxby Bracewell," said the elder speaker, "but be paid the debt of nature a couple or three years ago. It was said that young Lauriston's losses would not have been so heavy if Bracewell had played more on the square."

The shuddering sigh from my neighbor was more than I could stand.

"I beg your pardon, gentlemen," I said, turning round. "I happen to know all the circumstances of the case you are discussing. Young Lauriston was an utterly conceited, vain young fool, who pitted himself against a man of twice his science, hard-headedness and brains. He continued playing, notwithstanding the advice of those who knew, and the end was obvious. There was no sharp practice in the matter; and moreover, de mortuis nil."

As I turned from speaking to them I encountered such a look of gratitude and astonished recognition from the dearest gray eyes in the world as almost upset my equanimity.

We were just rounding a rather sharp bend by the park wall; the air was filled with the sound of sheep; there was a great cloud of dust: the two new leaders, who had been hitherto perfectly irreproachable in their manners, stopped dead, demoralizing the wheelers, and despite all blandishments and coercion commenced a wild stampede among the unfortunate sheep.

"Lena, my darling, for your life, sit still!" I shouted, above all the hubbub of yelling shepherds, terrified sheep, barking dogs and plunging horses. "Undo this buckle, and you'll probably save our lives," and I tossed the ends of the leaders' reins into her lap, for I saw that the traces were broken, and I knew that if the chestnuts got away while the reins were buckled the bridles of the wheels would be torn off and a frightful catastrophe would follow.

Fortunately I kept sufficient control over the maddened creatures until I saw the reins divided; then I let them slide through the rings. The chestnuts turned sharp to the left and bolted over the hedge, and I knew that we were safe. The wheelers, poor things, were soon subdued, and then I dispatched the guard and some of the many bystanders, who had of course appeared from no one knows where, to recapture the recalcitrant chestnuts.

It was evident now why Phil had got them so cheap—a wild dislike to sheep was evidently their fault.

However, by the time they were brought back into the way they should go the flock had passed on, after many and terrible threats of future consequences from the shepherds, and fresh traces being forthcoming we proceeded on our way, but not before the thanks of the passengers had been showered upon me for the skilful way in which I averted what might have been an ugly accident.

"Indeed, gentlemen," I said, "most of your thanks are due to Lady Bracewell, who so deftly unfastened the buckle."

"Oh, Mr. Lauriston!" protested Lady Bracewell, with a smile and blush that forcibly recalled the Lena Vereker of old days.

The faces of the men behind were studies when they realized how they had committed themselves. But for that we care little, as, the ice once broken, we began explanations and confidences that made that drive the most memorable of my life—save, indeed, when a few weeks later we, my newly wedded wife and I, drove from St. George's, Hanover square, in the brougham and a pair of horses given to us by Phil Blake; and the horses were our friends the chestnut who so wildly performed the ceremony of introduction.

As we keep them for town work, and flocks of sheep are not frequenters of London streets, they are a valuable addition to our stud.—London World.

The bride is recently from bloomington Ill., where she was a popular young lady in the best society. Both have the best wishes of their many friends.

The annual school meeting was held at the school house last Saturday evening. Very few voters were in attendance. S. M. Dainard was chosen chairman and H. E. Ives was elected clerk of the district for a term of three years. The meeting then adjourned until Monday evening. On Monday evening J. L. Johnson was chosen chairman and eight months school was voted for the ensuing year as follows! Commencing on the last Monday in September continuing for three months; commencing on the first Monday in January for three months; commencing on the first Monday in May for two months. The sum of six hundred dollars was voted for current expenses for the ensuing year, after which the meeting adjourned.

Hicks has the following to say relative to the weather during the rest of this month,

A warm wave of marked intensity will spread over the country during the period beginning the 22nd and reaching the 26th. We will name the 24th and 25th as the central danger days. Sections west and east of central parts of the country may look for storm developments a day or so earlier or later than the central days—earlier in the west and later in the east. This is a fact we cannot too often repeat, or that cannot be too well understood by the public. There are times when storms break out locally and simultaneously at points far east and west of each other, but the rule is that they have their rise and organization in the west, and travel to the east. The new moon on the 23rd will hasten the disturbances so that gathering storms in the very beginning of the period should be watched. It will be natural to expect coolder weather progressively behind the storms, and in the days following up to the beginning of the next storm period; but "cooler weather" at this time must not be construed as meaning all that might be desired. We anticipate heat, and enough of it. The month will go out very warm, with regular storm culminations central on the 31st. We adhere to our belief that the rainfall will be light, and that the heat will be above the normal, taking it as a whole. The exceptions will not be so great as to exempt any part of the globe to any considerable degree. We freely admit that we are not fully prepared by personal observation to foretell the possible results of a Saturn equinox central in the midst of the summer. We close with this warning: Let every possible precaution be taken against the appearance and spread of epidemics: St. Louis June 1st.

In a former number we stated that at some future time we would state our reasons for leaving the old party and joining the new. In making a step of so much importance we are not unmindful of the opposition we shall encounter, nor the unpleasant sallies of our brethern remaining in the parties opposed to the one which we have joined. Our reasons, which seem to us to be valid and far reaching, are as follows: There are no principle in the Republican party or its platform worth fighting for; the party through bad and dishonest management has degenerated until there is nothing left of the once great and patriotic organization but the bedraggled rags of its outer garment. Every honest thinking man ought to carefully look over the party's present condition as well as its record for the past ten years, and then determine if he can honestly support it any longer.

Second. The protective principles of the Republican party are actually mischievous and oppressive, and protect where protection is not needed and fails and neglects to protect where protection would be humane and statesman like The promise of the party leaders four years ago that a protective tariff would conduce to increase the wages of the American laborer, they have failed to keep. for while many articles of American industry are today protected almost to prohibition, in not a single instance have the wages of American laborers been increased, but on the other hand, have in almost every trade and calling been reduced and while the manufacturer protected to to his hearts desire is spending his profits in idleness in some far off foreign land, his hirelings are barely earning enough to "keep soul and body together" in a land where we boast of freedom and equal rights.

Third. The financial or money policy of the Republican party is unhealthy and destructive. Unhealthy because it is not a policy for all the people but a policy for the rich, and pinches the poor; and destructive because it reduces the capacity of the producer and laborer to the position of beggar, if he desires to do any business requiring the greater quantities of the circulating medium than he can raise in the actual pursuit of his avocation. Destructive, because it seeks to base the circulating medium of a great country on a single commodity, of which there is not in the whole world enough to meet the requirements of a nation like ours. The Republican party during the Harrison administration has made no progress toward relieving the people. With less than four hundred millions in circulation, the business of the country is stagnated and suffering for the necessary means with which to carry on its immense business and the Republican party, in control of the government is responsible for the results. The plank in the Republican platform relating to "honest money" is an insult to every intelligent voter in the United States, and a fraud upon the rights of every producer and laborer in the land, and a mine of wealth to the rich.

Fourth. The main plank in the platform is a reiteration of the demands of the machine-politician, for the passage of the bill, once defeated, which no one but the politicians want, and which will work no good to any one but the politicians, known as the force bill, is not in the interest of or for the good of the country, and no honest voter can say that it will be better for the country to keep it in a broil for another four years and perhaps longer, to satisfy the whim of any man, even if he be the president of the "greatest country on earth."

A late press dispatch contains the following.

"Another advance in coal. The eastern coal barons touched the button yesterday in New York and the price advanced 25 cents a ton. This is the third advance which has been made since the organization of the Reading combine. The coal barons now have complete control of the situation. One of the points decided at the meeting was that the allotment for July should be 3,500,000 tons. This covers the entire field east and west, and throws out of employment a large number of miners and other workmen."

Along with this comes the report that "the Gould family has now practically secured control of all the coal fields in Colorado," and so the dance of death goes on. The natural advantages and resources of the land, those things that if properly used, would make this people the happiest and most universally prosperous in all the world, have been and are being monopolized and used to extort and impoverish on the one hand, and to dangerously centralize wealth on the other. Such acts as the one here with referred to are making converts to the doctrine of nationalisation of our natural resources by the thousands, and who can be surprised thereat?—Farm Stock and Home.

A full account of the Peoples party convention will be found on another page. We are pleased to know that Editor P. M. Ringdahl, of the Crookston Tribune, has received the nomination for state treasurer. Mr. Ringdahl is an honest straight-forward gentleman and would fill the position with credit and we sincerely hope he may be successful in his canvass.

HUMOR

MR. GLADLIVER'S MISTAKE.

Being Generally Known as a Funny Man Doesn't Pay.

Mr. Gladliver was employed as a writer on a morning paper. Awhile ago he became afflicted with the notion that if he had half a chance he could prepare some very funny stuff for readers to laugh over.

He told the editor of the paper how he felt about it, and said he thought it was a real shame for him to hide his humorous light under a bushel when he should be scattering laughter about like sunbeams to brighten the weary, careworn souls around him. He was much pleased when the editor told him to prepare a column for the Sunday paper, and in a gleeful half hour's work dashed off a number of jokes he felt assured were very clever.

It is true his topics were not entirely original, but that didn't matter to—Mr. Gladliver. One joke was about a cake the wife baked, one about the hired girl, one about the milkman, one about the neighbor's piano, one about the mother-in-law and one about the grasping landlord and the rickety flat.

He was very proud of his work as a humorist and signed his name to it with a sense of expanding greatness. The column appeared in the Sunday morning paper. Mr. G., who was compelled to remain at the office till noon, expected to find everybody in a fit of laughter when he reached home.

His neighbor saw him coming down the walk and went out and hailed him.

"I see by this morning's paper that you have made some very slighting remarks about our piano and the manner in which we play it. It's a hundred times better than the old tin pan your people pound seventeen hours a day. If it wasn't Sunday I'd teach you"——

But Mr. G. escaped inside his own door, where he ran against the hired girl just leaving with a large bundle.

"Oh, ye dirty sneak," said she, landing a blow on his short ribs. "I'll tache you to slander worrukin girls!" and before he could explain it was only a joke she had gone out into the cold world, he knew not whither.

The look his wife gave him as he opened the sitting room door froze his marrow.

"You've disgraced the family. I shall apply for a divorce tomorrow, and poor, dear ma, who has always stood up for you when no other self respecting person could, is packing her trunks and will leave in the morning. The hired girl has gone, and the milkman left word that he would sue you for injuring his business by saying he sold more water than milk!"

A ring at the bell cut short further remarks. Mr. G. opened the door, and there stood the landlord with a glow on his face that somewhat resembled a premature explosion of fireworks.

"It's not the right thing to make a business call Sunday, but I saw your scurrilous remarks in the paper and I warn you that you'll pay your three months' rent now overdue tomorrow morning and quit my premises immediately, you ungrateful wretch!"

When Mr. Gladliver was able to leave the county hospital he found himself a morose and melancholy man without a friend on earth so far as he knew. He is now living under an assumed name in a cheap, half furnished room in an obscure part of the city, and he is thoroughly convinced he will never do anything more to brighten up this dreary and unappreciative old world.—Chicago Times.

An Unlucky Place.

A member of the French academy once called down upon himself a witty and unanswerable rebuke for rudeness.

In taking the place of M. Furetiere, whom he disliked, he said, pointedly:

"In this place I shall certainly say some foolish things."

"My congratulations," said Furetiere calmly. "You have begun well."—Youth's Companion.

Could Afford It.

Strawber—Do you notice that the cashier in our restaurant has on a new gown every day?

Singerly—Yes. But I am not surprised at it.

Strawber—Why not?

Didn't Go In.

"Were you at the seashore last summet, Polly?"

"Only for a day."

"Did you bathe?"

"No. Somebody else was using the ocean when we were there."—Harper's Bazar.

A Watch in Which the Sun Sets.

Charles S. Nelson, a painter, living in Chicago, is the owner of one of the most unique timepieces that has ever found its way to America. It is a small sized watch of peculiar shape and curious construction. How old it is no one knows, but it is believed to be one of the first productions of the watchmaking fraternity. It is smaller in circumference than the average watch of the present day, but it is also about three times the thickness of a Waltham or an Elgin of equal size. The case is of pure silver, and it is constructed on the open faced plan. It has two dials, one within the other. The outer one tells the minutes, hours, the days of the week, the month and the day of the month. On the inner dial are pictures representing the sun, the moon, the earth and the planets, each dial being furnished with a separate set of hands and pointers.

As night advances apace the sun begins to darken, while the moon and the stars begin to shine and twinkle with a peculiar white light. How or by what means the sun is made to darken at the right time and the moon and the stars to shine is unknown, electricity having not been discovered at the time the watch was made, now nearly 400 years ago.—St. Louis Republic.

A College Scapegoat.

In after life the late Dr. S. G. Howe often expressed his regret that he had wasted his time while in college, and explained how it happened that he became the ringleader in fun and frolic. His explanation suggests that all who are educators of youth should heed the inspired words: "Charity suffereth long, and is kind; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; believeth all things, hopeth all things."

He discovered before he had been many months in college that he was suspected of all the mischief there, when in fact but a small part of it was his. His truthful denials were disregarded, and he was made the college scapegoat.

The faculty's suspicion tempted him to keep up his reputation, and he determined that as he had the name he would have the game. A little timely advice and kindly treatment, and more than all a little confidence in his word, would have corrected his foibles and made a student of the practical joker.—Youth's Companion.

William Corbett's Grammar.

It has been said of Corbett that he wrote an English grammar which was "as entertaining as a novel." And this is nothing more than the literal truth. In fact, many novels are harder to read than Corbett's grammar. The full title of the book is: "A grammar of the English language in a series of letters; intended for the use of schools and of young persons in general, but more especially for the use of soldiers, sailors, apprentices and plowboys. By William Corbett. To which are added six lessons, intended to prevent statesmen from using false grammar, and from writing in an awkward manner."

From its sarcastic title page to the end of the 230 pages of which it is composed, every sentence in the book tingles and vibrates with the strong personality of the writer. But the purpose with which the book was written is never lost sight of. It is an orderly, simple and humorous treatise, displaying strong common sense and sound judgment.—Temple Bar.

A Monster Ruby.

Ibn Batutah, the earliest and most entertaining of the Moorish travelers, tells of a ruby bowl that was shown him by Arya Chakravasti, ruling chief of Pathan, which he affirms, "was larger than the palm of a man's hand." Farther on in his account of this carved gem he says that its sides were engraved with figures of "three palm trees, a man, two goats and a dog, the opposite side having the figures of two tigers engaged in combat." This gem of gems must have weighed at least 300 carats and its value was beyond calculation.—Exchange.

The Circus Manager and the Jockey.

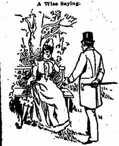
Old Renz had a decided objection to performers with heavy beards. His aversion did not extend to a slight mustache, but one day when a newly engaged English jockey came on the scene "bearded like the pard," he seemed not particularly pleased. An elderly member of the troop suggested that the new comer should at least get rid of his "sideboards," but the son of Albion gave a decided "No!" and his debut turned out a partial failure.

"Much too heavy for a jockey!" curtly remarked the manager.

"Then what am I to do?" piteously inquired the new hand.

"Go in for a shave!"—Anekdotenjaeger.

A Wise Saying.



Mr. Wednot (a confirmed bachelor)—How time does fly, Miss Toolate. It's just ten years ago since you refused me on this very spot.

Miss Toolate (who wishes she hadn't)—Yes, Mr. Wednot; but I was very young and foolish then.

Mr. Wednot—But we are both older and wiser now.—Jester.

YOU LEARN

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

The horse became frightened and started to run, but the wagon tongue broke and the victim was thrown out and her skull fractured.

THE PEOPLES PARTY

First Convention of the Peoples Party of Minnesota Held at St. Paul.

Hon. Ignatius Donnelly Nominated for Governor--Other Officers Nominated.

The first convention of the Peoples Party of Minnesota was called to order at St. Paul by Chairman Meighen of the state central committee, who read the call and announced the following temporary officers:

Temporary chairman, A. D. Stewart; temporary secretary, P. M. Ringdal of Crookston; assistant secretaries, G. Seeburger of St. Cloud and Robert Eckford of St. Paul; reading clerk, C. H. Johnston of Pipestone; sergeant-at-arms, A. C. Welch of McLeod; assistants, J. H. Lackey of Todd and S. P. Rasmussen of St. Paul.

Temporary Chairman Stewart made the usual address, in which he complimented everybody because of the "magnificent gathering," and said it was a convention of earnest and industrious men thoroughly aroused and bound to wrest the reins of power from the hands of those who had held them so long, and inaugurate an era of great and sweeping reform.

THE COMMITTEES.

The first step was the appointment of the usual committees, and on a suggestion by Mr. Hanna of Murray the committee on credentials was composed of one delegate from each county, the list being as follows:

Blue Earth, W. G. Daly; Brown, Chris Ahlness; Benton, I. A. Barnum; Big Stone, A. S. McGhee; Becker, E. J. Moore; Chippewa, John Kuhn; Cottonwood, Charles Chadderdon; Chisago, C. F. Stark; Carlton, A. Anderson; Clay, A. H. Holloway; Dakota, C. P. Carpenter; Dodge, E. M. Dodge; Douglas, H. G. Douglass; Hennepin, E. T. Clark; Freeborn, W. W. Sweet; Goodhue; Fred Cluett; Hubbard, J. W. Smith; Houston, J. A. Eberhard; Isanti, O. A. Lindberg; Jackson, W. V. King; Kittson, F. W. Wagner; Le Sueur, P. Shipman; Lincoln, George Meine; Kandiyohi, John Swenson; Lac qui Parle, John McGuire, Lyon, T. Montgomery; McLeod, Nels La Vallee, Mille Lacs, T. P. Kerr; Morrison, Henry Bourk; Mower, A. Kingsbury; Meeker, D. Manning; Otter Tail, O. F. Forsyth, Olmsted, W. G. Bowers; Rock, John Johnson, Rice, Gilbert Fish; Pope, Carl Erickson; Polk, W. S. Hunt; Ramsey, A. B. Ferris; Renville, F. C. Green; Redwood, T. L. Gilbert; Sherburne, A. O. Whitney; Sibley, P. A. Cosgrove, Swift, O. S. Clapp; St. Louis, John Jenswold; Stearns, A. M. Stearns; Stevens, T. Callahan; Todd, D. S. Dumas; Traverse, G. A. Westphal; Murray, H. F. Pfeer; Martin, C. D. Everett; Nicollet, S. N. Austin; Norman, B. M. Chesley; Nobles, J. H. Maxfield; Winona, S. Hessegrave; Wadena, C. A. Alton; Waseca, W. A. Fee; Watonwan, John Erickson; Wabasha, John Morrow; Wilkin, Robert Glover; Wright, P. Kirshemer; Yellow Medicine, S. Lindsay.

The following committee on resolutions was appointed:

At Large—E. W. Fish.

First District—William Meighen, Fillmore; H. W. Norton, Dodge.

Second District—C. C. Goodnow, Pipestone; F. M. Currier, Blue Earth.

Third District—H. A. Swaim, Wright; T. Warner, Renville.

Fourth District—Walworth, Ramsey; A. D. Rowe, Washington.

Fifth District—H. B. Martin, Jonas Howe, Hennepin.

Sixth District—J. L. Robbins, Stearns; C. F. Bohall, Todd.

Seventh District—Andrew Steenerson, Polk; William Reardon, Clay.

Mr. Donnelly being loudly called for delivered a short speech.

The afternoon session was one of the most interesting ever held by a political party in this state. Pat Rahilly of Wabasha opened the ball by offering the following resolution:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the board of prison managers at Stillwater be requested to sell the present year's product of binding twine at 9 cents per pound.

Mr. Rahilly said he had been assured that if the convention passed such a resolution unanimously the managers would reduce the price of twine accordingly.

On the motion of Mr. Miller of Renville the resolution was sent to the committee on resolutions in spite of Mr. Rahilly's opposition.

The committee on credentials now reported that the various counties were represented by delegates as follows:

Anoka, 1; Blue Earth, 8; Brown, 12; Benton, 10; Big Stone, 2; Becker, 3; Chippewa, 7; Cottonwood, 4; Carver, 4; Chisago, 2; Carlton, 3; Cass, 2; Clay, 10; Dodge, 15; Dakota, 14; Douglas, 7; Fillmore, 10; Freeborn, 4; Goodhue, 6; Houston, 5; Hennepin, 24; Hubbard, 4; Isanti, 3; Jackson, 4; Kittson, 2; Kandiyohi, 11; Le Sueur, 4; Lyon, 5; Lincoln, 11; Lac qui Parle, 17; Mower, 7; Martin, 4; Murray, 8; McLeod, 10; Meeker, 8; Mille Lacs, 3; Morrison, 2; Marshall, 9; Nobles, 9; Nicollet, 4; Norman, 8; Olmsted, 5; Otter Tail, 10; Pipestone, 8; Pope, 9; Polk, 24; Rice, 8, Ramsey, 7; Rock, 6; Redwood 5; Renville, 28; Sibley, 6; Sherburne, 7; Swift, 10; Stevens, 7; Stearns, 15; St. Louis, 6; Todd, 13; Traverse, 5; Winona, 4; Waseca, 6; Wabasha, 8; Watonwan, 3; Washington, 11; Wright, 5; Wadena, 4; Wilkin, 6; Yellow Medicine, 11. Total, 650.

On the motion of Mr. Rahilly the chairman appointed the following as the committee on permanent organization and rules:

Pat Rahilly, Wabasha; W. R. Holley, Pope; J. I. Vermilyea, Olmsted; Gilbert Fish, Rice; A. S. Edwards, Hennepin; T. L. Gilbert, Redwood; J. J. Mooney, Yellow Medicine; Thomas Lucas, Hennepin; M. Lowe, Brown; P. Ringdal, Polk.

While waiting the report of the committees, Mr. Schilling of Milwaukee delivered an address.

A committee from the Farmers Alliance was announced and the chair appointed a committee to escort them into the convention hall.

When the committee retired the committee on permanent organization made a report recommending that the temporary organization be made permanent, and that the convention proceed to nominate a state ticket; and that the convention vote by counties.

The alliance committee was then introduced and Mr. W. W. Erwin the spokesman addressed the convention, he said:

"I appear as the spokesman of fifteen gentlemen representing the state central committee of the Alliance party of Minnesota," said Mr. Erwin, "a party which embraces one-half or one-third of the membership of your own political party. We come from the Alliance party of 1890 to ask you to affiliate with us on state issues and to work together to set right many wrongs not yet righted. We obtained 58,000 votes to uphold our standard, but were beaten united, at the polls by the old parties by 30,000 each, on state issues, which we could ask our most conservative men to stand. Since then a new party has sprung up and taken root in Minnesota. It has held a national convention and adopted a national platform embracing the general sentiment of the whole country, and not controlled by the local needs of the several states. Your national convention adopted measures of reform far in advance of those of any political party. They will revolutionize the government and institutions of this country, convert the government into a great railroad corporation and a great national and district bank. Are you willing to close the doors to private enterprise in these two matters and delegate the monopoly to your government. We cannot subscribe to these two planks.

WE WERE WITH YOU

in 1890 and we are identified with the reform movement in this state. We ask you to so form your line of battle in this state that we can join you and present again a united front against the plutocratic foe. We don't wish to interfere with your national platform and presidential electors, but we ask that your state platform be such that we can join you. The greatest issue in this state is the movement to crush the great wheat combination which takes $10,000,000 annually out of the farmers' pockets. Will you give this up to push extreme views which are only suited to the needs of the country at large [Mr. Erwin was here interrupted by protracted jeering laughter]. We represent in this conservative idea of the people in this sub-treasury plank, one-half of the men who voted for Mr. Owen two years ago. ['No! no!' shouted the convention]. In Blue Earth county twenty-four sub-alliances repudiate these and other measures."

SOME HOT SHOTS.

Here Mr. Erwin's voice was drowned by shouts of "That is not true," and Mr. Currier of Blue Earth rose to remark that "That statement is false."

Mr. Erwin—Foster and Baker can corroborate this.

A delegate—They are hustlers at lying, then.

Mr. Erwin—The power to bring victory to our common cause rests with you. Take all the extreme views you like, but if you can, meet us on a state ticket and we will be glad to join you.

"Who must we join?" yelled a delegate.

Mr. Erwin—I ask you to join the Alliance party of 1890. That is all.

The convention then adjourned until 7 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The first business of the evening session was the report of the convention on resolutions. The following is the report:

THE PLATFORM.

Resolved, That the People's party of Minnesota affirms and emphasizes the principles and demands of our national platform, and declares its faith in the ability and integrity of our candidates for president and vice president. We pledge to the citizens of Minnesota the fidelity of the nominees of this convention to the principles of reform, embracing an immediate and radical change in the state control of corporations and transportation facilities, with direct reference to the grain traffic and state taxation.

Resolved, That the constitution should be so amended that the people shall have the right to have all laws referred back to themselves for approval or disapproval.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, it appears, from sworn testimony that gigantic frauds are perpetrated upon the grain growers of Minnesota under our present system of grain inspecting and warehousing, therefore,

Resolved, That we demand that the transportation companies shall provide suitable shipping and warehousing facilities at every station on their lines, also that the state shall erect terminal elevators at Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth for public storage of grain.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathies to the oppressed workmen at Homestead and all over the United States in their fight against the oppressions of monopolistic employers, and we urge them to join with us in an attempt to overthrow at the polls our common enemy, the monopolistic millionaires who are now through their control of the government and the industries of the country, rapidly and surely reducing the people to a condition of political and industrial slavery.

Whereas, We believe there is corruption caused by the forming of political rings by office holders; therefore, be it

Resolved, That no man holding a salaried office shall have a right to become a delegate to a convention or serve as a committeeman.

Resolved, That it is the sense of this convention that the board of managers of the twine plant at Stillwater and the governor be requested to sell the present year's product of twine at nine cents per pound.

A MINORITY REPORT.

After the reading of the platform and resolution, Roe of Washington appeared with a minority report.

"The first of these two planks," he said, "is this:"

We believe the saloon an element of monopoly and that the People's party should use all endeavor for the destruction of this evil of society.

He said it should not be passed over for it was filling our prisons and beggaring our homes. The other plank was:

We believe all the people, without regard to sex, should have equal voice in making the laws on which depend the happiness and prosperity of our homes.

The chairman suggested then that the convention act on the other resolutions, but Duncan of Todd objected to the twine resolution on the ground that the people could buy twine cheaper in other parts of the state than at Stillwater. This, then, was left out, and a motion was made that action be taken on the resolutions aside from this one, and it was unanimously carried.

Here Mr. Donnelly came forward and said he feared evil results would follow this vote. "You have left this prohibition plank out of the platform, and people will say we have taken a back track." He then offered this resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we believe it should be the duty of the legislature to submit to the vote of the people any amendments to the constitution that are demanded by a reasonable number of the voters of the state.

Hanna of Renville offered a resolution that in declaring against trusts and monopolies it is understood that the great whisky trust and the Rochester clothing combine are included. Adopted.

The majority report of the committee was adopted and after considerable discussion the report of the minority was tabled.

By a unanimous vote the twine resolution was tabled.

THE NOMINATIONS.

Nominations were then declared in order and Mr. Carpenter of Dakota county took the platform and in concluding a short speech said:

"I have been honored by our delegation to present a gentleman whom we recommend. In behalf of Dakota county, the great commonwealth of Minnesota, I present the name of the great commoner, the great friend of our home, Ignatius Donnelly." [Pandemonium.]

Lockey of Todd seconded the nomination of Donnelly, and a dozen counties followed in seconding speeches amid the wildest kind of enthusiasm.

Mr. Donnelly's nomination was made unanimous by a rising vote. A committee then escorted Mr. Donnelly to the platform, and after the applause had died away, he said:

My Friends—I know this is not a time for long speeches and that you wish to get through with your business and get back to your homes. Therefore I will simply say that I thank you from the depths of my heart, not only for the honor you have conferred upon me, but the extraordinary unanimity with which it is given. Especially am I grateful when I remember it was entirely unsolicited on my part by word or deed, for I believe in the grand principle which our party has adopted that the office should seek the man and not the man the office. Whether you have acted wisely in nominating me remains to be seen, but I promise you I will do all that lies in my power for our success. When the harvest is over and we can get audiences I will take the stump and continue to speak until the night before election, not alone for myself, but for the ticket you will nominate to-night and for the success of our grand cause and every ticket in every county in the state. It will be of little avail if you elect me, unless you at the same time elect a house of representatives and one that will stand by us in the struggles to come. This is the paramount issue. Friends, I am getting older and cooler than I was years ago, and I have tried to be moderate, just and reasonable with all men. If I have failed, or talked unkindly to any one of our party, I here express my regret for so doing. Every man who is with us here is my friend.

At the conclusion of Mr. Donnelly's speech, $1,033.43 was subscribed as a campaign fund.

ELECTORS CHOSEN.

The districts reported the following as electors and members of the state central committee, each district being entitled to three:

First District—Elector, W. H. Norton; committee, T. G. Meighan, H. G. Nelson, James Munroe.

Second District—Elector, F. M. Currier; committee, J. J. Mooney, A. D. Farris, John McGuire.

Third District—Elector, C. P. Carpenter; committee, Gilbert Fish, C. N. Perkins, P. S. Sheppard.

Fourth District—Elector, Dr. E. Fish; committee, S. Rasmusson, A. Richmond, O. A. Lindberg.

Fifth District—Elector—Dr. E. F. Clark; committee, John Grunberg, E. F. Clark, C. T. Grave.

Sixth District—Elector, C. F. Bohall, Todd county; committee, C. P. Bohall, James F. Plaut, M. Wisenberg.

At 11 o'clock the convention adjourned, and will meet again at 9 o'clock this morning and nominate the rest of the state ticket.

SECOND DAY.

The convention was called to order shortly after 9 o'clock and after a few preliminaries proceeded to the nomination of a lieutenant governor.

Mr. Wesenberg of Duluth in an able speech put in nomination Kittel Halvorsen, the nomination received several seconds and on motion Kittel Halvorsen was nominated by acclamation.

For secretary of state H. B. Martin of Hennepin was nominated by acclamation.

For state treasurer, P. M. Ringdal of Crookston and Eric Matthison of Lac qui Parle were placed in nomination. Mr. Ringdal received a majority of the votes and was declared the nominee. The convention then adjourned till 1:30.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The following nominations were made to complete the ticket:

Attorney General—J. L. McDonald, Ramsey.

Supreme Court Justices—Daniel E. Buck, Blue Earth; Thomas Canty, Hennepin; W. N. Davidson, Rock.

Presidential Electors—William Meighen, Swan Nelson, H. M. Norton, F. M. Currier, C. P. Carpenter, E. W. Fish H. F. Clarke, C. F. Bohall, J. H. Holloway.

After passing the following resolutions the convention adjourned sine die!

That this convention pledges itself to support all candidates for the legislature who stand upon the People's party platform and to support no others.

This convention endorses the action and efficiency of E. J. Moore in presenting his minority report to the grain and warehouse commissioners of this state.

That this convention recommends that the remaining $400 of the grain investigation prosecuting fund be applied to farmers' institute work.

That the executive of the state central committee are instructed to turn over $500 to the lecture fund to be used in unorganized districts.

Hard to take —the big, old-fashioned pill. It's pretty hard to have to take it, too. You wouldn't, if you realized fully how it shocks and weakens the system.

Luckily, you don't have to take it. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are better. They're sensible. They do, mildly and gently, more than the ordinary pill, with all its disturbance. They regulate the liver, stomach and bowels, as well as thoroughly cleanse them. They're the original Little Liver Pills, purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, the smallest and the easiest to take. One little Pellet for a gentle laxative—three for a cathartic. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are promptly and permanently cured.

They're the cheapest, too, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

UNCLE SAM IN A JACKPOT.

"The luckiest man in a poker game," remarked a Washington man in a reminiscent mood, as he drew three cards, "was a certain congressman from Illinois. He was backed in a jackpot by the United States.

"We were having a nice little game of $2 limit. There is often a smart pile of money in a $2 limit. Around the hotel table were four of us, and this was the only congressman who had sand enough and money enough to sit out the game. There was a night session and an exciting time in the house of representatives, and the others had dropped out one by one on the score of public duty.

"Well, it was getting on toward 2 o'clock in the morning, and we had a lovely pot and everbody stayed in. The pot was opened on four deuces and the man stood pat. That was this same congressman. There was nothing less than a good pair out, and everybody seemed to have improved his hand in the draw. The betting was lively. Just then a servant rushed in and said there was a call of the house and the sergeant-at-arms was at the door.

"'I'd play this hand out if the whole United States was at the door!' said the statesman.

"'Keep him out a minute, Jim.'

"'Lock the door.'

"But the big foot of the sergeant-at-arms was thrust in the crack of the inner door as Jim was going out to bar the outer one.

"'I'm sorry, gentlemen, but—'

"'I'm not,' interrupted the member. I'll go as soon as I rake in this jackpot. In the meantime let me have a fifty.'

"The sergeant-at-arms produced his order book and the fifty soon went to swell the pile. I'll draw on one for a hundred,' pretty soon came from the plucky Illinoisan. One of us laid down his hand at this and another began to look nervous. There were several I. O. Us. in a pile already and I was down to my last dollar and had to call. I had a king full and—well, the Illinois congressman and his four deuces and the sergeant-at-arms and the United States treasury and that jack-pot, with about $800 in it, all went off together."

Miscalculation.

The Boston Globe prints a story which reminds one of the old saying about the shoemaker and his last.

A Yarmouth captain had a small coasting schooner lying in port, and decided to give a lesson to painters in general by himself painting the vessel's name on her bows. He could not reach high enough from the float, and did not care to put out a swinging stage, so he reached down over the side to do the lettering.

After finishing the job on one bow, he went ashore to view his handiwork, and this is what met his gaze—ƎIGGAM.

An Audience of One.

It is said that one night, at the Paris Odeon, the audience consisted of one single, lone man. The management decided to give no performance, and the solitary auditor was offered his money back. He refused it, and insisted upon his rights that the play should go on. The law was on his side, and the company was compelled to act. All the artistes decided to do their worst, which caused the audience to exercise his right to hiss, and he did so with such vigor that the manager saw his way out of the difficulty. He had the man arrested and ejected for disturbing the performance, and then closed the doors.

"Genuine."

It is well for a dealer to know something of the nature and origin of the articles in which he deals.

If a grocer in a Western city had known more of the science of botany he would hardly have put the following placard upon a quantity of maple sugar which he exposed for sale:

GENUINE MAPLE SUGAR
FROM THE PUREST JUICE OF THE CANE.

TENEMENT LIFE.

Its Bright as Well as Its Dark Side.

To many persons, living in a tenement house is synonymous with living in the slums, yet nothing is farther from the truth. It would be an easy matter for me to take a stranger into a dozen or more homes so poor, dirty and wretched that he would not forget the sight for days, and he would be thoroughly convinced that a home cannot exist in a tenement house; but I could take that same person to an equal number of homes in the same section of the city, and sometimes in the same house, which would turn him into a joyful optimist, and forever satisfy him that the state of things is not by any means as bad as it might be. To the casual observer the tenement houses in many portions of New York present a remarkable degree of uniformity. The great brick building with their net-work of iron fire-escapes in front, their numerous clothes-lines running from every window in the rear, the well-known stairs, the dark halls, the numerous odors, pleasant and otherwise, coming from a score of different kitchens presided over by house-wives of various nationalities—these are all similar; but the moment you enter the room, however, you will find every variety of homes, many of them poor, neglected, wretched, and dirty; others clean, thrifty, and attractive; indeed, as great a variety as exists in the interior of homes in an ordinary town. There are homes where the first floor is bare and dirty, the furniture broken and scanty; the table greasy, the bedlinen yellow, the air foul and heavy, the children pale, frowsy and sticky, so that you squirm when the baby wants to kiss you; but there is also another and brighter side. There are at the same time thousands of cheerful, happy homes in the tenement houses.

Long Word.

Mr. Whymper, in a paper upon Greenland in an old number of the Alpine Journal, characterizes the Eskimo language as "sententious."

A single word, he says, is made to convey an idea which in English, would require a full sentence. Of such words he offers one example—a word meaning, "You must try much to get a good knife." Here it is:

Savecenearreatoresooaratlaromaronatetok.

Mr. Whymper does not indicate how this precious polysyllable is to be pronounced, and we must leave our readers to exercise their own discretion upon that point.

THE fact that "of the 328,000 divorces granted in the United States during the last twenty years 316,000 were granted at the request of wives," proves conclusively that a man is much more open to conviction than a woman.

Scrofula in the Neck.

The following is from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:

Willie Tillbrook

"My little boy Willie, now six years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. As it continued to grow he finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with most excellent results and he has had no further trouble. His cure is due to

A Scarecrow That Fired a Pistol.

The robber crows made such terrible depredations upon his cornfields that Frederick Hormon, living near Tamaqua, was forced to take extreme measures. He fitted up a scarecrow, with a six-shooter self-cocking revolver in each wooden hand. In a box in the chest of the man image he placed a strong clock to which he connected the triggers of the pistols. He arranged the connecting strings so they would be wound up in a certain number of hours, thus firing the revolvers. As the crows are worse at day-break, and as they are fearful of the smell of burnt powder, Mr. Hormon arranged the pistols to be discharged at ten-minute intervals in the morning. The experiment worked like a charm, for although none of the crows was hit by the bullets fired from the scarecrow, the shooting scared them so badly that they always, after two or three mornings, flew around Mr. Hormon's cornfield by a circuitous route and bothered him no more. —Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.

For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

The nomination of A. D. Brown as postmaster of Madison, Minn., has been confirmed.

President Harrison vetoes the bill preventing the government from appealing from the circuit court of appeals in Indian depredation cases.

The president has vetoed the bill to amend the law creating the United States court of appeals, chiefly that this law provided that there should be no appeal in Indian depredation cases.

President Harrison issues a proclamation commanding the riotous miners in Idaho to disperse. All the strikers—nearly a thousand—will be arrested, 100 already being in custody; and the disturbances are practically over.

Five of the organizations that are opposing Sunday opening of the World's Fair through their officers now working to this end in Washington, have united in issuing an appeal on the subject to the house of representatives and to the public.

Secretary Noble appointed Elbert D. Weed, Fred. H. Foster and Fellows D. Pease, all of Montana, to be commissioners to negotiate with the Crow Indians for the modification of the agreement concluded with these Indians Dec. 28, 1891.

Postmaster General Wanamaker has received a letter from Charles M. Fox, the agent in Washington of the Graves Elevator Company, of New York, in which he charges Supt. Davenport, of the postoffice department, with having divulged the bids for putting in a hydraulic lift elevator for the use of the supply division.

The members of the national commission and board of control of the World's Fair now in Washington were very agreeably surprised at the result of the yea and nay vote in the house on the senate amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill appropriating $5,000,000 for the World's Fair, for it lessened from a majority of 25 against the appropriation, as shown by the vote in committee of the whole, to the majority of 12 against the appropriation.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

A Burlington freight train was wrecked at the East end of the Missouri river bridge at Plattsmouth, Neb. Three tramps were killed. The accident was caused by the train breaking in two.

William Varley, aged forty-five, and his daughter Annie, nine years of age, occupants of the house No. 2204 Fifth Avenue, New York, were found dead in the bathroom. The gas was turned full on, and the police think that the daughter sought the bathroom as a cool place to sleep and the gas was turned on accidently.

Jesse Guseman while practicing with a Flobert rifle at Uniontown, Pa., was dared by Mary Yenger, aged seventeen, to shoot at her, saying his gun would not shoot half so far. The girl was some distance from Guseman, who instantly turned and shot. The ball entered the girl's right side, and she will die. Guseman says he didn't think the rifle would carry so far, and the girl exonerates him. He is fifteen years old.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Col. E. A. Carr, colonel of the Sixth cavalry, is appointed brigadier general.

Sylvester Cheli, fifty-three years old, a resident of Galveston, Tex., while a passenger on the La Champagne, which arrived at New York from Havre; died during the voyage of consumption.

Ex-Empress Eugenie and her suite are passing the season at Castle Arenberg, in Switzerland, the domain of Queen Hortense, the mother of Napoleon III. Here that beautiful queen, the model of Canova's Venus, passed her long exile under the name of Duchess de St. Leu.

Mrs. Rose Terry Cooke, the authoress, died at Pittsfield, Mass., of congestion of the lungs. Last winter she had an attack of the trouble, followed by la grippe, which left her quite weak. A few days ago she contracted a cold, which brought on her old enemy, but none of her friends were alarmed at her condition until a few hours preceding her death. She leaves a husband and one daughter.

SINS AND SINNERS.

J. H. Johnson a Fort Wayne street car driver, was murdered in a mysterious manner. The dead man's wife was arrested as an accomplice.

Samuel H. May, a lieutenant in the United States navy, shot himself below the right ear at the rooms of the United Service club in New York, and soon died.

At Burton, Tex., Mattie Ellis, a girl of eleven years, killed Alexander McCann, of the same age, with a butcher knife because he wouldn't help her wash dishes.

George W. Vanderbilt's cottage at Bar Harbor, Me., was broken into, and a large quantity of silver and other valuables stolen. A man has been arrested on suspicion.

A special from Neenah, Wis., says: Edmund Dodson, an insurance agent of the place, has suddenly disappeared and left $20,000 debts. It is said that he had been collecting premiums and not remitting them. It is said that he has gone to England.

Reliable information has been received here that insurrectionists have sworn to kill thirty of the leading mine owners of Cœur d'Alene, Breen, Dallas and Peynton, who it is said, incited the rioting, have escaped to Montana. Requisition papers will be forwarded to Gov. Toole, and their arrest will probably follow.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Great Britain's new parliament will meet Aug. 4.

Justin McCarthy is finally elected to parliament.

The yellow fever scourge continues unabated at Vera Cruz, Mexico, and the rate of mortality is alarmingly large.

Riotous farm laborers of both sexes are fired upon by gendarmes in Hungary and twelve of them killed and an equal number wounded.

Guillaume Beaujean, Alponse La Crosse and others accused of having caused the dynamite explosions at Liege last May, have been put on trial.

Chile has paid $75,000 indemnity to the families of the America sailors massacred at Valparaiso and to the surviving members of the Baltimore's crew who were assaulted.

Three prisoners who were serving life sentences in Zacat execas (Mico) penitentiary for robbery, were instantly killed by an electric discharge during a thunder storm, and ten others were made insensible, five having since died.

Senator Baron de Courcelles, formerly French ambassador at Berlin, has been appointed French arbitrator in the Behring sea arbitration commission. The arbitrators will meet in Paris.

R. Boak, Jr., of Chicago, who has been riding from Yarmouth to Halifax on a bicycle, has arrived at Halifax, having successfully completed his long ride of 223 miles in 25 hours and 27 minutes.

At a meeting of the Theosophical society at London, W. Q. Judge, of New York, was elected president of the whole society, Mrs. Besant resigned her claim to the office. Devotional services of the kind peculiar to the cult were held over Mme. Blavatsky's ashes, which were contained in a silver urn.

It is alleged that Senor Candellero Herez, Judge O. Llatengeno, in the state of Zacatecas, recently burned two suspected criminals to death while trying to obtain a confession from them through torture. The Mexican government has ordered an investigation of the horrible affair.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

John C. Hotchkiss has been nominated surveyor of customs at Des Moines, Iowa.

George B. Shaw of Eau Claire is nominated for congress by the Seventh Wisconsin district Republicans.

Thomas H. Carter of Montana is elected chairman of the Republican national committee and will resign as general land commissioner.

The ceremony of notifying Cleveland and Stevenson of their nominations as the Democratic candidates for president and vice president is performed in Madison Square Garden, New York.

THE TOILERS.

European ironworkers are on their way to Homestead, Pa.

Iron workers to the number of 200 are discharged without notice at West Superior.

Owing to the strike of nail workers at Montreal the four nail factories there have been compelled to close down. The men want an increase of wages, and the employers say they are willing to give them 10 per cent over the old schedule, or 1½ cents over the rate paid at Pittsburg, but will not pay the rate demanded by the men.

A walking delegate of the Seamen's union has been arrested at Chicago charged with being implicated in the murder of First Mate Walker, of the steam barge, Middlesex recently. It is said that the accused quarreled with Walker because he was a non-union man and that the quarrel ended in the murder.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

To the surprise of all ball tossers, George Gore, the clever outfielder and base runner of the New York team, was given ten day's notice and will retire.

Fifty-five poor ball tossers have been left flat on their backs by the demise of the Western league. It's in the middle of the season, too, and the demand for bartenders is small.

When the Bostons appeared on the field at Chicago July 11 they were clad in calico and gingham suits of loud pattern and color, and sporting false beards. Anson, of the Chicago club, last year set this bad example of burlesquing base ball.

Billy Hawkins of Des Moines and Jack Nolan of St. Louis met at the Grand opera house in a contest for points with four-ounce gloves. Both were in good condition, Hawkins turning in at 110 pounds and Nolan at 133. In the fourth Hawkins delivered a powerful blow squarely on Nolan's jaw and completely knocked him out. The referee awarded the fight to Hawkins.

Jim Corbett, the pugilist, has issued a challenge to the founder of Asbury Park, N. J., James A. Bradley, for a mile swimming race in the ocean for a purse of $50, the money to be donated by the winner for the purchase of a prize for the baby parade. Bradley claims to be the champion short-distance swimmer there.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The famed "Six Nations" in New York state will be well represented in the Indian exhibit at the World's Fair.

The secretary of Michigan's World's Fair commission has estimated that 250,000 people from Michigan will visit the World's Fair.

Chicago now has a population of 1,500,000, according to an estimate based on the canvas made for the city directory just issued. This is an increase of about 300,000 over the school census.

Several Amazons of the King of Dahomey will probably be seen in the Dahomey village, which will be established at the World's Fair. Sixty or seventy natives and their manner of living will be shown.

An effort is being made to have the cotton mills of Georgia make a fine exhibit at the World's Fair. It is believed that such exhibit would greatly stimulate the investment of capitol in cotton mills in the South.

The exhibit to be made at the World's Fair by Krupp, the celebrated German gun maker, will represent an expenditure of $1,500,000. The largest cannon ever made, weighing 122 tons, will be in the exhibit, as will be also several hundred tons of war material.

Foreign governments participating in the World's Fair have been requested to furnish, before September 1, the plans of the buildings, if any, which they propose to erect at the Exposition. It is not the intention to reserve space for buildings for them beyond that date unless there should be special reasons for doing so.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

During the second week of July the earnings of the Milwaukee were $619,147, against $501,655 during the corresponding week last year, an increase of $117,592.

The first mutterings of the storm which issue to rage in railroad circles as a prelude to the world's fair have been heard and the Western Passenger association lines hardly know what to do. The breeze has been raised by the Santa Fe in the shape of a vigorous protest against the action of the Columbian Passenger association in declaring a rate of one and one third fare for the dedicatory exercises in October. The Santa Fe is in favor of a one-fare rate for the round trip, and adduces strong arguments in support thereof.

GENERAL.

In all parts of Manitoba the crops are reported in magnificent condition, not a single drawback being reported.

The firms of F. W. Devoe & Co. and C. T. Reynolds & Co., New York, the largest dealers in paints in the world, will probably consolidate.

Papers have been filed with the secretary of state of Illinoise for the incorporation of a company that will undertake to distribute newspapers automatically and do away with the necessity for newsboys.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Rev. Lee R. Thomas, pastor of the Baptist Church of Red Wing has resigned and gone to Iowa.

George Landon, a young business man of Plainview, was terribly burned by the explosion of a gasoline stove.

Emma Lamprecht, daughter of John Lamprecht, a grocer of Winona, has mysteriously disappeared, and her whereabouts are unknown. About a month ago she disappeared and it was supposed she had eloped, but she was afterward found working as a domestic in a family here.

A general demand was made recently by the quarrymen employed in St. Cloud for an increase of 20 cent per day in their wages and eight hours work instead of nine. The demand was acceded to by all the foremen and the men continued in their places.

W. L. Mills, of Mankato, made an assignment to Lorin Gray. Liabilities, $46,000; assets, $61,500 including a good deal of real estate in and around Mankato. Mr. Mills was engaged in the butter and egg business until a few months ago and the losses then account for the failure now.

By order of the state board two glandered horses were killed at Mapleton. William Little, who sold them to unsuspecting parties, was arrested on complaint of one of these, but was released upon returning the purchase money. The other victim is taking steps to have Little arrested.

A bold attempt to burglarize the dwelling of Mrs. Wallace Crany, four miles south of Dover, was made recently. A well dressed youth attacked the woman with a butcher knife, but decamped upon her screaming, and eluded arrest. The woman is prostrated.

Frank C. Best, a carpenter of Lakefield, and Henry Rhodes, a farmer, living five miles from here, fell from a scaffolding while working on a new barn, and Best was fatally injured, dying within two hours. Rhodes was not seriously hurt. Mr. Best leaves a wife and six small children.

Charles Dablow, a farmer of Morris and an ex-member of Company D, Forty-second Illinois Rebellion, had a musket ball extracted from his head by a local physician, which he has carried since the battle of Chickamauga, Sept. 20, 1863. The ball entered just above the temple and was taken out just back of the right ear.

Burglars entered the residence of Mayor H. A. Young at Lake City and after securing a gold watch and chain, fled, leaving a pair of shoes and a hat behind. Had they not aroused the family by their noise they would probably have secured a larger booty. They are at large.

While Agent Lindwood, of the Great Northern Express Company, stepped out to the front door of his office at St. Cloud two tramps, watching him, entered the rear door and stole a gold watch and chain from his vest. He saw them as they cut the alley.

A serious runaway occurred a few miles north of Echo recently. S. J. Larson, of this place, while returning from Sacred Heart lost control of his team, which became frightened. They ran quite a distance, bringing up in a swamp. Mr. Larson's leg was severely crushed by a heavy box falling on it.

At the annual school meeting of District No 77, held recently at Grand Meadow, a resolution was tried to be passed voting bonds to the amount of $7,000 to $10,000 for a new district school house, in a village of less than 600 inhabitants. A very close vote decided not to vote the bonds—58 to 59. It was the largest school meeting ever held in the district.

Two men attempted to rob Julian Duzenskie, a farmer living near Wolverton, while he was waiting in the Great Northern depot at Breckenridge. He woke before they succeeded and gave the alarm, when one of them struck him in the face, probably with brass knuckles, and ran. Nightwatchman Matheson gave chase. After following them about two blocks he captured both and lodged them in jail.

So far, says a Northfield special, the grain crop prospects have been very bright, but now some of the farmers bring in discouraging reports. The two recent hard showers have had the effect of lodging the grain badly and the hot weather of the past two days is bad for wheat. In some locations the winter wheat is reported to have been affected with the blight and but one-half a crop is predicted. They will probably turn out better than feared.

The verdict of the coroner's jury at Duluth on the death of Fred. H. Gottling, of Marquette, who was killed in the harbor recently by being thrown from the ferry boat Bruno and getting caught in the screw, charges gross negligence on the part of John Daniels, engineer of boat and manager of line, and contributory negligence on the part of Capt. C. H. Cameron. Daniels was at the wheel at the time of the accident, Cameron was collecting fares. Cameron surrendered his license, pending investigation.

McKry's body was cut in two, Ransell's right leg was cut completely off and Sandberg, who hugged the ground between the rails, was so badly cut and bruised that he will probably die.

Capt. J. N. May has brought suit at Cedar Rapids against Frank A. Simmons and Deputy Marshal Clery for malicious and false arrest and imprisonment, claiming damages in the sum of $15,000. May was present at an auction at Riverside Park and was removed from the grounds at the request of Simmons for creating a disturbance.

ANCIENT SUSPENSION BRIDGES

They Were Erected in China Centuries Before the Christian Era Began.

Suspension bridges which were built in the time of the Han dynasty (220 B. C. to 220 A. D. are still standing, striking examples of early oriental engineering skill. According to historical and geographical writers of China it was Shang Lieng, Kan Tsu's chief of command who undertook to construct the first public roads in the flowery empire. At that time it was almost impossible for the province of Shense to communicate with the capital. Lieng took an army of 10,000 work-men and cut great gorges through the mountains, filling up the canons and valleys with the debris from his excavations. At places where deep gorges were traversed by large and rapid flowing streams he actually carried out his plan of throwing suspension bridges stretching from one slope to the other.

These crossings, appropriately styled "flying bridges" by the Chinese writers, are high and dangerous looking in the extreme. At the present day a bridge may still be seen in Shense which is 400 feet long and is stretched over a chasm more than a thousand feet deep. How those early engineers erected such a structure with the tools and appliances at their command is a mystery to the Omaha World-Herald. Most ancient Chinese bridges are only wide enough to admit of the passage of two mounted men, railings on either side serving to insure the traveler's safety. It is thought highly probable that the missionaries who first reported on the early suspension bridges of China and who, of course, gave some idea of their plan of construction, were really the cause of that unique species of bridge building being adopted by western nations. Again we are impressed with the truth of Solomon's famous expression: "There is nothing new under the sun."

Will of an English Peabody.

The late David Lewis, of a clothing firm in Liverpool and Manchester, bequeathed all his fortune, except an annuity for his wife and a few legacies, for the benefit of the working classes of Liverpool and Manchester. The fund is about $1,000,000 and may amount to $1,750,000. He directed his residuary legatees to use the money for the benefit of the poor of Liverpool and Manchester, leaving it to them personally, in order to satisfy the law and trusting in their obedience to his instructions. Five or six gentlemen from the two cities have been asked to co-operate with the holders of the fortune in carrying out the testator's wishes. Mr. Lewis was known to have a favorable opinion of the Peabody system of dwellings, but some other plan may be adopted.—New York Sun.

No Danger.

Mrs. Hostess—Won't you play something Miss Tempo?

Miss Tempo (caustically)—No, thank you; I don't wish to interrupt the conversation.

Mrs. Hostess—Oh, dear Miss Tempo, it wouldn't not for a moment.

SHOT BY A CRANK.

Three Shots Are Fired, Two of Which Cause Serious if Not Fatal Wounds

Pittsburg, July 2 —A desperate and almost successful attempt was made this afternoon to assassinate Henry Clay Frick, chairman of the Carnegie Steel company, limited. His assailant was Alexander Berkman, a Russian Jew, who came here from New York with the evident intention of removing the man who has been the principal on the employers' side in the great struggle now going on between capital and labor in this city.

It was 2 o'clock this afternoon, when a dark complexioned young man with a Jewish cast of countenance, of medium height and fairly well dressed, entered the elevator in the Chronicle Telegraph building, which is occupied by the Carnegie Steel company, and asked to be let off at Mr. Frick's office. The young man had been a frequent visitor during the past few days, and David Fortney, the elevator boy, thought nothing of the request, but stopped at the second floor, and pointed out the way to the chairman's private room. Two minutes later the occupants of the building and passers by on the avenue were startled by three pistol shots fired in rapid succession. Intuitively the victim was divined, and "Frick is shot" were the words soon passing from mouth to mouth on the streets.

THE ASSAULT.

It was true, a man believed to be a crank had assailed the great steel master, but the latter, notwithstanding two bullet wounds and four ugly gashes from a dagger still lives and will probably recover. As was his custom, Mr. Frick took lunch at the Duquesne club at noon to-day, and afterwards returned to his office. He went to the fifth floor, where he remained but a few minutes. He then came down the elevator to his private room on the second floor, fronting on Fifth avenue, where he seated himself at his desk. The office of Mr. Leishman, a business partner of Mr Frick's, adjoins that of the chairman. Mr. Leishman came in and the two were holding a private conference, no one else being in the room.

A few minutes before two o'clock, Harry Heckle, the office boy, noticed a man hastily push open the swinging gate in the railing that runs between the public portion and the enclosure where the desks of the stenographers and clerks are located. There was no one near the private office door, and the boy hurried up to ask the intruder what he wanted, but he was too late, as the stranger had already entered the private apartment. As he entered the office Mr. Frick looked up, as did also Mr. Leishman, to see who it was. Mr. Frick was examining a bundle of papers. The man sprang within about five feet of Mr. Frick and quickly pulled the trigger. The first cartridge did not explode, but the second shot entered the back of Mr. Frick's neck and glancing downward passed to the outside below the arm-pit. Frick made an exclamation and jumped to the circular window on Fifth avenue and tried in vain to open it. The assailant passed immediately in front of the desk and approaching close to Mr. Frick fired again. The ball entered the muscle on the left side of the neck and passed around to a lodgment under the right ear, where it was later reached by the probe. At this instant Mr. Leishman threw himself on the would-be assassin and wrestled for the possession of the revolver. Leishman and turned the pistol upwards as the pistol exploded, the ball entering the plastering near the glass partition. With agility the desperate man drew a dagger and attempted to stab Leishman, who was holding the assailant by the shoulder and body. Mr. Frick saw the gleam of the steel, and although staggered by the shock of the wounds and bleeding profusely jumped between the men and seized the man's arm. The latter freed himself from Leishman's grasp and plunged the dagger into Frick's right side just above the hip, making an ugly wound three inches long. He made another lunge and this time the knife struck higher up, but the point struck a rib and glanced down without inflicting much of an injury. Twice again was the knife thrust at Frick, but he was merely scratched at these last attempts to kill him. The struggle was in full view of those on the street. By this time the office boys and Deputy Sheriff May, who just entered the office as was fired, threw himself upon the assassin. May had drawn his revolver and was about to shoot the fellow in the back when Frick cried out: "Don't kill him! We have got him all right. Leave him to the law." The man broke away and tried to escape, but was secured and taken to the Central station. The prompt action of Mr. Frick saved the lives of Mr. Leishman and his self-appointed executioner.

GRASPED THE WEAPON

In five minutes a half-dozen surgeons, including Doctors Litchfield, McClelland, Murdock and Joseph and John Dickson, were at hand. Mr. Frick was told to lie down on a lounge, and after his clothing had been removed the wounds were washed and the bleeding stopped. During all this time the wounded man was calm; had perfect command of his faculties, and apparently was less excited than any other person in the room. From time to time he made suggestions as to how badly he was hurt, and a half-hour after the shooting dictated a about the assault in which he told him that he thought he would be all right.

Harvest in South Dakota.

Yankton, S. D., Special, July 25.—Harvest in small grain has commenced here and barley and rye have been cut during the week, and a week hence will see wheat all in shock. The hot weather of the past week has not injured wheat. Corn is growing fast, but needs rain.

Grain Damaged by Hail.

Moorhead, Minn., Special, July 25.—Reports from Highland Grove and Cromwell townships, this county, state much damage resulted to grain by hail yesterday. Most of the farmers are insured.

BELIEVES HER INSANE.

Memphis, July 26.—Alice Mitchell's trial opened to-day with the court room packed with people. Dr. B. F. Turner, who has made the study of diseases of the mind a specialty, was the first witness for the defense. He said insanity might remain latent a lifetime and never develop. Again, an accident might develop it at any time, and the subject might remain insane or might recover and have a relapse, or death might ensue from exciting causes. He detailed the matters discussed at intervals with the defendant. She told him of her plans relative to marrying Freda. She insisted that she could marry Freda and could not be talked out of it. The witness illustrated this form of delusion by citing the the recorded case of a man who imagined he was a mile high. The victims of such delusions would argue logically up to a certain point and then fly the track. So it was with Alice Mitchell in her delusion that she could marry Freda. There was an entire absence of remorse for the deed. When asked if she did not know it was wrong for her to kill Freda, her reply was that she had been told it was wrong. He was of the opinion that the defendant was insane, and incurably so.

Miss Johnson, the companion of Alice Mitchell at the time of the murder, was recalled by the defense and asked if she had ever seen Alice and Freda Ward hug and kiss in public. She said that Alice and Freda, while swinging in a hammock at Gold Dust, embraced and kissed each other repeatedly before a large crowd of men. The witness asked Alice if she was not ashamed, and she replied: "I don't care for what the hateful men think. I will hug and kiss where and when I please."

IRON RIVER FIRE.

Tramps Accused of Being Responsible for the Conflagration.

West Superior, Wis., Special, July 26.—Neighboring towns have responded generously with aid for the hundreds of homeless people at Iron River. The loss of household effects was needlessly great owing to the expectation that fire engines would arrive and many made no effort to save their goods until too late. Not over $20,000 insurance was carried on the destroyed property. Several Superior contractors are heavy losers, having erected many buildings and given time on same. The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic road loses $35,000, the Northern Pacific $20,000 and the Wisconsin Investment company $30,000. Most of the people are housed in passenger coaches and freight cars and rebuilding will go on rapidly.

It is now said the fire was of incendiary origin. Tramps, of which there were scores in town, are supposed to be responsible. It is even claimed they prevented citizens from making effectual efforts in fighting the fire. A wagon containing three barrels was driven hastily up to the fire, but was spilled by tramps before it could be used. They hindered fire fighters in other ways and robbed and plundered right and left. One man describing the catastrophe said:

> I carried out an armful of goods and upon returning with another found the first load had been stolen. The tramps secured large quantities liquor, which they lugged and rolled to the timber near by. As a result the tramps are drunk and insulting. One tramp was shot at noon to-day, but escaped. Iron River was what is known as "hot town," and the tough fraternity was prominent.

HE IS ACQUITTED.

John A. Kemp, Formerly of Tacoma, Tried for Embezzlement.

Tacoma, Wash., Special, July 26.—John A. Kemp was acquitted to-day in the superior court of the charge of embezzling $10,000 of the funds of the defunct West Coast Fire and Marine Insurance company of this city, of which he was president. Kemp was for several years cashier of a Huron (S. D.) national bank, and came here highly recommended. With wealthy real estate dealers he established an insurance company two years ago and did a large business until the state insurance examiner threw the concern into the hands of a receiver on finding the capital greatly impaired. Notes given by Kemp for stock were seized by the receiver just as Kemp was said to be ready to negotiate them in South Dakota. He finally left the state and settled in Carroll, Iowa, where he was found.

Makes It Right With Allin.

Jamestown, N. D., Special, July 26.—Referring to a telegram from Grand Forks stating that Lieut. Gov. Allin had threatened the Jamestown Alert with a libel suit for printing a rumor that Allin is in the secret employ of the Great Northern road, the Alert to-night says:

> The telegram is false in stating that Alert made any charge against Hon. Roger Allin. The Alert made none and makes none. It printed the report as a rumor coming from reputable sources concerning a public official, and published as any citizen has a right to speak or print in the interest of the public. Mr. Allin pronounced the rumor utterly and absolutely false, and his word will have to be taken as conclusive in the absence of any other evidence. The Alert would greatly regret to do or to see any injustice done Lieut. Gov. Allin by the circulation or publication of any false report, and cheerfully regrets the same if such has occurred. This is due not only to Lieut. Gov. Allin, but would be due any other public official or individual.

Wanted at West Superior.

Toronto, July 26.—E. A. Eagerly, alias George Alden of West Superior, Wis., has been arrested here on a charge of embezzling money from the Mercantile Fire and Marine Insurance and the American Assurance companies of Boston, of which the accused was agent. Sheriff Dan Kennedy of West Superior received the prisoner who consents to return without extradition proceedings.

Cattle Poisoned.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Special, July 26.—Clem Noyes, who lives ten miles north of town, had thirteen head of cattle poisoned by eating paris green. One of his neighbors is suspected of having administered the poison. All the cattle are dead, and sensational developments are expected soon.

Murdered His Wife and Daughter.

Burns, Tenn., July 26.—A double murder and attempt at suicide was enacted here today. Maj. J. H. Winn, a farmer, murdered his wife and stepdaughter with an axe, mutilating them most horribly. He afterwards made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide with a dirk knife. The cause was a family feud. Wynne was lynched while being taken to jail.

Fatal Fight Over Craps.

Franklin, Wash., July 26.—Three negroes quarreled over a game of craps. Julius Armstrong slashed C. Brittian fatally with a razor. A negro named Matte then shot and instantly killed Armstrong.

Ordered to Honduras.

Washington, July 26.—The secretary of the navy has ordered the United States steamer Kearsarge to proceed to Honduras. That country is in a state of revolution and the presence of a United States man-of-war is thought necessary to protect American interests there.

Destruction at Brooten.

Brooten, Minn., Special, July 26.—A hail storm passed over a small section of country west of this place last night. The damage to crops is reported to be two or three bushels per acre.

The Democrats held their caucus at the village hall last Monday evening and elected S. M. Hoff and Fred Eikhof as delegates to the county convention which is to be held at Crookston to-day.

Holmes Bros new building is progressing rapidly the frame being already up. It will be pushed to completion as fast as possible and will, when completed, be the largest store building in town

The Republicans of the village held a caucus at Holmes Bros, store last Monday evening, Emil Holmes and S. M. Dainard were elected as delegates to the county convention which meets at Crookston to-day.

Scientists claim that over forty million mosquitoes are hatched out on an acre of swamp land. This may be the correct figures in the older settled countries but up in this part of the country where the land is fertile we think the figures entirely too low.

Ignatius Donnelly does not seem to be popular with the Republicans and Democrats and they are doing considerable kicking over his nomination for governor by the Peoples party. The old parties evidently think that they should have been consulted in the matter and their wishes respected.

Rev. T. Ukai delivered a very interesting lecture here last Wednesday evening in the M. E, Church. His subject, "old and new Japan" was well handled and proved both interesting and instructive.

Three of the St Hilaire base ball club joined with the Thief River Falls club and went down to Red Lake Falls and played the club there a game. They came back minus their scalps, the score standing 9 to 17. We understand that they will try conclusions again in a couple of weeks.

Polk County Journal: The following figures are furnished by Receiver Aaker of the local land office: The number of acres of surveyed government land which are still unoccupied are divided as follows: Kittson 533,222; Marshall 42,408; Polk 7,340; Norman 1,160; Clay 1,240; Becker 31,812; Otter Tail 946; Beltrami 42,793. The unsurveyed land is as follows: Kittson 343,600; Marshall 57,600: Polk 1,280; Beltrami 16,200. Only 8,620 acres of vacant government land in Polk county,

Ada Index: Under the Australian system there will be considerable intelligence required to vote as one plans this fall. The state printer declars that it will take a ticket three feet long to contain the electoral and state tickets. The names of the electors alone will require nineteen inches while the state ticket will require at least fifteen inches of space. There will have to be added the congressional and judicial and county tickets until the voter will begin to think he has a copy of a blanket Sunday newspaper to wade through.

The Democratic and Republican County Conventions will be held in Crookston on July 27th. There is some talk of merging both conventions into a big political love feast and nominating a mixed ticket from both parties, in hopes af defeating the People's party ticket. Of course the prime movers of the fusion scheme are officeholders who see starvation already stalking toward them if they are compelled to let go of the public teat. There are too many people in this county with a penchant for holding office and too few offices to be filled.—East Grand Forks Courrier,

The principle that if you give a rogue rope he will hang himself, has been beautifully exemplified in the assault of the Pinkerton thugs on the workmen at Homestead. It is the commencement of the end. Pinkertonism will go. It is the instrument of its own destruction, Homestead finished it. Finis is written and the book is closed. If this plutocratic power ever dares to lift its head again in this country in the form of Pinkertons it will meet with such a reception as to make former experiances pale with insignificance.—New Forum,

About a month ago a wholesale grocery house of Minneapolis sent a number of men into this country to solicit orders for groceries from the farmers. That they were successful in their endeavors to secure trade is apparent, as yesterday a car containing $1,900 of the "necessaries of life" was brought to this city and all but $100 worth of the goods were taken out by farmers who had purchased them—and paid the cash upon receiving the same. This morning the agents of the firm thinking they had a fruitful field hired a rig of S, L. Collins and went out to rope in more suckers. The Times has no hesitancy in pronouncing this alleged "wholesale sale" house a fraud. The goods they sell are of the cheapest and most inferior grade and anyone who buys them will pay very dear for his whistle. But even though a slight saving could be made it would be an injustice to buy from the home merchants only when they want to be accommodated with credit, and when they have the cash to pay for goods to go outside for them. If the $1,000 which was paid to this alleged wholesale house was taken to one of our home merchants it would have gone just as far in the amount of goods purchased at home.—Crookston Times.

The machine which sets out to "railroad" the nomination of Knute Nelson for governor, have not from the beginning to the end, scrupled to use every sort of statement which might mislead and impose upon the public. As an illustration of this, Washington county is placed in the stuffed table prepared by the Pioneer Press to exhibit the Nelson strength in the packed convention, notwithstanding the fact that the Washington county convention passed resolutions against the nomination of Nelson for governor, and so would many other counties have done had the people had a fair voice in the matter

The pushing forward of Nelson has not been conducted in the interest of the party, nor because he is a man who represents its principles but because he was chosen to represent the greed of office seekers, which, with a different nomination, would not probably be gratified. The cabal should not be too "porkish," and carry their ill-gotten claims too far, There may be a reaction that will visit upon them the rebuke they deserve.—St. Paul News.

S. M. Hoff received a carload of the finest twine in the market which he will sell at prices that can be beat by one.

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

Dr. C. W. Barnes (Dentist) will be at St. Hilaire on Friday Aug. 5th to remain three days. He will come prepared to do all kinds of Dental work and expects to visit St. Hilaire regularly in the future. Those wishing his services should see him early in his proposed stay in town,

There are several old bums in town who make a practice of perambulating DeMers avenue day in and day out. They have no visible means of support, and yet they are continually soaked in liquor, They belong to the "ganger" gang, and hang around the rear entrance to the few sample rooms in town waiting until the "empties" are fired out. Each empty generally contains from a pint to a gallon of stale beer, and these bums, at every opportunity proceed to drain the kegs into cans and drink the contents. They are consumers of filth and slops—in fact, human buzzards, living on offal, and as such should be driven out of sight. Their breath is pollution itself, and their presence a menace to decency and good morals.—East Grand Forks Courrier.

Emil Lunceen made complaint before Justice J. M. Hanson last Monday charging A. S. Anderson with an attempted indecent assault upon his fifteen year old daughter. Anderson was arrested by Constable Williams and was brought before Justice Hanson last evening. The examination was continued until to-day at 2 p. m. County Attorney Holston and DeForest Bucklen, of Crookston, arrived on the train and the trial is now in progress, with good prospects of continuing all day tomorrow as there are a number of witnesses to be examined, The case has caused considerable excitement and it is impossible to predict what the result will be. The prosecution claims that Anderson has attempted to assault the girl several times while the defense claims that it is in a measure a blackmailing scheme. Anderson is a prosperous farmer living about five miles east of here and has heretofore born a good reputation. Messrs, Holston and Mathews are attorneys for the prosecution and DeForest Bucklen for the defense.

STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS

AT

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD,

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades

(b) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades,

(c) A professional course for teachers who have completed the necessary academic course elsewhere.

(d) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at $2,75 per week.

The next school year opens at Winona and Mankato August 29 1892. St. Cloud and Moorhead September 1, 1892.

For free catalogues and circulars, giving full information, address the presidents as follows:

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Consul General Now is on a visit to this country.

William Waldorf Astor has hired a house in London at $25,000 a year and will open a business office in that city.

The oldest spoon in the world belongs to George A. Warren, of Indianapolis. It is 220 years old and was brought from England.

A new military post at Helena, Mon., has been named Fort Harrison, by order of Secretary Elkins, in honor of the president.

When Steve Dorsey was a student at Oberlin college he used to earn a few odd dollars by whitewashing and painting houses.

Daniel Strickland, of Kent, O., is ninety-two years of age, and has devoted nearly all of his life to travel, having gone around the world twenty-four times.

The bugler who sounded the fatal charge at Balaklava is still living and in the full practice of his profession. His name is Landfried, and he is now the bandmaster of the First Sussex volunteer artillery.

Dr. Pliny Earle, the insanity expert, who died at Northampton, Mass., a few days ago, is said to have been descended from Ralph Earle, one of the petitioners to Charles II for permission to form Rhode Island into a corporate colony.

Lieutenant Charles Adele Louis Totten, Fourth United States artillery, lately instructor of military tactics in the Sheffield Scientific school at Yale, is at work upon a history of the human race from the creation down to the present time.

Hamilton L. Earle, of London, who was married to the daughter of Sir Edwin Arnold, is a direct descendant of the Mayflower pilgrims, his grandfather, Admiral Earle, having married Elizabeth White, of Plymouth, Mass.; this also makes him a connection of the Gannett families of Cambridge and Boston.

TURF TOPICS.

General Grant wanted the fastest trotters for his recreative "spin."

General Sheridan, a daring and reckless rider, always required a fiery steed.

President Cleveland always asked for a gentle animal when he drove out at Washington.

Electioneer had not a 2:30 performer to his credit at 13 years of age. At 22 he had sixty-six.

This year's Two Thousand Guineas was worth £4,400 to Mr. C. D. Rose, the owner of Bonavista.

The sire of Nutwood was Belmont 64. Belmont lived to the age of 25 and got thirty-five trotters, against three pacers.

Baron Hirsch has decided to devote the whole of his winnings in 1891, some $35,000, to hospitals and other kindred institutions.

President Hayes wanted a gentle horse for an early morning ride, and would not select one until he had seen several tried by the stable boys.

Mrs. Green B. Morris, the wife of Judge Morrow's owner, was one of the happiest women in America when "the Judge" won the Brooklyn handicap.

WHAT FASHION SAYS.

Straw hats have the crowns cut out and soft silk Tam O'Shanter ones put in that are very pretty.

Gold penholders in the shape of a quill have the lengthy nerve of the feather covered with diamonds, gradually diminishing in size from the base upward.

A woman who, in this age of slender women, is stout, must beware of dresses that are not long enough in front. Also a conspicuous border or trimming at the bottom of the skirt does not become them.

White maple, which is so much used at present for inexpensive furniture, is not especially durable—not to be compared with oak, though it does not take so long to season, and is therefore not so likely to warp.

Simplicity, looseness and warmth—these are the watchwords in the realm of children's fashions. Short enough to run in, long enough to be warm, loose enough to play unrestrictedly, simple enough to allow a child to soil two a day—these are the ideas.

AROUND THE THRONES.

Queen Margaret of Italy fills up Byron's idea of a lovable woman in being fair, fat and forty.

The story that the Duchess of Cumberland, the youngest sister of the Princess of Wales, is insane is now indignantly denied by those who profess to know.

Princess Marie of Edinburgh, now engaged to Ferdinand of Hohenzollern, crown prince of Roumania, is one of the queen's prettiest and cleverest granddaughters, inheriting much of the wit and bright intelligence of her mother.

The magnificent silver gilt dinner service which Napoleon presented to his sister, Princess Pauline Borghese, has been sold to Prince Baucina, a well known Sicilian magnate, for $31,000. It is exquisitely wrought and chased, and is thought to have been sold very cheap.

The king of Siam, who is said to possess one of the finest collections of diamonds in the world, recently sent an agent to Paris to sell some of his best gems. Foreign papers say that his majesty has decided to build a beautiful crystal palace and to purchase a magnificent yacht and wishes to raise money for the purpose.

BEHIND THE FOOTLIGHTS.

Wright Huntington will star next season.

Mrs. Langtry threatens to come to America next season.

Fanny Davenport is said to have cleared $80,000 on the season.

E. M. Royle will continue to play the principal part in his play of "Friends" next season.

Digby Bell has introduced a novel idea in giving a revised edition of his comic opera, "Jupiter," every month.

Reginald De Koven, the composer of "Robin Hood," is under contract to write an opera for De Wolf Hopper.

Adam Itzel, Jr., composer of the "Tar and Tartar," will probably travel with that opera as conductor next season. He is writing several new numbers for it.

Chicago is to have a subterranean theater and cyclorama. Property on Wabash avenue has been leased for the purpose and a stock company formed with a capital of $300,000.

J. W. Summers, an actor who a number of years ago was quite well known in the United States and who went to Europe to experiment with a play called "A Noble Brother," will be one of the coming season's new stars.

The Union Square theater, New York, was recently reopened under its new management, Messrs. Greenwall & Pearson. The opening programme was "The Fabricator," by Walter Craven, and a curtain raiser entitled "Adrift," by Robert Hilliard, the actor.

Sidney R. Ellis has signed a contract with Greenwall & Pearson by which Charles A. Gardner, the German comedian, will go into the Union Square theater, New York, commencing Aug. 1. "Fatherland," Mr. Gardner's greatest success, will be the only play presented.

ODDS AND ENDS.

In Minneapolis 7,877,547 barrels of flour were made last year.

A judge at San Francisco has decided that the purchasing of mining stock on margin is illegal in that state under the present constitution.

The Alta California is to be revived under the name of the San Francisco Alta. The first issue will appear in September. The paper's politics will be independent.

An Indianapolis man has invented a process for "aging" violins, by means of which he can in two weeks give a new instrument the fullness and richness of tone of an antique Stradivarius.

The analysis by chemists at the State Agricultural college, of sugar beets raised in Iowa shows 14.41 per cent. of sugar, which is not often excelled in the best beet growing countries of Europe.

Lighthouses are classified by orders depending on the height and diameter of the lighting apparatus. There are four orders. The first three are used for sea or coast lights and the fourth for harbor purposes.

A Mormon colonization scheme has been perfected between Elder Andrew J. Stewart, of Salt Lake, and the authorities of the Mexican government, by which Mormon colonies may be established in all parts of the republic, the city of Santa Rosalio to be the headquarters.

WHISPERS ABOUT WOMEN.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett continues to observe in Washington the custom she adopted while abroad of holding informal receptions on Sunday afternoons.

Miss Sadie Blackstone, who played with Florence in "The Almighty Dollar," has left the stage, studied art in Paris, where she still lives, and is an exhibitor in the salon and maintaining a creditable position as an artist.

Mrs. George Gibb, B. A., who has just been appointed lecturer on the French language and literature at Trinity college, Victoria, is the first lady lecturer to be honored in a college affiliated to the Melbourne university.

One of the brightest of the amateur editors of America is Miss Harriet C. Cox, of the Abington (Mass.) Papyrus. It is six years since she entered amateur journalism, and last year the National Amateur Press association presented her with a handsome ring in token of the esteem in which she is held.

Mme. de Barrios, who was recently wedded to Senor de Roda in New York, was presented, after the ceremony by her husband with a Watteau fan of remarkable beauty. The stocks are of pearl, richly inlaid. The scene portrayed is that of Pharoah's daughter discovering the infant Moses.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas has purchased the Fort Worth and Rio Grande road.

The Empire Fast Freight line has ordered 500 new 60,000 pound freight cars with automatic brakes and air attachments.

Superintendents, general freight agents and general passenger agents get from $3,000 to $8,000 a year, according to the size of the system and its business.

It is proposed to parallel the state railroad between Vienna and Pesth with an electric railroad on the right bank of the Danube. The distance is about 170 miles.

J. W. Drew, western passenger agent of the Clover Leaf, announces that free reclining chairs have been placed in all the buffet coaches of the Toledo, St. Louis and Kansas City road.

The earnings of the Southern Pacific company in 1891 reached the enormous sum of $50,450,000, an increase of more than $2,000,000 over 1890, which had been the best of all previous years.

The stockholders of the Concord and Montreal railroad have voted to increase the capital stock $1,200,000, making the capital stock $6,000,000. The lease of the New Boston railroad was ratified.

Proof Positive.

Young Mr. Risling (who has risen from the ranks)—Your family is a very old one, is it not, Miss Wayback?

Miss Wayback—It is, indeed, Mr. Risling. We can trace our ancestry back to the Normans, and none of our family was ever engaged in trade.

Mr. Risling—So your brother said yesterday when he borrowed ten dollars of me.—Brooklyn Life.

Will Join for Protection.

CHICAGO, Special.—At a meeting of the leading race horse owners and trainers held at the Palmer house in this city to-night an agreement was drawn up expressing the conviction that their interests were not sufficiently protected and determining to become members of the Protective Association of Racehorse Owners. Officers were elected, W. R. Letcher of Richmond, Ky., being president. It is not the aim of the organization to antagonize the racing clubs, but rather to co-operate fully with them in repressing and punishing fraud.

Lynchers Released.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Special.—The cases of the Taney county lynchers came to a sudden termination in the criminal court at Forsythe to-day. The prosecuting attorney, after having conducted the cases for over a week, entered a nolle prosequi and the judge ordered all the defendants released. The prosecuting attorney says the trial was developing into the merest farce, the jury being evidently prejudiced in the prisoners' favor, and the judge ruling invariably against the prosecution.

The Lottery to End.

It would appear by the following item from a recent issue of the New Orleans Times-Democrat that the suggestion in several newspaper of late, that the Louisiana State Lottery Company intends setting up business elsewhere, is erroneous and that it will close up shop on the expiration of its present charter.

In view of the contradictory rumors circulated regarding the intentions of the Louisiana State Lottery Company and in order to accurately answer numerous inquiries, a representative of the Times-Democrat yesterday interviewed Mr. Paul Conrad, the president of the company, with the result expressed below.

Reporter—Mr. Conrad, it was asserted some weeks ago in the Northern newspapers, and the statement has since been received recently, that the company is about to remove to Nicaragua, and there, under a government franchise open up the business on a grander scale than ever.

President Conrad—I have heard something of this, but there is no foundation for it. The company has officially stated that it bows to the decision of the Supreme Court and will respect the laws.

Reporter—Then have you no plans of future action?

President Conrad—I cannot state the case more strongly than was done at the time the company decided not to attempt to obtain a renewal of its charter. I can only repeat that the company will continue in business until the expiration of its present charter and then cease to exist. I cannot understand, after all that has been said, why there should be any confusion in the public mind about the matter.

Reporter—Have you any objection to my stating this as a finality for the satisfaction of the public?

President Conrad—None whatever.

Reporter—Some of the Eastern papers, Mr. Conrad, persistently assert that the lottery company continues to use the United States mails in the prosecution of its business; will you kindly tell me if that is true?

President Conrad—It is utterly untrue. We are obeying the law in its letter and spirit, and our agents everywhere are instructed to obey it. We are using the express companies only in our business, and in all our circulars are printed instructions to all persons dealing with us to avoid the mails.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Arrested—the progress of Consumption. In all its earlier stages, it can be cured. It's a scrofulous affection of the lungs—a blood taint—and, as in every other form of scrofula, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a certain remedy. But it must be taken in time—and now is the time to take it.

It purifies the blood—that's the secret. Nothing else acts like it. It's the most potent strength-restorer, blood-cleanser, and flesh-builder known to medical science. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, and all lingering Coughs, it's a remedy that's guaranteed, in every case, to benefit or cure.

If it doesn't, the money is returned.

In other words, it's sold on trial.

No other medicine of its kind is. And that proves that nothing else is "just as good" as the "Discovery."

The dealer is thinking of his profit, not of yours, when he urges something else.

THE VIOLET.

Once, when dissolved was winter's snow,
A violet in doubt
Looked timidly about;
Then feeling vernal breezes blow,
She ventured out.

'Ah! Spring has come at last," said she!
"No more in earth encased,
I soon shall be embraced
By some stray April wind, and he
My lips shall taste."

Woe's me; old Boreas from the North
Came roaring coldly by;
I heard a piteous cry;—
The violet that had ventured forth
Came but to die.

—Chas Battell Loomis, in New England Magazine.

A MINER'S DREAM.

HE is going home. Going home! That was the climax of this California dream; the end of the play—and the work; why, nobody in the mines and the mountains meant to stay there. Still many a good man stayed. But all along through the first fifteen or twenty years if every man who wanted to go home could have gone there would have been nothing left in the Sierras but graves, heaps of gravel, prospect-holes and battered old picks, shovels, toms, rockers, boots, broken bottles and so on. The whole land would have been left as quiet and empty up there as a dead man's hand.

But years later, when men left California, still fortune-hunting, and went to the northern mines, they somehow forgot all about the old world, and when fortune found them they came back to California to live and to die. There was nothing, however, very dramatic in this short, safe return from the northern mines in the days of stages, steamers and railroads back to the Golden gate. Still it was an event and was enjoyed by all most heartily in each camp. And it always seemed to me that the men who took the deepest and tenderest interest in the "going home" of one their number were the very men who were most helpless and most incapable of reaching this one desired end.

I know that when it began to be whispered about that Fred Adams of Canyon City had made his "pile" and was going home there was joy in the heart of many a gray-headed man who knew right well it would never be said of him that he had made his pile and that he was "going home." And when Fred Adams quietly slipped out of camp down to a friend's house and stayed all night and weighed his gold dust there on the butcher's scales before starting at daybreak the next morning, and when the news came back to town that the dust weighed well nigh to a hundred pounds, I tell you there were tears of delight in many an old man's eyes at thought of Fred's good fortune. We called him "Fred" Adams up there; but his name is Judge Adams by title and right; and he is now one of the rich big lawyers of San Francisco.

The first "going home" I ever saw was on Humbug Creek, Northern California, in the winter of 1854. I tell you it took men of grit to get there. The cowards had never started there and the weak died on the way, so they were a powerful and select lot of men, and it took nerve, time and dust, too, to get away from there. Think of it. Ten miles on foot over a mountain of snow to Yreka, then hundreds of miles through the savages by mule to Portland, then a sailing vessel to San Francisco, then the steamer, Panama, New Orleans, up the Mississippi, and so on.

I had been blown into this canyon at the forks of the Humbug, as a bird, by the winter storms and had to bridge over a mighty hard month or two I can tell you. I first got a place as cook for my board. But the provisions gave out pretty soon and I had to go. Then Frank Campbell, brother of the late Bartley Campbell, dramatist and member of the Idaho Legislature when last heard from, got me a place to sit up with a miner who had been hurt in a slide. I got no wages, but as I had to sit up at night and so didn't need a bed, and as the man was too badly hurt to eat the meals sent him from the hotel I did not suffer, but soon made friends with the poor man by reading to him. Lots of miners used to drop in after night and smoke and listen. The book was Harrison Ainsworth's novels all bound up together, "Dick Turpin," "Jack Shepherd," and so on. Never had man or boy such listeners. And when I, 30 years later, told dear old Ainsworth in London how he had been read and listened to in the heart of the Sierras, he nearly crushed my hand in his two hands. But this is scattering birdshot; let us get forward.

It is mavelous how ignorant those men were. They were from what was then the "border"—largely Missourians, and I doubt if one-half of them could write their names. I know right well what I say, for I wrote many letters for them. Of course there were other men there from other countries. Pat Flannigan, for instance, who kept the store. From France, do you say? No, he was a white Irishman with a very black beard, and is now the rich and influential president of the Coos Bay Bank. He was very popular then, as he is still, I reckon, and seeing the dismal ignorance of the miners he and Frank Campbell set a committee to work to get up a "public library." And this is one of its methods: The secretary tacked up the following notice on the door of the saloon known as "The Howlin' Wilderness:"

"Know all men that enny book in this 'ere camp belongs to the publick library except the holy bibel and enny man found gilty of taking enny book except said bibel will be hung for horse stealing so help me god. Signed, The librarion of bored of directors and secretary of said library."

The result was, a preacher who went away as provisions got short left behind a copy of Josephus. This made three books in the library now, and Pat Flannigan employed me at $2 50 a day, or rather an hour, for the man could not stand more, to go up the creek and read Josephus to a sick miner there. "You see, he has got the scurvy, and rheumatism, and consumption; I'm afraid he's pretty sick," said Pat pathetically, as we approached the low little cabin under the dark fir trees on the hillside.

"Is Josephus the short for Joseph?" asked the long, slim and bony man, who lay there with his big bent and knotty feet sticking far out from under the blankets and over the pole that served for a foot board.

"Is it? Well, by gum! Say, I knew all about that ere book, sort o' religious like; just suit you, see now; and I'd like to hear it again; just suit you, see now," and he looked long and meditatively at his queer, twisted toes, that were all trying to climb up on top of one another away down yonder beyond the other end of the narrow little bed of fir boughs and blankets in the dark corner of the cabin; then for the third time he said, talking in a whisper to those curious and multitudinous toes, "Jist suit you, see now."

And so I read and read from Josephus; and the next day I wrote a letter for him to his little sister at home; to Savannah Landing, Mo., and signed Ezekial Wells; for although he had two brothers with him, young brothers, who were busy "cleaning up" in the claim, and faithful, loving brothers they were, too, not one of them knew even so much of books as the alphabet.

Let it be noted as we go along that nearly all these men were sternly honest, and they all had more or less knowledge of the Bible; many of them, 50 per cent more than now, had Bible names. It is very curious, a thing worth nothing, else I would not bother to set it down; but I reckon they must have brought these names and this tradition of Holy Writ all the way, through generations, from Virginia and the Carolinas.

In about a week the two younger brothers got all cleaned up in the claim down in the gorge under the cabin, and their friend Flannigan weighed and brought them back their dust, cleaned of black sand and stray bits of clinging quartz and pyrites of iron, nearly $4000. Not much, it is true, for three men. But the long, slim creature in the corner, who by this time was pretty well doubled up, all except the persistent and ever-moving feet; stopped coughing long enough, as they set the dust in the gold pan by his bedside, to say, "Boys, divide up and go home."

And here was the example of another tradition that had come down all the way, even from beyond old Virginia—the old English loyalty and obedience to the head of the family. It is to be sincerely regetted that this has so entirely perished from among us now.

The two young men held their heads silently for a second, then glancing at each other, they came forward.

"Yes, put her in, three piles here on the table by the bed, an' Hez he'll turn his back an' I'll touch one pile with the p'int of my jacknife that Pat give me to peel my toe nails with when I get well next week, an' he'll say, 'whose?'"

The poor fellow was tied in a knot coughing for a time, and then he seemed to take up some thread of conversation with those remote and multitudinous blue acquaintances down yonder beyond the foot pole till the dust was divided. Then he turned his hollow eyes and looked on the glittering little heaps, and he smiled to see that nearly all the big pieces were heaped on the biggest heap. And he was glad, for that would go to little Hez—little Hez, who had worked night and day all the time that he lay there in the corner talking to his toes. Sim the other brother, was good, but he had a beard on his chin; and he had a baby at home, too; but this boy was as Benjamin.

"Turn your back, Hez; whose?"

"Brother Zeke's."

It was a minute or two before Zeke could see straight enough to touch another pile with any precision. But when it was all divided they came up smiling and propped him in bed.

"Say, Hez," he said, as he took the largest piece on his pile in his slim, blue fingers, "say, I want you to take this and buy Sis a pirote. Oh, wont she cavot to hear it screech and scream and cuss!"

He tossed the nugget into his young brother's heap, and then after tying up and untying himself he took up another piece, and tossing it into the other brother's heap, said: "Say, you get her another pirote. Boys, get her three pirotes when you get to the isthmus! One might die, and then the other one would be lonesome like. Yes, one might die. That happens sometimes."

He pushed his gold all over and away from him and then, with the big blade of the jack knife he divided it in two and made them put it into their long buckskin bags as they stood there before him.

"An' now you git; you git to-night; an' you git now. Provisions is short, an' I need em, now as I am gittin' well, Gol go, go to-night. There! Good-by."

One hand to each in a long, hard clasp; and as they hurried out—for their hearts were full and they would not weep, these men of old, in the presence of anybody—they heard a piping cheery voice calling after them, "Say, don't forget the pirotes for Sis, boys."

I tried to read some more to him right away to keep him from talking to his toes about Sis and the "pirotes," and was right in the midst of the struggle between Simon and John, where the streets of Jerusalem were running blood, when he suddenly turned his head and said slowly: "Say, how much more is they of that fightin' an' when will you come to where Josephus had that trouble with Potiphar's wife?"

I closed the book and tucked up his feet, telling him as I did so that I would have to ask the librarian about it.

"That's right; ah' say, you bring Frank Campbell with you tomorrow. I feel kind o' low, now that the boys is gone, an' want to git some speerits to pull me up like. Yes; good-bye!"

Frank Campbell laughed that queer, quiet laugh of his as we went in there the next afternoon. For those feet, as if they must surely be going somewhere, had pushed away out, and out; and the man's face was entirely under the blankets. Campbell tiptoed up and began to tickle his foot a little as he laughed and laughed that low, quiet laugh of his, for he did not want to startle him. But suddenly he let his right hand fall, and with his left lifted his hat and let it hang low down by his side as he said softly to himself, looking at the poor tired feet, "Going home."—Joaquin Miller in San Francisco Call

A DETROIT MIRACLE.

A GREAT TRIUMPH FOR CANADIAN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

Particulars of One of the Most Remarkable Cures on Record Described by the Detroit News—A Story Worth a Careful Perusal.

[Detroit News.]

The following paragraph, which appeared in the News a short time ago, furnished the basis of this information—a case that was so wonderfully remarkable that it demanded further explanation. It is of sufficient importance to the News' readers to report it to them fully. It was so important then that it attracted considerable attention at the time. The following is the paragraph in question:

"C. B. Northrop, for twenty-eight years one of the best known merchants on Woodward avenue, who was supposed to be dying last spring of locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis, has secured a new lease of life and returned to work at his store. The disease has always been supposed to be incurable, but Mr. Northrop's condition is greatly improved, and it looks now as if the grave would be cheated of its prey."

Since that time Mr. Northrop has steadily improved, not only in looks, but in condition, till he has regained his old-time strength.

It had been hinted to the writer of this article, who was acquainted with Mr. Northrop, that this miraculous change had been wrought by a very simple remedy called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. When asked about it Mr. Northrop fully verified the statement, and not only so, but he had taken pains to inform any one who was suffering in a similar manner when he heard of any such case. Mr. Northrop was enthusiastic at the result in his own case of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It was a remedy that he had heard of after he had tried everything he could hope to give him relief. He had been in the care of the best physicians who did all they could to alleviate this terrible malady, but without any avail. He had given up hope, when a friend in Lockport, N. Y., wrote him of the case of a person there who had been cured in similar circumstances by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. The person cured at Lockport had obtained his information respecting Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from an article published in the Hamilton, Ont., Times. The case was called "The Hamilton Miracle" and told the story of a man in that city who, after almost incredible suffering, was pronounced by the most eminent physicians to be incurable and permanently disabled. He had spent hundreds of dollars in all sorts of treatment and appliances only to be told in the end that there was no hope for him, and that cure was impossible. The person alluded to (Mr. John Marshall of 25 Little William street, Hamilton, Ont.), was a member of the Royal Templars of Temperance, and after having been pronounced permanently disabled and incurable by the physicians, was paid the $1,000 disability insurance provided by the order for its members in such cases. For years Mr. Marshall had been utterly helpless, and was barely able to drag himself around his house with the aid of crutches. His agonies were almost unbearable and his life was a burden to him, when at last relief came. Some months after he had been paid the disability claim he heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and was induced to try them. The result was miraculous; almost from the outset an improvement was noticed, and in a few months the man whom medical experts had said was incurable, was going about the city healthier and stronger than before. Mr. Marshall was so well known in Hamilton that all the city newspapers wrote up his wonderful recovery in detail, and it was thus as before stated, that Mr. Northrop came into possession of the information that led to his equally remarkable recovery. One could scarcely conceive a case more hopeless than that of Mr. Northrop. His injury came about in this way: One day nearly four years ago, he stumbled and fell the complete length of a steep flight of stairs which were at the rear of his store. His head and spine were severely injured. He was picked up and taken to his home. Creeping paralysis very soon developed itself, and in spite of the most strenuous efforts of friends and physicians the terrible affliction fastened itself upon him. For nearly two years he was perfectly helpless. He could do nothing to support his strength in the least effort. He had to be wheeled about in an invalid's chair. He was weak, pale and fast sinking when his timely information came that veritably snatched his life from the jaws of death. Those, who at that time saw a feeble old man wheeled into his store on an invalid's chair, would not recognized the man now, so great is the change that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have wrought. When Mr. Northrop learned of the remedy that had cured Mr. Marshall in Hamilton, and the person in Lockport, he procured a supply of Dr. William's Pink Pills through Messrs. Bassett & L'Hommedieu, 95 Woodward avenue, and from the outset found an improvement. He faithfully adhered to the use of the remedy until now he is completely restored. Mr. Northrop declares that there can be no doubt as to Pink Pills being the cause of his restoration to health, as all other remedies and medical treatment left him in a condition rapidly going from bad to worse, until at last it was declared there was no hope for him and he was pronounced incurable. He was in this terrible condition when he began to use Dr. William's Pink Pills, and they have restored him to health.

Mr. Northrop was asked what was claimed for this wonderful remedy, and replied that he understood the proprietors claim it to be a blood builder and nerve restorer; supplying in a condensed form all the elements necessary to enrich the blood; restore shattered nerves and drive out disease. It is claimed by the proprietors that Pink Pills will cure paralysis, rheumatism, sciatica, palpitation of the heart, headache, and all diseases peculiar to females, loss of appetite, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, and all diseases arising from overwork, mental worry, loss of vital force, etc.

"I want to say," said Mr. Northrop, "that I don't have much faith in patent medicines, but I cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The proprietors, however, claim that they are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is used, but a highly scientific preparation, the result of years of careful study and experiment on the part of the proprietors, and the pills were successfully used in private practice for years before being placed for general sale. Mr. Northrop declares that he is a living example that there is nothing to equal these pills as a cure for nerve diseases. On inquiry the writer found that these pills were manufactured by Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and Schenectady, N. Y., and the pills are sold in boxes, (never in bulk by the hundred) at 50 cents a box, and may be had of all druggists or directly by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., from either above addresses. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment with them comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies, or medical treatment. This case is one of the most remarkable on record and as it is one right here in Detroit and not a thousand miles away, it can be easily verified. Mr. Northrop is very well known to the people of Detroit, and he says he is only too glad to testify of the marvelous good wrought in his case. He says he considers it his duty to help all who are similiarly afflicted by any word he can say in behalf of the wonderful efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

OUIDA ON MEAT EATING.

She Considers It Objectionable From an Æsthetic Point of View.

I have all my life thought that meat eating was objectionable from the æsthetic point of view. Even as a child the fashion of handing around a huge gross piece on an enormous dish revolted my sense of beauty, and I was delighted when, on my first visit to England, a small and thin slice of beef was unobtrusively shown to me behind my left shoulder, to be accepted or rejected ad libitum. I quite agree with Lord Byron, who said he would not marry a girl because she had asked for two helps of lobster salad, though if beefsteak had been substituted I should understand it better still.

The biftek a l'anglaise, which seems to be the only idea a foreign waiter ever has when he is asked to suggest something to eat to English speaking travellers, is simply a piece of hot raw meat, far more fit for the zoological gardens than for human food; for, despite of constant and sometimes indignant disclaimers, it is generally believed on the Continent that it forms the staple food of the British nation—that the strong limbs of the men, the lovely complexions of the girls and the bright eyes of the children are entirely due to this nourishment, and anxious mothers of families abroad are constantly impressing upon their offspring and everybody else about them the utility and necessity of this panacea, if they wish to be in good health and feel fit and strong. It is a curious fact that in places where this regimen of viande saignante is followed anæmia is very frequent.

I have been told, though I have not read it myself, she writes in the Nineteenth Century, that somebody has written a description of a town where the whole population was vegetarian. The change this would make in all the sights and smells is far greater than we at first imagine. The ghastly butchers' shops which meet one at every turn appear to me an incongruity, not to say more, in this civilized age. They would disappear, as well as the fish-mongers', which are hardly any better. Then there are the sausage shops, which, in Southern countries, persecute one with their pungent odor. How often have I been driven away while admiring the facade of an old palazzo or the portico of an ancient church by the emanation of the terrible pizzicheria half way down the street.

Another dread sight which meets our eyes abroad, especially in Germany and Austria, where much veal is eaten, are the slaughtered calves paraded about the streets, a dozen or two of them hanging over the sides of the cart. There can be little doubt, too, that our kitchens and dining-rooms would be far sweeter and more attractive if no animal food was ever brought into them. The eggs certainly would be gainers, and our olfactory senses, to. In pictures and in poetry the tables are laid out with luscious fruit and sparkling wines whenever charming and pleasant scenes are to be conjured up before our minds. When coarseness and discomfort are portrayed "men brought in whole hogs and quarter beeves, and all the hall was dim with steam of flesh."

PLAINLY HER LAST RESORT.

The Pathetic Story Mutely Told by the Two Words "For Sale."

In the great stream of human kind that constantly surges to and fro about the Brooklyn bridge occurs many a pathetic scene. One of them attracted not a little attention from the crowd that pushed and scrambled for the stairways during the rush hours the other afternoon, says the New York Commercial. A trim little old woman with a motherly face and rusty but scrupulously neat black garb wandered sadly back and forth, leading by a short chain a handsome Irish setter dog. About his neck was a pretty little silver collar, and from it hung the mute advertisement "For Sale." The dog clung closely to his mistress, his great brown eyes at times turning to her apealingly, as though he knew why they were there and was pleading to be taken home. Every line of the sweet old face, the tidy dress, with its neat patches here and there, and the faded shawl, a relic of better times, spoke with eloquence of refinement in the past that illy fitted her for the hard buffets of unkind fortune in her last days. Many a sympathetic glance was bestowed on her as the great throng hurried by, but no purchaser for her dog stopped to burden her purse at the expense, as was evident from the loving caresses she occasionally bestowed on her friend, of her affections.

A Futile Objection.

Old B—has just turned fifty-eight, and finding himself a widower after twenty-five years of married life, is preparing to lead to the altar his new bride of twenty-two summer. His friends, alarmed at the wide difference in their ages, remonstrate, but in vain.

"What! you say my intended is too young?" B—exclaims in utter astonishment; "why, she is exactly the same age as my first wife when I married her."

Makes its own Trouble.

"That's a mighty poor circular you have to advertise your eye-wash."

"Why?"

"It is so illegible it gives a man sore eyes to read it."

"Well, isn't that good for the eye wash?"

A Mother's Gratitude

Too great for tongue to tell is due Hood's Sarsaparilla for its wonderful cure of my daughter, 11 years old. Three years ago she had whooping cough and measles, followed by dreadful pains, beginning in one knee and extending to almost every joint in her body. She could not stand up or lie down, and had to sleep in her chair. A meeting of physicians pronounced the disease Constitutional Scrofula. We began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla and there was a very gradual change for the better. The pains grew less and the swellings subsided after using one bottle. Then improvement was rapid, until

A French Matrimonial Swindle.

The Court of Correctional Police, Paris, was occupied recently with the trial of Madame Eveline Leal, who has been detected in carrying out an extraordinary system of matrimonial swindles. The prisoner, who asserts she belongs to a good English family, is a tall fair woman, about 30 years of age, and still handsome.

Her plan of operation was to insert advertisments in papers stating that a lady, young, and possessing a fortune of 1,200,000 francs, was desirous of marrying a nobleman or merchant.

She received numerous replies, and introduced herself to her dupes under various names, either as an English woman or as an American, and the widow of an American general.

After receiving from her suitors a large number of gifts the total value of which is estimated at from 200,000 to 800,000 francs, she would disappear and live luxuriously on the proceeds of her fraud. The swindling career of Madame Leal was arrested by a sentence of six months' imprisonment, at the expiration of which she will be expelled from French territory.

High Praise.

The great excellence of preaching is to be intelligible to be all, even to the most unlearned. Cardinal Cheverus, after preaching his first sermon in the English language, was in some doubt if he had made himself understood.

Wishing to ascertain the fact, he asked a laboring man, whom he had noticed in the congregation, what he thought of the sermon. The man replied:

"Your sermon was not like most sermons. There was not a single dictionary word in it. All the words were easy to understand."

M. Cheverus was satisfied with the reply, and in telling of the incident would say that it was the highest praise he had ever received.

A Princely Present.

Pater—So tomorrow's Lord Engle's birthday eh? Well, as his fiancee, I suppose you are expected to give him a handsome present or two.

The Daughter—Why, yes—of course.

Pater—Then I'm going to let you give him a receipted bill for every dollar he owes me and a first-class ticket to Liverpool.—From Life.

Commercial Item.

Merchant (buying bill of goods of Chicago drummer)—What is your usual time, thirty days?

Chicago Drummer (absent-mindedly)—Yes, or ten dollars. I always pay the fine—oh-er-I beg pardon; yes; thirty days, or two per cent, off for cash.

Convenient Paper-Weight.

An Italian cure was about making a journey. Many friends called to say good-by, and as had happened before, each gave him a paper on which was jotted down a list of things which the writer wished the traveler to purchase for him. Only one of these friends accompanied his memorandum with the necessary money.

This one friend's commission the cure carefully executed and delivered the articles to him.

When the others called for their goods, he said

"Soon after I sailed I took out all your papers to look them over and classify them. I laid them on the deck before me. Suddenly there came a gust of wind, and they were blown away. I could not remember what they contained, and so I could not do your errands."

"But," they objected, "you brought what so-and-so asked you to get."

"Oh yes," said the cure. "You see he enclosed the cash with his memorandum, and that kept it from blowing away."

Withdrawing the Militia.

PITTSBURG, Special.—It is stated on excellent authority that the Third brigade of the national guard will be withdrawn from Camp Sam Black, at Homestead, within twenty-four hours, an order to that effect having been made to-day by Maj. Gen. Snowden. The Second brigade will remain in possession of Homestead for some time longer, when it, too, will be withdrawn, leaving only one regiment of volunteers, composed of probably 1,000 men, who will enlist for the occasion, and will be kept there until the present trouble is adjudicated.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Rusk has gone home in Wisconsin for a short holiday.

The nomination of Soren Listoe of Minnesota as consul at Dusseldorff was confirmed.

The president has approved the act to enforce reciprocal commercial relations between the United States and Canada.

The senate has confirmed the nomination of George Shiras, Jr., to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court.

The secretary of the navy has given orders that the United States practice ship constellation be prepared to visit Havre, France, and Genoa, Italy, in October next, for the purpose of transporting certain works of art intended for exhibition at the World's Columbian Exposition.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Two braggadocious lose their lives in a Mexican volcano.

Crops are badly damaged by storms in portions of Minnesota.

A slight shock of earthquake was felt in San Francisco.

A business block was burned at Carrollton, Mo., recently. Loss, $100,000.

The two persons drowned at Detroit, Mich., were Miss Carrie Roberts, a prominent young artist, and Alfred Weils.

Over $100,000 worth of property of the Tidewater company, at Constable Hook, N. J., was destroyed by fire.

Fire at Oakedale, Wash., destroyed half of the business portion of the place. Loss, $70,000; insurance, $50,000.

There has been so little rain in Cape Breton that the forest fires have started and have been raging for several days. They may reach the towns of Sidney and North Sidney.

The Norwegian ship Frank Corvill, from Glasgow, for Santiago, has been given up. She sailed 205 days ago with a cargo of coal. It is feared she has been destroyed at sea by the cargo taking fire.

A regular tornado struck Richmond recently. The Philadelphia & Reading car-repair shops were wrecked and a large number of workmen injured, none fatally, however. Many dwellings were demolished by the gale.

Thomas Brand, who was employed at a nursery at Rose Hill, Chicago, dropped dead recently from heat. David Smith, a pastry cook, and Nick Scarader, an engineer, were also prostrated, and their cases are considered hopeless.

The family of Enoch West of Berkshire, Ky, twenty-five miles from Cincinnati, was poisoned from eating ice cream. Miss Annie Spillman, who was visiting the family, died in awful agony. The other members of the family are suffering, and are in a dangerous condition.

The mail stage went through a bridge across the North Trask river, near Tillamook, Or., falling thirty feet into the raging current among the rocks below. C. B. Hadley of Tillamook and Rev. Edmunds of Iowa, passengers, and Willsben Maddox, the driver, were all terribly injured, and it is thought they cannot recover.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Marquis de Mores challenges Editor Medill, of the Chicago Tribune, to fight a duel.

H. C. Frick continues to improve and his physician expects him to be out in a few days. Another knife wound is found on the patient.

John P. Bayles, one of the few survivors of the Black Hawk war, has just died, at Litchfield, Ill., at the age of eighty-four years.

Rev. Dr. Ingalls of Springfield, Mo., is thought to be dying. He is a brother of ex-Senator Ingalls of Kansas, is president of Drury college, and is one of the ablest educators in the West.

Andrew Carnegie continues secluding himself in Scotland and will answer no letters or telegrams, nor will he say a word about the Homestead trouble. His course has been condemned by a large meeting of London workingmen.

SINS AND SINNERS.

The notorious Daltons rob a bank at El Reno, Okla. T.

Two stage robbers and murderers, brothers, are lynched in California.

Two former residents of St. Paul quarrel in Chicago, with the result that one is dead and the other fatally injured.

A dispatch from Rio Grande City announces that indications point to the reorganization of the Garza forces.

In a row among drunken Italians at Hilltown, Pa., Antonia Pasquealt killed two of his countrymen and wounded a third.

M. Louis Bestor, member of a wealthy firm of iron merchants of Cincinnati, committed suicide by hanging. An attack of la grippe had made him insane.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Scott of Denver were almost chopped to pieces in their bed and will die. Peter Heenan, the former husband of Mrs. Scott, is suspected of the crime, being prompted by jealousy.

That the stockmen who started a campaign against the "rustlers" of Northern Wyoming by killing two men in Johnson county in April will ever have a trial now seems extremely doubtful. The county has not sufficient funds.

The investigation by experts into the accounts of ex-Treasurer Jenkins of Dakota county, Neb., discloses a shortage of $13,400. The supervisors have begun civil actions against his bondsmen, and swore out a warrant for him on the charge of embezzlement.

James Fraser, a bank clerk at Pollmont, Scotland, killed his neighbor Shadwell, with a sword, badly wounding Mrs. Shadwell and running into the street killed a young woman named Mary Grindley whom he chanced to meet. He was afterward arrested. He was insane.

Robert Sterling, a starved, shabbily dressed young fellow from Chicago was arrested at Pittsburg while telling a small crowd that he had walked all the way from that city to kill Andrew Carnegie. He was sent to the workhouse. When taken to the station he fainted for the want of food.

Henry F. Hardy, one of the most desperate and reckless bank robbers and housebreakers that this country has ever produced, is in the custody of the police of Frankfort-on-Maine, Germany. When arrested he was living on the proceeds of his robberies in Berlin and Baden-Baden in handsome style as Edward Carson, a wealthy American mine-owner.

A double murder and attempts at suicide was enacted at Burns, Tenn., Maj. J. H. Winn, a farmer, murdered his wife and stepfather with an axe, mutilating them most horribly. He afterwards made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide with a dirk knife. The cause was a family feud. Winn was lynched while being taken to jail.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Northern Mexico is again confronted with a total crop failure.

The bill granting amnesty to all political exiles has passed its third reading in the Brazilian chamber of deputies.

It is said that there is a possibility of the Canadian Pacific railroad buying up the Spring Hill mines in Nova Scotia.

The disturbance at Pontevadra, Spain, growing out of hostility to Octrol duties, has become so serious that a state of siege was declared.

A European conference will be summoned by Spain to deal with the Morocco question and England, Germany, Austria and Italy will be represented at the conference.

There has been a renewal of the violence of the eruption of Mt. Etna. Incessant rumblings are plainly heard accompanied by showers of ashes. An earthquake shock was felt recently at Mineo, 37 miles to the south of Mt. Etna.

Foreign residents of Samoa fear that a civil war is shortly to break out in that country between the followers of Malietoa, the reigning chief and his old enemy Mataafa, the border king, who still has a powerful nation at his command.

Winter crops were in an unsatisfactory condition in the central, southwestern and southern provinces and portions of provinces of Russia, which suffered in 1891, due to an inadequate rainfall, while the crops in the northern and northwestern provinces were impaired by excessive rain.

The four conspirators, Milaroff, Popoff, Ghorghieff and Karaguloff, who were recently tried by court martial on charges of being implicated in a plot against the lives of Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria and his minister, M. Stambuloff, were executed in this city recently. A number of other persons who were tried with the four men have been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

The whole town of Posen will be medically inspected as a precaution against cholera, and special cordons will be established for all railways, roads and canals crossing the frontier. The Berlin medical board has detained a number of Russian emigrants and ordered that a strict examination be made as to their condition and that their belongings be disinfected.

The trial of sixteen anarchists at Liege was concluded in a verdict of guilty on all counts of the indictment, which included charges of a conspiracy to steal explosives and to destroy property and an attempt to blow up the Ombrel powder mill. The verdict was received amid profound silence. Moneau, the head of the band, was sentenced to twenty-five years penal servitude; Wolall and Bu'gean, two of the leaders, to twenty years each; four others to fifteen years each, and two to ten and three years respectively.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

Congressman James Capehart was renominated by the Democrats of the Fourth West Virginia district recently.

Robert Neill was nominated for congress on the 759 ballot by the Democrats of the Sixth Arkansas district.

There is a probability of Secretary Rusk being the Republican candidate for governor of Wisconsin.

Congressman Alderson was renominated at the Democratic convention at Charlestown, W. Va.

Whitelaw Reid has accepted the invitation of the Illinois Republican state central committee to attend the convention of the league clubs at Springfield, Ill., Aug. 18.

In addition to being chosen as a congressional nominee in the Third district of California, Judge Hilberne has been nominated to fill the unexpired term in congress of Judge McKenna.

THE TOILERS.

Ten thousand workmen in New York city are idle on account of the public cartmen's union and the building material drivers' union.

It is charged that certain labor organizations have undertaken to secure the defeat of the world's fair appropriation because their offer to secure its passage for $10,000 was rejected.

There is a prospect of trouble in the Boston clothing trade which may throw several thousand men and women out of work. The clothing contractors accuse the employes of making unreasonable demands. Two contractors closed down their factories, and efforts are making to induce other contractors to do the same.

Employes of the St. Louis smelting works struck because they had been notified that the company would not be responsible for any sickness or accident to employes as a result of their dangerous occupation. They became riotous and were dispersed by the police. No trouble has since occurred. Three hundred employes struck.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

YoTambien wins the Twin City derby.

At the New York Academy of music, Ernest Roeber, the champion wrestler of America, defeated Appollon, the acknowledged champion of the world.

In the lawn tennis contest at New Castle, Eng., Ernst Renshaw, owing fifteen, beat the American champion O. S. Campbell, owing half of fifteen, by a score of two sets to love.

GENERAL.

The Kansas corn crop is reported almost a total failure.

A valuable discovery of zinc fields upon the Ouchita river, in the Chickasaw nation, is reported.

A large colony of disappointed Oklahoma homeseekers has been organized to locate in Nicaragua, where they will be employed on coffee plantations.

The British steamer Queen on her trip to Alaska carried bonds to the amount of $125,000 for the release of the British steamer Coquitlan and her cargo of sealskins recently seized.

The British steamer Balamas from Yokohama via Honolulu, arrived at Port Townsend. This is the first vessel of Samuel Samuels' new Oriental line of steamers between Puget sound and the Orient under the patronage of the Union Pacific.

At a meeting of all prominent business men of Tacoma resolutions were passed in favor of allowing Chinese merchants to come here. The merchants of this city think the presence of Chinese merchants is essential to the success of the new steamship line to China and Japan.

IT IS KNUTE NELSON

The Republicans of Minnesota Name Him as Their Candidate for Governor.

A Brief Resume of the Proceedings of the State Republican Convention.

The state Republican Convention was called to order in the Peoples church, St. Paul, July 28 by chairman Heatwole of the State central committee. Rev. Dr. Smith offered prayer.

Mr. Bixby read the call, and as he concluded L. P. Hunt of Mankato presented the name of Hon. Mark H. Dunnell of Owatonna for temporary chairman. There was not a dissenting voice raised against his election and the ex-congressman came forward amid a storm of applause.

Gov. Barto of Sauk Center nominated A. B. Clinch of Anoka county for temporary secretary. His election was unanimous. On the motion of S. A. Phillips of St. Louis county P. J. Chipman was elected an additional secretary.

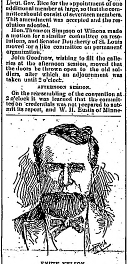
J. D. Jones of Todd county moved for the appointment, by the chair, of a committee on credentials, to consist of one from each judicial district. George P. Johnston offered an amendment to the effect that each district should choose its own member on this committee, but there was no second. Another amendment was then offered by ex-Lieut. Gov. Rice for the appointment of one additional member at large, so that the committees should consist of seventeen members. This amendment was accepted and the resolution adopted.

Hon. Thomson Simpson of Winona made a motion for a similar committee on resolutions, and Senator Dougherty of St. Louis moved for a like committee on permanent organization.

John Goodnow, wishing to fill the galleries at the afternoon session, moved that the doors be thrown open to the old soldiers, after which an adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

On the reassembling of the convention at 2 o'clock it was learned that the committee on credentials was not prepared to submit its report, and W. H. Eustis of Minneapolis was called upon to address the delegates. Mr. Eustis expressed his pleasure at being in a state convention where the spirit of harmony pervaded the atmosphere. Parties were weak when they should be strong, he said, because that in the selection of their candidates they did not always put their ear to the ground to hear the voice of the people.



KNUTE NELSON.

The following testimonial was then presented, which elicited the wildest applause when the name of James G. Blaine was announced. The approval of the convention was given amid great cheering, and with the delegates all on their feet.

SYMPATHY WITH BLAINE.

The Republicans of Minnesota desire to express their keen and grateful appreciation of the brilliant and distinguished services rendered his country by the Hon. James G. Blaine as secretary of state. His administration of our foreign affairs for three years has been so conspicuous in character and extent of the work done, as to excel any like period in the history of American diplomacy. The settlement of long standing and vexatious questions, the meeting and solving of new and unexpected issues, the convening of the Pan-American congress, having for its primal object the establishment of the brotherhood of the Western hemisphere, originating and advocating the great law of reciprocity, and fostering its far-reaching fruits by treaties, till on land every American farm and on sea every American ship, now or soon, will feel its quickening powers, bear immortal testimony to the statesmanship and the patriotism of the greatest American of our day, James G. Blaine.

During these years of arduous toil for the state he was twice grievously afflicted and now once more sits within the shadow of a great sorrow.

We desire to assure him of our unchanging love, and tender him and his family our deepest sympathy. After a season of rest from more than thirty years of continuous labor, we express the hope that our country may again have the services of the foremost statesman of the world.

Short speeches were made by other prominent delegates.

The committee on credentials then made their report which was adopted.

The committee on permanent organization now reported in favor of making the temporary organization permanent and the convention concurred. Mr. Dunnell again thanked the delegates for the honor done him in electing him chairman.

"For the first time in the history of the state," said he, "a majority of the Minnesota representatives in the house are Democratic, and for the first time, in case the electoral college is not able to elect a president, and it is thrown into that house, the vote of Minnesota's representatives will be cast for the Democratic candidate. We must not let the Republican State of Minnesota increase the margin of the Democratic majority in the house, and therefore in the election of representatives and a senator we must cast aside all personal feeling and work to secure a Republican victory."

Chairman Simpson next read the report of the committee on resolutions, which presented the following platform for the endorsement of the convention:

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The Republicans of Minnesota, through their delegates in convention assembled, do affirm and declare as follows:

First—We endorse and approve the platform of the Republican national convention adopted at Minneapolis June 10, 1892.

Third—From its very infancy and for upwards of a third of a century our state has been managed and guided by men and principles of the Republican party. During that period the state has grown from a mere outpost of scattered settlements to a commonwealth of 1,500,000 souls, prosperous and aggressive and equal in moral, intellectual and commercial vigor to the best of the older states. Such a people so prosperous and so growing have not been badly governed. Our state administrations have been clean, able, and always loyal to the best interests of the people. The administration of Gov. William R. Merriam has been in no way inferior to those of his predecessors, and may justly be regarded as a model of faithfulness to a great public trust.

Fourth—Recognizing that in some states force and fraud are used to defeat the expression of the will of the people the Republicans of Minnesota are in favor of all wise means to secure to every citizen a free ballot and a fair count.

AGAINST COMBINATIONS.

Fifth—Trusts and combinations to control and unduly enhance the price of commodities are a great evil, the outgrowth of human cupidity, and exist in all civilized communities, regardless of tariff laws. We are opposed to the same and are in favor of all proper legislation to eradicate and repress the evil. In this connection we refer with pride to the establishment and maintenance at the state prison at Stillwater of the manufacture of binding twine, which has been the means of protecting and defending our farmers against one of the great trusts and monopolies.

Sixth—We believe in protecting the laboring man by all necessary and judicious legislation, and to this end we favor the enactment of suitable laws to protect the health, life and limb of all employes of transportation, mining and manufacturing companies while engaged in the service of such companies; (2) the establishment in some form of boards or tribunals of conciliation and arbitration for the peaceful settlement of all disputes and disagreements between capital and labor touching wages, hours of labor and such questions as pertain to the safety and physical and moral well being of the laborer; (3) the exclusion from our shores by suitable laws and regulations of all paupers, criminals, contract labor and other dangerous classes; and (4) the preservation of the public domain for actual and bona fide settlers under the homestead law.

FREE AND OPEN MARKETS.

Seventh—The farmers of this state, who constitute the chief element of our productive wealth-creating population, are entitled to the cheapest and best facilities for storing, shipping and marketing their products, and to this end we favor such laws as will give them cheap, safe and easily obtainable elevator and warehouse facilities, and will furnish them promptly and without discrimination, at fair and reasonable rates, proper transportation facilities to all accessible markets.

Eighth—Railroad, telegraph and telephone companies and all corporations and individuals charged with and performing any public service or employment are amenable to public control, and we favor the enactment and enforcement of such laws as will compel them to render the best and most approved service at a fair, just and reasonable rate without discrimination as to persons or places.

AGAINST OPTIONS.

Ninth—The convention approves and readopts the resolutions passed by the last Republican state convention, urging upon congress the passage of the Washburn-Hatch anti-option bill.

Tenth—Realizing the importance to the people of good public highways, we are in favor of the enactment of laws for the systematic improvement and maintenance of the same.

PENSIONS.

Eleventh—The debt of this nation to the men who preserved it cannot be computed from the standpoint of dollars and cents. A nation's gratitude is theirs and in proof thereof the Republican party of Minnesota, not grudgingly, but heartily, cordially and earnestly favors a system of pensions so liberal as to properly provide for the living and tenderly protect from want the widows and orphans of the dead. And we rejoice that the nation's growth and great prosperity of the government they served warrants us in making this pledge.

Twelfth—We recommend the work and the object of the State League of Republican clubs and advise a continuance of the same.

Thirteenth—The Republicans of the state are heartily in favor of the protection of its forests so far as consistent with its general interest.

C. K. DAVIS NOMINATED.

Fourteenth—Whereas the Republicans of Minnesota, recognizing the conspicuous ability and fidelity of Senator Cushman K. Davis, have manifested substantial unanimity in demanding his re-election to the position he has so ably filled; and,

Whereas, notable precedents are on record for the nomination by state conventions of men who are evidently the popular choice for United States senator, thus making them the recognized candidates of the party for that high office; Therefore,

Resolved, That this convention hereby presents the name of Cushman K. Davis as the chosen nominee and candidate of the Republican party of the State of Minnesota for re-election to the United States senate by the legislature of 1893.

NELSON NOMINATED.

The convention now being regularly organized and possessed of a platform, was ready to transact business. Nominations for governor were declared in order and the first to rise for the purpose of making a nominating speech was James A. Tawney of Winona. Mounting the platform, he gave a record of the private life and public services of Hon. Knute Nelson, and followed up his biographical sketch by saying:

With a record such as this, such as he has achieved against all the adverse circumstances that accompany poverty and lowly birth, is it, I ask, at all remarkable that to-day the choice of an overwhelming majority of the Republicans of Minnesota for the nomination for the office of governor is Hon. Knute Nelson of Alexandria? [Cheers.]

We are at this time confronted with questions of the most vital importance to the public weal; questions we must consider, and, by the peaceful arbitrament of the ballot, decide on the 8th of next November. We have not had, we will not have, during this last quarter of the nineteenth century, more important national issues presented for our consideration and determination than those which to-day divide the people of Minnesota into practically five distinct political parties. That these questions may be decided right, decided exclusively of our state and nation, it becomes us as freemen, and we owe it to ourselves and to our party, to select as its representatives the men whom we honestly believe to be the choice of the people. With Harrison and Reid, C. K. Davis and Knute Nelson, we can sweep the State of Minnesota and win for our party and its principles a triumphant victory on the 8th of next November. In behalf, therefore, of Winona county, of a large majority of the Republicans of this state, and especially in behalf of the Republicans of Southeastern Minnesota, I present to this convention as the nominee for the office of governor the loyal, patriotic American citizen, Hon. Knute Nelson.

Dr. Smith in a short speech announced that the name of A. R. McGill had at his request been withdrawn from the contest.

Frank F. Davis of Hennepin then took the platform to second the nomination of Knute Nelson he said:

The face of the Republican party is ever turned toward the dawn. It bathes itself in the sunrise of promise, and on the eastern hills of progress pitches its tent.

In the full glow of God's sunlight, where men are prosperous, where happy homes are built, where wheels of industry hum, where the face of freedom lifts itself to the sky and the dark sceptre of slavery flees in terror, there it finds congenial atmosphere. It has no field in the shades of night, where unholy shapes of want and famine, of poverty and calamity revel—that field it leaves to its opponents. Its orators are not calamity orators, its prophets are not prophets of evil, its adherents live not to block and retard the wheels of progress, but to move onward the car of man's advancement and elevation into broader fields and higher planes of human existence. Its mission is not ended. Its mission will not end while unsettled questions of state confront men in the ever changing circumstances of American life.

AN AMERICAN PLATFORM.

When the Republican party makes a platform it makes an American one. Its Magna Charta is the bill of rights and the federal constitution. You shall not find in its platform, as you shall find in that of Democracy, a sentiment drawn from the constitution of a rebel continent, disloyal to country and hostile to flag. You shall not find as its cardinal principle hostility to American homes, American workshops and American bread winners. It has no time or place in its creed in which to make America the slave of Europe. It is for good money, for honest money, or for an obligation that represents an honest dollar and an honest ability to pay what is pledged. It believes in universal suffrage not as a theory, but as an exemplified fact.

IT WILL MAINTAIN RIGHT

as it did in the days from '61 to '65, even though the blood of traitors be shed in the contest. It is the enemy of anarchy and discord; it is the foe of the midnight assassin, of the mask and the cloak and the midnight raid, as it was once the foe of the bloodhound and the scourge.

IN THE CHOICE OF ITS LEADERS

it has ever exhibited wisdom. It has sought the best for guidance, for it has the best for guidance. Men of uncertain and unsafe statesmanship it has laid aside, and men of sterling worth, of wise leadership, and of broad state views, it has been its disposition and its record to honor.

To-day these cardinal principles of our creed seek in this convention a leader in the State of Minnesota. He whom we present, possesses every qualification demanded. What is his blood? That of the Vikings. The men who in the early days of Saxon England smote Angle and Saxon and placed a royal diadem upon the head of a sea rover. The men who created the iron dukes of Normandy, who, in after centuries, on Hastings' bloody field, made a new race and a new line of kings for a new England. His is the race that in this later day has made the prairies of Minnesota and the Dakotas blossom into harvest fields.

and, by the arts of peace is making to-day a greater nation than ever sprung from its contests of arms in the centuries of the past. Born on foreign soil, it is still his proud record that he has so far eliminated foreign thought, foreign custom and foreign prejudices from his nature, has become so thoroughly American that the great American party of a great state is demanding by acclamation his nomination in this convention.

His character is molded by principle. Even in the face of party dictation he has ever dared to assert his individual preference and choice. I should be the last man to condemn him for his vote upon the Mills bill, although I am an ardent advocate in all its breadth of the doctrine of protection. I recognize in that single act of legislative conduct, to principle or party, but of the paramount supremacy of personal conviction. I have heard it said that for this act he is not a Republican. I say in the presence of this convention that for this act of personal grandeur he has splendidly exemplified his Republicanism in that principle which has guided him rather than party dictation. For the man who honestly differs from me on principle, I have the highest regard. He has fought in this state, his voice has been heard upon the stump, his strong personality has been injected into our political contests. No spot is upon his character, no stain lies upon his political career; his hands are brown with toil, as his heart is seasoned with love for the common masses and a devotion to his party principle. He has been no seeker for this office. In his quiet home by the lakes of Alexandria, he has waited

NOT ONE OF DISLOYALTY

UNTIL THE PEOPLE CALLED.

Defections have occurred in the ranks of the Republican party in the State of Minnesota. Men have gravitated from our ranks who have been loyal for years to our principles, and our organizations. We need these forces that have strayed away from us. They are made of the men whose hearts are true, but whose judgment has been led astray by sophistry, by divers circumstances, or by misfortune in no wise due to the action or attitude of the Republican party. They are among a class of yeomanry which this man can best approach and more completely reach than any other. Nominate him in this convention and his shall be the splendid task, not only to be elected in this campaign, but to restore to the Republican party of Minnesota the majorities that have made her the envy of her sister states in the West and the admiration of her sister states in the East. He is not the choice alone of the country element of our party. I stand here to tender him of the mighty metropolis of the Northwest. We recognize his worth, his fitness as a candidate, and pledge him such a vote in Hennepin county as will strike terror into the hearts of our opponents. The cohorts which shall defend him and sustain him in this contest will not be drafted alone from the brawny sons of the prairie, but from the men of the mill, the workshop, the office and the store, who are as united in their sentiment that he is the chosen leader of the campaign before us as are the loyal legions of the yeomanry whose choice we know he is. For Hennepin county and the city of Minneapolis I second the nomination of Knute Nelson.

After the speech of Mr. Davis delegates rose in all parts of the hall to second the nomination of Mr. Nelson. W. R. Morris of Hennepin moved that the nomination be by acclamation and a rising vote. The chairman put the question, and everybody with the exception of several Ramsey county delegates rose and cheered. Nelson was nominated.

NELSON SPEAKS.

The chairman appointed a committee consisting of J. A. Tawney, ex-Gov. Barto and A. Anderson to notify Mr. Nelson and bring him to the hall, and after a short absence the committee returned, the applause welcoming Mr. Nelson interrupting the nominations for secretary of state. He was escorted to the platform, and after the cheering had subsided he acknowledged the honor done him in the following words:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: You have had the goodness to place me in nomination for the high office of governor with a unanimity and under circumstances seldom the lot of any candidate. For this deliberate testimony of your confidence I am grateful beyond measure, and appreciate it all the more because of the high character and great worth of the gentlemen whose names have been associated with mine as candidates, and I appreciate it, too, from the fact that we are confronted with vigilant and persistent foes contemplating an active and aggressive campaign.

The Democratic party, our old-time adversary, aside from its ominous history and its heterogeneous make-up, has taken but few issues with us, and all of them except one were feigned issues.

A member of congress is a member of the legislative department of the federal government and in voting for such an official the citizen exercises a federal right and performs a federal duty. And any encroachment upon this right and duty on the part of the people or authorities of a state, is a disturbance of a federal, not a state election. To deny the right of the federal government to maintain and protect the purity and integrity of the federal ballot is to deny the supremacy of the federal government within the scope of the functions given it by the constitution. If federal government cannot regulate and control a federal election, it is an abject political nonentity—at the complete mercy of the several states. Viewed in this light—and our federal constitution affords no other—the second paragraph of the Democratic platform, in view of the fact that the Republican party is not seeking to control state elections, sets up a man of straw, or unconsciously, as if from force of habit, reiterates

THE DOCTRINE OF SECESSION.

Touching the coinage and use of the silver dollar, the Democratic party in its platform is equally halting and ambiguous. It declares in favor of an honest silver dollar, but in the same breath it denounces the coinage act of 1890—the very law under which the integrity of the silver dollar is maintained under the existing disparity of intrinsic value between the two metals. This is like telling the culprit: We will give you your life, but will place you in a cell where there isn't a breath of air.

It is only on the matter of the tariff that the Democratic platform is clear and candid. The very momentum of its candidate impelled the party for once to be candid.

We are plainly told that a tariff that savors of protection, that a tariff other than a revenue tax is wholly unwarranted, both as a matter of right and as a matter of good policy. The issue presented is not whether any particular tariff law is or is not unreasonable in the degree of protection that it affords, but whether a tariff law for any other purpose than mere revenue is at all justifiable.

On this issue the Republican platform is as clear and explicit as that of the Democracy. We not only announce that we are in favor of protection, but we clearly define the subjects and the degree of the protection we justify. This is not the time nor the occasion for the discussion of the merits of free trade or protection. It is sufficient to now say that he who believes in a protective tariff at all cannot well doubt or question the rules of protective legislation prescribed in our national platform. Such, in brief, are the feigned and real issues between us and our old-time adversaries.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

But, we are confronted with another party, lately rechristened the People's party, who, while they agree with the Democracy on the tariff issue—that bridge over which it was fondly hoped that fusion might be reached—raise or suggest other issues, some of which are visionary and utopian in character, and involve organic or revolutionary changes in our system of government. Many of the leaders of this party are men who have in some way exhausted themselves in one or both of the old parties; and in the platforms, preambles and resolves which they have now made for their followers, as rules of action, they have taken strange and novel grounds. Their first aim seems to have been to make their followers believe that the capital of the wealthier classes is nothing but plunder—plunder ruthlessly wrenched from those who are poorer. In other words, that the poor are poor because they have been robbed, and the rich are rich because they have robbed some one. Their next aim is to impress upon their followers that this government of ours—state and national—is the most corrupt and unjust government on the face of the earth, and that the people are as badly governed as bad can be. In proof of this I quote you a sentence from the Omaha platform, as follows: "We have witnessed for more than a quarter of a century the struggle of the two great political parties for power and plunder, while grevious wrongs have been inflicted upon a suffering people." When we reflect that during this period nearly every American citizen has been a member of one or the other of these great parties, it seems strange to be told that the American people have for a quarter of a century been engaged in a grand hari kari of self-destruction.

THE CHIEF PREREQUISITES

for the reforms planned by these leaders, seem to be hatred of capital and hatred of our system of our government.

And what are the chief remedies prescribed for the ills complained of? In brief these three: Government ownership of all railroads—as though nothing could be regulated or controlled unless owned—unlimited free coinage of silver—thereby under the existing disparity of value between the two metals, paying the owners of silver bullion 100 cents in coin for 70 cents in silver; and last but not least, the federal government must turn pawnbroker and set up a great national pawnshop under the so-called subtreasury scheme. Thus when our government owns all the railroads, buys all the silver bullion at a big premium, and does the biggest and most unreasonable pawnbroker business known, then, and not till then, has this government of ours—founded by Washington and preserved by Lincoln—that degree of perfection contemplated by these new apostles of reform. This is not the time nor the place to consider these remedies and reforms in detail. I hope as the campaign progresses to take them up one by one and discuss them in detail, for I believe that when the great mass of the People's party—who I know are honest and wish well of the republic—come to consider these matters calmly and deliberately, come to understand them fully, and realize what a great working capital the government will need, to embark in so many new business enterprises, they will be as quick as any of us to abstain from doubtful or questionable methods of government.

A PERSONAL WORD.

And now, kindly permit a few words personal to myself. You of the old Fifth district—now the Sixth and Seventh—know my merits and shortcomings, and you in the other parts of the state not so well acquainted with me, I hope to meet during the progress of the campaign and to become as intimate with you as with the people of the "old Fifth." I have been nominated freely, and without pledges to any one by you, the representatives of the Republican party of this state, and it will be my highest and dearest ambition in case the people ratify your choice to make you all an honest, upright and fearless executive worthy of trust and confidence of all the people of our great state.

In conclusion I desire to say that I hear you have adopted a resolution endorsing Senator C. K. Davis and pledging him your support. That resolution meets with my hearty support, and I trust you will give him the same loyal support I know you will give to me.

CLOUGH NAMED.

After the committee appointed to escort Mr. Nelson to the hall had retired nominations for lieutenant governor were declared to be in order, and Frank Nye of Minneapolis in a brief speech presented the name of David M. Clough of Minneapolis to the convention as a man of indomitable energy, determined purpose and manly nature, who would make an invaluable second to Mr. Nelson.

"In victory or defeat," said Mr. Nye, "you will find Dave Clough the same. He is always ready to proclaim his convictions and never goes behind a man's back to do so. I present as the man best fitted to make the fight for us the name of the Hon. D. M. Clough of Hennepin county."

J. J. Howe of Brainerd moved that the nomination of Mr. Clough be by acclamation and by a rising vote the convention agreed.

Mr. Clough returned thanks briefly and then the convention took up nominations for secretary of state, first limiting all nominating speeches to our minutes.

FOR SECRETARY OF STATE.

Warren J. Ives of McLeod was nominated by S. T. Henderson; H. E. Gibbons of Le Sueur was nominated by J. H. Rieger; George P. Johnson of Watonwan was nominated by Mr. McCallum; Capt. E. J. Osborne of Minneapolis by Mr. Peterson; Albert Berg of Chisago by R. C. Dunn, and W. E. Joubert of Big Stone by M. Crossfield.

Mr. Childs of Faribault rose amid cheers to nominate the Hon. F. P. Brown of Faribault, the present secretary of state. He claimed that the usual courtesy of renomination, which had been the custom since the state was organized, should be extended to Mr. Brown. It was at the close of Mr. Child's speech that the Hon. Knute Nelson was introduced.

With seven candidates in the field the convention proceeded to vote, and when the roll of counties had been called such a large number of changes were made that the chairman had to shut down upon them as the tellers were unable to keep tally and were becoming confused. The result of the first roll call was as follows:

Broun	329	Osborn	15
Ives	205	Gibbons	11
Berg	109	Johnson	20
Joubert	25

Whole number of votes cast, 705½.
Necessary to choice, 353.

Mr. Peterson of Hennepin then withdrew the name of Osborn, the chairman tersely remarking that it seemed an unnecessary formality.

The second roll call for secretary of state was called, and resulted in the nomination of F. P. Brown by the following vote:

Brown	387½	Gibbons	14
Ives	222	Johnson	7
Berg	72

Whole number of votes cast, 703.
Necessary to a choice, 352.

Mr. Johnson moved that Mr. Brown's nomination as secretary of state be made unanimous and the motion was carried and Mr. Brown was declared the nominee.

A motion was made to take a recess until 8:30 p. m., and it was declared carried.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was called to order at 9 o'clock, nominations for state treasurer being in order, Theodore Sander of Ramsey, Joseph Bobleter, Albert Scheffer and Julius Ackerman were placed in nomination. The result of the ballot was: Bobleter, 407; Ackerman, 210; Sander, 65; Scheffer, 34. Col. Bobleter's nomination was made unanimous.

ATTORNEY GENERAL.

H. W. Childs, Nathan Kingsley, William Hodgson, Willis F. Sawyer, were placed in nomination. Mr. Childs received a majority on the second ballot and his nomination was made unanimous.

SUPREME JUSTICES.

Ex-Gov. Yale moved that Justices of the Supreme Court Dickinson, Vanderburgh and Mitchell be renominated by this convention.

This brought out a long and spirited discussion, and being finally put to a vote resulted as follows:

To nominate the three judges—
Yes	437
No	188½
Whole number of votes cast	625½
Necessary to choice	313

Justices Vanderburgh, Dickinson and Mitchell were declared the nominees.

J. A. Tawney offered a resolution providing that the number of the state central committee appointed at large be seven. The motion was carried.

The convention adjourned at 1:30 a. m.

Hot Water Bathing.

In hygenic matters the Japanese have everywhere a habit which may have a lesson for us. In their nightly bath and morning wash the water is never cold, never warm, but always hot as can be borne. To foreigners this habit seems very surprising, but the most inveterate Englishman, if he stays in the country long enough, abandons his cold tub in its favor. The cold taking which it is suspected must follow is not found to occur if the water has been hot enough. This heat is maintained by a little furnace beneath the bath. In the bath the bather or bathers take a prolonged soaking, the washing proper being done on the bathroom floor; then follows a final soaking, drying with a towel and a lounge in a bathing wrapper. This habit seems to promote softness and suppleness of the skin and by persons inclined to rheumatism is soon found to be altogether preferable to the cold bath in every particular. The poorest of the Japanese hear of a cold bath with amazement and would be sure the man who used it must be a barbarian.—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

The House Barricaded and Guarded From the Interior by Armed Men.

Albert Lea, Minn., Special, Aug. 2.—Deputy Marshal Sheehan and a posse went out to evict the Austin family to-day, but failed. On arriving at the house it was found to be barricaded and guarded by armed men. A son of Austin came out to treat with the officers, but refused to open the house. No attempt was made to force open the door, as the parties inside were expected to train their guns upon them. Sheehan remained in the vicinity and will make another effort for possession of the property to-morrow. Austin, who shot James Davies of this place on the first attempt to evict him a week ago, is now in jail in St. Paul.

CRIMINAL LIBEL.

Such a Charge Preferred Against Two Fargo Editors.

Devils Lake, N. D., Special, Aug. 2.—Sheriff Waitness left to-day for Fargo with a warrant for the arrest of A. W. Edwards, editor, and H. C. Plumley, manager of the Fargo Forum. In the issue of that journal of July 30 appeared a telegram dated Devils Lake, reflecting on S. A. Nye, editor of the Devil's Lake Inter Ocean, and a young woman named Bertha Anderson, alleging their joint proprietorship in the operation of a blind pig. Mr. Nye at once swore out a warrant charging criminal libel, and Miss Anderson will do the same. The article drags in Senator Hansbrough's name and was inspired by the personal hatred of the senator's enemies. Much indignation has been caused here by the publication.

FARM HANDS WANTED.

Plenty of Work for Laborers, but Tramps Are Not Desired.

Huron, S. D., Special, Aug. 2.—The demand for harvest hands has induced an army of tramps to infest this locality. They forage off the country and beg food at private houses, sometimes in gangs of six to ten, but mostly in pairs. The police and sheriff have notified the people not to feed any more tramps, and when found in squads they are dispersed and ordered from the place. Most of them refuse to work, even when high wages are offered. Much petty thieving is going on. There is employment here for hundreds of honest laborers, but no quarters will be accorded professional tramps.

WORKERS NEEDED AT WAHPETON.

Wahpeton, N. D., Aug. 2.—The weather the past few days has been very favorable to the crops in this vicinity, and prospects are good. Farm hands are very scarce, and unless a large number arrive soon the supply will not be sufficient to handle the enormous crop. Better wages are being paid for farm laborers than have been paid for years. Farm hands will find plenty of work in this vicinity until the threshing is all done this fall.

CANNOT BE FOUND.

No Trace of the Lost Boy Near Long Prairie.

Long Prairie, Minn., Special, Aug. 2.—Yesterday this town turned out more than a hundred men to assist in the search for the lost child at Burnhamville, ten miles east of this place. More than three hundred men were engaged in the search, and yet not a trace of the boy has been found since he disappeared Thursday forenoon. The timber hereabouts abounds in wolves, polecats and bears. Tracks of the latter have been seen within half a mile of the town since the child disappeared. It is not believed, however, that the child has been devoured by wild animals, as no sign of its clothing has been discovered. The mother is almost insane, and it is feared her mind will entirely break down in a day or two more. All hope of finding the little one alive has been given up, but many men are out continuing the search. A number of gypsies were camped a few days in the vicinity of the house, and some think they carried the child away, as they broke camp the morning after the child disappeared.

Asked to Vacate.

Milwaukee, Aug. 2.—United States District Attorney Coleman to-day began proceedings against ex-Secretary of the Navy Whitney and Daniel Lamont, private secretary to ex-President Cleveland, to compel them to vacate certain government lands which they are alleged to have seized and used at Appleton, this state. Mr. Whitney is president and Mr. Lamont secretary and manager of the Manufacturer's Investment association, which is engaged in the manufacture of wood pulp on Fox river.

May Have a Standing.

Black River Falls, Wis., Special, Aug. 2.—All the men at work tearing down the iron furnace here were laid off to-day by reason of a telegram from the general manager, who is at Superior, authorizing it. It is thought that this may mean the retention of the furnace here.

Compelled to Steal.

Chicago, Special, Aug. 2.—Mrs. Mary Wise, a bride of six months, whose home was formerly in St. Paul, was arraigned to-day for stealing a watch from Miss Forest. She admitted the theft, but said her husband forced her to steal by threatening to kill her. He did not deny this charge, and the case was continued.

Still Among the Living.

Brown's Valley, Minn., Aug. 2.—The report that Gabriel Renville, the venerable chief of the Wahpeton and Sisseton Indians, is dead, is not true.

A Church at Rest Island.

Lake City, Minn., Special, Aug. 2.—John G. Woolley organized the Church of the Strangers at Rest Island yesterday with a membership of twenty-three. The corner stone of the church building will be laid next year.

The Charge on Which Cœur d'Alene Strikers Will Be Tried.

Wardner, Idaho, Special,—A new plan of legal procedure against the prisoners will commence at Wallace to-morrow. United States Commissioner Hoffman of Cœur d'Alene will open court there and issue warrants of arrest as the cases are brought before him. The report that the United States has decided the union a conspiracy is given color by some of the authorities. The charge of conspiracy will be entered against all union men, and a separate charge will be entered against those charged with complicity in the Mission affair.

The people of Cape Cod propose the most novel exhibit that will be taken to world's fair, nothing less than a live sperm whale, which they propose to place in a tank and tow through the canals, delivering their fish alive and a-lashing of his tail at the gates of the exposition. It detracts nothing from the novelty of the proposition that they have not yet caught the cetacean, but it is known that whatsoever the Yankee undertakes he accomplishes by some means. A marine battle in Lake Michigan between the Cape Cod exhibit and the sea serpent recently seen in those waters would gather quite a crowd.—Dispatch.

According to programme Knute Nelson was nominated by the Republican state convention for governor. The nomination was made possible by the worst gang of professional politicians the state of Minnesota has ever been afflicted with. Knute Nelson was selected solely because he was a Norwegian and they make no bones about openly stating that he is expected to secure Scandinavian votes from the other parties because he is a norwegian. This is an insult on the Scandinavian voters of the state and we believe they will resent it this fall in a manner that will make the gang and Nelson awful tired, Cholera continues to spread in the infected districts of Russia. The disease is carrying off its victims at the rate of hundreds per day in each of several places and the people have become demoralized, some of them rising in riot against the authorities because they know not which way to turn for relief. It is a terrible condition of things, especially in a country that has not yet recovered from the misery of a widely spread famine. And probably several weeks more will elapse before the disease has spent its force. It will not now die out until cold weather, when frost will kill off the germs.

Will a merchant who is wise, ever cease to advertise? Yes—when the trees grow upside down; when the beggar wears a crown; when ice forms on the sun; when gold dollars get too cheap; when the women secrets keep; when a fish forgets to swim; when Old Satan sings a hymn; when the girls go back on gum; when the small boy hates a drum when no politicians scheme: when mince pie makes pleasant dreams; when it's fun to break a tooth; when all lawyers tell the truth; when cold water makes you drunk; when you like to smell a skunk; when young people cease to wed; when the human race is dead; when the drummer has no brass—when these things all come to pass, then the man that's wise will neglect to advertise.—Ex.

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder.

Detroit Free Press: The Record says that the delegates at the republican county convention last Friday were "ready to enter upon an active campaign in this county of pure republicanism" Depend upon it, though, it will be a pretty slim campaign as far as the republicans are concerned. The wide-awake, progressive people who read and think for themselves, and vote according to the dictates of their own conscience and are opposed to bossism will be found voting the people's ticket this fall, and when the ides of November have passed and the handful of "pure"—God save the mark—republicans in Becker county have clawed their way out of the mountain of people's party votes they will wonder how it happened.

Ladies, now is your time to buy your silks, dress goods, etc., at actual cost. Ladies' Field & Thayer hand-turned guaranteed shoes, regular price, $3.50 now for $2.75. Remember the place is A. Chabot's, Crookston Minn. He is not going out of business but is preparing to move into his new quarters which will be ready by Sept. 1st.

S. M. Hoff received a carload of the finest twine in the market which he will sell at prices that can be beat by none.

Hall Bros. have received a large consignment of the celebrated Fish Bros. lumber wagons. Call and look them over.

MINNESOTA
STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS
AT
WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD
AND MOORHEAD,

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School, The Normal Department embraces:

(a) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades
(b) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades,
(c). A professional course for teachers who have completed the necessary academic course elsewhere.
(d) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at $2.75 per week.

The next school year opens at Winona and Mankato August 29 1892. St. Cloud and Moorhead September 1, 1892.

For free catalogues and circulars, giving full information, address the presidents as follows:

THE "PHONOPHORE TELEGRAPH."

A System That May Eventually Lower the Price of Telegraph Tolls.

To be told that a telegraph wire which is busily transmitting a long message can at the same time be made to convey half a dozen other messages in the opposite direction sounds like a fairy tale; but that the thing can be done, and is daily being done, is attested upon the most respectable scientific authority. The discovery which renders these astonishing results possible is due to Mr. C. Langdon-Davies, who has for some years been engaged in rendering it practically workable and adapting it alike to telephonic and telegraphic use.

It is difficult to convey to the lay mind an accurate comprehension of a process so exceedingly technical, but it may be briefly said that Mr. Langdon-Davies in the "phonophore" utilizes not the electric current, but the noises caused by induction. The signals are transmitted by a series of induced electric impulses, and the success of the system is found in the ability of the inductive force to pass through insulations which electric currents cannot penetrate. A wire may be blown down and in contact with the earth, yet, so long as it is not broken, it will carry a phonophoric message.

By means of the phonophore messages can be transmitted with extraordinary rapidity, and there is practically no limit to the number of telegrams that can be sent simultaneously upon the same wire. And, as we have hinted, Mr. Langdon-Davies' system is as useful telephonically as it is telegraphically. A wire which is conveying electric signals can at the same time be used for telephonic conversation without either the message or the conversation suffering in the least. For some considerable time past experiments in both directions have been proceeding, with most gratifying results, which are vouched for by such high authorities as Professor Sylvanus Thompson, Conrad Cooke and Latimer Clark.

Three of the principal railway companies have already adopted the phonophore, and it must be obvious, even to the unscientific mind, that phonophoric telegraphy and telephony, in so vastly increasing the electrician's power over the wires, has before it a very great future. The phonophore, indeed, increases almost to infinity the number of words that can be transmitted in a given time. It is obvious, therefore, that it offers great possibilities in the way of cheapening the cost of telegrams.

So long as the number of words that could be carried by a wire in an hour was rigidly limited it was hopeless to look for any substantial reduction in the cost of telegraphing, but the phonophore at once increases the capacity and the speed of every wire to which it may be fitted.—St. James' Gazette.

Arabs Call on the President.

A curious scene was presented at the White House today when Hassen Ben Ali, the World's fair commissioner from Morocco, was granted an audience with the president. The commissioner was dressed in his native costume, and carried with him letters and papers in Arabic from the sultan to the president. He was attended by his retinue of ten Arabs and a eunuch presented him by the sultan. Just before the cabinet met, the commissioner and his suite were shown into the library, where the president received them.

The Arabs formed a line, and as the president received the commissioner his retinue salaamed to the floor, the eunuch falling face downward, remaining on the ground. The president, through an interpreter, spoke to Hassan Ben Ali and welcomed him to America. When he shook hands on his leaving the Arabs again salaamed and moved toward the president, with eyes on the ground. The president held out his hand to say good-by, and they were so astonished at this greeting from the "sultan of America" they did not know what to do, but finally all grasped the extended hand, greatly pleased at the courtesy.

The eunuch, however, did not dare to do so, but merely salaamed as he passed out. Hassan Ben Ali and his suite were then shown through the private parlors of the White House. The Arabs were greatly astonished at the easy manner in which the "sultan of America," as they called the president, could be seen. "Where are his soldiers?" they asked. "We have to go through eleven gates before we can see our sultan, and pass many soldiers."—Cor. Baltimore American.

French Officials.

When Henry Labouchere was trying to get letters from Paris, during the siege, to London, he wrote:

"English government officials have before now been jeered at as men of routine, but the most ancient clerk in Somerset House is a man of wild impulse and boundless expedient compared with the average of functionaries, great and small, here.

"The want of 'shiftiness' is a national characteristic. The French are like a flock of sheep without shepherds or sheep dogs. Soldiers and civilians have no idea of anything except doing what they are ordered to do by some functionary. Let one wheel in an administration get out of order and everything goes wrong."

The Unlucky Opal.

The opal, fallen from its ancient splendor, is today called an unlucky stone even by those who laugh at old superstitions, but it once held a high rank among precious stones. The belief that it attracted misfortune was founded on a Russian legend which found its way into France. The Empress Eugenie had a horror of an opal. At sight of one in the Tuileries she manifested terror. That had the effect of lowering the price of the stone.—Paris Figaro.

After Ten Years of Absence.

A dead man come to life. At least that is the way it looks to his friends. More than ten years ago Robert A. Barton went to the west as a member of the Federal army, and after a year or two he was not heard from by his family in this city, which consisted of a mother sister and two brothers. A year or two ago the mother died, leaving a little property, an equity in a piece of real estate mortgaged to ex-Sheriff John M. Clark, who, after Mrs. Barton's death foreclosed the mortgage, and after paying his debts, there remained a substantial little sum for the heirs.

When a division was to be made of this surplus, Mr. Clark, who had known of the existence of the brother Robert, refused to pay over his share to the others, but paid the remainder, putting the rest away to await the order of the courts. After a time administration was taken out on Robert's estate by his brother, W. A. Barton, the Suffolk county probate court finding that Robert was dead, it being a presumption of law that if a man has not been heard from for seven years by those who would naturally hear from him, he is supposed to be dead.

The estate was not settled, however but was to have been, Mr. Clark agreeing to pay the money to the administrator, when, to the astonishment of everybody, Robert himself appeared on the scene, alive and well. He had not heard of his mother's death, and did not know that there was any money awaiting him in Boston, but simply came home to pay his friends a visit. Under the circumstances the administration proceedings go for nothing, and there is one less estate to be administered upon in the Suffolk county probate court.—Boston Journal.

An Iowa Girl's Vivid Imagination.

Freeport, Ia., furnishes a strange story of a young girl's imagination. A tramp some months ago happened along the road near the farm of Walter Halliwell, and while eating a dinner which had been given him by Mrs. Halliwell he noticed the little girl, Ada. She seemed to be afraid of him, and in a spirit of fun he told her that if she did not stop eyeing him so he would turn her into a rabbit, which was always afraid of everybody. This frightened the girl still more and her fear became so great that finally she fell in a convulsion, which nearly caused her death. When she recovered it was noticed that she had received a great shock and that her mind was impaired. She imagined that she was a rabbit and seemed afraid of every one, even the members of her own family.

She got so that she refused to talk and would shun every person who came near her. She would whimper and cry, and at last her case became so pitiable that her father determined to take her to Freeport for treatment. When seen at Dr. Crawford's office she exhibited every evidence of fear at the approach of every one, and her whole appearance showed that she was laboring under some great mental strain. Her eyes and face showed that she felt some change, and, while it may seem strange to say, they had the appearance of the eyes of a rabbit. There was that constant startled look in them as if she were hunted, and when a dog suddenly barked near the office she almost went into convulsions at the sound. The physicians say that she can possibly be cured, but it is very doubtful.—St Louis Republic.

It Rained Strange Eels.

Coalburg, a hamlet lying eight miles southeast of Birmingham, Ala., reports a curious shower a few nights since Toward evening the village seemed covered with a dense cloud, so black as to threaten a storm, but it was to be seen that there was neither wind nor heavy rain. This cloud continued to hover above the town until nearly 11 o'clock that night, when it began to shower lightly, and something in the sound of the rain striking the people as being strange they went out to see what was falling when it was found that the ground was covered with what was at first taken to be snakes, which caused great alarm, until several of the creatures were caught by more inquisitive or courageous spirits, when it was seen that they were young eels. The largest were nearly a foot in length, but the majority of them were only a few inches.

Old fishermen of the vicinity declare that the eels were of a species not to be found in this country except on the southern Pacific coast, though plentiful in Mexico and Central America. It appeared that there were none of the creatures to be found more than a few hundred feet beyond the limits of the hamlet, but witnesses declare that even within that limited circuit there must have fallen millions of them. The people have been much annoyed since by the heaps of dead eels, which render the town almost uninhabitable, but the farmers are using them as a fertilizer.—Cor. Philadelphia Times.

A Cheap Way to Fatten Up a Toad.

There is on exhibition at the drug store of Dr. Bruce a monster toad. It is as large as a man's two fists. About four years ago, while workmen were laying a stone sidewalk in front of the residence of William L. Brady, of this place, one of the workmen noticed a toad about the size of a walnut hop out of the excavation, and, with the remark that he would consign it to an eternal grave, he placed it in a little pile of sand, and, laying a great stone flag upon it, never gave it another thought.

A year after this particular stone began to show signs of decay, and finally cracked clean across. The crack began to widen, until a few days ago an aperture was made and out jumped a live toad. It was found to be of monster size, and was placed on exhibition.—Beaver Falls Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

How's This for a Mountain Trout?

The largest mountain trout ever caught in the United States was caught at Twin lakes and has been brought to Leadville for exhibition. It was landed by Lyman Hayden, and is 26¼ inches long and seven inches thick.—Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Leading Question.

"Yaas," said Cholly Chuggins, "I believe in a man's having one idea in life, you know."

"Do you, really," rejoined Miss Belle Pepperton. "And when do you expect to have yours?"—Washington Star.

Question of Finance.

Hobbs—I suppose you will pass the summer with your fiancee at the seashore, won't you?

Dobbs—I shall if I can marry her at the end of the first week.—Life.

A picture of health—the woman who has faithfully used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She feels well and she looks so. It's a medicine that makes her well, whether she's overworked and "run-down," or afflicted with any of the distressing diseases and disorders peculiar to her sex. It builds up—and it cures. For all chronic weaknesses, functional derangements, and "female complaints" of every kind, it's an unfailing remedy.

And it's the only one, among medicines for women, that's guaranteed. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in any case, you have your money back.

Can anything else be "just as good?"

"They're about as bad as the disease!" Not all of them, though. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are pleasant—both when they're taken and when they act. They cure permanently Sick and Nervous Headaches, Biliousness, Costiveness, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels.

"German Syrup"

Just a bad cold, and a hacking cough. We all suffer that way sometimes. How to get rid of them is the study. Listen—"I am a Ranchman and Stock Raiser. My life is rough and exposed. I meet all weathers in the Colorado mountains. I sometimes take colds. Often they are severe. I have used German Syrup five years for these. A few doses will cure them at any stage. The last one I had was stopped in 24 hours. It is infallible." James A. Lee, Jefferson, Col. ①

CORNY O'TOOLE.

He Captured the Colonel and Took Him to the Union Men.

When the Union troops retreated across the Rappahannock after the battle of Fredericksburg, among those left lying on the field was one Corny O'Toole.

He was not wounded, nor was he even stunned, but he lingered behind till it was too late, and, fearing he would be taken prisoner, with his ready Irish wit, he decided to lie down among the killed and wounded, hoping to find his way back to camp when night came on.

He had just stretched himself in a comfortable position when several of the enemy carrying stretchers came up.

"Here's Col. Bunting!" exclaimed one; as they stopped to examine a Confederate officer lying near Corny's feet.

The surgeon knelt by his side to examine the wound, which was near his heart.

The Colonel in command was a short, fat man about 40 years of age, and to bend over comfortably he had to rest his elbows on his kees. He stood with his back to Corny when he opened his eyes. Seeing the little fat Colonel, Corny drew up both legs till his knees almost touched his chin, and then with full force he sent his feet straight against the Colonel.

Out shot the Colonel, knocking down three of the soldiers in his hurried flight and grazing the surgeon's bald head with his boot as he rolled over on the ground.

When they recovered themselves, they seemed inclined to run, thinking they had suddenly been set upon by the enemy from some unseen quarter.

"Wha—what was it?" asked the Colonel, not yet realizing what struck him.

"I wish you'd notify me beforehand the next time you want to try to kick in my head," mumbled the surgeon, applying plasters to his crown.

"I reckon somebody gave you a kick, Colonel," ventured one of the privates, doing his best to keep from laughing in his superior's face.

"Ha, ha!" now came from the ground, and, looking around, they found Corny, his eyes still closed, but a huge grin in his face.

Finding himself discovered, he broke into a loud laugh, in which he was joined by the whole party—all but the Colonel.

Taking charge of the prisoner, the Colonel started off, ordering the rest to follow.

In a small strip of woods near the Rappahannock, Corny and his captor, through some means, became separated from the rest.

Corny, watching his opportunity, suddenly threw his arms around the Colonel, pinning them to his sides.

He then dragged him down to the river and both were ferried across by some Union soldiers, who were on the lookout.

Corny told his story, produced his prisoner as proof and received as a reward his corporal's stripes.—N. Y. Recorder.

Preparing for Interesting Times.

LONDON, Special—After a cabinet council to-day Mr. Balfour, the government leader in the house of commons, went to Osborne house, Isle of Wight, where the queen is at present sojourning, to consult with her majesty with reference to the speech from the throne to be presented at the opening of parliament Aug. 4. Mr. Gladstone held a conference to-day with Sir William Vernon Harcourt, Earl Spencer and Mr. Morley. At this meeting a short motion declaring that the house of commons had no confidence in the government was drafted which will be presented upon the opening of parliament.

A MAN-EATING LEOPARD.

He Destroyed 154 People Before He Was Brought Down.

The Calcutta Englishman contains a blood-curdling account of the doings of a man-eating leopard lately shot in the Rajshahi district, in Bengal. The monster had destroyed 154 persons before he was brought down. His appetite for flesh, his ferocity, his cunning and his audacity were unexampled in the leopard tribe, and they would have done credit to a tiger. He depopulated whole vilages, for the mere terror of his name sent the inhabitants flying as soon as he had seized a solitary victim in their midst.

For miles around the people never ventured to leave their houses after nightfall until they heard he was dead, but this was no great hindrance to him. He would seize them from the verandas when they were smoking the evening pipe, and sometimes he penetrated the very houses in the dead of night and carried away children—often without giving the slightest alarm to other inmates.

As a rule, he killed only one person at a time; but sometimes he killed two and on one occasion he killed three in one day. Children and old women were his favorite food. Among his victims there were but six men. He was impelled by a sheer hankering for human flesh, for he never touched the cattle.

The villagers began to think the scourge was a demon incarnate, and it was impossible to organize them for the pursuit. At length some twenty elephants were brought together for an expedition, and a flying column of British planters set forth in quest of the destroyer. They searched for some time in vain, until an old man whose wife had been eaten, came to report that their quarry had taken refuge in a tamarind tree.

It was as he had stated, only the man-eater had by this time hidden himself in the jungle at the foot of the tree and for the moment could not be found. The place was surrounded, and the elephants advanced in close order to trample the fugitive out of his hiding place. This manoeuvre succeeded after frequent repetitions; the beast was driven out of cover and at once riddled with balls. He will become a legend in the district, and perhaps a deity.

Ice Cream for Medicinal Purposes.

The value of ice cream as a remedy for certain intestinal troubles is being advanced. Some, indeed most, physicians permit it through typhoid fever, always insisting it shall be of the purest make. To the story recently going the rounds in print of the entire cure of a case of ulcer of the stomach by the sole and persistent use of ice cream may be added that of a woman. She suffered from a serious affection of the eyes directly traceable to digestive disturbance and her physician finally put her upon ice cream as a sole diet. For eleven months she literally lived on ice cream with the result to effect a complete and apparently permanent cure. The theory is that the cream furnishes ample nourishment while the diseased intestines chilled from the low temperature of the food, are prevented from getting up inflammation during the proceeds of digestion carried on by the healthy parts.—Exchange.

Children Suffocated.

BEDFORD, Mass., Special—A search for four missing children to-day resulted in finding them in a closet under a sink in a house in process of construction, where they had crawled some time during the day. The door was pulled to by them or shut in some other way, snapping the catch and making them prisoners. Three of them, all boys, died from suffocation, and the other, a girl, was slowly sinking.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

King of Medicines

Is what I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it has been such a great blessing to me. For six years I was confined to my bed with white swellings and scrofula sores, suffering greatly all the time. Several times pieces of bone worked out of the sores. Physicians did not help me and I became discouraged. Reading of cures in cases similar to mine by Hood's Sarsaparilla, I decided to try it. To my great joy, when I began with

She Meant to have Music.

A stage heroine, who happened at the same time to be an able executant on the piano, had to play after night the same part at a popular theatre. She anxiously longed to give the audience a specimen of her musical abilities, but her part in the performance afforded no apportunity for such a display of her powers.

Her inventive genius came to the rescue, and she discovered a place in the action where pianist and heroine might go hand in hand. When the curtain rose, revealing the desert of Black Mountains, the spectators beheld, to their astonishment, a splendid grand piano placed at the foot of the rocks.

The heroine, with the haste of one who is pursued, climbed down the rocky path, stopped enraptured at the sight of the piano, and exclaimed:—

"The savages have burned down our cottage, murdered my father and mother, and driven away our cattle; but, heaven be praised, they have left me my piano. Music shall comfort me in my distress, and if the ladies and gentlemen permit I will play a short selection."

Franklin's Trick.

Franklin wrote the following letter to a man to whom he was lending some money: I send you herewith a bill for ten louisd'ors; I do not pretend to give such a sum, I only lend it to you. When you shall return to your country, you cannot fail of getting into some kind of business, that will in time enable you to pay all your debts. In that case, when you meet with an honest man in similar distress, you muse pay me by lending this some to him, enjoining him to discharge the debt in a like operation when he shall be able, and shall meet with another opportunity. I hope it man then go through many hands, before it meets with a knave to stop its progress. This is a trick of mine for doing a deal of good with little money."

At the Grocer's.

"Give me half a pound of tea, please."

"Black or green, Miss?"

"Oh! it's all the same; the missus is blind."

Good for Evil.

A prominent lawyer relates to a correspondent of the New York Sun that many years ago, while he was attorney-general of Missouri, he happened to be in Governor Stewart's office when a convict was brought in from the penitentiary to receive a pardon at the governor's hands. The convict was a "steamboat man," a large, powerful fellow, with the rough manners of his class.

The governor looked at the man and seemed strangely affected, scrutinizing him long and closely. Then he signed the document which restored him to liberty, but before handing it to him, he said:

"You will commit some other crime, I fear, and soon be back in the penitentiary."

The man protested solemnly that such a thing should never happen. The governor looked doubtful, and after a few moments said:

"You will go back on the river and be a mate again, I suppose?"

The man said yes, that was his intention.

"Well, I want you to promise me one thing," continued the governor. "I want you to pledge me your word that when you are a mate again you will never take a billet of wood and drive a poor sick boy out of his bunk to help you load your boat on a stormy night."

The man answered that he never would, but seemed surprised and inquired why the governor requested such a pledge.

"Because," answered Governor Stewart, "some day that boy may become governor, and you may want him to pardon you for some crime.

"One black, stormy night, many years ago, you stopped your boat on the Mississippi river to take on a load of wood. There was a boy on board working his passage from New Orleans to St. Louis, but he was very sick of a fever, and was lying in his bunk. You had men enough to do the work, but you went to that boy with a stick of wood in your hand, drove him on deck with blows and curses, and kept him toiling like a slave till the load was completed.

"I was that boy. Here is your pardon. Never again be guilty of so brutal an act."

Bridgeport's Ill-Fated Suicide Club.

The Suicide club, of Bridgeport, formed five years ago in fun rather than in earnest, has been reduced to only one member by a remarkable faithfulness in carrying out the condition that one member of the club a year should commit suicide. When the annual meeting was held in January there were only two members to attend it; the secretary and the president. The former, Wendell Baum, committed suicide a few weeks ago in New York, and now the president alone remains. It was voted at this meeting by the secretary that the president should make away with himself during the year, and by the president that the secretary do so, and, there being no better way to settle it, it was mutually decided that the polls be held open until a new member was pledged and initated.

A letter carrier named Mayby talked seriously of becoming a member, and the president and secretary had great hopes of him until one morning it was learned that he had committed suicide. He carried, however, a handsome silk umbrella, which he bequeathed to the secretary of the club, Wendell Baum, and it was accepted. But the more Baum carried the umbrella the more unhappy he became, and when his friends tried to cheer him up he said: "A cloud hangs over me; I am doomed." Finally he sold his property, turned the money over to his wife, and, going to New York, gave the umbrella into the charge of a friend, directing that it be sent to the president of the club. He then cut his throat. Since then the umbrella has been uncalled for and the president of the Suicide club will probably disband.—Springfield Republican.

Prehistoric America.

Facts bearing upon the prehistoric condition of America are rapidly accumulating, which prove an antiquity of the human race on this continent equal to, if not exceeding, that assigned to man in the Old World. Implements have been found in various parts of the United States the age of which is estimated by different authorities at from 7,000 to a hundred thousand years. A finely wrought miniature image was recently brought to light in boring for an artesian well at Nampa, Ada Co., Idaho. It was taken from the eleventh distinct geological stratum pierced by the boring close to the twelfth stratum, which is of sandstone. It is apparently modelled from stiff clay, and if baked at all in the fire, had been subjected to only a low degree of heat. The bearing of this discovery is of great importance. If we are compelled to ascribe to the image such antiquity as its geological situation indicates, it will go far to relieve the Calaveras skull of the obloquy which has rested upon it on account of its advanced stage of development; for certainly the brain that could have modelled so perfect a form as this must have been far removed from that of the ape-like progenitor supposed by Darwin to be the common ancestor of us all.

A Cruel "Call."

From the Boston Globe.

A short time ago a Buffalo bank cashier married a lady who is a physician. The couple had scarcely returned to the bride's home, when there was a vigorous pull at the door-bell, followed by a summons for the doctress to visit a patient. "Business before pleasure," thought the brand-new wife, and, hastily excusing herself, went to alleviate pain. It took her six hours, distance and all. In the meantime the groom had to entertain the guests.

Nurses Instead of Missionaries.

Miss Collins, a Maine girl who has been out among the Dakotas as a missionary, says the way to civilize the Indians is by nurses rather than by preachers and teachers. Instructions in the care of the sick, the nature of disease and the proper use of medicine releases them from the influence of the "medicine man." It is these who, working on the superstitious minds of the Indians, are the greatest obstacles to their civilization. The Indians have been peculiarly susceptible to epidemic diseases, which have created greater ravages than war and privation combind. Miss Collins instances an epidemic of measles in which cleanliness and nursing saved every life but that of a child whose grandmother was a medicine woman. When the influence of the medicine man is gone as a healer of the body he has lost his power as a spiritual director and the Indian's mind is open to the words of the Christian teacher and preacher.—N. Y. Sun.

ARGUMENT. THE AMERICAN PUBLISHING COMPANY, of Jersey City, N. J., have undertaken to guarantee to their Advertising patrons a total circulation for their various papers of not less than ONE MILLION. This means an addition of 500,000 to our present lists. It has been said that to secure a half million new subscribers in six months is a business impossibility. This is probably true by ordinary or common methods, but NOT TRUE when the effort is associated with the kind of enterprise that appears in this prospectus. Five hundred thousand new subscribers will mean to us more than $750,000 of advertising revenue during the next five years. We can afford to pay for them at least half their value to us. We are willing to do even more than this, if necessary, and to that end have originated the fairest and most stupendous plan of distributing Cash Premiums or Rewards of Merit among new subscribers that the world has ever known. The plan or method is in conflict with no law against lotteries or schemes of chance. It involves nothing that is illegal or immoral; it places a premium on brains; it is, in short, the very essence of what is commendable, honest, liberal and attractive.

CASH FOR BRAINS

Explanation. Each dash appearing in the partially spelled words indicates the absence of a certain letter, and when the proper letters are supplied the original word selected to form each Riddle will be found complete. EXAMPLE: H-r-e, something every farmer should possess. In this case the omitted letters are o and s, and when properly inserted the completed word is HORSE.

REWARDS paid in cash the VERY DAY any answer is found to be correct.
Each answer will be numbered as received, to be examined in the order of its number, and when found correct a New York Certified Bank Check for the full amount of whatever reward such correct answer secures will be sent the VERY DAY the award is made.

REMEMBER If you only solve one word you will receive $20 in Cash; you are not confined to any particular word—any one of the entire ten will bring you a $20 cash reward—while if you are bright enough to solve more than one your reward will be increased in proportion from $50 to $250. Also remember that you do not have to be first, or last with your answer. EVERY correct answer for even a single word wins a splendid cash reward.

The Only Condition.

The object of this extraordinary offer is, of course, to secure Subscribers at once and in large numbers. We therefore require that 50 cents for a year's subscription to some one of our papers shall be remitted with every answer. We publish four great papers, The American Fireside, The American Homestead, The American Household Journal, and The American Cottage Home. Name your choice of any one of the four—they are all the same price, 50c. a year. If you send answers to more than one word you must send a separate name and 50c. for every word you answer. Thus, if you send answers to two words, send an extra name besides your own and $1, and so on—one name and 50c. for a year's subscription for each word you answer. The total amount of cash rewards that you receive for correct answers can be divided pro rata among the list, or you can keep it all, just as you arrange between yourself and those whose names you send. In every case we will pay the full amount of the reward for correct answers to the person who sends the names.

Don't send answers without subscriptions—they will receive no attention and cannot possibly win a reward even if correct.

Protection. As a means to guard against even an appearance of irregularity or collusion, a copy of the original ten words selected to make up the above Word-Riddles is deposited with Mr. C. P. SMITH, Superintendent of the Jersey City Police Department, under seal, to be opened December 31, 1892, in the presence of witnesses, after this contest closes. The complete list will be printed in full in the January issues of our four papers, so that all who have not received rewards for correct answers will know wherein they failed. This method of protection is due to all concerned, and absolutely prevents everything that is not wholly honest and fair to every subscriber.

DESIGNATE THE WORDS YOU ANSWER BY THEIR NUMBERS, and be wise and send your answer at once.

Address all letters and make all remittances payable to the Treasurer of the American Publishing Co., as follows:

Ex-President Adams, of Cornell university, has accepted the presidency of the University of Wisconsin.

Mrs. Ernestine Rose, well known as a woman's advocate in America, is dead at Brighton, Eng.

William Reese, the oldest iron worker in the United States, died at his home at Bolivar, Pa., aged 101 years.

Edgar Snowden, for many years an editor of the Alexandria (D. C.) Gazette and a grandson of the founder of that ancient paper, died in Washington.

Alexander K. Craig, a Democratic member of congress from the Twenty-fourth district of Pennsylvania, died at his home in Clairsville. He has long been in delicate health.

The death is announced at Germantown, Pa., of Mrs. Caroline Hyde Butler Laing, the authoress, after a lingering illness. For many years she lived in Rome, where he wrote a child's history of that city under the title of "Heroes of the Seven Hills."

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Much grain is reported destroyed by a hail storm in Northwestern Minnesota.

A man named Goodness was run over by a freight train at Glenwood, Wis., and died of his injuries.

The National Oil mills, machinery and three cattle cars were burned at Paris, Tex., recently. Total loss $250,000. The mill has not been operated for several years.

Wisconsin has a little earthquake.

The fish tug C. A. Augur picked up in Lake Michigan forty miles from Grand Haven, Mich., a small pleasure yacht which was sinking. A spar was broken and the rudder gone. The five occupants were nearly starved, having been drifting for two days.

Mrs. Charles Heouff was starting a fire at Creston, Iowa, with coal oil when the can exploded, resulting in the death of the mother and a seven-year-old daughter. The father is thought to be fatally burned. The house and contents were consumed.

Fire broke out on the third floor of Whitler, Fuller, & Co's store on Front street, Portland, Or., and in an hour the whole block was destroyed. The loss may reach half a million dollars. The building is owned by United States Senator Dolph and D. P. Thompson.

An exploding carboy of naphtha set fire to the Jayne Chemical Works at Frankfort, a suburb of Philadelphia. The following employes were nearest to the explosion and were injured by shock and the scattering of the burning fluid. Thomas F. Lynch, Thomas Reach, Charles McNear, William C. Deal, Richard G. Randerville. Their injuries may prove fatal.

SINS AND SINNERS.

The American Bar association has had struck off at the Philadelphia mint two gold medals, each containing $100 worth of pure gold; which will be presented to David Dudley Field and Sir Roundel Palmer Earl, of the English bar, for distinguished services in the advancement of the science of jurisprudence.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Bismarck visits Jena, where he receives an ovation and makes a significant speech.

A general European epidemic of cholera is prophesied by German physicians.

In a riot in Russia growing out of the cholera epidemic sixty people are killed and hundreds wounded by troops.

Canada will take no action in the canal tolls difficulty till President Harrison issues his proclamation.

A secret national Polish printing press has been discovered in Warsaw. Three hundred arrests have been made in connection with the discovery.

Queen Victoria is expected to impede home rule. The duke of Devonshire tells her that she will either have to call upon Gladstone to form a ministry or abdicate.

The London News says it understands the government will object to Michael Davitt's taking a seat in the house of commons on the ground that he has not completed the full term of a sentence on a criminal charge. Objections on this score, the News adds, are invalid.

Advices from the gold coast say that the British have installed a new king in Eastern Cracow, abolished human sacrifices and other fetish rites, and expelled all the priests and priestesses. The new order of things has caused great rejoicing among the natives.

The London Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent says: "Although no official report has been made of cholera cases in Moscow, I am informed that the disease is spreading there, and serious fears are entertained that there will be an outbreak of disorder. The anger of the populace is chiefly directed against the governor, Grand Duke Sergius, who is very unpopular."

The attempt made to assassinate Count Okuno, the leader of the Progressist party, and Viscount Kono Takano, the Japanese minister of justice, is supposed to have been instigated by radical conspirators. It seems that suspicious looking packages were sent to the residence of Count Okuno and the minister, which, upon being carefully opened, were found to contain explosives.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

The campaign in Maine will be opened by the Republicans on the 17th inst., and ex-Secretary Blaine will take the stump.

Congressman Allan C. Durburow has been renominated by the third Illinois district Democratic convention.

The Fourteenth Missouri district Democrats have renominated Marshall Arnold for congress.

THE TOILERS.

Following the shutting down of the big Champion mine, the American, six miles west of Ishpeming, Mich., has suspended operations, throwing out of employment 100 men. Other mines, it is said, will follow suit, as they cannot sell ore at the present cost of mining.

One hundred bakers in two shops of the American Biscuit company struck at Chicago. The men do not complain of their wages or hours of labor, but demand that none but union men be employed, and that union label must be attached to the bread, a demand that the company does not think reasonable.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

C. Emmett Seery has joined the New Orleans team of the Southern league.

The California Athletic club has matched Sol L. Y. Smith, of Los Angeles, and Johnny Van Heest, of Cincinnati, for a fight at 115 pounds in September.

Manager Powers, of the New York club, never believed in a "slugging" team, maintaining that a lively fielding and a fast base running team played a more interesting game, and would win in the end.

George Taylor, of the Manhattan Athletic Club of New York, who made a mile on Hampden Park in 2:14 1-5, lowering the record of Willie Windle at 2:15, made another wonderful ride, cutting the world's record down to 2:11. The start was made from a standstill.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The Government of Mexico will exhibit at the World's Fair a large and valuable collection of Aztec relics.

Handsomely framed, large photographic views of the prominent features of the numerous seaside resorts of New Jersey will be shown in the exhibit of that state at the World's Fair.

The women of New York State will furnish and decorate the library room in the Woman's building at the World's Fair. Plans are perfected to make the furnishings very elaborate and tasteful. The room will contain as complete a collection as is possible to gather of works written by women.

The California State World's Fair board has given permission to Miss Ray Beveridge, of San Francisco, to set up and operate a miniature blacksmith's forge in the California building. Miss Beverage is a neice of Ex-Governor John L. Beveridge, of Illinois, and is said to be an expert at the anvil.

The World's Fair commission of New South Wales has decided to send to Chicago for exhibition in the Horticultural department of the Exposition the following typical representatives of Australian vegetation and flora: Tree ferns, staghorn ferns, bird's-nest ferns, todea ferns, macrozamias of two distinct kinds, gigantic lilies, rock lilies and grass trees.

Michigan is one of the most enthusiastic of the states in the preparation of its World's Fair exhibit. The state's appropriation is $100,000, but it is authoritatively announced, that the total sum contributed toward making an exhibit by the state, countries, cities and private individuals, will reach fully $500,000.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

A deal involving traffic arrangements on the Pacific coast is reported under way between the Great Northern and Union Pacific.

Chairman Caldwell, of the Western Passenger association, has named A. J. Smith, of the Lake Shore road, as his choice for arbitrator in the appeal of the Atchison from his ruling, in the Denver rate matter.

The celebrated case of the United States against the trans-Missouri association was closed at Cheyenne, Wyo., after a three day's hard legal debate before Judge Ringer. While the decision will not be rendered before October, the prevailing opinion is that the United States loses in the fight.

GENERAL.

The Standard Oil company refuses to pay Minnesota inspection fees.

A lease is taken on a portion of the Mesaba Iron company's property by the Oliver Iron and Steel company, Pittsburg.

It is said that United States troops will remain at Warden, Idaho, for an indefinite period, and the United States commissioner has warrants for the arrest of 500 men, and it is expected that there will be some trouble when the arrests are made. Gen. Carton has arrived from Fort Sherman.

Harry Deakin has arrived in San Francisco from Japan, direct, bringing with him the manuscript of a new play written by Sir Edwin Arnold and christened "Adsuma, or the Japanese Wife." The play is to be produced with Oriental splendor at Chicago during the world's fair.

The published statement is made at San Francisco, that the British cruiser Champion returned to Honolulu July 25 after having annexed Johnston island to the possessions of Great Britian, but no official advice have been received here to that effect. The state department at Washington has decided that Johnston island appertains to the United States by reason of the visit of the ship Palestine July 22, 1858, while in the service of the Pacific Guano company, which left men in actual occupation on the island.

BY THE DEMOCRATS.

The State Democratic Convention Meets and Nominates a State Ticket.

Daniel W. Lawler of St. Paul Chosen to Lead the Democratic Forces.

THE TICKET.

For Governor—D. W. Lawler of Ramsey.

For Lieut. Governor—Harry Hawkins of Scott.

For Secretary of State—Peter Nelson of Goodhue.

For State Treasurer—Joseph Leicht of Winona.

For Attorney General—J. C. Nethaway of Washington.

For Justices of the Supreme Court—William Mitchell of Winona, Daniel Buck of Mankato, Thomas Canty of Hennepin.

For Presidential Electors—R. A. Smith, B. F. Nelson, D. R. P. Hibbs, A. L. Sackett, D. N. Jones, J. T. Barron, J. C. Oswald, William Quinn, Martin Shea.

The state Democratic convention was called to order at Minneapolis on the 3rd inst., at 12:30 o'clock by chairman Campbell. Rev. W. Wilkinson opened proceedings with prayer.

Mr. Campbell, in behalf of the state central committee presented the name of Alfred Jaques, of Duluth for temporary chairman to which the convention agreed.

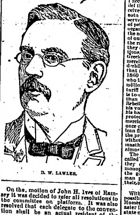
Chairman Jaques in accepting the nomination said he esteemed it no mean honor to preside over such a gathering. He apologized for his youth and inexperience, and asked the convention to excuse any mistakes he might make, as they would be due to faulty judgment rather than to bad intention and unfairness. He said:

Every day brings evidence that the five years' educational campaign we have had has wrought wonders in the interests of the cause of tariff reform and has brought forth good fruit. To-day the farmers of this state are asking themselves the question if it is just or expedient that they should be compelled to purchase everything in a market of high prices and limited competition and sell their produce in a market where they have world-wide competition. The wage earners have learned that a protective tariff is a fraud and a delusion as far as they are concerned, and people in general are inquiring whether it is just and popular with a free people that a few should become rich by law.

The chairman concluded by applying more flattering epithets to the young and hoped he would see no factions in the Democratic party of Minnesota this fall.

The chairman then announced the selection of John A. Johnson of St. Peter as temporary chairman and B. J. Mullaney of Minneapolis as assistant.

It was then decided to empower the chairman to name committees on credentials, permanent organization and platform on the basis of one member from each judicial district and five at large.



D. W. LAWLER.

On the motion of John H. Ives of Ramsey it was decided to refer all resolutions to the committee on platform. It was also resolved that each delegate to the convention shall be an actual resident of the county he claims to represent. A recess of ten minutes was then taken, after which the chairman announced the following committees:

THE COMMITTEES.

On Credentials—First district, J. C. Gerharty; Second district, A. E. Boysen; Third district, C. von Kampen; Fourth district, Martin King; Fifth district, D. E. Darby; Sixth district, Charles Andrews; Seventh district, J. H. Sheets; Eighth district, John Sheery; Ninth district, Tim O'Connor; Tenth district, Thomas Blocklin; Eleventh district, A. Woodward; Twelfth district, D. O'Brien; Thirteenth district, S. B. Crane; Fourteenth district, James E. Morrissey; Fifteenth district, C. D. Johnson; Sixteenth district, Charles Cater. At large—R. O. Craig, P. J. Hammerel, J. J. Rider, P. P. Fitzpatrick, T. F. O'Hara.

On Platform—First district, E. W. Durant; Second district, W. F. Goehr; Third district, W. J. Whipple; Fourth district, M. A. O'Hair; Fifth district; G. F. Baxter; Sixth district, J. C. Wise; Seventh district, D. F. Calhoun; Eighth district, W. C. O'Dell; Ninth district, E. P. Bertrand; Tenth district, H. R. Wells; Eleventh district, F. N. Sullivan; Twelfth district, S. W. Leavitt; Thirteenth district, A. D. Laduc; Fourteenth district, W. S Kelso; Fifteenth district, W. Hempstead; Sixteenth district, Dr. Bart Robertson; at large, Lewis Baker, S. A. Chaliman, F. C. Brooks, William M. Campbell, M. S. Wilkinson.

On Permanent Organization—First district, C. L. Davis; Second, F. W. McCutcheon; Third, John McGovern; Fourth, Titus Mareck; Fifth, A. LaDuc; Sixth, J. J. Thornton; Seventh, J. L. Baxter; Eighth, B. F. Pierce; Ninth, Fred Gley; Tenth, J. M. Larabee; Eleventh, C. P. McGinnis; Twelfth, C. W. Stouton; Thirteenth, C. P. Shepherd; Fourteenth, J. P. Holmes; Fifteenth, J. W. Hawkins; Sixteenth, M. P. Finnegan. At large, P. B. Winston, Y. E. Boden, H. C. Stivers, J. W. Craven, Joseph Leicht.

The convention then adjourned until 3 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The convention reconvened at 3:30 p. m. The committee on credentials presented their report which was adopted.

In the matter of the selection of presidential electors, it was decided to allow each congressional district to select its own elector and the convention to select two at large.

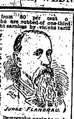
THE NOMINATIONS.

A motion to proceed to the nomination of candidates for governor was, after considerable opposition, carried.

The roll of counties was ordered called for the purpose of making nominations, and Aitkin, the first on the list, gave way to Ramsey amid cheers, and Judge C. E. Flandrau of St. Paul ascended the platform, but before he could make the speech nominating Daniel W. Lawler he was compelled to wait for Hennepin. The Hennepin delegates asked leave to retire for the purpose of conferring. They departed amid hisses and returned with changed hearts amid cheers.

Judge Flandrau then proceeded as follows:

I rise to perform a duty, which to me is a gratifying privilege. What I have to say relates to matters of serious import to the American people. This is no time to cover up the iniquities of party corruption and legislative frauds with rhetorical flourishes and insincere mouthings. We are more concerned with stern realities. The music that greets the ears of the American people to-day is the outbursts of indignation from '80 per cent of our population who are robbed of one-third of their sweat bought earnings by vicious tariff legislation. They demand reform. They know that they occupy the most productive country on the face of the planet. They know that they are industrious, moral and intelligent, and yet they feel that they are handicapped in all their efforts to gain a reasonable livelihood. They demand an explanation of the difficulties which environ them.



JUDGE FLANDRAU.

It is the duty and the mission of the Democratic party to make the road clear to them by intelligent discussion of existing troubles, and by thorough reformation in tariff legislation should the power to do so be bestowed upon us. The national campaign is fairly inaugurated, and will be fought out on the lines of protection to the few and the rich at the expense of the many and the poor on the one side and a tariff for revenue only—for the necessities of government—on the other, together with the question of whether our national elections are to remain to the people, free and unrestricted, or to be controlled by federal bayonets. This state election in Minnesota for as the state goes on local issues so will it on national issues, and it becomes our duty to exert every force at our disposal that may lead us to victory.

How are we to combat these evils that afflict our people? By what means are we to equip and place in the field an army that will lead us to victory? I answer, by choosing generals of high intelligence, great enthusiasm, keen sincerity in the advocacy of our doctrines, of youth, vigor and strength, men who possess the power of virile eloquence that carries conviction in its utterances, men who can stand before the people with the assured position of honorable consistency in the principles they enforce. This and this only is the road to victory in the coming struggle.

To insure this glorious result I nominate Dan W. Lawler of Ramsey county for the position of governor of the State of Minnesota, and I rejoice in the assertion that he possesses all the qualifications for such leadership. All of you have known Mr. Lawler for years, and when you know him as I do you will agree with me that he is the man among men for our leader. There isn't a more eloquent, a more prudent, and more democratic man in the whole commonwealth than Dan Lawler.

When the cheers died away after Judge Flandrau retired there were loud calls for Cyrus Wellington of Ramsey, and in response he made a fiery speech seconding the nomination of Mr. Lawler.

The nomination was also seconded by D. B. Johnson of Hennepin.

P. B. Winston, of Minneapolis, moved the suspension of the rules and the making of the nomination by acclamation, which was carried.

On the motion of Mr. Thornton a committee of three, consisting of Winston of Hennepin, Leavitt of Meeker, and Thornton of Watonwan, was appointed to escort the nominee to the platform. The band commenced to play, and before it ceased Mr. Lawler had entered the hall and stood on the platform bowing to the cheering crowd. When silence was restored Mr. Lawler spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention: Your committee has informed me that this convention has placed me in nomination for the high office of governor. I earnestly and sincerely hoped that this great honor and responsibility might be conferred upon some older man [cries of No! No!]. But bowing in submission to the will of the Democracy of Minnesota, I accept the nomination. I accept it in the belief that the state and national tickets will receive the endorsement of the people of Minnesota in November. The Democratic party deserves that much at the hands of the hundreds of private citizens of this state, because it is the organization which expresses in its principles the noblest aspirations of the American people of our day. I have no word to utter against the rank and file of the Republican party, for they are Americans and honest in their convictions, but the party of 1860, the party of Greeley of Lincoln, Chase and Sumner is our day merely the political machine of Gould, of Vanderbilt and of Andrew Carnegie. The party that marched to the aid of the black slave in 1860 is to-day in the hands of a ring of men who lay their whips on the backs of sixty-five million free American citizens. A protective tariff which the people generously granted in 1860 is to-day in a time of profound peace higher than during the darkest days of the War of the Rebellion. It was Grover Cleveland who raised his voice against this iniquity and who raised his hand and tore the mask from the face of protection. What has protection done for our merchant marine? The fleets of vessels which once covered the ocean sailing under the American flag are no more, and the vessels carrying the produce to and from this country almost without exception carry a foreign flag at their masthead, and our ocean carrying trade is almost entirely in the hands of foreign nations.

The farmers and workingmen of all classes are called upon to pay an unnecessary tax on all they eat and on all they wear, but when this monopoly lays its hands upon our people does the government give the farmer and the workman protection in the markets of the world for their products?

THE HOMESTEAD MATTER.

Within the last few weeks the condition made possible by a protective tariff wrought at Homestead the saddest and most terrible disaster in American history. The people of this state can afford to put their trust in a party which stands by the principles of Grover Cleveland. And I believe firmly that they will not only in the Democratic county of Ramsey, which will give us 10,000 majority when November comes 'round again, but also in the banner Democratic county of Hennepin. Democratic principles are for the "plain, common people" of America, and we will see this fall the old Democrat and the young Democrat stand shoulder to shoulder in a campaign of political honesty and they will carry the banner of Democracy to victory and plant it on the state house in November.

If elected to this office, as I believe I will be, I have one promise to make. I will be no man's man, nor will I wear any man's collar, but according to my light I will faithfully and conscientiously discharge the duties of that high office in the interest of the people of Minnesota.

THE PLATFORM.

Mr. Lawler's speech was well received, and he delivered it in a manner which quite captured his auditors. The tumult of applause having subsided, Lewis Baker, chairman of the committee on resolutions, submitted the following platform, which was read in a perfunctory manner and adopted by the convention:

The Democrats of Minnesota gathered in delegate convention, mingle their rejoicing with that of their fellows in the nation that the earnest voices of the rank and file of the party was heard and obeyed by the national convention and found expression in the nomination of the able and courageous Cleveland for our leader, and in the bold, explicit declarations that Republican protection is a fraud, in proof of which we point to Homestead, where the militia of a state is keeping peace in a quarrel over the spoil between the real and supposed beneficiaries of protection.

We denounce the rapacious and conscienceless combination which has grown up in this state, with the connivance of Republican legislatures, between the elevator companies, the millers and the railroads, by which our grain markets have been monopolized and our farmers robbed of the fruits of their hard labors. We reaffirm our belief that this combination rests upon the fact that the railroads of this state have abjured one of their prime functions, the provision of suitable means for handling grain, and have given the same over to the control of private parties, and we again declare our belief that the remedy, simple but efficient, lies in legislation requiring the railroads to resume this proper function, thus giving to every station a free and open market.

TO CATCH THE LABOR VOTE.

We recognize the great, conspicuous fact that the prosperity of our government rests upon labor, and that all legislation should be shaped, so far as possible, to relieve it from all unjust and oppressive burdens and to secure to it its just share of the benefit of our general prosperity.

We are opposed to state interference with parental rights and rights of conscience in the education of children as an infringement of the fundamental Democratic doctrine that the largest individual liberty consistent with the rights of others insures the highest type of citizenship and best government.

We again call the attention of voters to the manifest injustice and inequality of our tax laws, under which wealth easily evades its share of the public burdens and compels moderate accumulations to bear the part it shirks, and we again invite the coming legislature to a serious consideration of the subject, to the end that a just, evenly-bearing system may be adopted.

REGARDING IRON MINES.

The Democratic party has always been and is to-day the consistent opponent of all legislation the result of which is to create law-made wealth which impoverishes the poor and those of moderate means in order to enrich the few. We condemn all use of the taxing powers for this purpose. We call the attention of the people of the state to the fact that mineral wealth at the northern part of this state is not bearing its just share of the public burdens. The non-resident millionaires who own iron mines whose value is, at a moderate estimate, $20,000,000, under our present statutes pays less than $9,000 per annum in taxes. In exchange for the votes of 2,000 employes, coerced into voting the Republican ticket, the Republican party has covenanted to perpetuate this system and to deliver to these men the government of one of the counties of the state.

We demand that this condition of things be rectified. We denounce all bounties and exemptions and demand that all taxes to be raised in this state shall be as nearly equal as may be, and that all property on which taxes are to be levied shall have a cash valuation and be equalized and uniform, and we call upon all good citizens, without distinction of party, to join with us in defeating the proposed constitutional amendment, known as chapter 2, of the General Laws of 1891, to be voted upon this fall, which seeks to perpetrate this unjust system of taxation, and while it pretends to levy taxes upon sleeping car and other similar corporations, it repeals the existing constitutional tax of 8 per cent upon gross earnings of our railroads, now realizing for the state a revenue of $725,000 and annually increasing, and places the rate of taxation upon the earnings of such railroads at the caprice of the legislature.

WANT AN AMENDMENT.

We especially call attention to and denounce the form of the ballot for the proposed amendment to be voted on at the coming election, which is known as "Senate File No. 121," as being especially designed to mislead the voters, and we call upon all honest citizens to assist in rebuking such trickery.

Resolved, That we are in favor of a radical change in the laws of this state, and demand such legislation as will provide for intelligent and economical supervision of the building and maintenance of our country roads.

That for the better security of our government we recommend an amendment to the federal constitution extending the presidential term to six years and making a president ineligible for re-election.

We favor also the election of president and vice president and senators of the United States by the direct vote of the people.

[The following resolution was introduced after the platform was adopted, and it was also adopted by the convention:]

Resolved, Believing the contract system in force in the state penitentiary to be wrong in principle, prejudicial to the interests of the state, the welfare of the convicts and an injustice to honest labor, we demand its discontinuance at the expiration of the present contracts, and that the legislature prohibit any future contracts and provide for the employment by the state and for the state of all convicts and persons confined in the penal and reformatory institutions of this state.

The method of appointing the state central committee occasioned some dispute, but after a long wrangle the chairman cut the knot by declaring an amendment providing for the appointment of five members at large by the chairman and two from each congressional district, carried. An effort was made prior to the adjournment for supper to have the matter reconsidered, but a motion to adjourn cut off the effort.

C. J. Buell tried to introduce a resolution he seemed to think important, but J. J. McCafferty sat down upon the single tax man and the convention adjourned till 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The ball was started at 8:30 by a motion to nominate a lieutenant governor, but Mr. D'Autremont of St. Louis was not inclined to abandon the effort to have the vote on the motion to appoint the state committee reconsidered. He objected to the method proposed and would not be suppressed. He proposed that the committee be selected in this manner: One committeeman from each judicial district, one each selected by the counties of Ramsey and Hennepin, and the chairman to select five committeemen at large. He obtained a reconsideration and offered his plan as a substitute for the original motion. The substitute was accepted by Mr. Stevens, the mover of the original motion, and was adopted with one dissenting vote.

Nominations for lieutenant governor were now called for, and Aitkin county yielded to St. Louis county. J. Adam Bede of Duluth took the platform and nominated Harry Hawkins of Carlton county, "a suburb of Duluth." He made an exceedingly humorous speech regarding the real and alleged history of the Democratic party. He referred to the armies of the North and South during the war by saying: "They were all Democrats on one side and all Democrats on the other." He declared that the Republican party with "honest ballot and political purity" in its mouth could vote fifty Indians with one suit of clothes. He told the story of the Borneo monkeys fishing for crabs and using their tails as bait.

"The Republican party has baited its tail with Knute Nelson and is dragging it over the prairies hoping to catch the farmer vote. But the Republican party will not do any thing for the farmer that the monkey will not do for the crab."

When Mr. Bede concluded a delegate proposed three cheers for him and they were given with a vim. Carried away by the humor of the speech another delegate rose and proposed that Mr. Hawkins be nominated by acclamation, and amid laughter and cheers the convention carried the motion.

Mr. Hawkins was called to the platform and made a brief stereotyped speech, thanking the convention for the honor it had bestowed upon him.

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Nominations for secretary of state were called for, and Anoka yielded to Ramsey county. C. J. Buell nominated H. B. Martin of Hennepin, who is the nominee of the People's party. He declared that Mr. Martin had no love for the anarchistic doctrines of the People's party.

When he had finished a Hennepin delegate wanted to know how it came that a Ramsey county delegate nominated a Hennepin man. Ramsey county delegation promptly repudiated Mr. Martin, and Senator Craven of Carver said that unless Martin would pledge himself to support the Democratic ticket from top to bottom and work for Daniel W. Lawler and not for Ignatius Donnelly he could not be the Democratic nominee.

W. P. Murray of Ramsey nominated Peter Nelson of Goodhue county and Washington county seconded the nomination. Mr. McCafferty demanded to have Martin produced and declared the convention wanted the whole of its ticket to be composed of Democrats.

The roll was called on the nominations and when Meeker was reached and Martin had only received one vote the further reading of the roll was dispensed with. Martin was withdrawn and Nelson declared the unanimous choice of the convention.

THE OTHER OFFICERS.

For state treasurer, Frank Nocollin, Joseph Leicht of Winona and H. C. Bull of Wright were presented, but before the roll call was completed Nicollin and Bull were withdrawn and Leicht's nomination was made unanimous.

For attorney general John C. Nethaway of Washington county, W. Logan Breckenridge of Olmsted, and J. L. McDonald of Ramsey, the last named being the People's party candidate, were presented, but before the roll call was completed Nethaway's nomination was made unanimous.

It was decided to nominate three candidates for justices of the supreme court, one at a time. Hon. S. T. Champlin of Blue Earth, in a few feeling words, placed Daniel Buck of Mankato in nomination.

Hon. Mort Wilkinson seconded the nomination of Daniel Buck.

Secretary Johnson moved that the nominations of Buck, Canty and Mitchell be made by acclamation.

After considerable discussion this was carried.

This concluded the business of the convention with the exception of the selection of presidential electors, and the delegates went into caucus by congressional districts to make selections.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

At 11:45 the chairman succeeded in bringing the remnants of the convention to order once more and the congressional districts reported the following electors:

First district, D. R. P. Hibbs, Albert Lea; Second, A. L. Sackett, St. Peter; Third, S. N. Jones, Gaylord; Fourth, J. T. Barron, Stillwater; Fifth, J. C. Oswald, Minneapolis; Sixth, William Quinn, Wright county; Seventh, Martin Shea, Otter Tail.

The chair appointed F. Nelson of Hennepin and R. A. Smith of Ramsey electors at large.

THE NEW COMMITTEE.

The chairman then announced the new state central committee as follows:

Owen Austin, Hastings; Dan Aberle, St. Paul; Chris H. Heffron, Rochester; John Coleman, Anoka; R. O. Craig, Janesville; J. C. Wise, Mankato; C. A. Moody, Benton; George Dutail, Chaska; M. Mullen, New Ulm; J. D. Sheedy, Austin; Morris Thomas, Duluth; J. M. Spicer, Wilmar; James Manning, Washington; Fourteenth, James D. O'Brien, Crookston; Fifteenth, Hempstead, Werner Brainerd; Sixteenth, Charles Cater, Grant county; Hennepin county, Lars M. Rand; Ramsey county, Crawford Livingston.

A vote of thanks to the chairman, secretary and exposition management was passed and the convention adjourned.

GEN. BAKER WITHDRAWS.

The Alliance Candidate for Governor Declines the Nomination.

At a meeting of the alliance state central committee in St. Paul Gen. Baker resigned as the Alliance candidate for governor in the following letter:

GEN. BAKER RESIGNS.

St. Paul, Aug. 2, 1892.—To the Alliance State Central Committee—Gentlemen: I herewith submit my declination of the gubernatorial nomination the Alliance convention was pleased to tender me on the 7th of July inst. It will be remembered that I reserved the privilege of so doing should circumstances, in my judgment, indicate such a course wisest for the cause. I am of opinion that the general situation is such, both for the ensuing campaign and our future as an organization, that we withhold present political action.

It appears to me that you can as well preserve the Alliance party organization without a state ticket as with it, though I trust that continued local action will ensue, especially in the legislative field. Some of us were originally Republican Alliance men, some Democratic Alliance men. The suspension of present political action by your committee will leave the members of the Alliance in this state free to co-operate with such political party as in their judgment will best promote true Alliance principles. I respectfully submit we had better so form our action, that we may not be subjected to the charge of resisting any real reform movement. I have not at any time, as you well know, stood in the way of harmony. We distinctly stated that we desired none of the offices. These we were willing to remit to greed and ambition. In fact we only sought to keep the reform forces of the state in the path so successfully pursued in 1890. It should be borne in mind that the original purpose of

THE ALLIANCE WAS NON-PARTISAN.

It was established for the economic and social betterment of the farmer. Against the best judgment of the best men of the Alliance it was plunged into the mire of politics. Its influence as a non-political organization was vastly more powerful than it will be as a political party. The moral influence it brought to bear upon the old parties was healthy and successful.

But its present management in this state has brought to it new and extraordinary political measures. The most important step taken by the People's party of Minnesota, and sought to be enforced with relentless discipline, was making the subtreasury scheme the only test of party loyalty. To this procrustean bed must all its followers conform. A bold and reckless scheme, it has no home in the atmosphere of honest political economy. Above all it is the special child of class legislation.

POLITICAL CHARLATANS OFFER IT

as wine at the banquet to beget iridescent dreams of easy fortune. To-morrow it will be consigned to the lumber room of political trash. Its only function in Minnesota has been to drive men of conservative judgment out of the People's party.

The utter abandonment of tariff reform by the People's party is the most shameless case of political cowardice in the history of the state. This was the potential issue with the Alliance two years ago; to-day it is side-tracked for the sub-treasury, a substitution of the fox for the lion. There were plain and practical questions on which we could all have united. That we did not do so is no crime of ours. The responsibility lies with those who have perverted the Alliance into a mere political machine, dominated by "bosses," like the lowest type of political parties. Our action was a revolt against such treason, and a rebuke against selfishness.

To the People's party in its natural aspect we have offered no opposition. The general trend of its purposes is good. It is born of many injustices and wrongs. Its errors are such as time may cure and the final sifting may enable it to form its lines of battle on tenable ground. But in this state, unhappily, it has been so officered and so led that for the present all hopes of uniting the reform forces are frustrated.

I am especially proud to have been nominated by the old Alliance. The stalwart men who created the organization, who were its promoters and brave builders, have not struck their flag to the new and absurd doctrines which later men, by craft, have imposed upon it. My grateful appreciation is due these men for the high honor they have conferred upon me. They have made a history and planted an organization in this state which political strife will not soon efface. With them it will be my pleasure to cherish the old principles which have given real life and power to our cause.

Very respectfully,

J. H. Baker.

The resignation was accepted and it was decided not to put any candidates in the field for this election.

Poor Man's Gout.

London Hospital: Acquired gout is usually one of the consequences of errors and excesses of diet. Those who eat too much meat and drink too much wine are, as is well known, very frequently the subjects of the disease. But it is by no means so well known that beer is a profitable cause of gout. The fact is so, however. Dr. Frederick Roberts, in "Quain's Dictionary of Medicine," tells us that brewers' draymen are particularly subject to gout. Malt liquors, Dr. Roberts considers, stand next to wine as originators of gout. Good whisky and brandy, on the other hand, are said to be much less mischievous in this connection. Brewers' draymen, though poor in pocket, do not generally suffer from the poor man's gout.

On the contrary, their gross and ponderous bodies are gorged with the products of their own excesses. Some of them, it is said, drink as much as two to four gallons of beer a day. Sir Alfred Garrod, a competent authority, states that lead taken into the system is a potent cause of gout. No less than 30 per cent of Dr. Garrod's hospital patients owed their gouty seizures to working among lead. Many of these were probably physiologically poor, poor in blood and tissue; and they would, no doubt, suffer from what is popularly called poor man's gout. Butchers and barmen, coalheavers and painters, and others who have to do with lead are all liable to the disease.

It will be proper here to remind readers that mental worry is a fruitful source of gout, and as the mentally worried often have poor appetites and feeble digestive powers, they are not seldom physiologically poor in a very marked degree, and they are therefore particularly liable to suffer from poor man's gout. Scientifically this question of terms and definitions has little or no interest, because, as we have already said, gout is gout, and can never be anything else. But from a practical point of view the subject is well worthy of the consideration of all intelligent persons.

Grafting Tomatoes and Potatoes Together.

At a recent meeting of Indiana horticulturists the question was asked: "Is it true that tomatoes and potatoes can be grafted together and bear a double crop?"

A professor at the Purdue university present replied: "It is a fact that plants thus grafted have been made to grow tomatoes above ground and potatoes below round."

W. H. Ragan, while admitting that the tomato and potato are closely related, expressed the opinion that we can go only a little way in this direction of crossing certain species of plants and that the graft connecting the potato with the tomato must be an imperfect one. He thought that usually the union will be only mechanical."

An Indiana farmer present did not believe the time would ever come when potatoes and tomatoes will be grown on the same vine for profit, though it may be done as a curiosity.

CONGRESS.

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

FRIDAY, JULY 29.

SENATE.

Mr. Carlisle addressed the senate to-day on Mr. Hale's resolution as to the relative merits of "protection" and a "tariff for revenue only" in response to the speeches of Messrs. Hale and Aldrich.

Mr. Sherman made a long and earnest reply to what he termed the fair argument of the senator from Kentucky, denying that cheapness of things was in itself a benefit to the people of the United States, especially when it was our own products in which the fall of prices occurred.

HOUSE.

Watson, the Alliance congressman from Georgia created a great sensation by charging members of the house with being drunk on the floor of the house. The speaker appointed a committee to investigate the charges.

Majority and minority reports on the effect of the McKinley tariff law upon agriculture are presented to the house.

SATURDAY, JULY 30.

SENATE.

The senate was in session to-day for only three hours, but within that time it accomplished some important results. The two principal events were the postponement of the anti-option bill till next session and the passage of a joint resolution extending the appropriations for the branches of the public service included in the sundry civil appropriation bill.

HOUSE.

Filibustering began in the house this morning as soon as the World's Fair amendments to the Sunday civil bill was reached. After it had continued some time Mr. Holman as a privileged question reported from the committee on appropriations a joint resolution extending until August 4 the appropriations carried by the sunday civil bill of last year. This being objected to was not received.

MONDAY, AUGUST 1.

SENATE.

Almost all that occupied the attention of the senate were speeches on the tariff question by Mr. Hawley and Mr. Hiscock advocating and defending the policy of protection, and a statement by Mr. Vest respecting the profits of the Arlington mills.

HOUSE.

The resolution extending the appropriations until August 4 was adopted.

The following measures were adopted.

Resolutions granting the rotunda of the capitol to the ladies of Washington for a reception to the G. A. R.; changing the time for dedicating the World's Fair buildings from Oct. 12 to Oct. 21; to re-imburse the city of Lincoln, Neb., for paving around the government building; to authorize the secretary of war to convey to school district No. 12, Kittery, Maine, a portion of the Ft. McClary military reservation in exchange for other lands.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 2.

SENATE.

In the absence of any other business the senate to-day discussed the Homestead affair with some warmth and personality, Mr. Hawley of Connecticut, in the course of the debate taking occasion to remark that Mr. Palmer, of Illinois, needed a guardian. At the close of the discussion a modified resolution of investigation was adopted, providing for a special committee of seven to investigate the employment of armed bodies of men for private purposes in connection with differences between workmen and employers.

HOUSE.

The business in the house to-day was confined principally to the taking of recesses in order to enable the Democrats to talk over the situation and to formulate some scheme of action. Resolutions revoking all leave of absence (even those granted on account of sickness) was adopted and the sergeant-at-arms was directed (personally, if need be) to enforce the attendance of absentees.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3.

SENATE.

Senator Sanders worked through two bills for his constituents in Montana today, one making Helena a port of delivery in the Montana and Idaho collection district; and the other extending the time of the building of the Big Horn Southern railroad through the Crow Indian reservation.

HOUSE.

The time of the house was taken up today with filibustering tactics, no business being transacted.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 4.

SENATE.

The session of the senate to-day was simply an exhibition of a waiting game in legislation. Having completed its full share of the task the senate had nothing to do but to rest on its oars and abide the action of the house.

HOUSE.

A resolution was adopted making this pension day. Another resolution was agreed to, extending the sundry civil appropriations until Aug. 10, and still another sending the sundry civil bill to a conference and taking up the proposition to grant $2,500,000 to aid the great exposition. The Durborow bill was considered in committee of the whole, but little attention was paid to the discussion, it being known that no vote of a final character could be reached until tomorrow.

Mr. Holman's motion to suspend the rules and adopt a resolution disagreeing to the senate $5,000,000 appropriation in the sundry civil bill was agreed to—141 to 5—and the bill was sent to a conference.

Summer Drinks.

The juice of various acid fruits, mixed with sugar and water, make during the warm weather, delicious and wholesome beverages. They seem to have the power of quenching the thirst, and at the same time give a small amount of nourishment to the blood. Ice water, or even very cold water, if taken plain, is bad, and will disorder the entire system, while the cold fruit drinks do not so quickly disagree; by the way nothing in the form of a summer drink is more healthful and strengthening than buttermilk. It strengthens and stimulates the weak stomach and aids, rather than retards digestion. If persons knew the value of buttermilk, I am sure more people would use it freely; in fact, I have known in some cases of indigestion to be entirely cured by the free use of buttermilk, and for those who are troubled with insomnia it is an excellent drink, it quiets the nerves and produces a sense of rest. It is a peculiar thing; persons who like it, never tire of singing its praise, and its enemies never weary of wondering how persons can like it.—Table Talk.

Now that Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, of Dakota county, is a candidate for governor of Minnesota, of course all the papers opposed to him will teem with abuse, and their columns, from the Pioneer Pecksniff down to the Rattlesnake calfthief, will reek with epithets about that devoted leader of the people.

Mr. Donnelly is a brilliant orator, a tried and true legislator, an author of world-wide fame, a "poor but honest man." Born in the city of Philadelphia he sprang from that great class of liberty lovers, who conned their lessons of human rights under the echos of Old Liberty Bell. A natural democratic republican, he has always taken up the Shillela for the oppressed and those who needed a friend often taking the unpopular side of a cause or controversy out of the very magnanimity of his big humane heart. Such men as Donnelly cannot be bad. They are liable to be grossly misunderstood. The intensity of their feelidg for the woes and troubles of their fellow-beings, leads them to say and to do things that are misinterpreted, to their detriment, by their enemies. But they are all right. The people are often swerved away from them by cowardice. The mighty engines of corporate wrath 'pooh pooh! and beslime Donnelly the man, because they hate and fear him. Why should the people, by whose cause he has stood nobly battling for the last forty years, turn back on him? What act of his has ever betrayed them? In what respect has he ever turned away from them when they asked his help? Many of the readers of the News in Polk county, know the substantial services Donnelly has rendered them most cheerfully in legislative halls. When have we called on him and he has not aided us? If you hear any man curse Donnelly kick him out as a public enemy; for Donnelly has been and is your friend. He may not deposite $1,000 or more in a local bank to buy votes with, but his aid shines resplendently in the legislation that has been asked for by the people,

We know that it is popular to kick at Donnelly. But Donnelly has always shown himself a man toward us, up here, in the Red River Valley. He never asked us who we were or what was our political creed. He only asked "Is it fair, right and honest?" And when he was satisfied on these points, his whole heart was with us and his ability shone above all others in the advocacy of our cause.

Let us not forget Donnelly. Let us show that we have human gratitude left in our hearts.—East Grand Forks News.

This part of the country was visited with one of the most destructive hail storms last Thursday morning about three a, m., ever seen in this vicinity The storm was of short duration but very severe while it lasted. The main track of the hail commenced about three miles north of here and followed the river south about five miles. In this track the grain was almost entirely destroyed. The following is a partial list of the names of farmers who have had all their grain destroyed:

C. J. Hendrickson, A. T. Haug, A. Wassen, Johannes Bengtson, Johannes Hendrickson, Halvor O. Kaidal, Carl O. Swenson, John P. Nelson, Ed Aubol, Lars Loberg, Arne Loberg, K. O. Gigstad, Andrew Soderburg, Aug. Swanson Ole Cliffgaard, Ole Guttormson, Wash. Adams, W. Eickhoff, Anton Aubol Hans O. Rod, Andrew Norander, A. G. Amundson, L. A. Carlson, Mrs. Inga Turnwall, Pete Brandby, E. G. Holm, Hans J. Hanson, O. A. Wiste.

Besides this considerable damage was done in the townships of Rocksbury, Sanders, River Falls, and Black River. Hail seems to have fallen all over these four towns but in some places doing very little damage. It is impossible to estimate the loss as a large number of fields are but partially destroyed. In the village the storm was very severe and nearly every building in town had the windows on the north side broken, the school house having nineteen lights broken.

A couple of pedlers have been working this part of the country the past week selling bundles of dry goods and we are sorry to state that they seem to have been very successful in catching suckers. Farmers will possibly never learn that stuff bought that way is nearly always worthless. This particular scheme has the credit of being the biggest fake on the road and the farmers who have bit could have saved at least one-half their money by buying the same bundle of goods from their home merchants.

Says the Mazeppa Tribune: "While in congress Nelson was an ardent supporter of the Mills bill, speaking and voting for it. Now he is put forward to be the leader in this state of a party whose watch-word is and has been "protection;" almost the direct opposite of the bill which he supported as a congressman. It looks, to an outsider, very much as though there was some power other than his record as a republican which brought about his nomination, and even members of the party are not all backward about expressing their opinion that "a barrel" figures quite conspicuously in it."

The Nelson and Hill dinner party at the Minnesota club a week ago does not strike the Albert Lea Standard favorably and Col. Day has the following to say about the ticket and the occurrence:

According to the slate, Knute Nelson was nominated for governor at the Republican state convention last week, and D. M. Clough, a Minneapolis machine politician, for lieutenant governor. F. P. Brown broke the slate and was justly renominated for secretary of state; Joseph Bobleter, who has been state treasurer for three terms, again secured a place on the ticket, and Assistant Attorney General Childs was named for attorney general. Justices Mitchell, Vanderburgh and Dickinson, who ought to have been shelved many years ago, were renominated for justices of the supreme court. Knute Nelson the next day celebrated his success by dining at the aristocratic Minnesota club in St. Paul, with J. J. Hill of the Great Northern railroad, whose attorney he has been for the past ten years. The ticket will find a great deal of hard sled din' before the sun goes down Nov 8.

MINNESOTA STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS

AT

WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD,

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

- (a) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades
- (b) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades.
- (c) A professional course for teachers who have completed the necessary academic course elsewhere.
- (d) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at $2,75 per week.

The next school year opens at Winona and Mankato August 29 1892. St. Cloud and Moorhead September 1, 1892.

For free catalogues and circulars, giving full information, address the presidents as follows:

Irwin Shepard, Winona.
Edward Searing, Mankato.
Joseph Carhart, St. Cloud.

LIGHT UPON ISLAM.

BOLD DEFENSE OF THE DOCTRINES OF THE KORAN.

Lucid Comparison of the Essential Points of the Religions That Have for Their Foundations the Bible and the Koran—Islam Democracy.

M. Mismer could not know the east any better than he does if he had been born there, and we copy from his new volume, "Souvenirs du Monde Mussulman," a few novel views and considerations addressed especially to statesmen and thinkers:

The greater portion of the precepts of the Koran have a meaning which escapes us, because that meaning is at variance with our ideas and our manners, and this is what gives rise to political errors of an incalculable reach. The Mussulmans do not fail to return the attacks that are made upon them. Conceding to us the advantage in a material and scientific point of view, they hold that the riches and learning of the few do not make the happiness of the many, and they claim superiority for their moral and social constitution.

Essentially democratic in its origin, Islam has a sumptuary law which puts a tax of 2½ per cent. upon the jewels of women and upon all objects of luxury. This money has served for centuries to assist poor tradesmen and to buy them tools. Thanks to the prohibition of wine and spirits, the social problem is solved for them. On seeing the dangers that hover over our civilization, the Mussulmans compare it to the smoking remains of a burned tent. They think that if it should disappear in the flames of anarchy for want of an organic principle it would be incapable of rising again from its ashes, while their faith maintains order in everything, the condition sine qua non of progress.

"You accuse us," they say, "of being depraved. Are you less so, you who keep up perpetual orgies in your great cities, expose your half clad wives and daughters at balls and feasts, and allow them to be whirled around in the arms of anybody and everybody? You reproach us for our ignorance. In order to pass through life with honor your instruction is not so good as ours. Thanks to the proverbs and the rules of wisdom that are taught to our children, they conduct themselves like little men. With you the men, and even the learned, conduct themselves like little children. You charge our functionaries with venality. Who contributes to its establishment if it is not the vulgar herd of traders of every class that Europe has scattered all over the east? You cry down our judiciary. We too have a right to accuse yours. You charge us with fatalism. Fatalists we are, but like your learned men and your philosophers, who base their calculations upon the immutability of natural laws. Resigned in the face of plagues, cataclysms and death, we say 'It was written.' For the rest we follow the words of the prophet.

'One day the prophet asked an Arab visitor what he had done with his camel. The Arab replied, 'I have left him at thy gate.' 'Hast thou tied him?' inquired the prophet. 'No, I have left him to the care of God.' 'Thou hast done wrong,' said Mohammed. 'Thou shouldst first have tied him, and then have recommended him to God.'

'The Christian doctrines of predestination and of grace are more depressing than our fatalism. Your ignorance of Islam makes you confound Mussulman slavery with ancient slavery and that which existed until recently in Russia and in Brazil. With the Mussulmans there are no slaves. All are brothers, not in the Platonic sense of the Bible, but actually, having the same laws and the same positive duties according to the terms of the Koran. Unlike Christianity, Islam has never treated as salable things, transmissible with the land, troops of men who professed the common faith, as was done with the serfs of the Middle Ages, the moujiks of Russia, and the negroes of your colonies. Prisoners of war are the only slaves that it recognizes, but their children are born free, and they themselves can become so by embracing Islam.

'It is the custom from time immemorial in certain countries for parents to part with their children for money, in order to ward off poverty and open up to themselves a career of fortune. By virtue of Mussulman equality this career is limitless in the east. How many slaves have become pashas, generals and ministers? Almost all the sultans have been the sons of slaves. The black slaves taken from central Africa find in Egypt and in Turkey a fate incomparably superior to that of the slaves of your colonies. Slavery is for savages the first step toward civilization. If their recruiting and their transportation give rise to well founded protests, the fault is not with Islam. Neither the Bible nor the Koran is responsible for abuses.

"The Mussulmans proclaim the superiority of their Allah: but they acknowledge Moses as a prophet and Jesus as Rouh Allah, the soul of God. Their veneration for Jesus extends to the mother. The immaculate conception, introduced into Catholicism by Pius IX, has been for twelve centuries a Mussulman belief.

"To the extreme simplicity of the dogma must be added the positive enjoyments which the paradise of Mohammed opposes to the platonic joys of the Christian paradise, in order to comprehend the resistance of Islam to all attempts at conversion. 'Christianity is a menace, Islamism a promise,' said Napoleon I, and his opinion is worthy of meditation."—Paris Figaro.

Eating Before Sleeping.

Scientific men now delare that eating before sleeping is of great benefit, and that a bowl of bread and milk, a mug of beer and a few biscuits, or a saucer of oatmeal before retiring will in a short time result in an increase in weight, strength and general tone.—New York Times.

Balzac's Servant.

When Honore de Balzac, the novelist, stated in early life his wish to become a literary man, his father, who had destined him for the bar, was shocked and disappointed. Still he gave the boy two years in which to prove his fitness for a literary life, and Honore was accordingly installed in an attic near the library where he proposed to work.

His mother believed that a little hardship would soon bring him to his senses, but the correspondence which he thereupon began with his sister shows that the man who was afterward to attain distinction in his chosen work could afford, as a youth, to scorn such trifles as waiting upon himself. In the very first letter he confided to his sister the news that he had taken a servant. He writes:

"He is named Myself! And a bad bargain he is, truly! Myself is lazy, clumsy, thoughtless. His master is hungry or thirsty, and often enough Myself has neither bread nor water to give him; he doesn't even know how to shield him from the wind which whistles through the door and window. As soon as I am awake I ring for Myself, and he makes my bed. Then he sweeps the room, and clumsy he is at it.

"'Myself!'

"'Yes, sir.'

"'Look at that cobweb with the big fly buzzing in it till I am half giddy with the noise, and the fluff under the bed, and the dust under the window panes!'

"The lazy beggar gazes at me and doesn't stir, and yet, in spite of all his defects, I can't get rid of that unintelligent Myself!"

And the same stupid "Myself" it was who afterward enriched French literature with a series of wonderful works.—Youth's Companion.

Number of People Since Adam.

Did you ever make a calculation of the probable number of people that have inhabited our globe since the beginning of time? No doubt you will say that such calculations involve a loss of time, and are after all barren of results. But let us take a few minutes' time and approximate, with a certain degree of accuracy, the number of souls that have been ushered into this wicked world since the time when it was "not good for Adam to be alone."

At the present time it is believed that there are 1,400,000,000 human beings on the globe: but let us suppose that there has been but an average of 900,000,000 living at any one time since the creation. Next, to give room for any possible doubt, we will put the average length of life at fifty years. (It may have been much longer than that 5,000 years ago, but has been much shorter for the last 1,000 years.) With the average length of life as above, we have had two generations of 900,000,000 each every century for the past 6,000 years.

Taking this for granted this globe has had 66,627,843,237,075,266 human inhabitants since the beginning of time. To even bury this vast number the whole landed surface of the globe, every inch of it, would have to be dug over 120 times!—Philadelphia Press.

How a Chameleon Looks.

Upon a crimson cloth the chameleon becomes almost crimson; move it upon a gray surface and the bright tints will quickly subside. But at night, whether disturbed or not, it invariably assumes its palest tints. Two which I caught in the Cape Town garden, which were of a very brilliant metallic green, were splendidly decorated. On the back or sides, sometimes saddlewise and sometimes lengthwise, were slashes of red. The markings vary in the individuals. The crest and decorations on the head and back are like fretwork, the whole body and limbs are dotted with very fine warts or tubercles like shagreen, and when angry all these distinctive features are exaggerated, the gills and crest are swelled, and the skin of the chin is puffed out so as to show white stripes, while the creature opens its mouth wide, displaying the yellow, fleshy interior, and closing its teeth on your finger should you provoke it to do so.—Cor. Forest and Stream.

Deaths in January.

It has often been noticed at the beginning of January the death is announced of a number of prominent men. The reason is probably found in the fact not that great men are more prone to die in January than at any other time of the year, but that the weather in that month is unsettled, and consequently hard on the constitution alike of great and humble. Great men are only human after all, and a great man physically weakened by hard work or disease is just as likely to die from a change of weather as though he were a day laborer.

The mortality tables show that the month of January and the first month of exceedingly hot weather in the summer are more fatal than any other time of the year, and the great must take their chances with other people.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Labouchere's Narrow Escape.

Labouchere was in Mexico during the rebellion, and he thought he might serve humanity by secretly giving both belligerents good advice. One night, as he approached the tent of one of the two generals, he heard the voices of these rival pretenders in converse. Creeping close to the canvas he listened, and discovered that they had agreed upon a truce in order to hang him in the morning as an example to both armies. In the morning, however, this misunderstood mutual friend had naturally disappeared.—Cor. New York World.

Told Him Why.

Mr. Nicefello (cautiously)—Why are you so cold and distant?

Sweet Girl (quietly)—The fire has gone out, and this sofa is too heavy for me to move up to your chair.—New York Weekly.

Marriage Records in South Carolina.

South Carolina is the only state in the Union in which no official record of marriages is kept.—Charleston News and Courier.

A Commencement Item.

"Well, John and Laura will graduate soon."

"Have they learned anything?"

"You bet. John can umpire a game without gittin licked, and Laura's 'way ahead of her class in croquet!"—Atlanta Constitution.

The Home Medicine

Is what Hood's Sarsaparilla may well be called, because of the benefit whole families derive from it. Henry C. Richardson of Siloam, N. Y., says that he and his wife have been wonderfully benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. R. was miserable all the time with kidney complaint but began improving when she had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla one week, and after taking three bottles was perfectly cured. Mr. R. says he had Heart Failure, Catarrh, and Liver Complaint. Could not sleep, bloated badly, had pains in his back, ringing noises in his ears, etc. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave immediate benefit, sound sleep, and good health. He says: "We both praise

Mrs. Richardson.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and think there is no medicine like it."

HOOD'S PILLS cure Nausea, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Biliousness and all Liver troubles.

Bustle of an English Wedding.

Long before an out-of-town wedding in England the whole country round about is active. There is a great amount of cleaning and scrubbing of faces among the small folks and washing of Sunday clothes. The land is scoured for miles for posies, which are strewn in the happy bride's path only, for of course the house and church are decorated from the contents of the hothouses. The carriage in which the bridegroom brings his bride home in triumph is trimmed with white ribbons and huge nosegays of white flowers are seen on the footman and coachmen and also on the horses. Friends come for miles in a special railway carriage. According to the New York Journal they do not pay their own fare, as has been known to happen here on such occasions. As the ceremony usually occurs before or about noon most of them can enjoy a day's outing, if the weather permits, on the green, where dancing is indulged in; if not, on the wide veranda inclosed in glass.

If the ceremony occurs in church the priest and vested choir meet the bridal party at the gate, and, chanting wedding music, precede it to the church. For many days previous there is great commotion in the kitchen and servants' quarters in an English country house preparing all sorts of goodies "agi'n the time" when it occurs, for outside of London caterers do not abound, and even those in the metropolis seem decidedly local and confined their efforts to supply the home demands, seldom furnishing the collations for distant affairs, as they do over here. In this and a few other minor points out-of-town weddings in this country differ from those in England, but from present indications it only requires a little time, thought and money in order that matrimonial affairs here shall far excel in point of brilliancy those on the other side.

John Webster's Genius.

There is something in Webster that reminds me of Victor Hugo. There is the same confusion at times of what is big with what is great, the same fondness for the merely spectacular, the same insensibility to repulsive details, the same indifference to the probable or even to the natural, the same leaning towards the grotesque, the same love of effect at whatever cost; and there is also the same impressiveness of result. Whatever other effect Webster may produce upon us, he never leaves us indifferent. We may blame, we may criticise, as much as we will; we may say that all this ghastliness is only a trick of theatrical blue-light; we shudder, and admire nevertheless. We may say he is melodramatic, that his figures are magic-lantern pictures that waver and change shape with a curtain on which they are thrown; it matters not, he stirs us with an emotion deeper than any mere artifice could stir.—Harper's Magazine.

AT SEA.

Tangled and torn, the white sea laces
Broider the breast of the Indian deep,
Lifted aloft the strong screw races
To slacken and strain in the waves which leap.
The great sails swell, the broad bows shiver
To green and silver the purple sea;
And, down from the sunset, a dancing river
Flows, broken gold, where our ship goes free.

Too free! too fast! With memories laden
I gaze to the Northward where lies Japan,
Oh, fair and pleasant, and soft-voiced maiden!
You are there, too distant! O Yoshi San!
You are under those clouds by the storm-winds shaken,
A thousand ri, as the sea gull flies,
As lost as if Death, not Time, had taken
My eyes away from your beautiful eyes.

Yet, if it were Death, of friends my fairest,
He could not rend our spirits in twain;
They came too near to be less than nearest
In the world where true hearts mingle again.
But sad is the hour we sigh farewell in;
And for me, whenever they name Japan,
All grace, all charm, of the land you dwell in
Is spoken in saying "O Yoshi San!"

—Sir Edwin Arnold.

THE EYES OF THE WOLVES.

TWO men and a woman; a great baronial room, furnished half in the English, half in the Oriental style; a wide, low divan, covered with rich brocade and heaped with many cushions; deer skins everywhere—on the floor, the furniture, the low, easy chair; a buffet crowded with massive silver; a huge stove of tiles and Dutch fayence; beside it a square table, covered with a cloth, upon which steams always the inevitable samovar, surrounded by transparent cups and the crystal glasses in holders of metal filagree; the walls hung with draperies of dark-red velvet, faded pastels and photographs, and a fox hunt in oil.

One of the men, wearing a brown velvet jacket and his feet in soft shoes, leans back in a deep easy chair reading a newspaper. His hair has begun to whiten, but his brows are as black as his eyes, and his expression is one of bored weariness. The other—a young lieutenant in undress uniform, his opened coat showing beneath it a crimson silk shirt, paces back and forth with step regular and firm. He is tall and robust, with blonde hair and mustache, and a frank smile on his somewhat full lips.

The lady—young also, and fair and delicate, her golden hair coiled in a loose knot low on her neck—reclines on the divan, lazily smoking a cigarette. She is in dark blue, her waist clasped by a silver belt studded with turquoise, her slim, white wrist circled by a narrow band of plain, dull gold. Her eyes, bold and laughing, dilate from time to time with those fleeting gleams and shadows peculiar to the eyes of the feline race. Indolent and languid in repose, nervous and feverishly alive at the slightest movement, she is a singular mixture of vivacity and indifference, of softness and hardness, the scarlet curve of her rose-red lips announcing clearly an indomitable will.

Out of doors it is a night of clear metallic whiteness, the hoar-frost tracing even the windowpanes with fantastic flowers. Within, all is warm and snug—a balmy atmosphere impregnated with tea-fumes, tobacco, and that subtle odor of tanned skins, the perfume of Russian leather.

The silence of the room for the moment is broken only by the rustle of the paper and the lieutenant's measured tread. Presently the lady yawns, rearranges her cushions, and begins to sip from a frail Japanese cup the smoking amber fluid. She is awake at last. The lieutenant turns, a flame like a ray of sunlight in a dark place in his brown eyes, and throws himself at her feet. She answers the gay, caressing glance with a coquettish pout and a movement of the arm that makes the bracelet at her wrist ring like a bell.

"Prince," she says, suddenly, addressing the reader in the chair by the smoking samovar, "what are we going to do to-morrow?" What are your plans for us, prince, tell us?"

"To beat the oak plantation," he answers, tossing aside his paper. "The wolves, the peasants tell me, make nightly ravages there. Two nights ago it was a horse; yesterday a cow, killed so near daylight, too, that its body was still warm when they found it by the roadside."

"We shall hunt, then?" said Mme. Novar, with sparkling eyes.

"Yes, the dogs are in good shape, the hounds well trained, and they ask nothing better than to sharpen their teeth on the wolves' hides."

"But it will freeze by to-morrow," the young officer objects—"freeze hard, at that: the moon has a haze around it."

"And what if it does freeze?" asked the lady. "With my habit, toque and seal gloves I can face any weather. Don't forget the champagne, prince."

"Have no fear, madame; all will be done as you desire."

Another long silence.

Mme. Novar suddenly springs from her cushions. Throwing back her head with a bird-like motion, her loosened hair lies half uncoiled on her beautiful neck, her half-closed eyes open wide and eagerly.

"Listen—listen," says she; "I have an idea!"

"What is it?" the lieutenant demands, admiration of her beauty sending the blood to his good-natured face in an ardent glow.

"I wish, absolutely, without delay, that we go to hunt now, at once, to hunt in sleighs—in a troika. Quick, prince, quick! Give the order. What snow! What moonlight! What life! Everything calls us! Quick—quick, I say, prince, let the horses be harnessed while I go to dress myself."

"My dear madame," the prince responds, hesitatingly, and rising stifly from his chair, "with the greatest pleasure, but——"

"But what? What excuse are you seeking to find to keep us here in this downy nest, drinking tea, and tea, and tea? We shall turn into dried mummies. But see—see for yourself prince," flying to the window and pulling back with feverish haste the heavy curtains, so that a wave of silvery moonlight floods the chamber, only half-lighted by the shaded lamps, "a perfect apotheosis of fiery brilliancy! How is it possible to remain at home on a night like this?"

"My dear madame," demurred the prince again, a note of coldness, if not displeasure, in his voice. "I must be frank; it is my duty to warn you that I am not sure of my team. The orders of a pretty woman are absolute; I have passed a lifetime submitting to them: but in a case like this all depends on the training and experience of the horses. If they run, or upset us, no earthly power can save us from the teeth of the wolves, if they chance to be numerous. My middle horse is perfect—a wise old trotter; nothing could alarm him—but the other horses? They are young—too young, madame; they arrived from the Don only last spring, and are not yet sufficiently broken. They have hunted, it is true, but hunted mounted; it is not the same thing, and then, only in daylight. Wolves are thick these freezing nights, half-starved and not at all timid. Take the word of an old hunter, madame, and do not expose yourself——"

"You are jesting, my dear prince," Mme. Novar interrupts, with a little, dry laugh; "or, perhaps, now I think of it, maybe you are afraid? Be careful, or you will compel me to believe that you are growing old—which would be truly a pity."

She speaks with such an accent of mingled provocation, sarcasm and defiance, and in her eyes is such a mocking light, that the prince responds—by ringing the bell.

A servant in Cossack dress answers the summons.

"Tell Timoty to harness Faust, Arabi and Ares to the big hunting Troika; Faust in the middle. Let Andre prepare the guns and the pig, and be ready in half an hour."

The little Cossack, with his shining buttons and rosy face, bows and goes out, the prince follows him. Left alone with her, the lieutenant, a troubled light in his eyes, approaches Mme. Novar.

"Dear madame," he begins, gently, "I am neither an old or a cowardly man; but, nevertheless, I beg of you to give up this fancy. It is very tempting, I know, for a woman like you; but do not, I beseech you, compel your host to expose himself and his servants to a risk so terrible. For I give you my word that, with inexperienced horses, at this season of the year, when the wolves are most ferocious, it is a deadly danger to run. I entreat you not to insist. Our responsibility——"

"Thou, too, Sergei" cries Mme. Novar, with a burst of ringing laughter. "Away with fear! The more danger there is, the more one should feel one's self alive; the more sensations one has, the happier one should be."

The lieutenant answers her, with a reproving gesture: "For one's self alone, yes; but for others?"

A big sleigh, in the shape of a half-ship, the horses harnessed to the prow, the coachman in front, in his usual place, waits now at the foot of the outer staircase; between the shafts a big black horse, its intelligent face surmounted by long, pointed ears and, lighted by large, brilliant eyes, stands patient and stolid between the Ukraine runners. The right-hand horse is gray, the left-hand, roan, both of them thin, sinewy, with flowing manes and tails.

Timothy, the coachman, with his strong face and eagle glance, perched up aloft, touches his cap to the prince as he slowly descends the steps, Mme. Novar on his arm. She, pale and frail, but smiling, is clad from head to foot in sealskin, her flashing eyes sparkling like flame through her veil, a light rifle flung carelessly over her shoulder. The lieutenant follows, with Andre bearing half a dozen guns.

A clear, silvery light floods everything, house and grounds. Each line of the harness, the guns, the eyes of the horses and of the men shine under it with extraordinary brilliancy, and seem to give back to it electric sparks. Mme. Novar runs across the terrace, which the marvellous witchery of snow and moonlight has turned to purest marble. She springs to the sleigh, the men quickly follow; at the same instant low grunts and squeals are heard under the furs. Andre flings himself down on the spot whence come the squeaks, to stifle the sound, and the horses are off at a gallop.

Fast as the run is, it is almost noiseless, the fall of the horses' hoofs on the soft snow scarcely perceptible. The bells have been removed from both sleigh and harness. Now and then the coachman's whistle resounds through the stillness like a bird's shrill call. Again, one of the horses sneezes. But ever in this arrowy rush they cross the swelling, undulating plains that stretch out like endless sheets of silver.

The plains once passed, they enter a stately wood, whose trees form lines, black and wavering, of limitless perceptive. Timothy halts at a crossroad; the vehicle stands out against the snow like a bit of ebony on a field of pearl. The firs, stirred up by the wind, moan and creak dismally, the boughs rub and grind each other with a dull, crunching sound. The horses snort; the smothered cries rise still from the bottom of the sleigh.

"Is it to be here, your excellency?" asks Timothy, quietly.

"How far are we from the Green lake?" the prince responds.

"Nearly five miles; this road leads there direct, winds around the lake edge, and loses itself in the steppe on its way to the high road, which it joins near the post station."

Mme. Novar, still impatient, interrupts with the order. "Make the pig cry!"

"It would be better to wait, I think," Andre replies. "This road turns sharply out from here and the ditches are deep; granting, even, that we are able to keep on the margin of the pond——"

"Peace, fool!" cries Mme. Novar; "do as you are bid!"

And instantly there sounds from the sleigh a hidden medley of squalls, squeals and ear-splitting grunts, such as only a pig has power to utter, and whether bleeding to death or merely having his ear pulled, his gamut of notes is always the same. Mme. Novar smiles triumphantly; the lieutenant looks at her, then turns his eyes with a slight lift of the shoulder.

All at once the horses rear. Timothy braces himself like a rock in his seat. The edge of the forest glows now with a line of fiery sparks, greenish and change ul—the phosphorescent eyeballs of the wolves' advance guard, fleeing and skulking, but always returning with stubborn obstinancy toward the sleigh and its tempting freight. Timothy loosens the reins, and the middle horse starts off with his long, swinging stride, trotting steadily, without haste or spurts, and always restraining his companions, covered with sweat and quivering in every muscle.

The wolves, seeing their prey thus escape them, hurry to pursue. There is a score already, and their number steadily increases. They run in great leaps, two and three together, greedy, but not yet bold, urged on more by curiosity than ferocious appetite.

Mme. Novar, calmly elated, her hand on her rifle, awaits the signal to fire. The prince, straight and rigid, knits his brow with somber air. The lieutenant watches Andre teasing the pig to make it squeal louder. The wolves now are scarcely twenty feet distant from the hunters, and closing in rapidly. The troika quickens its pace, the side horses straining at the bit with furious energy.

Suddenly one of them trips, falls, but gains his footing with a frantic bound, at the same time uttering a strangled neigh; the sleigh jerks roughly, then follows with a rush. But even this brief check has brought the wolves dangerously near: they run—wolves and horses—side by side now, the wolves waiting for the horses to give out. At this close approach of the brutes the Ukraine horses, wild with terror, no longer know what they are doing. The time has come—with a sharp crack the guns go off, and four wolves fall. Their comrades fling themselves on their panting bodies and crunch them fiercely.

Meanwhile the sleigh has gained a little, but the smell and taste of blood has made the wolves rabid and filled them with a mad thirst for slaughter; the gap is soon closed between them; again the guns crack; only one wolf falls this time, but falls with a snarling yelp that sends the side horses off in a frenzied run. The middle horse, with the wisdom of an old hunter, though for some time exhausted and panting, and no longer able to control his yoke mates, allows himself to be borne along.

The prince, white as marble, whispers a low order in Timothy's ear. Mme. Novar laughs no more; her eyes shine like a cat's; she looks at the wolves and again at the horses.

"Superb! Magnificent! That old horse is simply amazing! His name, prince, his name?"

"Faust, madame," the prince answers coldly; "also permit me to remind you that our danger is very great."

"I know, I know—you need not tell me. If the sleigh upsets—well, nothing will remain of us but the buttons of our clothes. Pooh! I trust to Faust—he is a marvelous animal."

"By God's will, my prince," says Timothy, solemnly, "we'll reach the lake safely. How it will be then—I cannot tell; the lake-edge is bad, rough and slippery, the decent very, very steep."

"So! Take this then," the prince returns, giving Timothy his hunting-knife; "if we are spilled, I am not to fall alive into the jaws of these devilish brutes."

"I comprehend your excellency," Timothy replies.

"And thou, Sorge," Mme. Novar murmurs, pale, but smiling a bewitching smile into the lieutenant's face, "art thou afraid?"

"I, madam, afraid?" he answers slowly, looking at her straight in the eyes as he spoke; "no, but a useless death seems to me ridiculous—criminal, when imposed by the caprice of a wilful woman—but I submit to it."

Mme Novar shudders; for a moment she seems stunned. "And you speak thus to me, Serge?" she questions, amazed.

"To you, Maria," he answers, for the first time calling her by her name.

Something seems to break in her heart as she listens—a whimsical, thoughtless heart, a little too sure of its power, perhaps, but essentially feminine. The shock increases for her tenfold the danger to which they are exposed.

And such danger, too! The horses beyond control, maddened, their heads low, run haphazard. The wolves, relentless in their chase, are almost on them. Suddenly Timothy cries out hoarsely:

"The lake, the lake, my prince! We are there!"

Before them the forest opens, a broad, treeless space comes into view; it is the road—the road barely visible, which slopes like an ice-covered trench whose sides are nearly vertical.

The sleigh flies now like a squall of wind. Not even Faust attempts longer to check their headlong flight. He, too, runs blindly, flinging out his heels with the long, superb stride of a pure-blooded racer.

"God protect us!" murmurs the prince under his breath—"the victims of a woman's whim!"

He sighs, turns his back on Mme. Novar and seats himself by the coachman, the veins of whose neck swell out like whipcord as he pulls on the lines with all his might.

"Let them go," says the prince, "let them go, Timothy. No human power can save us now!"

"Holy Virgin, no; not till the lake is passed!" Timothy cries. "The steppes are just beyond; once there, we are saved!"

Like a bolt of lightning the horses fly down the slope to the lake. Seeing something like a sink before him, Faust, with lifted head and wide-open eyes, recognizes the danger confronting them, for he knows, like a human, what his end will be if his maddened comrades drag him over the brink of that treacherous spot. He braces himself stiffly, digs his feet deep in the snow, and throws himself to one side, thrusting the right horse with him and forcing him to keep in the road edging the water.

But the left horse slips, scrambles and falls. Now Faust rears, forcing with him the right horse to his haunches. Timothy, trusting to the instinct of the old horse, holds fast with one hand, stretches forward across the shaft and cuts with one stroke the fallen horse's traces. With a neigh of agony he instantly disappears under the swarm of snarling devils.

The sleigh flies on, the lake and wood are passed, and the broad highway of the steppes is before them. The hunters are silent and speak not a word; a light gleams in the distance, and Timothy turns the steaming horses toward it. It is the post-station in the midst of the steppes. They enter the courtyard like a charging hurricane.

Faust for a moment breathes heavily and loud, staggers blindly, whinnies low and shudderingly falls—never to rise again. He had broken a bloodvessel in his effort he had made to keep the sleigh straight when the side horse fell, and though bleeding inwardly all the while, the strength and courage of his race upheld him to the last.

Timothy, with bowed head and wet eyes, makes no attempt to hide his sorrow. The prince stands like a man of stone, gazing dumbly at his horse, already stiffening, his legs stretched out, his mouth and nostrils red with blood. Mme. Novar, too, for a moment is speechless; then throws back her head with a gesture of imperious defiance.

"It was not to be this time," she murmurs, softly. "We are saved—saved, Serge, my friend, though all depended upon a horse."

And moved, touched, in spite of herself, she turns and impulsively reaches her hand to her lover. But he stands like stone; he does not notice her hand, and his voice is ice itself as he mechanically repeats after her: "As you say, madame—all depended upon a horse."

Still she does not understand him; she is a woman and hard to convince, and she speaks again with tender inflection:

"How strangely you speak, Serge. It was Marta—did you know that, Serge—Marta you called me during—during our peril," she adds, with a silvery laugh.

"For the first and the last time, madame," the lieutenant returns, gravely. "Faust has broken that which bound me to my dearest desire. True courage is always admirable. I would see any woman brave peril coolly and would commend the effort; in like proportion would I despise her did her caprice endanger the life even of a dog. How, then, judge one whose wilful fancy exposes human lives to the cruelest danger? Men are not allowed, as you know, to draw back from a daring, even a foolhardy undertaking—a silly bondage imposed upon us by self-esteem. Therefore, a woman who abuses her privileges, who presumes upon this sentiment and knowledge, is neither more nor less than a murderess—a murderess with premeditation; and a woman, be her station what it may, without tenderness, is, in my opinion, a monster.

"For that reason, madame, permit me to congratulate you on the happy outcome of your whim and to bid you—farewell."—Translated for the Argonaut from the Russian.

A Cow With an Appetite.

Charles Chapman, a farmer living between Red Creek and Fair Haven, about nine miles from this village, recently discovered a large Holstein cow belonging to him in the act of devouring the entire family wardrobe," writes a veracious correspondent of the New York Sun from Walcott, in the Empire State. When found the cow had broken from the pasture lot and appeared on the porch where the clothing had been spread out to dry. She had already eaten a pair of trowsers, a vest, a cardigan jacket, two silk handkerchiefs, a pair of ladies' walking shoes, and the leg off a rubber boot. This was by no means her first square meal, but for once she appeared distressed, and Veterinarian Lester D. Seymour of Wolcott was summoned. He gave her some soothing drops in a bran mash and went his way, but the cow continued ill. Finally last Sunday he was again summoned, and this time discovered a hard lump in the animal's left flank above the wall of the stomach. Inserting a probe, the still clicked against a metallic substance within. Opening the wound, a pair of pincers were inserted, and from the cow's stomach was withdrawn an umbrella rib twenty-one inches long from tip to hinge and thence nine inches to the point where it had joined the handle. Bossy had eaten the family umbrella and apparently digested all the rib but one. She is now chewing her cud regularly and keeping her weather eye out for more wearing apparel.

Bound to Have a Ride.

Exchange: An undertaker in a country town in a neighboring state was lately proceeding with his hearse to attend a funeral. While on his way and ascending a hill he passed a couple of strangers on foot. Passing leisurely along, he thought nothing more of it until at the end of a mile or so, he thought he heard the doors of his hearse loose and swinging against the wheels. He stopped his horses, alighted from the hearse and proceeded to the rear to fasten them. What was his surprise to find one of the strangers, whom he had passed shortly before, snugly ensconced within the hearse stretched at full length and with his coat for a pillow, appeared to be asleep. Words would not awaken him, and it was not till he had taken him by the heels to pull him out that he aroused and was willing to come out. He pleaded that he was tired and took that method to get a ride. The doors, not being arranged for inside fastening, swung loose and notified the driver before he had met any one or passed any house to be seen with his living load within the vehicle for the dead.

For Better Highways.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—In the senate today on motion of Mr. Cullom, the senate bill to create a national highway commission and to prescribe its duties was taken from the calendar and passed. The commission is to be created for the purpose of a general inquiry into the condition of highways throughout the United States and the means for their improvement, especially as to the best method of securing a proper exhibit at the world's Columbian exposition of improved appliances for road making.

SWIPES KNEW THEIR VALUE.

A Newsboy Who Would Only Accept Five Cents for Saving Six Lives

Human life is dull and in small demand—spot cash, five-sixths of a cent each person—at Belden Point, on City island. These figures are the result of the sad experience of Edward Gallagher, of 330 West Forty-second Street New York. Edward is a newsboy, sometimes called "Swipes the Newsboy," as a compliment to his ability. He is not the original "Swipes." Edward is 16 years old, black-eyed, brown haired and small. What his muscular development lacks in quantity it more than makes up in quality. He sold a big armful of newspapers between this city and City island on Monday afternoon and then went rowing near Belden Point. Four men and two women who had sailed up from Greenpoint in the small sloop Agnes went in bathing at half-past 6 o'clock, so "Swipes" says. Three of the men and the women presently got into the skiff and paddled out into the sound, followed leisurely by the fourth man, who swam. Two hundred yards from the shore he grew tired, tried to climb into the skiff over the side instead of the stern and upset it. "Swipes" said he rowed fiercely to the rescue and saved them all.

"They make me weary," he confided to a New York Herald man. "When I began taking them in all the men could say was: 'We're all lost!' Soon's I got 'em ashore one says: 'Johnny, that was great work you done. I'm goin' to take up a c'lection.'

"He passed the hat and raised 30 cents out of all their clothes. When he give it to me he says: 'You're only a boy, you know,' an' I gave him back his quarter an' says: 'Yes, an' I ain't goin' to overcharge you. The hull gang of yer ain't wort' more'n 5 pence.' Then I skipped."

But will not some society or some kind individual give "Swipes" a medal?

Paying Points of Cows.

Prof. Robertson, the well-known Canadian dairy authority, specifies five points for judging a cow that will prove profitable, and properly holds that uncomfortable conditions of keeping, as to stable or defective feed, will neutralize even the best equipment. The points are as follows: "A long udder lengthwise of her body; and it should be very elastic in quality; the elastic quality means room to make milk. A soft skin—a mellow skin covered with mossy, silky hair; a cow has only one skin—one skin around her body and clear through by way of her stomach. The skin, if coarse or harsh, means sluggish digestion inside, and that means an expensive cow that does not digest her food or thrive well. Then a cow should have a large, roomy barrel, with broad ribs wide apart, for holding plenty of good, rough, bulky, cheap feed; it should be filled up twice a day. See that the milk-veins are prominent; prominence is a far more important indication than actual size would be. Firm muscles in the abdomen mean, good constitution; they are one of the best evidences of endurance and thrift that you can find in a cow; and endurance to stand the strain of giving milk continuously is what you want. A cow should have broad loins with long rump. A rather long, lean neck, with clean-cut face and prominent eyes. These points indicate enduring power to stand the strain of a long milking season. If a cow has these five points she will usually have the power of serving a man well."

Condition of the Range

The range, and the cattle industry in the southwest are favorably reported by the Texas Live Stock Journal which says that indications are that the grass will be better in Texas this summer than it has been in several years before. This will be the result partially of the heavy rains that have fallen all over the country and the consequent good seed that are now in the ground, but more especially the result of lightly stocked ranges. There are to-day fewer cattle in Texas than have been for several years. These cattle are more evenly distributed over the state and are scattered over a greater area of country than ever before, and for these reasons the grass will have an opportunity to recuperate and regain its former thickness and luxuriant growth. Pastures and localities that have heretofore been overstocked and eaten out now contain comparatively but few cattle. The few that are left will not interfere with the growth of the grass, but will thrive better and get fat faster than for several years in the past. Taking everything into consideration the Texas cattlemen while possibly crippled and in some instances embarrassed by the drouths, overstocked ranges and bad markets of the past certainly have nothing as far as the range is concerned, to complain of in future.

Cattle that are kept in the stall during hot weather should have well-aired quarters, from which the light should be partially excluded to check the attacks of flies.

The best way to grow a variety of corn that will mature. If it is struck by frost after it has arrived at the glazed stage it will keep as well in the silo and make as good fodder as if it had not been frozen; that is our experience.—Prof. Robertson.

Small potatoes may be cooked and fed to the early chicks with good results. Turnips are also excellent. It is perhaps well to say here that rotten potatoes have been found to be injurious to both fowls and chicks, and should not be fed.

A poultry writer says he kept a strict account one year with a flock of Leghorns to find out what it cost to produce eggs. He learned that it cost him a trifle over four cents a dozen. Every one who keeps hens for profit should keep such an account.

A Nebraska man has caught on to the idea of making poultry raising more profitable by caponizing his cocks and sending them to the New York and Philadelphia markets. He is familiar with the business, and will, no doubt, make a success of it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Want of Sleep

Caused by mental worry, misfortune, or by trying vainly to get a night's rest on some roughly built railroad has sent thousands of people to the insane asylums, there to drag out a miserable existence. To avoid such a melancholy fate, select "The Burlington" when obliged to make a night journey up or down the Mississippi valley. The most luxurious of Pullman sleepers accompany all night trains on this line, and the elegance and comfort of their fittings never fails to secure sound sleep. But even in such cozy quarters slumber may be disturbed by a rough track, frequent stops, and the irregular speed resulting from heavy grades. The smooth track, absence of grades, and even running of "The Burlington Route" guarantees the traveler unbroken repose. For tickets by this popular line, maps, time-tables, and other information, call on your local agent, or write to W. J. C. Kenyon, Gen. Pass. Agent, St. Paul, Minn.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

A mother near Mankato murders her two little children, poisoning one and throwing the other into a well.

Melvin R. Baldwin of Duluth is nominated for congress by the Democrats in the Sixth district.

Benj. Richardson, while engaged in repairing a telephone wire at Winona, received a shock that may prove fatal.

The eating house of R. R. Wise at Staples was struck by lightning during a storm. The house caught fire and was entirely consumed. Loss, $4,100: insurance, $1,500.

The house of Judge E. L. Evans of St. Cloud was robbed the other morning, the thieves securing two silver watches and a quantity of provisions. No trace of the thieves.

Mrs. Lovelace, who poisoned herself recently at Paynesville, has apparently recovered, but is yet very sick. Her husband is now under arrest for threatening to shoot her.

James McKinnon, a laborer, 30 years of age fell out of a third story window of the Timlin House at Duluth, and was instantly killed. He was unmarried. It is supposed to be a case of somnambulism.

Ralph Bradley, the 13-year-old son of A. W. Bradley of Duluth, was drowned at Fond du Lac while bathing. He was a member of the First M. E. Church picnic party.

Patrick Mulligan stabbed William O'Donnell at Northfield in a quarrel over a woman. Mulligan plunged his knife into O'Donnell's abdomen, cutting a very ugly gash.

Samuel Bland, son of Joseph Bland, living about three miles south of Buffalo, committed suicide by shooting the top of his head off. No cause is assigned for the deed.

A young man named George Watson was knocked down and robbed by two tramps on the railroad track about one-half mile from Northfield. The tramps secured $10 and a few trinkets.

Conrad Baugh, a mason employed laying brick on A. L. Hill's new factory at Faribault, fell from the top of the wall and struck on a pile of planks 40 feet below. No bones were broken but he is badly shocked and perhaps fatally hurt.

A team attached to a buggy belonging to Robert Helmer, took fright at a bear which was being led through the streets of New Paynesville. Mrs. Helmer and little baby were thrown from the buggy and dangerously injured. The little baby may die.

An old gentleman named Russert, about 58 years old was struck and instantly killed by a passenger train near Lewiston. He lived about 1½ miles west of Lewiston and was trying to cross the track with an arm'ful of brush when struck.

While inspecting a revolver at Wabasha, Otto Burkhardt accidently exploded the weapon, the ball taking effect in the bowels of John Tritchler. He died next morning. Tritchler was a single man, thirty-one years of age, Burkhardt did not know the weapon was loaded.

Tom Annunson committed suicide at the town of Elk Lake. He used a large jack knife, cut open his abdomen and let out his intestines. He lived about three-quarters of an hour. The cause was despondency and sickness. Deceased was thirty-six years old and unmarried.

The saloon of Herman Hass, on Front street, Mankato was entered from the rear door the other night. The money drawer, containing $100, was taken. The theft was committed while the proprietor was at the front door of his saloon. No clue to the theft.

The Farmers' elevator at Herman, burned, together with about 900 bushels of wheat belonging to George Bruggencale, the present agent. The wheat was fully insured; no insurance on building. The origin of the fire is a mystery. The elevator was built about five years ago at a cost of $1,200.

The recent storms have almost completed the destruction of crops in the vicinity of Montrose. Fully three-quarters of the wheat and oats lie flat on the ground and in such condition that not over one-half of it can be harvested with machines. The yield cannot exceed one-half a crop and will be of an inferior quality.

A Northfield special says: Harvest is well under way in this section. Nearly all the oats have to be cut one way on account of being lodged, but the wheat in most places is as straight as ever. Both wheat and oats are well filled and the indications are that they will give a heavy yield.

NORTH DAKOTA

Postmaster Bogue of Bismarck, N. D., is to be removed.

The barn of Leo Noicker at Sanborn was struck by lightning recently, and three cows and six horses had a close call.

W. H. Botheim, employed as a scaler in Walker's lumber yard at Grand Forks, was shot and killed recently.

The Northern Pacific elevator at Buffalo was struck by lightning recently, burning to the ground with 10,000 bushels of wheat. The loss is $25,000.

A passenger train struck and instantly killed a man named Ignatius Wishaar, three miles from Argusville. Letters on his person show he was from St. Martin, Minn.

Tramps held up three men at Hillsboro, recently, getting various amounts from each one. The victims were horribly abused. Twenty-one of the tramps were jailed.

Misses Effie and May Warner, dancers of the Calhoun Opera company, at Grand Forks received a telegram announcing the death of their uncle, Lawrence Everly, of Marion, Ind., bequeathing them his entire estate, estimated at $200,000.

Earl Duell, the 9-year-old son of County Judge Duell, of Devil's Lake and another boy drove out to Henry W. Lord's land, near the city, to catch hawks. While standing in the cart the horse started and ran throwing Duell on his head and chest. Causing serious injuries.

Maj. Fleming has discovered some insect damaging the roots of wheat. There is considerable scare over it, and it is claimed that great damage will be done to the crops. The wheat dies as if blighted. Nearly all the state is affected.

Theodore L. French, an early settler and leading business man of Wahpeton, died recently from spinal injury caused by a fall. He was getting into his buggy to drive home, when the horse suddenly started, pitching him out onto his head. His body was entirely paralyzed.

B. E. Cole, while out hunting chickens with Ald. Mann and Bert Walker, about five miles north of Devils Lake, accidently shot himself, the whole charge of chicken shot lodging in the right side below the ribs. The opening was large enough to let the bowels protrude. The case is critical.

Mrs. Ida Dick, who lives near the tankage station of the Standard Oil company, at Fargo, had her residence broken open recently. She endeavored to escape through the window, but was caught and a dastardly assault committed. The woman screamed and fought with all the force possible, but failed to get away from her assailant. She is sixty-five years of age.

The recent hot weather has caused all grains in the vicinity of Devils Lake to ripen rapidly. Barley cutting has already begun, and wheat will soon be ready for the harvester. There has been no material injury to any grain from any cause thus far. This vicinity needs several harvest hands at once. A long season's work with good pay is open to as many men as want work. Five hundred men can find work in Ramsey county alone.

Some time ago C. F. Reutchler, of the firm of Reutchler & Schoeniger, butchers of Fargo, received an anonymous letter postmarked at Chicago, urging him to make restitution for certain deals of which he professes to know nothing and warning him that he would be severely dealt with if restitution was not made. The other day a package was received from Chicago and upon opening it was found to contain an exploded dynamite bomb, together with the card containing skull and cross bones and the words "I hev spoken." The matter has been put in the hands of the police.

WISCONSIN.

Cleveland, Ohio, parties have recently started a plant in Prescott for the manufacture of plain and fancy wire fences.

Dousman's flouring mills at Depere burned the other day. The loss will reach over $30,000.

The warehouse and pattern room of Wm. Aylward & Sons' stove foundry at Neenah was burned recently, with a loss of about $8,000; insured for $4,000.

The house of Town Treasurer Louis Bauer of Lima was struck by lightning recently and was burned, together with the contents; insurance small.

Arthur Rhodes, a farmer living near Beloit, was killed by lightning while unhitching a horse. His brother, on the opposite side of the horse, was unhurt, as was the horse.

The supreme court has reappointed the old law examining board except that A. W. Sanborn, of Madison, was substituted for M. A. Hulery, of Wausau. The board will meet at Milwaukee, Aug. 30.

A general strike of sawmill hands at Eau Claire for 10 hours instead of 11 is expected in a day or two. The lumber companies all deny any knowledge of the expected strike. Seven companies are running 11 hours and one 10 hours.

A large barn belonging to Wm. Moore, who lives eight miles from Bloomer, was struck by lightning during the late storm and burned to the ground. Forty tons of hay was destroyed and two horses were killed.

Hon. R. B. Kirkland, executive commissioner of the state board of World's Fair managers of Wisconsin, has announced that a meeting of the board will be held at West Superior Wednesday, Aug. 17. The board consists of 12 members.

Fond du Lac county cheese makers are out about $6,000 by the disappearance of Evertt Clarke, a cheese buyer. Clarke bought heavily four weeks ago on the dairy board, received the goods and then disappeared.

John R. Davis, at the head of the John R. Davis Lumber Company, employing about four hundred hands at the Philips Mills, Neenah sent word to the superintendent that in the future 10 hours would constitute a day's work with the same pay as had been paid for 11 hours.

IOWA.

Myron Perkins, a farmer living near Owasa, was struck by lightning and instantly killed.

The plant of the Kerr Ventilated Barrel works at Ottumwa was entirely destroyed by a fire which originated in the drying kiln. The loss is $75,000; insurance, 29,000.

The People's Party of the Eighth congressional district held an exciting convention at Creston and nominated W. S. Scott, president of the State Miners' Association, for congress.

During a terrible storm recently at Waucoma, George, aged 17, only son of William West, a wealthy farmer, was killed by lightning. The father was severely stunned, but will recover.

Mrs. Moulton, of Hopkinton, Delaware county, committed suicide by cutting a deep gash in her abdomen, through which the viscera protruded. The death of her husband some time ago unsettled her mind She had recently been released from an insane asylum.

An unknown tramp assaulted and outraged Mrs. Ernst, a woman 76 years old, at her home on a farm nine miles north of Sioux City, while her son, with whom she lived, was in the field working. Young Ernst followed the man to this city and here lost track of him. Mrs. Ernst will recover.

W. W. Goddard, formerly proprieter of the Sioux Falls Daily Gazette, will commence the publication of a Democratic weekly newspaper, to be known as the Mason City Herald. The county is radically Republican, but the enterprise is being backed by a number of influential Democrats.

A rock from a blast in a bluff at Keokuk, crashed into the smoking car of a St. Louis, Keokuk & Northwestern passenger train. William Burt, of Chicago, and W. B. Carnes, of Essex, Io., were struck in the head by fragments. Burt is probably fatally injured. Carnes was seriously hurt.

Mrs. James Fitzpatrick, wife of the city recorder of Dubuque visited the office of Dr. Conset a dentist, to have some teeth extracted. She decided to take chloroform, and was accompanied by Dr. E. A. Guilbert, one of the oldest physicians in the city. The drug was carefully administered and all was seemingly well, but she commenced to sink and died in the dentist's chair in spite of all efforts to restore her.

DIED OF MADNESS.

A Tailor at Tacoma Kills His So-Called Daughter and Himself.

Tragic Sequel of a Shameful Story of Guilt and Disgrace.

TACOMA, Wash., Special; Aug. 15.—Henry Harris, an insane tailor, to-day shot his daughter Etta, aged twenty-five, stabbed himself three times, then plunged the knife into the girl's heart. Both died in a few minutes. From letters addressed to the coroner and undertaker it is shown that the girl was betrayed under promise of marriage and the disgrace was too much for him. It unsettled his mind and he decided that both must die. Ira G. Benton, a drummer for the Portland Cracker company, is alleged to be the man. Harris was a Mason and belonged to the A. O. U. W., and leaves a wife and three children in Spokane.

A former landlady of Etta Harris' tonight stated that the girl told her that Harris was not her father, she having never seen him until she was seven years old. Letters to her from him were more like love letters than missives from parent to child. Harris' assertions that he could not live without the girl, and preferred her to his wife, indicated that the title of daughter was adopted to cover the intimacy between them. When Benton's intimacy was exposed Harris sold out his shop and followed him to San Francisco in an endeavor to kill him. The girl subsequently went gunning for her betrayer, but detectives warned him in time.

GUN AND PISTOL.

ASHLAND, Wis., Special, Aug. 15.—About 5 o'clock this afternoon James Pinney, a brakeman employed on the Omaha road, was shot and almost instantly killed.

Pinney, C. H. Schuster and one Temple, a conductor for whom Pinney and Schuster were braking, were returning from a hunting expedition, and upon arriving at Ashland Junction Pinney and Temple became engaged in a wrangle. Pinney had a double-barrelled shotgun in his hand and swung it around to strike Temple. At the same time Temple pulled a revolver from his pocket. Pinney struck Temple on the head with the gun, which discharged it. Both barrels emptied themselves into Pinney's body, entering the right breast and passing through to the left side. Simultaneously with the discharge of Pinney's gun Temple fired his revolver, the bullet entering the right hip. Schuster and Temple put Pinney's body on a hand car and brought it to Ashland. Temple's wound on the head is a very serious one. Several different stories are current as to how the affair happened, and, awaiting an investigation, Temple and Schuster are lying in jail.

A REFORMATORY BLAZE.

Kid Prisoners Held Responsible for a Bad Fire.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Aug. 15.—This evening flames were discovered issuing from the south wing of the brush factory at the Hungingdon reformatory, and in less than an hour this building, together with the adjoining three-story building used as a carpenter shop, was entirely destroyed. The entire reformatory, containing 450 inmates, was for a time at the mercy of the flames. The brush factory was operated by the Consolidated Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, whose loss on stock and machinery will reach $20,000. The insurance on the stock is $7,000. The destroyed buildings were 200 by 50 feet, each being three stories high. They are a total loss, which will aggregate $20,000, insurance $10,000. The fire is believed to have been the work of some of the inmates of the institution.

Two months ago similar attempts were made to destroy the same building. It is thought that one of the inmates who was doing light repairs in the factory, to-day, maliciously dropped a match among the material. During the height of the fire the 450 inmates of the reformatory kept up a constant yelling that drowned the cries of the firemen. For a time after the fire started there was a perfect pandemonium among the inmates. The guards, however, soon restored order.

FIVE SHOTS FIRED

By a Kasota Clerk and an Unsuccessful Burglar.

KASOTA, Minn., Special, Aug. 15.—The general store of M. A. Ostrander & Co. was entered about 2 o'clock this morning by a burglar. Eugene G. Donahue, a clerk sleeping in an adjoining room, hearing some one at the jewelry case, slipped into the room and fired. The compliment was returned. Five shots were fired, three by the clerk and two by the burglar, who escaped through a back window which he had pried open with an iron bar. None of the shots took effect, but the call for Eugene was very close. The case contained about $500 of goods. When the attack was made the burglar had begun filling a large satchel, but had to drop it and flee for his life.

As Bad as Sunday Fair Opening.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Two men were shot, half a dozen stabbed and a score or more presented with black eyes and other facial bruises during a free fight in Thomas Hanlon's resort at 723 Clybourne avenue early this morning. The man who did the shooting is supposed to be an ex-convict, named Burke, who was one of the gang of 300 toughs who attended a dog fight at Niles City Saturday night. Burke, whose money was on the under dog, had jumped into the ring with a big revolver, breaking up the gathering and causing the referee to declare the fight a draw. The fight resulted when on returning home, the men who thought they had been beaten out of their money endeavored to revenge themselves on Burke.

A Railroad Robbery.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 15.—The reigning sensation in railroad circles is the discovery of a conspiracy to rob the Big Four railroad. The detectives of the company have been working on the case for several weeks and have accumulated sufficient evidence to warrant the arrest of the guilty parties. The chief conspirators are located in Columbus but have assistants at different points along the line. C. F. Evens, the company's trusted local freight agent at Columbus, is said to be involved, as are also other prominent officials of the Big Four.

KANSAS FRIGHTENED.

Arrival of Russians From the Cholera Stricken Region.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 15.—Considerable excitement has been aroused in certain quarters here over the arrival of a number of Russians from cholera affected parts. Thursday last a car load of these people were brought to Kansas, five families stopping in Topeka. The others went to Piva. Four of the families went from here to Mayette yesterday, leaving one family in Topeka. As these people come from a region on the Volga where the cholera is now raging, some fear is expressed by those who know the circumstances that they might bring in their boxed-up household goods germs of the disease. The danger is slight, yet there is good reason to be on the watch, and there would be a feeling of greater safety if Russian immigration were temporarily stopped.

Very Much of a Drawback.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—The impregnability of the armored cruiser New York, built at Cramp's ship yard and now being prepared for service, is said to have been considerably lessened by the defective placing of the armor plates in her terrets. The builders of the vessel have nothing to do with these plates, as it is managed in Washington by the naval board. The contract called for ten inches of solid steel in the turrets, and it was intended to be for the purpose of deflecting the shot of the enemy. The excuse or the change given by the builder is that more room would be taken up by inclined than virtical plates and that there would be less space inside the turrets. The armor is of nickel steel made by contract by the Carnegie-Phipps works. The New York is being pushed as fast as possible at Cramp's yard, but the delay in finishing the steel plates and other parts of the vessel will keep her at least two years at the wharf after the builders are through with her.

Died of Hydrophobia.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—Leroy Bell, six years of age, died of hydrophobia last night after eleven hours of agony. The boy was attacked July 11 by a large dog, which threw him to the ground and tore his face and throat in a savage manner. The wounds, however, healed rapidly and nothing more was thought of the matter until three days ago, when the boy complained of feeling ill. In spite of medical aid he grew rapidly worse, suffering from convulsions so violent that it required the strength of several men to hold him in his bed. The Pasteur institute had declined to treat the boy unless it was proven that the dog was mad, but as the dog could not be found nothing beyond cauterization was used to prevent hydrophobia.

Pelican Flames.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15.—At 10:30 this morning smoke was discovered issuing from the second story windows of the large four-story brick building known as the Brooklyn Cooperage company. The building was fully equipped with automatic extinguishers, but notwithstanding this, when the firemen arrived on the scene the building was a mass of flames owing to the inflammable nature of the material contained therein. The Brooklyn company is an auxiliary of the American Sugar Refining company, and is under the management of Charles Perrilliat. The building was erected only a year ago. It is insured for $300,000. The total loss, including building, stock and machinery, is estimated at $350,000.

Extending the Russian Church.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash., Aug. 15.—Nicholas, bishop of the Russian orthodox church on the Western continent, has returned from the north after a tour of investigation in Alaska. He made arrangements to establish a station in the Arctic ocean among the Esquimaux.

Unholy Holy War.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 15.—Le Patriote publishes a letter from the Lake Tanganyika country, the writer of which declares that the Arab rising in the Congo State is in obedience to the proclamation of a "holy war" from Mecca.

TREACHEROUS BANKS.

A Cave-in Ruins a Railway Depot in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 15.—This morning the earth on which the depot of the New Orleans, Fort Jackson & Grand Isle railway was constructed began to tumble and shake, followed by a caving of the bank in front of it for about thirty feet. This building was one of the prettiest on the river front of Algiers. It was about 200 feet long by 50 feet wide, and at the end nearest the ferry landing a two-story building had been erected and was occupied as the business office of the company. Early this morning about thirty feet of the river bank caved into the river. The strong columns and posts supporting the roof of the depot began to careen, followed by a crashing of heavy timbers up to midway of the building and making noise enough to be heard a mile. All the woodwork broke in two and half of the depot dropped into the river. During the afternoon further caving occurred and the offices of the company became a total wreck. By 6 p. m. the cave-in was about 500 feet long and 90 feet wide. City Surveyor Brown made soundings along the caving bank this afternoon and expressed the opinion that by the use of piling the bank can be restored. The loss to the railway company is estimated at $30,000.

MAY COMPROMISE.

The Iron Hall Case May Be Taken From the Courts.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 15.—It is generally believed here to-night that the suit asking for a receiver of the Order of the Iron Hall will be compromised. Before court convened this morning to resume the hearing of evidence in the suit the attorneys for the two sides held an hour's secret consultation. Plaintiff Daniel W. Kneller intimated that it was a movement to effect a compromise. Executive Committeeman J. W. Sayre of Philadelphia was put on the witness stand. The feature of his evidence was a statement he made that when Somerby appointed him supreme adjuster of the order he asked him to sign a paper pledging himself to support Somerby in all matters. He signed the paper, he said, after adding that he would support the Iron Hall. For several months Sayre has been having a contest over the office of adjuster with Somerby's son-in-law, McMeeham. This morning the executive committee confirmed Sayre's appointment. When the court adjourned to-day, it was until next Wednesday morning.

MURDERED AND MANGLED.

Horrible Fate of the Son of a New York Millionaire.

LYONS, Ga., Aug. 15.—J. A. Clark, a rich timber buyer of Darien, Ga., and New York city, drew $4,000 from the Savannah bank to pay off the hands employed at his father's mills in Lake Bluff and English Eddy on the Altamaha river. While waiting for the night passenger train here he was suddenly confronted by strange men, negroes it is suspected, who struck him on the head with some blunt instrument, stabbed him several times in the breast and back and robbed him. The robbers then took their unconscious victim and laid him across the railway track a short distance from the station. The south-bound passenger train ran over the body, cutting it in two and mangling it almost beyond recognition. The murdered man's father is a millionaire, owning several large saw mills, ocean vessels and tramways. He was formerly connected with the T. Hilton Dodge Lumber company of Darien and New York. He has an office in New York city.

Was the Woman Murdered?

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—The police at Fort Sheridan, twenty-four miles north of here, are working on a mysterious case which they believe to have been a murder. Early this morning a school house two miles north of Fort Sheridan burned. Shortly before it was seen in flames, two young men, walking along the railroad track heard a woman screaming and calling for help, the voice coming from the school house. Instead of assisting her, they became frightened and ran away. Other parties saw a man and woman quarreling in a carriage being driven toward the school house. The supposition is that the woman was murdered and her body burned in the school house.

Spooner for Governor.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Special, Aug. 15.—The Democratic county convention selected delegates to the congressional district convention favorable to Hon. Frank Coburn and instructed for him; also delegates to the state convention in favor of the renomination of the present officers, and to the senatorial district convention uninstructed, but the sentiment is in favor of letting Trempealeau county name the candidates. The Republican convention chose as delegates to the state convention: S. G. Hyde, G. H. Gordon, Ole Storey, G. L. Kingsly, R. Tausche, Frank Pooler, A. K. Hanson, Charles Leise. They are uninstructed, but favorable to Senator Spooner for governor.

Spent Money on a Man.

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—It is learned here to-night that the bookkeeper, a lady whose name cannot be ascertained, of William Lehan, the proprietor of a wholesale meat concern is a defaulter to the extent of $120,000. It is said she became infatuated with a young man some years her junior and spent money in escorting him to various summer resorts. One week ago she was accused by her employer and fell to the ground in a fainting condition. She admitted her crime and Mr. Lehan allowed her to go her way without prosecution.

Only the Poor Have the Plague.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 15.—The cholera is now here, it is officially admitted. A report just issued shows that there were 154 cases of the disease and 31 deaths from it in the city between Aug. 1st and 12th. Thus for only working people have been attacked by the scourge. The conditions under which they live invites attacks of the disease and through ignorance they passively resist the endeavors of the authorities to improve the sanitary conditions of their dwellings.

Annihilated by Arabs.

LONDON, Aug. 15—A dispatch received to-day from St. Paul de Loanda states that the Arabs have annihilated the Congo state forces stationed at Beaukamba, at the confluence of the Lualaba and Kassair rivers. Commander Hodesby was captured by the Arabs, who subjected to horrible torture for three days, after which he was beheaded. The sultan's troops have returned, after setting fire to some bushes and deserted villages. Many volunteers have deserted to the rebels.

The Iron Workers' Scale.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 15.—The scale for the jobbing mill was agreed upon in conference. The rollers agreed to a reduction of about 15 per cent on plate rolling. The heaters' wages will be slightly affected. The pay of roughers and catchers remains the same.

A Large Contract

Puck: Stanby—Miss Triller hasn't favored us with any music this evening. I'm going to make her sing.

Old Mr. Triller—I'll make it worth your while if you will, young man. It's more than the Italian professor I've subsidized can do.

Supt. of Construction material Spillman has about twenty men at work unloading steel and ties for the new branches. He expects to get a switch engine up here in a few days to move the cars.

Harvest in some places has commenced but many fields will not be ready for the binder for a couple of weeks. The crop will undoubtedly be the smallest we have had for several years.

F, H. Gamble, of Crookston, was here last Monday and signed a contract with the school board to teach the village school the ensuing year. Mr Gambell comes well recommended and will we think prove a successful teacher He taught last year at McIntosh.

The editor of the McIntosh News delivers himself of an editorial in his last week's issue which would lead one to believe that he had been purchased to do dirty work, or that he simply had another insane spell. We are inclined to believe that the latter is the cause as it is incredible that any one would be so foolish as to pay him. The article needs no answer as it will have no influence. The braying of an ass on a neighboring hill would cause much more comment.

Crookston Tribune: The republicans are beginning again to take credit to themselves for the excellent crops that are looked for and which the prospects so far seem to promise in most parts of the west. They take great comfort in figuring that the new party so-called "as they say," the people's party (as though they had only just heard of it, instead of having been in a frenzy over it for over a year) will lose a great many votes on account of the good flush times that are expected. They mean to create the impression that the People's party is composed entirely of poverty-stricken malcontents, whose stomachs it will only be necessary to fill in order to bring them back like sheep into the republiban party. When a republican organ talks such nonsense it is pretty good evidence that it cannot get much comfort out of talking sense and truth, it is simply aping the actions of the boy caught in the woods after dark, whistling to keep its courage up. It is beset on all sides by the possible ambuscades of the enemy, every bush harbors a new horror, and in its desperate longing for some thing to cling to comfort, it grasps at the crop prospects and sings forth its merry lay with an attempt at cheerfulness which is both touching and rediculous. It is well that the republican papers are making all this fuss and getting so much comfort out of conditions which they are not responsible for. If they didn't rejoice now they probably never would have a chance. The people will no doubt show them that they are not yet such fools as to credit the bounties of providence to the account of any political party; one would think, however, from the tone of these republican papers that the republican party is the confidential partner and business manager of the almighty and if one were to believe half of their rant about the great prosperity of the producing classes, one would imagine this was a Utopia, flowing with milk and honey, instead of being the favorite stamping ground of the mortgage shark the land shark and the collection shark. These last named are the products of the republican business administration in this neck of the woods.

By the census just completed India has 280,000,000 of people. And these 280,000,000 of sentient beings acknowledge as their absolute ruler a fat white woman who has never set foot on their shores, who couldn't order a meal from a bill of fare in their language, and who doesn't know a Brahmin from a Parsee or a prize-fighter!

C. G. Rapp returned last Friday from his extended trip to Sweden and Norway. He has been away since last February and reports having had an excellent time. He is looking much fleshier and is greatly improved in health, The old country air seemed to agree with him. He brought back with him a number of curiosities among which is a piece of swedish money which is three inches square and weighs thirteen ounces. It is made of copper and is dated 1726. Mrs. Rapp will remain in Sweden a couple of months longer. Minton Holmes and wife are expected here in about a couple of weeks.

The wheat receipts at Minneapolis for the crop year ending Aug. 31 will exceed 70,000,000 bushels. Less than 2,000,000 bushels are required to bring the aggregate quantity up to 70,000,000 and there are four weeks of the present year left in which to do it. The amount of wheat handled this year is greatly in excess of that in any former season. For the crop of 1890-1, the receipts were 52,151,605 bu. which was about 9,000,000 bu. more than was received in any previous year. From Aug 31 to July 25, the Minneapolis mills probably ground almost 37,000,000 bu. and by Sept 1 they will probably have ground over 40,000,000 bu.

Not a year, says an exchange, passes but the metropolitan press, basing their estimates upon the appearance of the crop before the critical period of the filling of the grain arrives, sends out glowing reports of the magnificent harvest in store, and the bears in the wheat pit at once jump upon grain and hammer it down vigorously. Then cometh a change. The grain lodgeth: the hail cutteth; the rust rusteth; the rain raineth and the beautiful visions of hope fade away as quickly as the beams of the aurora flicker out in the northern sky. Estimating the wheat crop before the grain fills may be pleasant exercise, but the figures will never do to bank upon.

The Republicans have been busy since the Democratic congress adjourned showing that the late congress appropriated fully as much if not more money than did the celebrated "Billion dollar congress" which the Republicans controled two years ago. One thousand millions of dollars seems a good deal of money for congress to get away with but be it Democratic or Republican it seems to be the regular thing, and still the old parties say we do not need reform. If the celebrated wheat crop of 1891 had sold at two dollars per bushel it would just about foot the bill of one congress, and the Democrats have just demonstrated that they are just as profligate as the Republicans. Do we need reform?

The floating saloon anchored in the Red just above the ferry last week, It was receiving a liberal patronage from the 115 men on the Grandin farm and Supt. A. R. Dalrymple rather emphatically invited the proprietors to move along. They moved. It is expected that they will remain at Caledonia for some time. The affair is quite a curiosity. On a barge about twenty feet long a small house has been erected and when any thirsty looking individual appears on the banks, the barkeeper puts to sea in a boat and carries his passengers both ways. They are said to do a big business.—Halstad Reporter.

When flies sting sharply and ants may be seen making haste with their tiny burdens; when the donkeys bray unusually and the cows cluster in the corners of the fields before milking time; when the pigs pick up straws and carry them about with lively interest, as if they had some business with them or wished to learn if straws really do show the way the wind blows; when the dog is heavy with sleep, and the cat seems possessed to wash her face, then look out for rain,—Detroit Free Press.

New York Herald: Under the present administration of affairs the monopolist is everywhere and the people are nowhere. The masses are cajoled and the classes are rampant, The rich capitalist can have all he wants if he bleeds freely before election; but the poor man must look for himself. This is not a particularly inspiring outlook but we are optimistic enough to believe that there will be a grand shake up by and by, and this crooked business may be made straight by proper indignation.

Mr. P. Meehan, of Thief River Falls, was in town last week. He is of the opinion that the opening of the Red Lake reservation depends largely upon how the election goes this fall. If the Democrats elect their president he is of the opinion that the Republicans in charge will hurry matters up as fast as possible so as to get along as far as they can before the Democrats come into power, If the Republicans win he thinks they will take their time about it, The way matters have been dragging along it looks as if Mr, Meehan was about right,

WHO LOVES HORSES LOVES WOMEN.

Perhaps Some Girls Lead Unhappy Behind Speeders, but Don't Be Too Sure.

The usually apparently endless stream of wagons and carriages, two wheelers, drags and sulkies was filing along the west side drive in Central park, and a wide awake citizen was seated beside a reporter looking on, when the wide awake citizen relieved his mind by this speech:

"I never can understand the women and the horsey men—how they get along together. Several things are common to most men who are what I call addicted to the horse. They either wear the most peculiar and pronounced hats and coats that attract attention from afar, or they pay no heed at all to dress and look shabby even though they are rich. Next, they are rough in speech and often profane. Then again they are so fond of what is called 'talking horse' that many of them seem to warm up on no other topic. But last of all, they are all fond of women. That is no new discovery of mine. I suspect that, though women were men's first companions, the horse has been coupled with woman in man's admiration ever since the quadruped attained sufficient development to create the race of horsey men, and it has long been a rule that the men who love horses are also especially fond of women. But what I can't understand is what fun the ladies get out of the situation.

"I sit here in the park on every fine day and study the case. The horsey men do not talk to the women beside them. They are the most tiresome companions in the world. They never, as a rule, know anything about the scenery they are passing through. They see and enjoy nothing but the horse they are driving. They sit bent up on their seats with a rapt or a stolid expression of face watching the animal they drive. Whether there is a magnetic tingle in the reins, such as we fishermen feel in the pole that is tugged by a trout, I cannot say.

"Either that or the mere delight of watching the rise and fall of the horse's back as it warms to its work suffices to satisfy the man, and there he sits, silent and engrossed—about as admirable a companion to the woman by his side as a mummy or a statue, but that is not all. He has taken the precaution to put on big goggles to protect his eyes from dust and flying stones and clots of dirt. She cannot so disfigure herself, and therefore has to hold her head down and strain the rim of her hat to make it help protect her face. Sometimes she has all she can do to keep her hat from blowing away. What fun any woman gets out of such a companionship is more than I can see.

"But," said the wide awake man, "I was once speaking to a woman of this view of the case, and she plunged me deeper into the mystery. 'A man with a horse has a tremendous advantage over those who have not got horses in gaining favor with young girls,' said she; 'a horse will cover many deficiencies in a man, and a girl will take him and drop a dozen better fellows.' 'Why?' I asked, 'are women so fond of horses?' 'Well,' she replied, 'they like men who own horses; such men are not so numerous as those who don't.'"—New York Sun.

Is an Elopement Ever Excusable?

I should hesitate to say that an elopement is never excusable, but it is very rare indeed that the evils resulting from not marrying would approach in consequence those resulting from a marriage entered into under circumstances which made an elopement seem necessary. I believe in early marriages, but I also believe that every influence should be placed about that sacred institution to keep it pure and holy; that none should enter into it "lightly or unadvisedly." And it would be usually safer to postpone a marriage until objections could be overcome rather than to run the risks attending an elopement. It is a great temptation to a bad man if a woman is willing to enter into a secret marriage, and an elopement partakes of that secrecy. I certainly do not consider this an idle question, but one which calls for much thought.—Mrs. Lyman Abbott in Ladies' Home Journal.

Cows Milked by Machine.

A machine, it is claimed, that will milk thirty cows in one hour and do it so easily and neatly that the cows will scarcely know it has been invented in Glasgow. The machine is constructed on the vacuum principle, and when adjusted to the cow the milk flows in a continuous stream and the machine does the work without assistance. The contrivance is largely used in Scotland, and its practicability has been long ago demonstrated. The greatest objection to the machine by farmers will probably be its price. It is valued at $55 in Scotland, the duties add $45, making the total cost $100.—New York Telegram.

Never Lend Your Books.

If you like to give any one a book, by all means do it; but if you lend a book, it generally means losing it, for which you receive no thanks or even an apology. I have long ago given up lending books, for I have always found if a friend borrows a volume—which he probably does not look at for a fortnight—you immediately want to refer to it the moment he has left the house. —London Graphic.

Rats Come from Asia.

Rats are natives of Asia, and their raids westward belong to comparative modern times. From the fact that the rat is not mentioned by any of the early Europeans it is surmised that it was unknown west of the Ganges in ancient times.—Philadelphia Press.

Why Diamonds Are Liked.

The diamond was reputed as a preserver against epidemics and poisons. It calms anger and fosters conjugal love. The ancients called it "the stone of reconciliation." It symbolizes constancy, strength and innocence.—Paris Figaro.

BEFORE HE THOUGHT.

The Poor Fellow Was Really Hungry and Spoke His Mind Too Frankly.

Tom De Witt, Jack Ford and Ed Stillman had been living on cigars and hope for two days and were nearly starved to death.

They had decided to honor some of their Vassar friends with a visit, at the time of the commencement, when the college discipline is somewhat relaxed; but a short stay in the place had convinced them that the fare of the Poughkeepsie boarding house was inadequate to satisfy Murray Hill appetites.

So when, after a morning drive, the girls announced that they intended to effectually silence the current feeble sneer at the cooking abilities of fair collegians by giving the party a lunch prepared by themselves, there was joy in the hearts of the men. At the word "lunch" Tom looked at Ed and Ed looked at Tom, and Jack looked straight into the face of the prettiest girl and said most felicitously, "Oh, thank you!"

It was to be served in one of the rooms at 2 o'clock; "in the meantime they would stroll about the grounds and get up an appetite."

At last the lunch came. It was a "pink" one. The table was artistically and tastefully decorated. Big pink bows and bunches of roses covered the cloth, and elaborately painted dinner cards directed the guests to their seats.

As course succeeded course the men began to wonder where the substantials were coming in, and to realize that a third disappointment had fallen to their lot.

The little tubs of deviled salmon, the impalpable croquettes with tender asparagus tips, the tiny dabs of shrimp salad in the center of cool, green lettuce leaves, the salted almonds, the olives, the meringues glace and the strawberry sherbet were all very dainty and delicate, but not particularly satisfying to earthly mortals whose thoughts were running on thick, juicy English chops and big pewter mugs the size of an infant's bathtub.

And when as a finishing touch cute little packages of tutti frutti, cunningly tied up in pink ribbons, were passed around on a silver plate, the men felt unequal to further conversational effort.

A few hours after the feast Tom De Witt remarked that it was time for them to be starting, as they expected to catch the 7:30 train for New York.

"Oh, you'd better stay over until the 10:10," remonstrated a sweet sophomore; "you will just spoil your evening. What will you do when you get back to the city?"

Here was the great opportunity of Jack's life, and unconsciously he rose to it.

"Oh," he said earnestly, "we'll go straight to a hotel and get something to eat, for we haven't had a square meal since we have been in this town!"

For a moment three girls stared blankly at each other, and then the young men gathered their hats and canes together and, saying hurried "good nights," sped, with horizontal coat tails, in the direction of the depot.—Harry Romaine in Homemaker.

How the Cobra Gives Warning.

The most dangerous reptiles of India and Africa are the cobras. No snakes, not even rattlesnakes, are more dreaded, and with reason. As the rattlesnake warns the ear by its significant "rattle," so the cobras warn the eye by the mode in which they expand the upper part of the body when irritated. This expansion is produced by a sudden movement of the ribs of that region of the body. Usually they incline backward, but the animal, when irritated, makes them stand out at right angles to the body, and so, of course, forces outward the skin which covers them. Thus the neck, or part just behind the head, becomes greatly expanded and flattened, as it also does, though in a less degree, in the Australian blacksnake. This expansion is called a hood, and so the animals are called hooded snakes. In some of them there is on the back of the hood a dark mark, something like a pair of spectacles, and they have therefore been called spectacle snakes.—Quarterly Review.

How Hawthorne Wrote.

We never think of local color in connection with Hawthorne. Apparently he didn't need to put it on. Perhaps he would not have understood about it. He might have thought that the counterpart of the literary term (local color) applied socially would refer to the women who paint, the term has such an artificial sound. One has an idea of a colored photograph; the local color is not a part of the substance, but is imposed. Hawthorne was not conscious of any necessity of giving local color to his creations. He wrote of that into which he was born, and his creations, even when they were in foreign settings, glowed with that internal personality which is never counterfeited by veneering.—Charles Dudley Warner in Harper's.

Definition of a Journalist.

"A man of literature compelled by circumstances to be also a man of business." That is the definition of a journalist, given by Mr. Sala. It is a good enough definition in its way, though it cannot be considered as invariably accurate. There are a good many soi disant journalists who are certainly not "men of literature," and a good many more, whose claim to the title of journalist is unquestioned, who are certainly not "men of business."—London Globe.

Then and Now.

Jones (in the honeymoon)—I cannot imagine, wifey, what is the matter with my razor. It has an edge on it like a saw.

Mrs. Jones (timidly)—Oh, darling, can you forgive me? I cut off some hooks and eyes from an old waist with that razor, but it wasn't real sharp then.

Jones (quietly)—Dearest, you must be careful. You might happen to cut off one of your pretty little fingers.

Ten Years Later: Jones (crossly)—Some infernal idiot has been tampering with my razor.

THE LAST SWALLOW.

Last of his clan, he wings his aimless flight,
Beneath the cold gray sky;
No comrades wheel around on pinions light,
As in the days gone by.

Alone he roams the trackless fields of air,
From dawn to set of sun;
Haply he finds the yellowing woodlands fair,
Although the heavens are dun.

• • • • • •

Why dost thou linger when thy mates have flown
Across the Southern Sea?
Winter already on his trump has blown
A warning stern to thee.

And they, thy mates, are in sunny Spain,
Are circling in the blue,
Where azure heavens and all unrufled main,
Blend in the same soft hue.

We dream of Summer still while thou art here;
But soon at death of day,
Like a last hope, thou too wilt disappear
For ever and for aye!

HOW SHE HATED.

JUST picture to yourself a charming villa in the Italian style standing upon a little point of land which runs out of the eastern bank of the Hudson, not many miles from Newberg. The house is light and airy; the lawns are close-mown and dotted with flowers; the trees are plenty and give graceful shade, and at the moment when our story begins—a summer evening at sunset, when the sky was flooded with a rich yellow—the whole scene was radiant with a supernatural beauty. On the piazza of the house were two young ladies, one reading a novel as she lay in a comfortable hammock, the other embroidering a pair of slippers in a large arm-chair.

The girls were opposite types of beauty. The young woman who was working on the slippers was a sweet-faced blonde.

The young lady in the hammock was a decided brunette. Her hair was so black that in some lights it looked blue. Her eyes were a rich brown, something like that Van Dyke brown which painters so like to mingle with their warmest shadows.

The minutes rolled along and soon the sun disappeared in the gorgeous west. Then the blonde girl looked up from her work and addressed her companion.

"Violet," she said, "what in the world have you been reading all afternoon?"

The dark beauty in the hammock looked up with a little yawn, and, brushing away a fly that had made a post of observation of her piquant nose, replied:

"I've been reading a very stupid story entitled 'A Mad Marriage.'"

"Stupid!" exclaimed the blonde, opening her blue eyes to the fullest extent. "I didn't think so."

"Minnie Duncan," said Violet, "you are just the simplest-minded girl in the world."

"Violet Caryll," retorted Minnie. "I should like to know why;"

"Why, my dear, you read this book and thought it beautiful. I think it is stupid, because the hero don't exist except in the imagination of novelists, who write of men as they ought to be, not as they are."

"Oh, nonsense! there are good men in the world. You haven't happened to see any of them."

"Well, you must acknowledge, dear, that I've had plenty of chance to find them. I looked in vain for one at Washington. I failed to find them in the court of England. I saw none in Paris, I saw none in Italy, I saw none anywhere. I found the same old worn-out types—the man of fashion and the man of reason—but the man of noble soul I never met."

"I think I have met one," said Minnie, softly, with a tender light in her eyes.

"Oh, yes; you are in love, and you think your lover a hero. Go on. Marry him, then you'll find your deity is only a little clay idol, after all. Bah! I hate men!"

"And I love Harry Marshall, and no matter how much you hate men, you musn't say anything against him. Besides, I hope to convert you."

"There you are, hoping against hope."

"We'll see," laughed Minnie. "My cousin, Tom Neville, who lives next to us, will be home from South America to-morrow, and I shall then show you a man who is a man."

"Nonsense! If he's a man he's just like the rest. I don't want to meet him; I tell you I hate men."

There was a step on the gravel walk, and turning around Minnie saw a bronzed and bearded fellow, her quondam fair-haired cousin.

"Oh, Tom," she cried, "how glad I am to see you!"

"My sweet, little cousin," he said, stroking her golden hair, "so you missed me, eh? But you took good care to console yourself by finding a permanent resting-place for this bright head. God bless you, Minnie, I hope you'll be very happy."

And he stooped and kissed her gently on the forehead.

"But, oh, Tom!" she said, "I am forgetting." And turning to where Violet lay half concealed by the corner of the house she said:

"Let me present you to my dearest friend, Violet Caryll. Violet, my cousin, Mr. Neville."

Violet bowed without rising from her recumbent posture, and Neville smiled slightly as he thought: "Independent and saucy as she can be."

Tom Neville was a magnificent man, six feet one inch, strait as an arrow, powerful in every sinew, with flaxen hair and beard and a bright gray eye, but nevertheless the calm of this little girl annoyed him.

"Tom," said Minnie, "I hear mamma going up-stairs and I want to speak to her. Excuse me, please."

And Minnie ran into the house, leaving her cousin and friend together.

"Miss Caryll," Tom said after a moment's silence, "what are you reading?"

"Dear me! Mr. Neville," replied Violet, "What a stupid question! Whenever I read every one who cannot find something else to say asks what I am reading. I might answer you, like Hamlet, 'Words, words, words;' but I'll have compassion on your ignorance and tell you. I am or was till you came, reading 'A Mad Marriage.'"

"Do you like novels?"

"Yes, or I shouldn't read them. Nevertheless, I find many of them very provoking, especially those written by women."

"Why?"

"Because they create ideal men such as we look for in vain in real life. But there are no such men."

"There have been men," said Tom, "who gave up all for love. Antony found it—"

"Stop right here!" cried Violet. "Poor Marc Antony has been dead and buried 1,900 years. Don't for goodness sake, don't drag him out and make him the scapegoat of your sex any more."

"Miss Caryll, I am sorry you are so bitter on my sex.

"What are you two discussing?" said Minnie, running out on the piazza. "It's growing dark, I hope you haven't been quarreling."

"Oh, no," said Violet with a sneer; "it takes two people to quarrel, and they must both have some decided characteristics."

"Now Violet," said Minnie. "It's too bad to give Tom hard shots after his South American experiences. Tom, go and see mamma, she wants you, and don't stay here to be abused. You have done enough in the way of bravery in the morasses of the Amazon."

And Tom, laughing, bade the young ladies good-evening and went into the house to see his aunt before going home.

"Minnie," said Violet a few moments afterward, "Did you say your cousin had been brave in the southern wilds?"

"Yes; didn't he tell you anything about his trip?"

"Well,—no; I don't believe I gave him a chance."

"Why, he was quite heroic. When the vessel lay at anchor in the mouth of the Amazon, Tom's chum, Frank Lusby, fell overboard. The bay swarmed with sharks and Frank can't swim. Tom seized a long knife, which the boatswain's mate carried and, without a moment's hesitation, sprang into the water. Frank had sunk for a second time and a shark was only a few yards away. Tom rose to the surface with Frank in his arms, slipped the rope they threw him around Frank and bidding the men on deck haul up, he turned to defend himself from the shark. When he was hauled up on deck his arm was broken in two places by the blow he received from the shark's tail when it dived.

Tom Neville sat by his bedroom window that night and smoked for an hour thinking about a rich, dark face with a piquant nose, a pair of deep eyes and a set expression of scorn.

The possessor of the said face was in the meantime indulging in her little reveries, too, and went to sleep thoroughly satisfied that Tom Neville was one of the same ordinary men she had always met.

* * * * * * *

Violet was sitting by the river one after-noon reading. Tom came in from rowing and went up and sat down by her.

"What are you reading?" he asked.

"The same old question," she replied. "I am reading the same impossible things about the grand love of man for woman."

"And you don't believe it?"

"No!"

Tom sprang to his feet.

"Miss Violet," he said; "this is too much. You know that I have not watched your every movement for the last six weeks for amusement. You know that I love you, that I worship you. Tell me I am not mad."

He stretched out both hands to her and stood still. But she arose with a laugh.

"Good-bye, Mr. Neville," she said; and turning, she went up the path, leaving him alone.

Tom flung himself upon the greensward and stared blanky out upon the river.

* * * * * * * * *

A week passed. Minnie was standing on the piazza and Violet was mounting her horse for a ride.

"Tom goes away to-morrow, Violet," said Minnie.

"Does he?" said Violet, with a half-suppressed sigh.

"Yes, poor fellow; your refusal has broken his heart."

"He is a—go on, King!" exclaimed Violet, suddenly striking her horse with her little riding whip.

She rode out into the deep woods among the hills. The woods were bright. Here and there were little clusters of wild flowers, about which the slow bee hung in drowsy delight. Birds united in a chorus of vesper praises; the whole scene was full of joy.

But Violet saw none of it. There was at her heart a dull pain she could not understand. She knew that since she had laughed Tom Neville's love to scorn something of the world's brightness had faded, and yet she told herself every hour, every minute, that she did not care for any man. She rode on and on, heedless of the coming night.

Over in the silent west big, black clouds were gathering and lightning danced across the sky.

But Violet was too deep in her thoughts to notice these things. And presently the storm burst upon her with all its fury.

At the first drop of rain she turned to go home, but a terrible flash of lightning, accompanied by a deafening burst of thunder, broke from the inky heavens, and a towering tree fell, splintered and blasted, immediately behind her horse. The terrified beast, mad with fright, dashed down the road at a wild gallop. Violet tugged at the reins till her little hands were purple and swollen, but all to no purpose. On went the horse, faster and faster.

Turning a short curve in the road, she saw another large tree lying directly across her path. Then she knew her fate. She had often heard of frightened horses running headlong into stone walls, and she knew her horse would not stop till he had hurled himself, against that fallen monarch of the mountain.

She closed her eyes in terror. Then she felt a sudden slacking of her horse's speed and opened her eyes to find Tom Neville holding the bit in an iron grasp, while the horse still struggling forward, trampled under foot the manly limbs, But Tom never let go his hold till the brute stopped and Violet dismounted.

"Thank God, you are safe."

"But you are hurt," she cried, wringing her hands, "oh, what shall I do?"

"I am—sorry," he said, with an effort, his face becoming very pale, "to trouble you, Miss Caryll, but I fear—you—you—will have to go home—alone—and send some one—after me."

For a moment Violet hesitated; and then, remounting her still trembling horse, she rode away.

As soon as her back was turned Tom Neville sank back senseless, for both his legs were broken.

* * * * *

When Tom returned to consciousness he found himself in his own room, in bed, with both legs confined in a heavy casing of plaster paris.

Violet came in after awhile.

"Mr. Neville," said Violet in a low, tremulous voice. "I have come to thank you for my life and to ask you to forgive me."

"To forgive you?"

"Yes; for hurting you, first in your heart and then in your limbs. If I could only give my life to atone for the wrong I have done you!"

And the tears rolled down her cheeks while she buried her face in her hands.

For a few minutes both were silent. Then she looked up and their eyes met.

"Violet!" he said softly, "will you give your life to atone for my past? Will you give it—to me?"

"Tom," she cried, throwing herself on her knees beside the bed, "take my life and my soul!"—New York News.

Early Envelopes.

He would be thought an eccentric person who should at this day fold and seal a letter so as to leave a blank outside, and thereon write the address, discarding the envelope. But the time is easily within living recollection when one of the things which went to the making of an accomplished lady or gentleman was knowing how to fold a letter neatly in oblong shape, the vacant space coming outside for the direction, and the edge being secured with sealing wax, or oftener with wafers. It is difficult to understand why envelopes came into common use at so late a day, for they were devised and in some instances made use of at a very early period. Their first appearance seems to have been in France, where letters were enclosed in envelopes as long ago as the reign of Louis XIV, in the last half of the seventeenth century. Specimens dating as far back as 1653 have been preserved to this day; and a letter written, sealed and addressed by the most Christian King himself to his natural son, the Count of Soulouse, in April, 1706, was enclosed in an envelope, and is still in existence. Other envelopes possessing historical value are those which contain letters written by Madame de Pompadour in 1760, by Frederick the Great 1766, and by Sir James Ogilvie to the British Secretary of State in 1696.

The Old Hornbook.

How many people know what a hornbook is, or rather was? For granting that some hornbooks are still found in curiosity shops and the like places, they yet belong too much to the past to be lightly written of in the present tense. But, however out of use now, we may be sure that our great-grandfathers and grandmothers, or at least all of them who knew how to read, were no strangers to the hornbook.

A hornbook was, as its name implies, a book of one page and one leaf, a sheet of light-colored horn, with or without a wooden frame, with the letters of the alphabet, big and little—from A to Izzard, as the old people say—engraved upon it; very substantial, and alas! uninviting to the infant mind set to learn from its dingy surface. But in the day of hornbooks, children's taste for pretty pictures, bright colors and general variety was not much consulted; and the hornbook, compared with our own primers and spelling books, was, perhaps, as dreary as the "Elements of Mortality" or "Improving Selections for Youthful Minds" in contrast to "Little Women" or "Alice in Wonderland."—From Peterson's Magazine.

Surprised Pig.

Little Pete never intends to misstate things, but his very figurative imagination sometimes gets the better of his facts. He starts out to tell something which is perfectly true, but before he is done he has generally drifted off into some picturesque exaggeration. The other day he exclaimed to a companion:

"Just think Billy! Out in Chicago they aren't going to be cruel to the pigs any more when they kill them. They're going to chloroform them."

"How do they do it?" asked Billy.

"Why, they just put a sponge in front of the pig's nose, and he goes right to sleep, when he comes to himself he says, 'Why, my ham's gone!' And by and by he says, 'Goodness! Some body's sawed my leg off!' and then he finds out that he's all cut up!"

How to Take a Sweat.

People who take camphor, ipecacuana and half a dozen kinds of teas to provoke a perspiration are grossly insulting their internal organisms. If a man wants to sweat, there is no better way than to wrap himself up in a blanket and drink half a pint of the hottest water he can swallow. Nor is there any fear that it will provoke nausea. Warm water will generally nauseate, but hot water never, and in fever, where perspiration is desirable, if a pint of water will not induce it, the case is almost hopeless.—New York Journal.

Man's Relative Height and Weight.

A man five feet one inch should be 120 pounds; five feet two inches should be 126; five feet three inches should be 133; five feet four inches should be 136; five feet five inches should be 142; five feet six inches should be 145; five feet seven inches should be 148; five feet eight inches should be 155; five feet nine inches should be 162; five feet ten inches should be 169; five feet eleven inches should be 174; six feet high should weigh 178.—Journal of Health.

ALL TAKE ONE PATH.

Icebergs and Their Journey From the North.

It does not seem likely that more than one or two hundred large icebergs make their way each year in the only practicable path that can take them beyond the Arctic Circle—that which is afforded by the current which sets out of Davis Strait, and down the Labrador shore, and then eastward into the Atlantic. Although we have as yet but little decided information concerning this ocean stream, save that afforded by the movements of the berg and floe, we can readily see how it affects the journey of these wandering fragments from the vast Greenland glaciers. Though somewhat inconstant, this current is a tolerably steady stream, setting south through the wide channel which separates the shores of Greenland from those of the many islands which beset the northeast coast of the American continent. By this southward-moving water the ice is propelled out into the open sea. The stream continues to the south, but widens and diminishes in the energy of its flow. It shortly comes in contact with the Gulf Stream, which it somewhat affects, and by which it is much affected. A part of the southward-setting current passes down along the shore of Labrador as a superficial stream of no great width or speed. Another, and perhaps the larger part, flows beneath the Gulf Stream, and in time joins the great slow-moving procession of Arctic waters which, following the bottom of the deeper sea, in the end attain the equatorial district. For a considerable distance southeast of Greenland there are thus two distinct currents in the ocean waters—a lower, moving southwardly, and an upper, or superficial stratum, creeping toward the north. The thin floe-ice, floating altogether within a hundred feet of the surface, is beaten back against the Labrador shore by the surface stream; but the icebergs, because of their greater depth, are driven forward by the under-current in a southerly direction. Owing to this peculiarity we sometimes may observe the bergs ploughing their way through vast fields of floe-ice as steadfastly as a steamship when it breaks its way in the new-formed ice of a harbor.—Professor N. S. Shaler in August Scribner.

AN OLD DUELING PISTOL.

It Has Seen 400 Years of Service and Is Still in Good Condition.

Maj. Moore has among his collections of curios a dueling pistol which was brought to this country from England by one of the earliest settlers of Virginia, says the New York Journal. The weapon, which, is a flintlock, is fully 400 years old and is still in good condition and if capped with a bit of flint and loaded could be fired.

The pistol has a brass barrel, which unscrews about an inch from the flash-pan. To load, it the barrel is unscrewed, the powder poured in and rammed down. The barrel is then replaced and the bullet, about three times as large as a buckshot, is dropped in. The sight is on the side of the barrel between the trigger and the muzzle. Instead of sighting over a point on the extreme top of the barrel, as one does when handling a modern revolver, the old pistol was held so that the sight was taken over the knuckles of the person using it, says the Washington Post.

The pistol was manufactured in London and was brought to this country by a man named Mason, who was related to Lord Fairfax. It remained in the Mason family until 1879, when it was given to an old fisherman by Miss Mason, a granddaughter of the man who brought it over from old England. The old fisherman gave it away and it finally found its way into the hands of one Detective Raff, who presented it to Maj. Moore.

The descendants of the original possessor, Mr. Mason, still reside on the farm, on which he settled 300 years ago in King George country, Virginia. How many affairs of honor this "lingering eternity" of a barbarous custom has figured in is not known by its present owner, its history having been lost in the recent rapid changes of ownership.

An Ingenious Machine.

A most ingenious machine has been contrived for use in the operations of wood-working, which, in the niceties of carving moldings, will execute as much in a day as the average hand carver can produce in three years—that is, it will produce various designs on any kind of work, adapted also to run any length, width and thickness of stock, and perfectly finishing from 1,000 to 1,500 lineal feet of material in 10 hours. Its construction is simple, so that the device requires but four by three feet of floor space. The die forms the rim of a little wheel, under which the molding is fed, like boards into a planer, the die being kept at a certain degree of heat, and as the molding goes under, the imprint is made. It requires no special practice to run the machine, the most important point being to keep the die at the right heat, the die being made hot by the flame from a gas pipe. The drier the wood the more successful the carving, nor does it crack or break in passing under the severe pressure of the die, but comes out as flawless as if done by hand. Many patterns of dies can be adjusted to the machine, simple or elaborate, equal success being attained with both.

Making a Name for Himself.

A visitor to the studio of a celebrated New York cartoonist remarked to the gifted artist:

"You are very skillful in drawing pictures?"

"You bet. I'm the boss."

"It must be very difficult?"

"Not to me."

"What is the first thing you put on the paper when you begin to draw a cartoon?"

"My name," said the caricaturist, throwing out his breast and leaning back on his dignity.

Simply Awful

"I had what the doctors called the worst case of Scrofula they ever saw. They cut off one finger and then one-half my left hand, they were so diseased, but the scrofula broke out on my right arm and on both sides of my face and neck, nearly destroying one eye. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and found the sores gradually began to heal. I kept on till I took ten bottles and was perfectly cured. For the past four years I have had good health and no sores. I am now able to work all the time and know not how to express my gratitude to

A WOMAN'S LOVE.

Is It Possible for It to Come More Than Once?

Can a woman love twice with the same intensity? is a question often asked but seldom answered. There seems to be so many sides to the question that an answer all at once would be impossible, but viewing it as any other problem, weighing every phase and looking at it calmly and dispassionately, there comes more than one reply to the interrogation and it resolves itself into this, "Yes and no," says the Philadelphia Times. Woman may love with equal intensity at different periods of her life, but the love will be of an entirely different character. To begin with many women imagine the fancy of a moment to be the lasting regard of a lifetime, and for the time being they will be as much in earnest, suffer as keenly and feel as deeply as though they were really in possession of the genuine sentiment. Therefore when years go on and they meet a man who inspires a true, earnest and sincere feeling of affection the world wonders at the second out-pouring of feeling and considers her either fickle or capable of more than one great love in a lifetime.

So few women know their real sentiments until they are in the neighborhood of 30 that it is no wonder that the man who pleased the girl at 17 has no attraction for the woman whose tastes have changed, whose mind has broadened, while he, a man at the time her early fancy was attracted, remains as he was, while she progresses far beyond him.

Love, lasting and enduring love of the right type, comes but once to stay; but fickle, fleeting fancy can so disguise itself that no one could discover it was not the genuine article until the passing years proved to the unhappy woman her mistake. It is not the intensity of affection to be questioned, but it is genuine character. Once the true ring sounds and never again will any love take its place; it will be enshrined in her heart forever, and come woe, come adversity, the steady fire will glow with undiminished fervor until the lamp of life goes out forever.

HOLLAND'S LITTLE QUEEN.

What She Does and What She Studies Daily.

The little queen is said to be a charming child, with pretty manners and a sweet disposition. She is very popular in The Hague, where hardly a house is without her portrait. The writer in the Figaro does not even mention little Wilhelmina's supposed nervousness, about which so much was said last summer. He describes her as a well-grown, handsome, healthy girl, fair and rosy, and fond of romping and childish games. She is, indeed, brought up sensibly and hygienically enough to suit even the most advanced members of our "National Health" Society. She loves riding, skating and rowing. She is much in the open air, and is devoted to animals, especially to her ponies, dogs and pigeons. Even the deer in the park at 'Loo know her footstep and run to meet her.

Loo is the summer and country residence of the mother and daughter, as The Hague is the winter one. Here little Wilhelmina has a garden and greenhouse of her "very own," to say nothing of a pigeon house, a tiny model farm and last, but not least, a chalet delightfully fitted up as a kitchen, where the little girl on Saturday half holiday's bakes cakes and sweetmeats and hands them proudly around to the court ladies.

Whether in town or country Wilhelmina rises early and begins work at 8:30 she enjoys learning and has quite a talent for languages, speaking English and French well, while German is an accomplishment to come. She works with her governess and her masters till 11:30 and then drives or rides her favorite white pony till lunch time. There are two hours more of study in the afternoon and at 6:30 she dines, generally alone with her mother. She is a sociable child and has many young friends at The Hague, to whom she loves to introduce her numerous family of dolls—dolls of all kinds and all sizes—who receive an infinite amount of care and attention, and are nursed through all their imaginary ailments with the greatest devotion.—Paris Figaro.

Are the Boys Spoiled?

"The boys always are allowed to do just as they please," said a young girl, who was one of a large family of brothers and sisters. "Mother never denies them anything, and we girls must give in to them all the time just because they happen to be boys. It is 'Go get your brother his handkerchief,' 'Just run upstairs and straighten your brother's room,' when I have probably not an hour before tidied up everything except as a trivial, but a hurried search for some missing article has given him an excuse to turn the room topsy-turvy with no thought of the work I have to do to set things to rights again.

"Honestly, I don't wonder you see so many selfish husbands; they can't help it. If they were only the children of course they were spoiled, and if they had a lot of sisters the result is even worse, for the principles instilled from babyhood are that the woman folks regard him as a ruler whose every word is law and whose slightest wish should be obeyed therefore. When he gets a wife he expects her to go right on with the hero worship, and the poor creature finds it sometimes a very trying burden to bear.

"Now, why a mother should make so much more of a boy just because he is a boy is more than I can understand. When I have a son, if that day ever comes, he shall be trained from the first to wait on his sisters. He shall learn that women are made to be served, not to serve, and that he is not yet master and they the slaves. I know I am very emphatic, but I have worn my ill-out hunting lost collar buttons, gloves and neckties, straightening and picking up after several of these lords of creation, and I know whereof I speak, and if ever I have children of my own, the boys are going to be trained so that their wives will have at least one thing for which to thank the much-abused mother-in-law."

Doubtful Success.

Imagination sometimes creates difficulties, and sometimes, but not so often, it helps to overcome them. A maiden lady, living at a fashionable watering-place on the western coast of England, is said to have had a great curiosity to see Napoleon.

When he was a prisoner on board the Bellerophon tossing in Tor Bay, she braved the dangers and discomforts incidental to a trip in a small fishing boat on a windy day, in order to get a look at the captive who had "whipped the world."

On returning to shore, late in the evening, exhausted but rejoicing, she was asked by a less enterprising friend if she had really seen "the monster."

To this question the enthusiastic spinster replied by lifting up her eyes and hands of fervent gratitude to heaven and exclaiming:

"Yes, thanks for the sight! At least," she continued, dropping her voice to a doubtful mutter, "I believe I almost saw his coattails."

Hot Boxes.

Country Gentleman: One of the most vexatious things that can occur in harvest is the heating of the boxes of the mower or reaper. One is in a hurry in harvest, and if the mower or reaper must stop for boxes to cool the chances are that several hands will be delayed in their work or forced to stop altogether until the machine can be started. The most frequent cause of the heating of boxes is failure to take up wear, thus allowing the box to be too large for the shaft. In reapers and mowers those boxes most apt to wear are made in halves, separated by packing and kept together by bolts. It is easy to "take up the wear" of the box by taking out a little of the packing and screwing up the bolts. This should be done each year. I have known reapers and mowers to be worn out and cast aside without the boxes being attended to once.

Grasshoppers Good to Eat.

Philadelphia Telegraph: A grasshopper plague being advertised for this summer in the West, the department of agriculture asks: "Why should not the people who are reduced to starvation by these insects use them for food?" Experiments have been made by its scientific corps which prove that grasshoppers are both palatable and nutritious. Gentlemen employed in the investigation have tried them in many styles of cookery and have declared them to be delicious. Unfledged grasshoppers, boiled for two hours, with butter, spices and salt added, compose a broth that is scarcely distinguishable from beef broth, though possessing a peculiar and indescribable flavor of its own. Fried in their own oil or roasted, they have a most agreeable nutty taste and crispness. Ground and compressed they will last fresh indefinitely.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Wound up —the man or woman who's "run-down." Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery sets the wheels going. It starts the torpid liver into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses, repairs, and strengthens the system, and restores health and vigor. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, and builds up flesh and strength.

For all scrofulous humors and blood-taints, and even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula), if taken in time, it's a positive remedy.

Unlike the sarsaparillas, which claim to be good for the blood in March, April, and May, "Golden Medical Discovery" works equally well at all seasons.

Unlike other blood-purifiers, too, it's guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or your money is returned.

On these terms, it's the cheapest. You pay only for the good you get. But it's the best—or it couldn't be sold so.

Higher Cultivation Makes Most Profit.

The amount of fertilizing material in the soil, and the cultivation given, determine the amount and value of the crop. A wise farmer, then, who desires to make his work pay, should not make it his first effort to plow and plant a great area of land, but rather to see how rich he can make a limited amount, and then to apply the most thorough cultivation to that. If this principle should be generally adopted as the basis for all agricultural work we would soon see much better crops as a rule, farms under higher cultivation, better profit for the farmers, and less of the cry that "farming don't pay."

THE NEWS SUMMARY

The Latest News of the World Condensed and Arranged in Convenient Form.

Washington, Personal, Foreign, Criminal, Casualty and Other Important News.

THE CAPITAL.

It is claimed that the appointment of Senators Allison and Jones and Representative McCreary as members of the international monetary conference was illegal.

The controller of the currency has received an application from F. H. Wellcome of Granite Falls asking for authority to organize the First National bank at Appleton, Minn.

Canada will propose that the present custom as to canal tolls be continued till the close of navigation this year, and that a conference then be held with the United States government for the settlement of all differences.

The treasury department has issued a circular officially informing its officers, employes and contractors and others of the act passed by congress limiting the time of daily service of laborers and mechanics employed upon public works to eight hours.

Secretary Foster has returned from Deer Park. United States Consul McCreery was among his earliest callers, and submitted a written statement in refutation of charges of official misconduct recently preferred against him. The secretary refuses to make public the statement or give any information on the subject.

PERSONAL.

Walter Mann, a prominent citizen of St. Paul dies after a brief illness.

John C. Warwick, who defeated Maj. McKinley in the Sixteenth Ohio congressional district in 1890, dies in Washington.

Louis Bogran, ex-president of Honduras, is in San Francisco on his way to Europe. He denies that he is an exile, and says he is traveling to benefit his health.

A private dispatch received at San Francisco announces the death at Cleveland, O., of Count Giulio Valensin, owner of the celebrated stock farm at Pleasanton, Cal. He was well known all over the country. The body will be taken to Florence, Italy.

Rev. Graham Taylor, D. D., pastor of the Fourth Congregational church, New York, and professor of practical theology in Hartford Theological seminary, has resigned to accept the call of the Chicago Theological seminary to the chair of "Christian Sciology and Bible Study."

No man in Europe, it is claimed, has so many orders and decorations as Prince Bismarck, who could not wear them all at once if they were to be attached to him three deep. The order he thinks least of, is the one he got from the present kaiser, directing him to reign.

Charlemagne Kopler has left the stage to enter the Dominican convent for monks in Louisville, Ky. Mr. Kopler is fairly well known as an actor, and this step of his will occasion some surprise. He is thirty-two years of age. He has left Cincinnati for this city.

CASUALTIES.

Six railroad laborers are killed and fifteen injured in a wreck in Ohio.

Four men have died as the result of injuries received in the accident at Ogden, N. J.

A bad washout has occurred on the Canada Pacific railroad, fifty-five miles east of Rat Portage. A waterspout is supposed to have been the cause.

The Kalispell lumber company's mills at Kalispell, Mont., burned. The cause is unknown. By hard work the lumber yards were saved. The loss is total with no insurance.

It is reported at Houston, Tex., that the two-masted schooner Snow Flake, Capt. Fontroy, with a party of fifteen on board, was capsized in a squall on the coast below Huma, all on board being lost.

Fully three-fourths of Delmar, Del., was flame-swept and 300 people are homeless and robbed of all their earthly possessions, and added to these misfortunes one person was burned to death. The fire started in a little room back of the postoffice on Main street. A strong north and south wind fanned the flames, which spread rapidly southward and licked up about fifty dwellings and business house. Loss $75,000.

THE WICKED WORLD.

The Iron Hall difficulty bids fair to be compromised outside the courts.

Mississippi valley lumbermen advance the price 50 cents per thousand.

Railroad companies estimate the crop of Minnesota and the Dakotas at 75 per cent of last year's.

The Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine holds an Imperial council in Omaha.

In drilling a gas well at Anderson, Ind., the drill went through a vein of iron at 375 feet, tin at 425 feet and lead at 500 feet.

Some of the treasure from the British ship Hussar, which sank in New York harbor in 1780, with nearly $5,000,000 on board is recovered.

The department of Mississippi and Louisiana G. A. R. has organized and the colored posts have been admitted to full membership.

At the last day's session of the twenty-sixth meeting of the Universal Peace union at Mystic, Conn., Alfred Love of Philadelphia was re-elected president for the twenty-sixth consecutive time.

A dispatch from Tacoma says: Three highwaymen held up and beheaded a man near Elenburg, Wash. Vigilants pursued the highwaymen, and after capturing them, hanged them to a tree.

Judge Lawrence, of the supreme court of New York, has decided that Queen Victoria will have to file surety of $250 for court costs if she wants to bring suit against the Standard Asphalt company to recover $9,000, a quantity of asphalt alleged to have been stolen from Trinidad.

OTHER SHORES.

Four thousand of the cab drivers of Paris went on a strike. No disorders have been reported.

The Duchess of Manchester, by her marriage to the Duke of Devonshire, forfeits, under her late husband's will, the whole of her income to her son, the present duke.

M. Meyer an accountant, occupying an important government post, has been arrested in Paris for dealing in forged stamps, which were used on army material.

The pope has decided to lodge at the Vatican all pilgrims who go to Rome to attend the episcopal jubilee. They will be lodged and fed at his expense.

Mrs. Alice Crocker of Chicago was strangled by her son, twenty-three years old, in her apartments in the Koenings villa in Carlsbad. Young Crocker is in an asylum. Mrs. Crocker and her son came to Carlsbad some time ago at the end of a tour through Western Europe. He had acted peculiar for several days previous to the tragedy.

A close examination of the British war ship Warsprite shows that the vessel's injuries are much more extensive than was at first supposed. A considerable length of her false bottom, steel plates and wooden coverings have been torn away, and in three places bad indentations have been made in the actual bottom. The Warsprite struck while steaming at the rate of fourteen knots an hour, and immediately listed to starboard, having been hit by a rock about amidships on the port side.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

Judge Gresham denies the report that he is to take the stump for the Populists.

Judge Morse receives the Democratic nomination for governor in Michigan.

Ex-Senator Spooner is nominated for governor by the Republicans of Wisconsin.

Gov. Buchanan of Tennessee bolts the Democratic party and comes out as an independent candidate.

The date for holding the Republican national league convention at Buffalo is changed from Sept. 1 to Sept. 15.

The Ohio state convention of the People's party met at Massillon with about 250 delegates present, representing 39 of the 83 counties. A full state ticket was nominated.

William J. Campbell, member of the Republican national committee from Illinois, has returned to Chicago from New York. He confirms the report that the idea of establishing branch headquarters here has been abandoned.

The Democratic state convention met at Dover, Del., to nominate presidential electors, and Congressman John W. Causey was renominated for congress. The platform adopted pledges loyalty to the cardinal principles of the Democratic faith, and expresses hearty approval and ratification of the national Democratic platform.

LABOR CIRCLE.

An appeal for contributions is issued by the Homestead strikers.

Soldiers and miners in Tennessee engage in a fight in which twelve men are killed and a large number injured.

Switchmen on the New York Central join the strikers. Several companies of militia are called out.

Much excitement was caused in the vicinity of Thirty-third street mill of Carnegies at Pittsburg by the shooting of John Fleishman, an Amalgamated Association scout on the watch for non-union men. Several strange men passing along the street were stoned by some person unknown, but thinking it was Fleishman they fired four shots at him, one of which took effect, but he is not dangerously hurt. The shooters have not yet been found.

The Fallbrook Coal company has special men guarding its interests at Lyons, N. Y., also the Central Hudson and Lehigh Valley. The railroad men thus far stand by the companies, and claim they shall do so to the end. The Lehigh Valley is blocked below Ithaca. Trainmen say the sidings between Ithaca and Geneva on the Lehigh are full. Twelve carloads of militia from Oswego, Auburn, Geneva and other points passed through here en route to Buffalo.

SPORTING MATTERS.

Yorkville Belle wins the rich Omnibus stakes at Monmouth Park.

Capt. Tebeau says that the cut made in the Cleveland salaries to commence the second season did not exceed $1650, hardly more than $100 per man, and they all accepted it without a kick.

Latham has not been as fast in his running of late as he was earlier in the season. His falling off in this particular is due to sore feet, caused by playing on hard ground with spikes or plates on his shoes.

Young Doyle is the nominal captain of the New Yorks, but the veteran Jim O'Rourke takes a large hand in directing affairs. Doyle is shrewd and sensible enough to accept and profit by the veteran's advice.

THE RAILROADS.

Chairman Caldwell grants the Atchinson's request to reduce rates to Kansas City.

Notice is given by the Illinois Central that it would make a rate of $25 from Chicago to New Orleans and return, on account of the Sullivan-Corbett prize fight. Tickets will be good from Sept. 3 to 7 inclusive.

The earnings of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul for the second week of August were $586,098, against $491,897 for the corresponding week of last year, an increase of $94,801. The earnings of the Milwaukee & Northern during the same week were $32,836, an increase of $1,800.

The Canadian Pacific has issued a new folder which is complete both pictorially and in the amount of information it offers. It covers the entire system of that company from Japan to the Atlantic coast of Canada.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Tacoma man murders a young woman whom he called his daughter and commits suicide.

An express agent secures evidence that the Sontags committed the Kasota robbery.

Logan Murphy, desperado and murderer, was hanged near Mount Sterling, Ky., by an armed mob of 300 men, who took him from jail by force. Murphy killed his father near Sawyersville.

William Evans, who is accused of poisoning nine persons at Laurel, Del., including his wife and her three brothers and their family, one of whom died, has been arrested.

During last week 318 car loads containing 3,816 tons of green fruit were shipped East from California. So far this season 6,600,000 pounds more fruit has been shipped than last year.

William Cuddy, a contractor of the firm of Phillips & Cuddy at the Michigan state prison, was killed at that institution by a life convict named Henry Blackman who is doing time for murdering his wife and family.

At Baldwin, Mich., Maj. Houk, who was deserted by his wife two years ago, encountered his recreant spouse in company with her sister and a man named Frank Gray. The deserted husband shot his wife and Gray. His wife will die.

It is now proposed to issue a bank note souvenir in honor of the quadro-centennial of the discovery of America. Capt. Meredith, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, has had such a proposition under consideration for some time, and he has made preparations to lay the matter before Secretary Foster on his return to Washington in such a way that if the design is authorized the engravers can get to work on it immediately. The idea is to choose one of the smaller denominations for a souvenir probably the $1 bill.

MUST HAVE HELP

Buffalo Switchmen Defeated Unless They Receive Prompt Assistance.

Other Labor Organizations Will Doubtless Be Asked to Go Out at Once.

Buffalo, Aug. 23.—For ten days Master Workman Sweeney, of the switchmen's order, has been in this city seeking to encourage and planning for the welfare of the men, about 5,000 in number, who were formerly the movers of freight traffic in the various railroad yards hereabouts. He has seen the companies secure new forces, and he has witnessed the almost entire restoration of the conditions as they were before his followers quit work. He has now asked the heads of all the other labor organizations allied with the switchmen in railroad work to meet him here.

Already Mr. Sargent is here and the others are expected to-morrow and next day. Mr. Sweeney will lay the circumstances of the recent switchmen's strike in this city before his colleagues with the purpose, it is fair to presume, of securing, if he can, the consent to a strike of the men represented by each of the executive heads who will sit in conference with Mr. Sweeney. That the switchmen's leader would be able to strike was a hope which, if entertained by Mr. Sweeney, was to-day promptly set at rest by Mr. Sargent's statement that he would never consent to the withdrawal of his men from their occupations unless joined by the members of other railway organizations. With this position as an early precedent in the conference situation of the leaders it is not an unfair assumption that other executive heads will take the same position. If this shall prove to be true, then all must go out or none will quit.

The trend of fair judgment leads to a conviction that there will be no concerted abandonment of work by the organizations to be represented in the conference. Mr. Arthur, of the engineers, has not as yet responded to Mr. Sweeney's invitation, and while he may attend without previous notice of his intention to do so, it may not be regarded as surprising should Mr. Arthur be represented through a communication rather than in person. Well informed persons here, when apprised of Mr.

SARGENT'S ULTIMATUM

to Mr. Sweeney concluded without hesitation that no positive results will grow out of the meeting which Mr. Sweeney has called. It is thought to be a fair inference from Mr. Sweeney's action that he has reached the limit of his power locally and that he has, by summoning his colleagues, evidenced a conscious weakness of his own position as related to the recent complications in the railway field here. In brief, Mr. Sweeney, by his action, is regarded as having called for help. He will have the courtesy of counsel, but the concensus of opinion is that neither he nor his followers will be aided by any sympathetic strike among the engineers, the firemen, the conductors, the trainmen, or by the Order of Railway Telegraphers.

A DANGEROUS DELAY.

The arrival of the executive heads invited will be such that no conference can possibly occur before next Wednesday, while the likelihood is that the first session will not be held before Thursday. Meantime there is an interregnum in which speculation may be expected as to whether Mr. Sweeney, left to his own resources, will order out other switchmen West or East, or both, or whether he will announce officially and formally the defeat of his men who ten days ago were employed as switchmen in the Buffalo yards.

After all the talk of the withdrawal of troops it may be as well to state that no troops will be withdrawn until time shall have made improbable any further attacks upon the present switchmen in this city by those who were formerly so employed. Sporadic cases of abuse and outrage will arise to be recorded, but such will be incidents only to a situation which is now secure unless perchance Mr. Sweeney's conference should result in the birth of new considerations or new complications.

SECRETARY HEIMERLE ARRESTED.

General consternation was thrown into the switchmen's camp to-night by the arrest of Joseph Heimerle, the recording secretary and treasurer of Buffalo Lodge No. 39, of the Switchmen's Mutual Aid association. He is looked upon as one of the most powerful men in the order, and so far during the strike he has acted as a leader of the men when Grand Master Sweeney and Master Moriarity were otherwise engaged. He is accused by the railroads of assaulting their green hands, of threatening them with violence if they did not join the union forces and with interfering with the running of their trains.

A SET OF GRIEVANCES.

There is an interesting report in circulation here to-night. It is to the effect that firemen held a meeting last night and drew up a set of grievances which they will present to the railroads, and if they do not get their demands they will strike. Mr. Sargent will neither admit nor deny the truth of the report.

W. E. Robbins of Erie, a non-union switchman, was struck on the head with a club on Michigan street to-night. The blow produced concussion of the brain. The police blame the strikers for the assault.

A Postmistress Resigns.

Washington, Special, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Mary A. Lusk, postmistress at Maryville, Mont., has resigned. The candidates for the place are C. A. Mathews, John B. Conrad and Moses Dering. This office has caused the Montana delegation considerable trouble in times gone by and will be in a fine stew now until the appointment is made.

Deaths From Cholera.

St. Petersburg, Aug. 23.—The official cholera report issued this morning shows an increase yesterday of 381 new cases and an increase of 238 deaths, as compared with Saturday's figures. The total number of new cases reported yesterday was 4,691, and the deaths numbered 3,801.

Teheran, Aug. 23.—The cholera still continues to carry off a fearfully large number of victims in this neighborhood. Sanitary regulations are almost unknown here and the fatalistic tendency of the natives make it almost impossible to combat the disease.

DERAILED A TRAIN.

A Misplaced Switch the Cause of Trouble at Suspension Bridge.

Suspension Bridge, N. Y., Aug. 23.—To-night some one pulled a switch at the Buffalo branch of the Central and Michigan Central bridge. Consequently a West Shore freight train bound for Buffalo was partly derailed. The engine and three cars passed on the Buffalo track, the fourth and fifth were derailed and the rest of the train took the track for the bridge. Gateman Fellows was slightly injured in attempting to open the gate. The accident happened near the strikers' headquarters.

REFUSE TO WORK.

Western New York and Pennsylvania Switchmen Join the Strike.

Buffalo, Aug. 23.—Seventy switchmen on the Western New York and Pennsylvania struck this afternoon. Shortly after noon thirty car handlers on the Lehigh trestles went out. The Grand Trunk switchmen are likely to strike to-night.

Elmira, N. Y., Aug. 23.—The switchmen's strike at Sayre and Waverly is practically a victory for the railroad company. The blockade is broken and freight is being handled without opposition. The strikers do not admit defeat, and are inclined to think there will yet be trouble in this region. The Binghamton military are still at Waverly.

QUIET AT HOMESTEAD.

Discharged Men Seeking and Obtaining Employment Elsewhere.

Homestead, Aug. 23.—Homestead is daily becoming more quiet, many of the strikers securing employment elsewhere pending a settlement of the strike. Consequently the relief committee find their work much easier. The soldier boys are looking forward for the 1st of September, when they expect to be relieved. At that time they will have been in continuous service longer than at any time in the history of the guard, having been here continuously for sixty days, the Fourteenth regiment's Johnstown record having only been thirty-days. The soldiers think that from their constant association with the strikers that it would no be wise to remove the entire guard for at least a month.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT.

Ten West Superior Strikers Held to the Circuit Court.

West Superior, Wis., Special, Aug. 23.—This morning after a conference with District Attorney Murphy and the steel company officials warrants charging assault with intent to do great bodily harm were sworn out before Court Commissioner Roberts by Jones and Gardner, the two steel workers assaulted, against the ten strikers in jail, and the other ten were discharged. The prisoners asked to have the hearing delayed until they could consult with their attorneys, and it was 4 o'clock before the proceedings began.

WILL STRIKE IF NECESSARY.

Detroit Switchmen Willing to Assist Their Brethren.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 23.—The switchmen's association of this city has thoroughly discussed the Buffalo strike situation. The members find that there is nothing for them to do at present excepting to refuse to handle trains that might be sent out to carry men employed to take places of those on strike. It is practically admitted by the switchmen that as soon as a strike on their part may prove beneficial to their brethren in the East they will not hesitate to quit work, but all of the men who have been seen voice the hope that such an emergency may not arise, as they are treated well here and have no grievance at present.

Mill Men Go Out.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, Aug. 23.—About 1,000 saw mill employes struck for ten hours and eleven hours' pay this morning. Mills of the Empire Lumber company, Valley Lumber company, Della Lumber company, and Mississippi River Logging company were not started up, while the Daniel Shaw company started only a part of its saw mill. And this afternoon all the Daniel Shaw men also quit in a body. A peculiarity of the strike is that the men made a formal and respectful demand for ten hours and struck simultaneously. Mill owners who might have been in favor of ten hours have been disgusted by this, as they were given no time to consider. At the Valley Lumber company's plant there were only seven men in the saw mill when the time arrived for starting up at 6 a. m.

A petition was delivered at 7 o'clock to President Carson, who simply received it and made no reply. The petition of the employes of the Mississippi Logging company was handed to Superintendent Chute by a committee at 5:30 this morning, just as as he was leaving his house.

He inquired as to when it was desired the ten-hour plan should take effect, and the committee signified that it was desired at once. Mr. Chute replied that he thought this rather short notice. Quite a large number of men were at the Mississippi mills and wanted to go to work, but were not permitted to do so. At the Empire and Dells plant only a few appeared for work. At the Dells the man who presented the petition said he wanted it back so he could burn it. There are no indications that the demand will be granted by any of the companies. Representatives of the Empire and Valley mills say positively it will not.

Strikers Well Treated.

Washington, Aug. 23.—In reply to the complaint made to the department of justice by the Knights of Labor that the imprisoned miners at Wallace, Idaho, were not being properly treated, the attorney general has received a telegram from Examiner Crostwaite saying he finds absolutely no grounds for the charges.

Jewelry Store Robbed.

Crookston, Minn., Special, Aug. 23.—Thieves made a raid on A. D. Morris' jewelry store last night and made off with $800 worth of goods. The thieves made an entrance over the rear door through a transam. The police have no clue. The clerk who was sleeping in the store heard the men escape and gave the alarm. The goods taken were gold watches, chains rings and charms.

Gov. Boyd of Nebraska declines renomination. He promises to work hard for the party if good men are nominated.

Don Not Turned Down.

New York, Aug. 23.—There was considerable irritation expressed at the reports sent out in regard to Chairman Don W. Dickinson, of the Democratic national campaign committee, who has been laid up for a few days at Sayridge. Mr. Dickinson was back at his post this morning and it was denied that he had been shorn of his responsibilities and sent to Chicago to get him out of the way. On the contrary, it is now said that Mr. Dickinson will not have charge of the Chicago headquarters, but will depulize some one else to go there. This plan has but recently been adopted. Mr. Dickinson will, it is said, remain here with Mr. Harrity.

GIEFFER A MURDERER.

Leonard Roway, the Victim, Dies After Terrible Suffering at Mankato.

Mankato, Minn., Special, Aug. 23.—Leonard Roway, the victim of Thursday's tragedy, died last evening. His suffering had been intense throughout the day. His strong constitution had been the means of keeping him alive so long after receiving the deadly blows at the hands of Frank Gieffer. Gieffer was captured at Sibley, Iowa, and brought back to this city. He confesses and says he was drunk at the time.

Gieffer was arraigned in the municipal court to-day on the charge of murder in the first degree and his examination was set for Saturday. Gieffer admits assault and robbery, but claims he did not intend to kill Roway.

At an inquest held to-day the coroner found that Roway came to his death from a blow from a hammer or some blunt instrument in the hands of Frank Gieffer.

Mrs. Martha Kester, the child murderess, waived further examination when her case came up to-day and was bound over to the December term of the district court.

THE KRIEGERBUND.

German Veterans Contest for Athletic and Sharpshooting Prizes.

Kansas City, Aug. 23.—Rain prevented the completion to-day of the athletic and sharpshooting contests being held in connection with the annual reunion of the Kriegerbund. The contests in turning, however, were all completed and prizes were awarded as follows:

First prize, Ed Walters; second prize, Casper Knipp; third prize, Joseph Dauglemeyer; fourth prize, Lee Lyons.

The convention of the delegates to-day was an informal affair, and only the barest routine business was transacted. The convention will be in session several days. The most important acts of the convention will be to decide the location of the next fest and to elect a president. It is almost certain that the Kriegerbund will meet in St. Louis next year. As to who will be the next president, it is difficult to predict. Several candidates are in the field. Among those who are prominently mentioned for the place are Fritz Holle of St. Louis, the present incumbent, and C. J. Wallruff of this city. To-night the delegates and visiting divisions gave a grand lantern parade. Four thousand men bearing German lanterns were in line and the spectacle was a brilliant one. The illuminations prepared for the Knights of Pythias were shining in full blast and the streets presented a gorgeous appearance.

EVIDENCE LACKING.

Preliminary Hearing of Miss Borden's Case Postponed at Fall River.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 23.—Miss Lizzie A. Borden arrived here from Taunton jail this morning. She did not show trace of suffering, and did not in any degree mind the attention she was attracting. It is reported here that Miss Borden has made an assignment of all personal property to her counsel with instructions to spare no expense in gaining her freedom. Miss Emma Borden has also given orders to spare nothing in the way of labor and expense. The preliminary hearing on a charge of murder was to have been held, but an adjournment was granted on the ground that some things used as evidence are wanting at the present time. They are the clothing and various parts of the furnishings of the rooms where the murders occurred. They are now in the hands of experts, and they will not be here probably for a number of days.

CLAIMS MISS BORDEN IS INNOCENT.

Pittsburg, Aug. 23.—A morning newspaper prints a long letter under a sensational headline, purporting to be from an anonymous writer who claims he is in possession of the secret in the Fall River murder mystery. The writer says he knows the party who took the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Borden, but through fear of death he cannot make public the name of their murderer. He also says the murderer of the Bordens has been implicated in fifteen murders, and that his home is in St. Louis. He says Miss Borden is entirely innocent of the murder of her parents. The police officials here do not place much credence in the story.

A WARNING.

Commander-in-Chief Palmer Issues an Order to G. A. R. Men.

Boston, Aug. 23.—John Palmer, commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., announces the following order:

The twenty-sixth national encampment endorsed a scheme for the erection of a monument commemorating the emancipation. No statistics or prospectus whatever in connection therewith have been furnished at headquarters, and as complaints have been made and doubts have arisen, the commander-in-chief advises and directs that no future subscriptions be made until all doubt concerning the character and purpose of those in charge of this worthy object is known, and that all persons giving money for this purpose will report the amount to headquarters.

A political campaign badge has been placed upon sale being an exact facsimile of the insignia of our order, except that the photograph of the candidate is inserted in the center. The commander-in-chief not only urges every comrade not to disgrace the order by placing this "thing" upon his breast, but that he will appeal to every man who wears one to take it off and not disgrace an insignia of loyalty which is dear to every Union soldier, regardless of party.

ON SHANKS' HORSES.

A Seattle Man and His Wife Walking to Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—John Howard and wife, L. Howard, of Seattle, who are walking from that city to Chicago on a $5,000 wager, were heard from late last night. They were then at Dewitt, Iowa, and said they expected to be in Chicago Monday, Aug. 29. They walked twenty miles yesterday. They are to walk from Seattle to Chicago between March 10 and Sept. 1. Howard is pushing a wheelbarrow in which there is a change of clothing and a rubber tent. Every foot of the distance must be traveled on foot and no stop made at a hotel or other public house. They were at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on Aug. 17, and at Lisbon on Aug. 18. Mrs. Howard is dressed in male attire and both are said to be in excellent health. The route is along the Union Pacific and Northwestern railways. The Howards have registered at every railroad station along the line thus far.

Hanlon and O'Connor.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 23.—It has been definitely decided that the international double scull race between Hanlon and O'Connor, and Gosbier and Gaudar will take place at Ontario beach. The date is fixed as Sept. 5. Hanlon and O'Connor are expected to arrive by Wednesday and go into training. The race will be over a short course, three-fourths of a mile in length, with three turns.

Mr. Reid Attends Church.

Cedarville, Ohio, Aug. 23.—Whitelaw Reid has been spending the time quietly with his mother at the old homestead since the reception tendered him on Saturday. Mr. Reid and his wife attended the Presbyterian church at this place Sunday and occupied the pew in which the father of Mr. Reid, an elder of the church, used to sit with his little family. After the services were over and as Mr. Reid was moving toward the door the members of the congregation crowded around him, and as he shook each one of his old acquaintances by the hand reminiscences were recalled and pleasant memories revived. Mr. and Mrs. Reid will start to-morrow for New York.

IN A HUMOROUS WAY.

A FEW MIRTH-PROVOKING RIB TICKLERS.

Amusing Bits of Nonsense From Various Sources—If Taken After Meals Will Aid Digestion.

Pleasing in Little Things.

Furtively the youth in a smoking jacket watched the young fellow writing at the table. The pen was flying over the paper, leaving in its track the record of a tumult of varying emotions. Low the young fellow at the table smiled. Now his brows contracted in a frown. The youth in the smoking jacket appears to be perplexed.

"Jack," he called at last.

"Yes, Ned."

The youth in the smoking jacket hesitated.

"Pardon my inquisitiveness, Jack."

"Oh, certainly."

"Why, if I may ask, do you write such a long letter on one side of the paper only?"

It was a low musical laugh that escaped the lips of the young fellow at the table. Turning from his occupation he contemplated the youth in the jacket with an amused expression of countenance.

"Girls," he said "are won by little attentions that please. I am writing, Ned, to the girl I love."

The youth in the smoking jacket appeared far from satisfied.

"But why," he persisted, "will writing on one side of the paper please her?"

Again the low musical laugh was heard.

"Why, Ned," exclaimed the young fellow at the table "the dear girl cannot fail to appreciate"——

He dipped his pen in the ink.

"My thoughtfulness in writing my letters so that when"——

His hand was gliding over the paper again.

"The breach of promise suit is brought, they can be published without revision. It is"——

He carefully blotted the page.

"By remembering such little things as that a man touches a woman's heart."

The youth in the smoking jacket pondered.

He Could Not Get Away.

A weary old man dropped with a sigh into a seat in the street car. At the other end three or four young men were talking and laughing.

They had just returned from their vacation," said the tired man to his next neighbor.

"They seem to have enjoyed it."

"Yes, they seem to. They work in the same store that I do."

"Ah?"

"Yes. They all have been away now—everybody in the store—clerks, bookkeepers, and heads of departments, even the cash-boys and the wrapping men and the porters. Everybody has had his vacation—but me."

"All but you?"

"Yes."

"Well, I should think your employer would let you off too."

The old man shook his head.

"What's the reason he won't?"

"Well," replied the weary man, with another sigh, "you see, I'm the proprietor myself."

Why He Could not Attend.

An amusing instance of the expedients resorted to by men summoned to attend as common jurymen, in order to avoid serving in that capacity, occurred recently. One morning a little girl, whose eyes just peered above the desk, timidly exclaimed:

"Please, sir, father can't come; he can't put on his boots."

The judge asked the nervous little creature what was the matter with her parent. She hesitated. Evidently she had not been instructed further than the statement she had made, and, looking straight into the judges eyes, said:

"Well, sir, father don't wear boots; he's got wooden legs. I wasn't told to say anything else, sir; that's all.

Does Know It.

A Detroiter who recently paid a visit to the city of Washington, was talking to a friend on his return.

"By the way," he said, "Washington isn't half as bad a place as they say it is."

"In what respect?" was the very natural inquiry.

"In all; and it hasn't as bad an effect upon the morals of people as they say it has. Now, there's the President, for instance; he hasn't played a game of poker during the last year. Not one game."

"And he's a statesman?"

"Yes."

"Well, how do you account for th remarkable abstinence?"

The returned visitor looked solemn.

"Because," he replied cautiously, "he doesn't know how to play."

In the Cause of Science.

"We have called," said the chairman of the subscription committee, "to solicit your aid in behalf of the widow of a poor man who lost his life in the cause of science."

"Why, certainly," answered Prof. Potterby, exploring his pockets, "here is $5.84, all I have at present. By the way, what branch of science did the gentleman pursue?"

"The science of self defense," answered the chairman, as he pocketed the money, "He was killed in the ring."—Indianapolis Journal.

A Welcome Visitor.

"Tell your mother that I am going to see her soon," said a lady on Austin avenue to Mrs. Sniverley's little boy, who was playing in front of the gate.

"I am glad you are coming, and ma will be glad to see you too."

"How do you know she will be glad to see me?" asked Mrs. Sniverly.

"Because I heard her say yesterday she would be glad to see somebody who didn't come here to collect a bill. She said nobody ever came to the house except men with bills."

Another Miscalculation.

Principal to bookkeeper—During the last few weeks you have made so many miscalculations that I must ask you to be more careful in the future.

Bookkeeper—I hope you will try and overlook my miscalculations, as I am so deeply in love with your daughter that half the time I don't know what I'm doing. May I hope?

Principal—There, you see, you make another miscalculation.

Rough on the Doctor.

Mrs. A—Doctor, what's the amount of your bill?"

Doctor—My dear madame, as your finances are not in very flourishing circumstances, I have concluded not to make any charges at all.

Mrs. A—That's all right, as far as it goes, but I want to know who is to pay the apothecary?

Very Assuring.

Employer: "I am very suspicious of youngmen nowadays. You can't tell how they are going to turn out. Why, in six months they know a great deal more about your business than you do yourself, and want to manage it entirely."

Applicant for position: "I can assure you, sir, that if you engage me I will devote as little time as possible to your business."

Convincing Proof.

Young Lawyer: "I claim the release of my client on the ground of idiocy. He is a stupid fool, and not responsible for anything he may have committed."

"Judge: "He doesn't appear stupid to me."

"Prisoner, interrupting: "Your Honor, look at the lawyer I've employed."

A Lasting Excuse.

"I want to get off this afternoon," said Jacky Horner to his employer. "My grandmother's dead."

"Look here," said the employer, severely, "didn't I give you an afternoon off a month ago because your grandmother was dead?"

"Yes, sir," replied the unabashed youth. "She is still dead, sir."—Brooklyn Life.

An Awful Threat.

"Johnny," said his mother, "if you don't quit smoking cigarettes you won't grow a bit."

"Don't care if I don't," responded Johnny, sullenly.

"And, of course," continued the good woman, "if you don't get any bigger you will still have to wear clothes made from your father's old ones."

"I guess I'll quit, ma."

To Preserve the Balance.

Jiggs—I tell you, Coweby, you've got to brace up pretty soon if you don't want to become a physical wreck.

Coweby — Aw — what's the — aw trouble?

Jiggs—You're getting lopsided. You ought to lead a mastiff or a St. Bernard, or something with one hand to balance the weight of your cane in the other!—Truth.

Understood It.

Cowboy—"What in creation was thet thar tenderfoot tryin' ter corral?"

Frontier Storekeeper—"He wanted to buy a nightshirt."

Cowboy—"Oh, I see. He's got an invite to the dance at Brandem ranch I s'pose, an' wants tergo in style."—New York Weekly.

No Hope.

Mrs. Spinks—"I can't pay you. I haven't a cent. But perhaps my husband will have some money when he gets home. I believe he's gone to a horse-race."

Grocer, weeping—"Alas! madam, you are mistaken. It wasn't a horse-race he went to. It was a church fair."—New York Weekly.

Malicious.

An author reads his latest farce to the manager of a theatre, who listens sadly without saying a word. The author says: "I wish to call your attention to the fact that at this joke I have written, 'Here the Duke laughs.'"

Manager—He does, eh? Lucky Duke!

A Loud Ticker.

Mamma—"You look as if you hadn't slept much."

Little Dot—"No'm, I didn't."

Mamma—"What kept you awake?"

Little Dot—"I was waitin' for the new clock to go to sleep."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Something New.

Merchant—"What's the matter with your writing this morning—new pen?"

Bookkeeper—"No, sir."

"New ink?"

"No, sir."

"What, then?"

"Neuralgia."

George Ossman is in town this week buying hides and furs.

The heavy rain last Friday delayed harvesting several days.

C. G. Rapp made a short trip to Thief River Falls last Saturday.

S. Anderson, of Crookston, is in town this week selling a patent scale.

Contractor Swank returned last Monday from his trip to St. Paul.

Holmes Bros. are giving their new building a coat of paint this week.

Fay Delezene, assistant Surveyor to J. Hills, left for Park Rapids last Friday.

The work on the Red Lake Falls grade is now finished as far as the Red Lake River.

Duck hunting is now a favorite pass-time and the poor crows will now get a rest.

Harvest is now in full blast and business has been a trifle dull in consequence.

P. M. Dauser, the Crookston photographer, was in town a short time last Monday.

Frank Gravel the popular Crookston traveling man, was in town to-day on business.

F. H. Kratka, the Thief River Falls real estate rustler, was in town to-day on business.

Col. Crooks, construction supt. of the Great Northern was here last Monday on business.

Arnoldt Vedeler, of Providence R. I., arrived last Monday and will work for Holmes Bros.

Minton Holmes and wife are expected to arrive here from Goodhue county next Friday.

Mr. Anderson representing the Duluth Shoe Co., was in town the first of th week on business.

Ed Lonseth came up from Crookston last Monday and will visit for a few days with his parents.

E. C. Carruth and wife, of Crookston were in town last monday on their way to Thief River Falls,

J. O'Brien, of Thief River Falls, passed through town last Monday on his way to Crookston.

Mr. S. Hall, of Underwood Otter Tail county, is in town this week visiting his sons, the Hall Bros,

Several special trains came up last week with material for the new branches of the Great Northern,

Cashier Ellington, of the Scandia American Bank of Crookston, was in town a short time last Monday on his way home from Thief River Falls.

Mrs. J. M, Blakely, of Langdon N. D, was in town a short time last Friday on her way to Thief River Falls where she will visit with her mother Mrs. E. T. Morgan,

The weather has been exceptionally good for harvesting the past week and the work is progressing rapidly. It is thought that the harvest in this vicinity is about half done.

Ducks could be lawfully killed last Saturday and our hunters are killing quite a number. They are plentiful this season almost every little pond being full of them.

Several telegrams have been received from the U. S. signal service station at St. Paul warning the farmers to look out for frost. There has been no frost as yet in this vicinity and if it hold off for another week the largest part of the crop will be saved.

Supt. Benham who has charge of the Great Northern construction crew, was here yesterday. He says that the steel crew will be here to lay track before Sept. 15th, and that both branches will be laid at the same time.

S. M. Holt received a carload of the finest twine in the market which he will sell at prices that can be beat by one.

H. B. Mullaney, general agent for Oliver's Great Eastern Shows, was in town the first of the week making arrangements for holding their circus here next Monday Aug. 29th. It is said to be a good show and well worth the price of admission.

We are in receipt of the announcement of the marriage of John L. Hennemuth to Miss Anna M. Portland at Oakdale California, on August 18th 1892. Both parties are well known here and the SPECTATOR joins with their many friends in wishing the happy pair all kinds of good luck.

A. S. Crossfield, of Traverse county, Henry Feig of Kandiyohi county, H. W. Stone of Swift county, Frank M. Eddy, of Pope county, C. J. Gunderson of Douglas county, E. E. Corliss of Otter Tail county, E. G. Holmes of Becker county and Judge Christianson of Polk county are all hustling for the republican congressional nomination in the seventh district, They remind one of a lot of calves crowding each other over an empty milk pail.—Crookston Times.

It would be a good thing if the farmers of this county would commence at the present time and build smudges every night so as to protect their grain that is still uncut. The post office department at this place received a notification yesterday from the office of the state observer at St. Paul requesting the officials here to notify all farmers that there was liable to be frosts in this section at almost any time and that they might avert the loss of their crop if they would build smudges every night until their grain was all cut.—Crookston Times.

If the Farmer's Alliance is as strong in other Southern states as it has shown itself to be in Alabama and if its strength in the national election at all approaches that displayed in Alabama's state election, the third party movement will be a factor of Supreme importance in the coming election. Fortunately accessions in the northern and western states promise to outweigh any threatened defections in the south.—Baltimore News.

With excellent judgement and commendable enterprise the managers of the state fair have secured the appearance of Nancy Hanks, the phenomenal trotting mare, to make a trial against time. Nancy astonished the world and eclipsed all previous records by trotting a full mile in 2.07¼ over a regulation track at Washington Park Chicago, last Wednesday. The track at Hamline is very fast when in proper condition and the opportunity of seeing this wonderful mare engage in a trial to beat her own record is one of a lifetime and should call out the largest attendance ever seen at the fair grounds—St. Paul Dispatch.

The municipal government of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, is to take charge of the liquor trade of the town. Six saloons are to be owned, one for each ward, and a superintendent will be appointed who will exercise supervision over the bartenders. The saloons are to be open from 5 a. m, to 10 p. m., and nothing to be sold which cannot be bought of Sioux Falls whole sale dealers or manufacturers. Beer is to be sold at five cents a glass, and whiskey at twenty-five cents a drink, it being the object of this discrimination in price to discourage the use of "hard liquors." The experiment is likely to be watched with interest in other municipalities and state legislatures. It is not likely to prove a success.

The interferance of England in the consular dispute between Norway and Sweden has not unnaturally had the effect of aggravating rather that assunging the bitterness of feeling between these two politically united but not altogether harmonious people. The Norwegians resent the interferance and are greatly incensed by it, They regard it as an attempt on the part of Sweden to coerce them with English aid,

England's animus in the matter, is easily understood, She desires to keep Norway under Swedish domination to prevent her falling into Russia's capacious maw. The coast line of Norway would be of vast assistance to Russia in navial manoeuvering, and with it in his power the czar might carry out Russia's long-cherished design of disputing England's supremacy on the seas. It is to twarth this possibility that Lord Salisbury instructed the British ambassador at Stockholm to throw English influence into the breach in an attempt to persuade Norway into peaceful submission to Sweden's demands. The attempt has failed signally, the Norwegians being only more inflamed by it. The gravity of the situation daily increases and there is even a possibility that the hardy Norwegians, few in number but recklessly courageous, will resort to arms to enforce Swedish recognition of what they consider their rights.—Globe.

Compulsory Insurance in Germany.

In Germany the law of compulsory insurance against old age and infirmity, passed in June, 1889, completes the programme of legislation for improving the condition of the working classes which was set forth in the imperial rescript of 1881. It affects more than 13,000,000 people, giving them an inalienable legal claim to support in cases of infirmity and in old age.

The insurance is compulsory in all industrial occupations upon persons over sixteen years of age of both sexes. Clerks and tradesmen's apprentices who do not earn more than $500 a year also participate, but assistants and apprentices in druggists' shops are excluded.

Exemption from compulsory insurance is granted to persons who work for food, clothes and lodging only, and who receive no pay, or who are only in temporary employment.

The pension for old age varies from about twenty-five dollars to fifty dollars a year, and is granted to every insured person who has completed his seventieth year, irrespective of his ability to earn a livelihood, provided he does not already draw a pension for infirmity. The infirmity pension varies from about twenty-seven dollars to over a hundred dollars, and is given, irrespective of age, to persons who are permanently incapacitated from earning a living.

In order to establish a claim to a pension under the German law, contributions, regulated by the amount of earnings, must be paid for a prescribed period. The means of paying pensions are obtained by fixed contributions from the imperial treasury, added to regular payments on the part of the employers and employed.—Youth's Companion.

The Blood Circulates Rapidly.

Medical workers have made many curious experiments, but none more wonderful than that by which they ascertained the exact time required for the blood to make one entire trip through the system, which all students of physiology know means a complete circulation through the lungs, veins, arteries and general capillary arrangements. Professors Dalton, Hering, Poissenille, Matteucci and Blake have been the chief investigators in this line, the first named having become more eminent in this particular branch of research from having the experience of the others to fortify himself with. All the old school anatomists believed that a considerable time elapsed, say from three to nine minutes, from the time when the blood left the right side of the heart, traversed the whole system and then again returned to the starting point; Dalton has shown that the time is much shorter than was formerly generally supposed.

He says: "Dozens of carefully tabulated tests of this somewhat extraordinary subject shows that the blood of man makes a complete circulation once every fifteen to twenty-five seconds, according to the physical conditions of the subject experimented upon."—St. Louis Republic.

MINNESOTA
STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS
AT
WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD
AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School, The Normal Department embraces:

- (a) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades
- (b) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades,
- (c) A professional course for teachers who have completed the necessary academic course elsewhere.
- (d) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at $2,75 per week.

DIPLOMAS.—By a recent act of the legislature, a diploma becomes a state teachers' certificate of the first grade.

The next school year opens at Winona and Mankato August 29 1892. St. Cloud and Moorhead September 1, 1892.

For free catalogues and circulars, giving full information, address the presidents as follows:

Irwin Shepard, Winona.
Edward Searing, Mankato.
Joseph Carhart, St. Cloud.
Livingston C. Lord, Moorhead.

UNFORGOTTEN.

The morning hours were merry,
The genial moon is calm,
The fragrance of the wild rose
Is like a healing balm.
The birds within the woodland
Carol a happy song,
But in my heart abides still
A sorrow deep and strong—
My poor lost love!

The glittering streamlet murmurs
Over its pebbly bed,
The fleecy cloud is sailing
So lightly overhead;
The southern breeze is playing
Among the hazel boughs;
But, ah! remembrance dies not
Of hopeful, happy vows—
My poor lost love!

The calm lone hills ascending
Toward the clear blue sky,
O'erlook the smiling valley
Where here at rest I lie;
Those lone hills are the emblem
Of that far silent land,
Where she I loved is resting,
One of a countless band—
My poor lost love!

A vision of a yew tree—
A narrow, turf clad grave—
The winter of a country
Where winds tempestuous rave;
A little torrent falling,
With moaning, mournful sound,
Fills my imagination
Far more than all around.
My poor lost love!

Ah! gentle, joyous Nature,
Thy wearied, mourning child
Delights in thy rejoicing,
But may not be beguiled
From thinking of that dear one,
With dull heart aching sore:
My own, my vanished loved one,
My soul's light evermore—
My poor lost love!

A Fly That Kills Horses.

All white men who visit regions in Africa infested by the tsetse fly have much to say about it. There is now evidence that the tsetse is moving gradually to more northern regions, and the cause is supposed to be that South Africa is depleted of its large game, much of which is moving northward to get away from hunters, and the tsetse fly is going with it.

The insect is only a little larger than the ordinary house fly, and it resembles the honey bee. Its sting is hardly as annoying as that of the mosquito, but near the base of the proboscis is a little bag which contains its poison. It lives on the blood of animals, and only a few species are fatally affected by its bite Cattle, horses and dogs, however, can not live when bitten by the tsetse fly Natives who herd cattle and travelers who depend on horses and oxen must avoid the fly regions or lose their stock For human beings its bite has no serious consequences.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A Perfectly Healthy People.

The Parsees are sun worshipers, and it is an interesting sight to see throngs of them on the shore of the bay as the sun rises, apparently from the sea, performing the simple rites of their religion the fluttering robes showing their fine figures to the best advantage as the day begins. Their religious practices are simple in the extreme, consisting mainly in strict dietary rules and personal cleanliness.

The rigid observance of sanitary laws produces the natural result of perfect health among the adults, large families of active, healthy children and immense numbers of old men gray bearded white haired, but erect and princely in their gait and attitude, despite the naturally enervating character of the tropical climate. — Cor Washington Star.

Limestone Caves in Burmah.

The question has been raised whether the numerous limestone caves in British Burmah have been explored for archæological remains The Rev. F. Mason pointed out the probability of an examination of the stalagmite floors of these caves yielding important archæological discoveries in 1872. Many of the caves were known to have been used by the Buddhists of former generations, as Buddhist idols were found in them, and it is probable they were inhabited by men in the early time.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Pleasures of Being a Barber.

Barbering has been a very genteel art and it might be fine yet. The fee is so small there is no excuse for doing a credit business, and there is no bore of bookkeeping. The chink drops in fast and "Next!" is a merry cry.

And what a luxury it is to have a man fumble your face and head. The barber's nimble, strong fingers rouses your somnolent wits. It is delicious to be kneaded, combed, brushed, bathed, curried, spruced up.—National Barber.

Ex-President White's Collection.

It is not generally known, we think that Andrew D. White, formerly president of Cornell university, has a remarkable collection of posters, including a number of the original incendiary placards and bills put up in the streets of Paris during the frightful period of the French revolution.—Chicago News.

The Principal Meal.

The principal meal of all people of all ages has been undoubtedly dinner, and the lover of old time customs will find it both interesting and entertaining to notice the various changes which have taken place in the etiquette of the dinner table.—Chicago Herald.

Everybody Uses Tobacco in India.

It is not, as among the English, that only some men smoke tobacco, but with rare exceptions in India all natives, men and women, indulge in this weed in some form or other.—Chambers' Journal.

Probably the estimate of the earth's population for the year 1891, made by a learned German statistician, is the most nearly accurate of any yet made—1,480,000,000.

The bank capital of Boston at the beginning of this century, including a branch bank of the United States, was about $2,500,000.

The highest salary drawn by a diplomatist is that of the French embassador to London, which is $60,000 a year.

The Saltest of Salt Lakes.

A lake with a salt roof isn't frozen salt, and it isn't underground. On the contrary, this remarkable lake may be seen at any time during the year, fully exposed, being even at its best when the sun is shining directly upon it. This wonderful body of water is one of the saltest of the salt lakes, and is situated near Obdorsk, Siberia. The lake is nine miles wide and seventeen long, and within the memory of man was not entirely roofed over by the salt deposit. Originally evaporation played the most prominent part in coating the lake over with salt, but at the present time the salt springs which surround it are adding fast to the thickness of the crust.

In the long ago rapid evaporation of the lake's waters left great salt crystals floating on the surface. In course of time these caked together. Thus the waters were finally entirely covered. In 1878 the lake found an underground outlet into the River Obi, which lowered its surface about three feet. The salt crust was so thick, however, that it retained its old level, and now presents the curious spectacle of a salt roofed lake. The salt coat increases six inches in thickness every year. The many islands with which the lake is studded are said to act as braces and to help keep the arched salt crust in position.—St. Louis Republic.

The Innocent.

She stood looking up at him so innocently from under the sprig of mistletoe that still hung in the parlor as a reminder of the Christmas season; she was so pretty, and she was under the mistletoe, and he couldn't help it—he had kissed her.

It was an ungentlemanly and unmanly thing to do. He knew that now, as he remembered her frightened, startled look, and the miserable excuses he had tried to stammer out; yes, and the tears in her eyes, and the little choking sob with which she had received his stumbling apology.

"Who could think she would feel like that about it?" he thought; "dear little innocent!"

And she—after he was gone, she lay down on the sofa and cried. "I like him —so much and now—to think that he should kiss me at last—and then say he didn't mean anything by it. What does he think I stood there for?—the little idiot!"—Life.

A Parrot Seldom Forgets.

A maiden lady once had a fine talking bird, but, being subjected to headaches, she often put him in the kitchen. The cook objected and said to Polly, "You horrid thing, I wish you were dead."

Polly soon learned this, and when his mistress got better and took him to her own room, he said, "You horrid thing I wish you were dead."

This shocked the delicate little lady. One day she met her rector, and, after he had inquired about her health, he said, "How is Polly?"

Then she told him how Polly had affected her nerves. The rector said: "Send him to spend a month with my bird. He may forget it."

She immediately accepted his offer. In due time Polly was sent home, and, as soon as his mistress went to the cage. Polly saluted her with:

"You horrid thing, I wish you were dead. We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord!"—New York Recorder.

In an English Railway Train.

First Artist—Children don't seem to me to sell now as they used.

Second Artist (in a hoarse whisper)—Well, I was at Stodge's yesterday. He'd just knocked off three little girls' heads —horrid raw things! a dealer came in, sir, bought 'em directly—took 'em away, wet as they were, on the stretchers and wanted Stodge to let him have some more next week.

Old Lady (putting her head out of the window and yelling)—Guard, guard, stop the train and let me out, or I'll be murdered.—London Tit-Bits.

Deposits of Loadstone.

A Kansas City paper says that there is a bowlder in the Ozarks which will attract a jackknife dropped nine feet away, and that along the line of the fifth principal meridian, in the counties of Carter, Reynolds, Iron and Washington, the lines of east and west surveys are deflected from the true course several degrees, the needle being affected by the deposits of loadstone.

Hebrew tradition says that the tablets of Moses were of sapphire. In Hebrew the word sappir means the most beautiful. It symbolizes loyalty, justice, beauty and nobility.

Truth Is Stranger Than Fiction.

George Washington Lee, lazily lounging over his late breakfast, with his wife attired in a rich morning wrapper sitting opposite, constituted an ideal picture of elegant ease and comfort.

"George," she said as her hand, glittering with diamonds, toyed with the gold enameled crown of the coffee urn, "may I ask a small favor?"

"Certainly, my dear," he responded gallantly, "what is it?"

"I want a thousand dollars."

George's hand went to his vest pocket and he carelessly tossed the bill over to her.

"Thank you, dear," she said, sweetly. "And, George, I want a new pair of diamond earrings. Those I have are too small to match the necklace you gave me last week."

"Very well, love, I'll stop at the jeweler's as I go down town and have him send them up."

"And, George, dear, I want at least five pretty, light silk dresses to wear at the seaside this summer."

"I don't see why you shouldn't have an even half dozen, darling. Go down and select what you please."

"How good of you, George," she said tenderly. "And George, can't I have a cart with russet harness and a sorrel horse! I'm tired of the phaeton?"

"Excuse me, dear. I might have known that. You've had that phaeton now almost three months. By all means get the cart," and George lazily broke another egg.

"And that cottage in the Adirondacks, George," she ventured, "shall I tell the agent we will take it at the price he gave?"

"Certainly, dear, it will be such a pleasure to you."

"Oh, George," she twittered, "how awfully lovely you are and how glad I am that I am your own little wifey."

And well she might be glad that she was the wifey of a man so lavish in his gifts, so prodigal in his generosity, for George Washington Lee was a Pullman car porter, and the rich and mighty of the nation paid tribute to him.—Detroit Free Press.

Indigestion Cured.

Mr. Wm. Wade, the well known boot and shoe, dealer at 17 Merrimack St., near the Post Office Lowell, says: "When I find a good thing I feel like praising it, and I know from personal experience that Hood's Sarsaparilla is

A Fine Medicine.

I have for a good many years been seriously troubled with distress in my stomach and indigestion. I had medical advice, prescriptions and various medicines, but my trouble was not relieved. At last I thought I would try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I must say the effect was surprising. Soon after I began taking it I found great relief, and now eat without having that terrible distress. I also rest well at night and am in good general health, for all of which I thank

KEEPS HIS HORSE DYED.

A Pennsylvania Liveryman Who Owns a Red-White-and Blue Roadster.

Ambrose Jollifé, the Hestonville, Pa., livery stable-keeper, has what is probably the most remarkable horse in the United States, and his one sorrow, according to the Philadelphia record, is that the park commissioners will not permit the animal to be driven through their beautiful domain. The horse is a middle-aged, well-proportioned Kentucky gelding, about 8 years old. and once upon a time was as white as a snow drift at the north pole.

Two years ago a young medical student, who was studying at the University of Pennsylvania, and boarded at Mr. Jollife's residence, suggested that in honor of the Fourth of July Dashaway the gelding's name be decorated in the natural colors. He told Mr. Jollife that he had two harmless dyes which would soon fade out, and pointed out what a unique and sensational horse Dashaway could be transformed into by an artistic use of the dyes. As Mr. Jollife was agreeable, the student boiled his dyes and with a large brush stained the horse's head, neck and forelegs a bright crimsonish red, the "barrel" was left white, and the flanks and hind legs were stained a brilliant blue. The effect was so exquisitely beautiful that Mr. Jollife and his family drove about the vicinity of Hestonville every afternoon showing Dashaway to their friends, and, save for the fact that many of the horses they met tried with more or less success to run away when the red-white-and-blue equine met their affrighted gaze, the cup of the Jollife's family happiness would have been filled to the brim. The excitement in the park was so great that strict orders were given to the guards to keep the patriartic horse out of the great pleasure ground.

Dashaway has been freshly died twice since his original decoration, and the Hestonville horses have now grown accustomed to his spectacular appearance. But life is not what it should be for Mr. Jollife on account of the park commissioners' rule barring Dashaway from the privileges of their domain.

Not Exactly the Reply Expected.

A temperance orator was describing at an electioneering meeting how his own life had been influenced by total abstinence. "You know," said he, "that I am now chief of my department. Three years ago there were two men in our office who held positions superior to mine. One was dismissed through drunkenness; the other was led into crime and now serving a long term of imprisonment, and all through the influence of strong drink. Now what, I ask," he cried growing eloquent, "what has raised me to my present high position?" "Drink!" was the vociferous but unexpected reply which he received from a number of the audience.—London Figaro.

CONSUMPTION

REGRET.

When I remember something which I had,
But which is gone and I must do without,
I sometimes wonder how I can be glad
Even in cowslip time, when edges sprout;
It makes me sigh to think of it, but yet
My days will not be better days should I forget.

When I remember something promised me,
But which I never had, nor can have now,
Because the promiser we no more see
In countries that accord with mortal vow;
When I remember this I mourn, but yet
My happier days are not the days when I forget.

—Jean Ingelow.

MARITTY.

"I DON'T see what ails the girl!" said Mrs. Popley, scratching her nose with the extreme end of her knitting needle. "I s'posed she'd be perfectly contented. Took out of the very edge o' the workhouse, as it were, and made sort of 'own folks' here, with a corner bed room to herself and a fringed towel on the bureau, as a lady couldn't hev no nicer. And here she is frettin' and cryin' half the time."

"They're a fault findin' set, anyhow," said Dorcas Jones. "Ain't no use tryin' to satisfy them. I've give it up long ago. Hired gals is hired gals!"

"But she ain't a hired gal!" protested Mrs. Popley. "I've took her all the same as my own."

"More fool you!" remarked Mrs. Jones.

But she keenly observed Marietta Tyson commonly called "Maritty" when she brought in the teapot and the plate of hot biscuit for supper.

"A tall girl, with eyes as black as cherries, and cheeks for all the world like they had been painted," muttered she to herself. "She's pretty, I'll allow. I wouldn't take no such hired gal into our house, with John Henry around. Men are so queer. I'd rather do the housework myself, until I drop."

Dorcas Jones' visit was rather prolonged and it was 9 o'clock—a portentously late hour for those country wildernesses—when at last the redoubtable John Henry escorted his aunt home, and Mrs. Popley came into the kitchen where Maritty sat moodily by the fire.

"Maritty," said she, "is everything ready to lock up and go to bed?"

"Yes, Mrs. Popley."

The old lady came to a dead standstill.

"Maritty," said she, "you've been crying again."

"Maritty jumped up and threw her arms around Mrs. Popley's neck.

"I can't help it," she sobbed. "Oh, I can't help it. I am so unhappy."

"What troubles you, Maritty?" said the old lady, kindly.

"I—I want to be a lady!" sobbed Maritty. "I want a house of my own, with a piano in the best room and a store carpet on the floor—that's what I want!"

"Hush!" said Mrs. Popley. "What's that?"

Maritty turned scarlet.

"It's the wind rattling the old laylock bushes against the wooden shutters," said she.

"No, taint," said Mrs. Popley. "It's somebody knocking. Open the door Maritty?"

"It's rats!" 'peristed the girl, who was now as pale as ashes. "I—I often hear them when I'm here all by myself."

"Nonsense!" cried Mrs. Popley. "Do you s'pose I don't know rats when I hear 'em? Open the door, I say, or I'll open it myself!"

And she did open it herself, for Maritty had sunk, trembling, on a chair, her face covered by both hands.

A little, old man stood there under the dew-dripping lilac bushes, his white hair gleaming in the starlight, a certain imploring look in his faded eyes.

"Good gracious!" cried Mrs. Popley. "It's a tramp; and Popley gone to the city!"

The old man, however, did not seem to hear her.

'Maritty!" he said, in a faint, subdued voice, "where's Maritty? I want to speak to Maritty."

"I wonder," said Mrs. Popley, in a sudden panic, "if we'd better loose the dog? Oh, Maritty! you'd better cut across the lots and tell John Henry Jones and his aunt to come back! They can't be gone fur."

But Maritty had recovered herself all of a sudden. She rose and came to the door.

"No," said she, "tain't necessary to do that. It ain't a tramp—leastwise it ain't a tramp that will do you any harm, Mrs. Popley. It's—my father."

"Your father, Maritty!" gasped the good old woman.

"Yes," the girl doggedly answered. "He's on the town at Mudville, poor father is. I told you, didn't I," with a hard, mirthless laugh, "that we weren't a prosperous family? And they ain't very good to him, nor he don't get any too much to eat; and so I've took the liberty every night to give him the sour milk that was left in a pail. Father's dreadful partial to sour milk, and I didn't think it any harm, and—"

"Harm!" cried the old woman. "Tell him to come in—tell him to sit down right away. Give him, some of the raspberry shortcake and a glass o' milk outen the night's milkin'. But why on airth didn't you tell me, Maritty? Why did you keep this secret from me?"

The girl looked up with glittering, wet eyes.

"Did you s'pose I wanted folks to know how low the Tyson family had fell?" said she bitterly. "Father had a farm of his own once—he'd 'a had it now ef he hadn't underwrit fer his brother and lost it all. And that's why I want to be a lady, with a house of my own—to give father a home."

Old Mr. Tyson slept in the kitchen chamber that night, rather to his own bewilderment; but he had reached that stage of docile servility in which he accepted all things as a matter of course, and understood very little about it.

Maritty told him that "it was all right," and he implicitly believed her and troubled himself no further on the subject.

"I've a mind to let the poor old creetur' stay here," said Mrs. Popley. "There's the kitchen chamber ain't never used for nothin', and I shouldn't never feel what he eats and drinks, and he might do odd chores about the barn."

Mr. Popley, however, who had by this time returned, shook his head.

"Maritty's very well," said he, "but we can't keep open house for all her people. There ain't never no knowin' where this thing's going to stop. I guess, Phebe Ann, we'd better let him go about his own business and tell Marrity not to feed him at our back door no more. I don't quite approve of the principle."

When Miss Dorcas Jones heard of this new development she chuckled within herself.

"Ain't I glad that Marrity Tyson ain't our hired girl!" said she. "I don't s'pose John Henry would fancy that sort of gal, but there ain't no accounting for a man's whims. And she has got a pair o' handsome black eyes of her own—for them as fancies black eyes. I prefer blue for my part," with a glance at the cherry-framed glass opposite, which reflected her own faded blue orbs with painful accuracy.

That very day, however, just on the verge of twilight, when the sweet-fern thickets were distilling their pleasantest odors, and the yellow glow in the west was turning to crimson, John Henry Jones met Maritty Tyson in the high road.

"Could you lend me your one-horse wagon," said she, wistfully, "for a couple of hours to-morrow?"

"Yes," the young farmer answered, "with pleasure. Shall you want me to drive?"

"No!" the girl replied, with decision. "That would cost too much; I want to go cheap."

"Oh, I shall not charge anything for the driver—or the team either!" he said, shrugging his shoulders and smiling. "When do you want to go, Maritty?"

"I—I don't know!"

"You don't know, Marritty?" he echoed in a tone of surprise.

"Yes—and no!" retorted Maritty. "I have got to make the inquiries first. I'm going to Bridgeport to get work in the factory."

"In which factory?"

"In any of 'em, It don't matter which. They're always glad to get hands, folks tell me."

"But you don't understand factory work."

"I can learn," she insisted. "And I've father to care for now, I shan't let him go back to that place. I've got all my wages saved up, and it'll keep me until I secure a place in the factory—me and father," she added. "And the time shall come yet when I'll be a lady, with a house of my own and a piano and a store carpet on the best room floor and a cushioned Boston rocker for father."

John Henry surveyed her with admiring eyes.

"You're looking a long way ahead, Maritty," said he.

"Perhaps," with a shrug of the shoulders, "but every day I live is going to bring it nearer."

"You'll have to work dreadful hard to get all that."

"I mean to work and to wait. Can I have the wagon, John Henry, at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon? I guess that time will do as well as any."

"I don't believe you can, Maritty."

Her eyes flashed.

"I don't care for myself, I can walk; but there's father. No matter, though," she cried, quickly. "I'll go see if I can get Mr. Pratt's ox cart."

"Stop a minute, Maritty," said John Henry. "I ain't as quick of speech as some folks, but I'd like to discuss this 'ere matter with you a little."

"I hain't no time for discussion," said Maritty.

"Yes you have," said John Henry composedly.

. . . .

Miss Dorcas was slicing up apples for a pie that evening when Maritty Tyson came in. She viewed her with unsympathetic eyes.

"So you've lost your place?" she said.

"I have left Mrs. Popley—yes," said Maritty quietly.

"And you're a fool for your pains!" declared the uncompromising spinster.

"Where do you expect to get a better place?"

"Here," said Maritty calmly.

"Here!" echoed Miss Dorcas. "What on earth be you a-talking of? I don't want no gal. And I wouldn't hev you if I did. Come, clear out! John Henry'll be comin' home d'rectly, and——"

"John Henry's here now," uttered a calm voice back of the irate old lady's chair. "And if anybody is to clear out, Aunt Dorcas, it must be you. Maritty is coming here for good and all. She's my wife. We were married at the parsonage half an hour ago. I've liked her this long while, but I never had the courage to speak out my mind until to-night; and her father's coming to-morrow. We'll fix up the corner chamber up stairs for her father, Aunt Dorcas. See, Maritty," he added with honest pride, "there's a store carpet on the floor, just as you've always longed for, and here in the parlor there's the piano mother bought for poor Jenny, who died before ever she learned to play on it. And you shall be a lady, dear, with a hired girl to wait on you and your father, and there's nothing money can buy that shall be denied you. Speak up, Aunt Dorcas," he went on with kindling eyes and rising color. "Either welcome my wife or leave the house. And don't be long in taking your choice."

"Oh, I'm sure she is kindly welcome!" stammered Aunt Dorcas, with a spasmodic click in her throat. "Walk in, Mrs. Jones. Lay off your hat and shawl and I'll get the tea ready d'rectly."

And Maritty, with her soft, dark eyes fixed tenderly on her husband's face, smiled to herself.

"Me and father have got a home now," she murmured. "With a piano and a store carpet and all, even down to the cushioned rocker in the corner! Just what I always dreamed of! It seemed such a long way ahead; and yet all the time it was so near!"

Good Advice.

Tompkinson: "Robinson, I want your advice. Brown, I hear, has referred to me as an inspired idiot. What had I better do?"

Robinson: "Well, Tompkinson, I think you ought to make him take back that word 'inspired.'"

Quite a Difference.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Master painters of the state will meet in Minneapolis and form an association.

A death which is reported to have been caused by cholera causes considerable excitement in Stillwater.

All the season's binding twine product at the stillwater penitentiary has been sold to Minnesota Farmers.

F. E. Chipman, wanted in St. Paul on the charge of embezzlement, is arrested in Illinois.

Congressman Castle is renominated by the Democrats of the Fourth district in St. Paul.

Lewis Baker of St. Paul becomes chairman of the Democratic state central committee.

Strong & Miller have sold their line of elevators on the Winona & Southwestern road to the Marfield Grain Company, of Winona.

The 11-year-old daughter of H. Gunhus, while looking for eggs in the mow, near Kenyon, fell to the floor and broke both arms.

While hunting chickens recently, Ed. Burnell, the 16-year-old son of a Traverse county farmer, was killed. He was found dead with his gun in his arms.

The St. Cloud city council has unanimously voted to build a new iron bridge across the Mississippi river at this place on South Germain street.

A large woods fire has broke out at Grand Marias and if they do not get rain soon it will prove very disastrous. The fire is now within a mile and a half from here.

A son of Chris Ahneman, three miles north of Pine Island, was seriously injured by sliding down from a stack of grain and alighting on a pitch fork.

Jacob Mayer, a clerk in the employ of H. Choat & Co., at Winona was drowned in the Mississippi. Mayer was eighteen years of age.

A mysterious robbery took place at St. Cloud recently. During the night some one entered the room of Mathias Wetzel, No. 16 Seventh avenue south, and stole $203 from his clothes.

While J. Bringgold, of Roscoe, was unloading cream at the Crescent Creamery at Zumbrota, his horses became frightened and ran away, seriously, if not fatally injuring Mr. Bringgold.

An attempt was made to burn the Ross elevator at St. Charles. Waste was taken out of a journal box of a box car, lighted and thrust under the door. It was discovered before much damage was done.

The Thirteenth Judicial Bar Association met at Heron Lake, with about 15 members present. Papers were read by lawyers Canfield, Borst, Daily, Wilson, Town, Reding and others. The next meeting will be held at Worthington.

Rev. Dr. O'Gorman, of the Catholic university of Washington, D. C., will conduct services and preach the retreat to the Catholic clergy, who will be in retreat at Winona at St. John's hospital during the week commencing Aug. 29.

Two serious runaways occurred at Faribault recently. One was a horse belonging to J. W. Richardson, which threw the occupants out of buggy and injured his wife seriously. The other was that of W. J. Jones, who was seriously hurt.

A valuable vein of lead has been discovered on a farm in the town of Freemont, Winona county, by A. C. Knapp, who has a twenty-one-years lease of the land. He has associated with him C. D. Holcomb and J. H. Easton, of Rochester, who will furnish capital to develop the find.

Edward Zeibarth, a farmer 50 years of age, residing about 6¼ miles southeast of Montrose, was driving a team of high-spirited horses attached to a self-binder. He was cleaning out the machine, when the team took fright and ran away, Mr. Ziebarth losing an arm and a leg.

Mrs. J. C. Koch, of Springwater township, near Luverne, committed suicide by drowning herself in a watering trough on her farm. She leaves four children, a babe a few months old, and the oldest eight years. Despondency caused by illness is said to have been the cause.

Patrick Mulligan, who stabbed William O'Donnell in a quarrel over a woman at Northfield a few days ago, was arrested and brought before Justice Donaldson. He was bound over to the next term of the district court in the sum of $1,000.

Miss Kittie Lonkey, who was injured at Dundas in a runaway caused by a jealous lover, will probably die or remain a cripple. She is now very low. Legal proceedings have been commenced by Oliver Lonkey, father of the girl, in a criminal action against Ravier.

Andrew Anderson, a Swede serving as hostler at the Minnesota house, Alexandria was kicked and trampled by horses two days ago, sustaining internal injuries from which he died. He was fifty years old and single.

D. D. Jones, of Staples, while getting on a loaded wagon with a loaded gun in his hand, accidentally shot his little boy of 4 years, who was sitting in the wagon. The charge of shot struck the boy in the left thigh, making a very ragged and ugly wound. The child will recover.

The general store of M. A. Ostrander was entered by burglars at Kasota. A clerk who was sleeping in the store was awakened by the noise and several shots were exchanged, but without effect. The burglar dropped a well-filled grip of jewelry and made his escape.

Orrin Farrar, sexton of the Methodist Church at Lewiston, was set upon on coming out of the church recently and so severely beaten by two brothers named Purdie and Archie Albert that he is unable to leave his bed. The assailants have been held to bail to the next term of court. The affair is the outcome of an old grudge.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Minnesota Woman Suffrage association will be held at Hastings Sep. 6, 7 and 8. First session, 3 p. m., Sep. 6. Local societies are requested to send three delegates. Good speakers will be present. Delegates desiring entertainment should send their names to Mrs. W. B. Reed, Hastings.

Seth Harris, one of Hastings' early and esteemed citizens, died recently from paralysis, aged seventy-six years. He belonged to Peller Post, No. 80, G. A. R. He leaves a wife and three children, John Harris, of Farmington, Wash.; Mrs. E. A. Dixon, of Waterford, and Mrs. Jane Waldier, of Kansas City.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The elevator at Bloom, near Jamestown, burned the other morning. Supposed to be the work of tramps.

A Bathgate special says: Harvest has started and is coming on very fast. Help is very scarce, at least 100 men wanted. Prospects are fine.

The Republican convention at Jamestown nominated Bailey Fuller for state senator, O. A. Boynton and George Wright for representatives, and a full county ticket. Many nominations were by acclamation.

A man named William Vail was killed four miles north of Casselton. He was on a traction engine going over a bridge which crosses Rush river near J. O. Smith's farm, when it went down and he was caught under the machine. The bridge had been condemned, but no notice was posted.

The Grand Forks city council has offered a reward of $500 for the conviction of the murderers of W. B. Botheim, killed here.

The county officers intend to offer $500 reward, also, and it is thought the same amount may be offered by the state authorities.

While four boys were bathing in Ox creek, about twenty-four miles east of Willow City, they got beyond their depth. Only one of them could swim. He saved two of the others, but John Engerson he could not rescue and he drowned. He was eighteen years old.

A Sanborn special says: Machine agents are unable to obtain binders enough from the manufacturers to fill standing orders. It is thought that thirty more binders will be needed. This may cause considerable loss, as the grain of some farmers will get over-ripe before cut.

Joseph Knapp of Devil's Lake was knocked down, beaten senseless and robbed of a gold watch and $50 at Grand Forks. Chief Hennessy arrested two thugs, one of whom had the watch and the other the pocketbook. Knapp identified them as his assailants.

The Grand Forks chamber of commerce is in receipt of advices from Devil's Lake and Cando stating harvest hands are greatly needed in the Devil's Lake and Turtle mountain regions. The extra warm weather recently has ripened grain rapidly, bringing on the harvest all at once. Farmers will sustain serious losses unless able to secure help immediately. Scarcity of help is reported also in Pembina and Walsh counties, especially the latter.

IOWA.

An unknown man about 30 years old was killed at New Hampton while trying to board a freight train.

Oats and barley are being threshed at Bancroft. Both crops are very light, both in bulk and weight.

An accident befalls a Chicago & Milwaukee train bearing returning Knights Templar, in Iowa, injuring fifteen persons.

Fire at Whatcher, burned the postoffice, Methodist church and ten other buildings. Loss, $30,000, partially covered by insurance.

A Dubuque special says: Mrs. John Brihul, an old lady living near Lancaster, Wis., was killed by a ram which she attempted to drive from the garden. Both legs were broken and her body was badly bruised.

The stock of H. E. Heacock, jeweler of Sioux City invoiced at $15,000, was taken by the sheriff under a writ of attachment sworn out by C. H. Knight and two wholesale jewelers of Chicago to secure a claim of $7,493. There are other claims not yet received.

The steamboat Rosebud, a week out from Sioux City, bound for Pierre with a cargo of soap, vinegar, pickles and lumber, struck a snag at Crow Creeks, S. D., and sank in five feet of water. The loss cannot be ascertained, but the boat and cargo are well insured. She will be raised.

When the driver of a beer wagon stopped at the saloon run at Dubuque by Stephen Raunser the other morning he found the place locked. Investigation disclosed the fact that the proprietor was dead. His pipe, half filled, lay beside him. Death was due to the bursting of a blood vessel.

Eric Rude, Leonard Johnson and Ernest Miller, three men engaged on a derrick at Sioux Falls pulled a wire guy rope over the feed wire of the street car line, and received a terrific shock, which instantly killed Rude and dangerously injured the other two men. Johnson was severely burned, but will recover.

After being out twenty minutes the coroner's jury at Lean returned a verdict exonerating E. W. Curry, holding that he shot William F. Ellis in self-defense. The shooting which occurred recently was the result of a long quarrel, in which the evidence showed Ellis to have been the aggressor.

WISCONSIN.

Michael Craney, a Kenosha pioneer, passed away at the age of 72 years.

Link Stevens, of Shullsburg, had his hand smashed in a corn crusher.

Martin Nelson, convicted of robbery, was sentenced at West Superior to one year in the penitentiary.

D. B. Barnes, formerly a resident of Oshkosh, died at his home in Des Moines, Ia., aged 70 years.

During the month of July the Wisconsin Lead & Zinc Company, of Shullsburg, shipped 900 tons of zinc ore from that place.

John H. Tatem, aged 65 years, of Grand Rapids, Mich., was married to Theressa Thorne, a woman of 30 years, of Racine.

The marriage of Miss Teene Knoop to August Schmidt took place at the residence of the bride's parents in Racine.

The second annual fair and exposition of the Oshkosh Fair Association will be held at Oshkosh September 19 to 23.

Mr. Doemel, a prominent farmer of the town of Oshkosh, Winnebago County, died of paralysis, aged 70 years.

M. T. Stokes, formerly managing editor of the Madison Times, has taken charge of the Sheboygan Journal.

Miss Eudora Dresser, a teacher in a public school at Berlin, died of quick consumption, aged 28 years.

Some unknown person entered the barn of William Goodenough, at La Crosse, and stole a valuable trotter.

John L. O'Brien, of Shullsburg, had his right hand crushed in a binder. Amputation was necessary.

The creamery owned by Haggert & Gilles at Tiffney, Rock County, was destroyed by fire. The loss is covered by insurance.

William Schmiedeknecht, of Green Bay, has sworn out a warrant for the arrest of Matt Kramer of that place, charging him with assault to do great bodily harm.

Fred Davis, a young man residing at Black River Falls, was drowned while trying to swim across the Black River. The body was afterwards recovered.

Emil Furrer, a Mississippi River pilot, has been offered $9,000 for a share in the Galena mine that he discovered about twenty miles east of Alma.

Mrs. Gustave Meyer has brought suit against the city of Oshkosh for damages for injuries alleged to have been received by a defective sidewalk.

The Catholic societies of Racine have decided to celebrate the 400th anniversary of the landing in America of Christopher Columbus October 21.

Mrs. John Dunbar, of Beloit, was thrown from a carriage at Janesville and received injuries from which it is feared she cannot recover.

There are hundreds of people from all parts of the state attending the Methodist camp meeting at Spring Lake, near Palmyra.

A 6-year-old son of John Plantego of Eau Claire was run over and instantly killed by a heavy wagon. A wheel crushed his temple.

Conductor Temple, who shot brakeman Finney at Ashland Junction, will be tried in Bayfield county. Sheriff Hallaron took the prisoner to Bayfield.

Recipe for Scandal.

The following is said by those who claim to know to be a first-class recipe for the manufacture of a pure article of scandal: Take a grain of falsehood, a handful of runabout, the same quantity of nimble tongue, a sprig of the herb backbite, a spoonful of don't you tell it, six drops of malice, a few dreams of envy; add a little discontent and jealousy and strain through a bag of misconstruction; cork it up in a bottle of malevolence and hang it up in a skein of street yarn; keep it in a hot atmosphere and shake it occasionally for a few days and it will be fit for use. Let a few drops be taken before walking out and the desired result will follow."

Absent Minded.

The two most absent-minded men on record are the fellow who thought he had left his watch at home and then took it out to see if he had time go back and get it, and the man who put on his office door a card saying: "Out; will be back soon," and on his return sat down on the stair step to wait for himself.

A Scared Boy.

A thunderbolt struck a small boy the other day, and scooted down his trousers legs. As they picked him up he exclaimed, with agonizing earnestness:—

"Oh, teacher! I'll be good!"

An Indolgent Husband.

"I have such an indulgent husband," said little Mrs. Doll.

"Yes, so George says," responded Mrs. Spiteful. "Sometimes indulges a little too much, doesn't he?"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

A needy woman —the one who's overworked, nervous, and debilitated. What she needs is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It's made exactly to fit her case—an invigorating, restorative tonic, and a soothing and strengthening nervine, giving tone and vigor to the whole system. But it isn't a mere stimulant. It's a legitimate medicine, that an experienced physician has carefully prepared, for woman's ailments. All the functional derangements, chronic weaknesses, and painful disorders peculiar to the sex, are corrected and cured by it.

And because it's a certain remedy, it can be made a guaranteed one. If it fails to give satisfaction, in any case, you have your money back.

The best pill costs less than any other. Costs less, but does more. They're smaller, too, and easier to take. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the best pills. They regulate perfectly the liver, stomach, and bowels.

He Had the Size.

Young Man: "I want an engagement ring for a young lady."

Jeweller: "Yes, sir; about what size?"

Young Man: "I don't know exactly; but she can twist me around her little finger, if that's any guide."

Refuses to Yield.

INDIANAPOLIS, Special—The sensational development in the Iron Hall difficulty to-day was the refusal of Supreme Cashier Davis, who has just returned from Philadelphia, to surrender his books to the finance committee of the order for inspection. The attorneys and officers of the Iron Hall have returned from Philadelphia and the receivership suit will be re-opened to-morrow. The appointment of a receiver for the Iron Hall by Judge Taylor is now a foregone conclusion.

The cholera situation at St. Petersburg, has become more favorable. Only 12 deaths from this disease were reported. The official report shows that throughout the cholera infested districts of Russia, the daily average is eight, 691 new cases and 4,288 deaths from the disease.

The Democratic state convention met at Davenport and nominated the following state officers: Secretary of state, Col. J. H. McConlogue of Mason City; auditor, S. P. Vandyke of Vinton; treasurer, Charles Rengents; attorney general, Judge Ezra Willard of Atlantic; railroad commissioner, W. G. Kent of Fort Madison; electors-at-large, Judge Nathaniel French of Davenport and W. W. Wilmer of Des Moines.

"August Flower"

My wife suffered with indigestion and dyspepsia for years. Life became a burden to her. Physicians failed to give relief. After reading one of your books, I purchased a bottle of August Flower. It worked like a charm. My wife received immediate relief after taking the first dose. She was completely cured—now weighs 165 pounds, and can eat anything she desires without any deleterious results as was formerly the case. C. H. Dear, Prop'r Washington House, Washington, Va.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

President Harrison issues a retaliatory proclamation imposing tolls on all vessels passing through the Soo canal in transit to Canadian ports.

No officials in Washington are aware of the presence in this city as is reported in the Chicago dispatch, of a representative from the Chinese government, who is here to secure the best legal talent to test the Chinese exclusion act.

The last issue of consular reports contains thirty-three pages by Consul Frank D. Hill, consul at Montevideo, upon the conditions and progress of Uruguay in 1891. Mr. Hill is a young man from Minnesota, who is making a good record in the United States foreign service. The report which he furnishes contains a great deal of interesting information about the South American republic of Uruguay.

PERSONAL MENTION.

There are only eight veterans of Waterloo now surviving in France.

Mrs. Harrison is steadily improving. Her recovery is gradual, but each day shows some gratifying change.

Gen. Thomas L. Rosser of Virginia has withdrawn from a congressional contest because the opposition to him was likely to disrupt the party.

Mrs. Lavinia Fillmore, a connection of the late President Fillmore, has just celebrated her 105th birthday, and is said never to have ridden on a railroad train.

Henry H. Rawson, the Christain Scientist of Albany, who allowed his five-year-old daughter to die without medical assistance, has died, and physicians found his brain diseased.

Alexander H. Carver of Willimantic, Conn., went to California, many years ago, leaving his family ignorant of his whereabouts, and now he turns up dead in Brazil worth $4,000,000 which will come to the children who had almost forgotten his existence.

Rev. Dr. John Van Nest Talmage, brother of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, died in Bound Brook, N. J., recently. He was born in Somerville, N. J., Aug. 18, 1819, and graduated in Rutgers college in 1845, and at New Brunswick, N. J., seminary in 1845.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Two persons are killed and twenty injured in a railroad wreck in Maryland.

Buildings on the East Seventh street fill in St. Paul slide into Swede Hollow and are destroyed by fire.

The British bark Rome, Capt. Ewing, from Bombay for Hull, is wrecked at Groot Valley, South Africa. The crew are supposed to be drowned and the cargo is washing ashore.

A woman named Greenbaul of Marion township, Mich., is reported as having left her child asleep in a wagon while she went berrying in the woods. When she returned she found some animal, probably a lynx, which had devoured her child all but one foot. She may loose her reason.

SINS AND SINNERS.

At Santa Ana, Cal., Francisco Torres, who murdered William McKelloy, foreman of Mme. Modjeska, was lynched by a mob.

Thomas Smith shot and killed his wife and then committed suicide. The cause of the tragedy is not at this time known. The shooting occurred on Thompson's ranch, about seven miles north of Denver. They had separated.

James S. Wilson, agent of the Kansas & Arkansas Valley railroad at Nowata, Ind., T. was held up and robbed by three men supposed to be members of the Dalton gang of train robbers and desperadoes. About $1,000 was secured.

D. L. Samples, a prominent business man of Charleston, W. Va., was shot and killed by a masked thief, who attempted to rob him. Phillip C. Russell, another prominent citizen, who is suspected of the crime, is lying in a precarious condition, as a result of the charge against him.

Capt. Eugene Bunch, the noted train robber, while resisting arrest, was killed by detectives near Franklinton, La. Cal. Hapgood, who was with Bunch, surrendered without firing a shot. Bunch began firing as soon as he saw the officers, but none of them was hit, being protected by a fence. Bunch's body was riddled with bullets, all of the posse having fired on him at once.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Queen Victoria is met on the road by a crank who informs her that he had sworn to kill her. He was arrested.

Trouble in the German cabinet may result in the resignation of Chancellor von Caprivi.

Canadian papers denounce President Harrison's retaliatory proclamation, and suggest reprisals.

Mr. Gladstone has been re-elected in Midlothian on taking office. He had no opposition.

A ukase has been issued annuling the prohibition against the exportation from Russia of rye, rye meal and all kinds of bran.

Thirty-four cases of cholera and thirteen deaths from the disease had occurred in the province of Lublin, Russian Polan, up to Aug. 19.

During the manœuvres of the Tours garrison two soldiers died from the effects of the heat and 200 had to be sent to the hospitals.

The Rome correspondent of the London Daily News says that the pope will rise to cardinalate Archbishop Vaughan, Archbishop Walsh and Bishop MacDonnell.

It is now definitely known that the American gentleman who committed suicide Friday at Morley's hotel London, was Brig. Gen. Henry Prince, aged eighty-two, a retired officer of the American army.

The queen has elevated to the peerage, Sir Lyon Playfair, and Mr. Cyril Flower, member of the house of commons for the Luton division of Bedfordshire. Sir Lyon Playfair and wife will sail for the United States soon.

Tip O'Tipp who claims to be a Zulu prince, but who is wanted in several cities for violations of the law, has been arrested at Louisville. The last place he operated in was Toledo, Ohio, where with two white confederates he broke into and robbed several houses. His confederates were captured and convicted.

Most Rev. James A. Cleary, archbishop of Kingston, Ont., has sent £500 to the McCarthyites. In a letter accompanying the subscription the archbishop writes that his people, who are chiefly Irish, are eagerly looking forward to the time when they can send delegates to Dublin to take part in inaugurating an Irish parliament. He adds that he and others will be most happy to assist in this inauguration.

It is announced semi-officially that the emperor's speech at the Emperor Franz Joseph banquet, has been misquoted and distorted and that the declaration that he has been credited with making against Caprivi's military bill was only a conditional one. What the emperor really said was that the German people could not expect to have the service term reduced to two years unless they were willing to pay for it.

The arbitration agreement between the United States and Chile has been finally ratified by the Chilean government and has been printed in the official gazette. It requires the ratification of the United States senate within six months from Aug. 6. The terms of the agreement were coupled with necessary modification from a previous French treaty with the United States.

Advices from Afghanistan show that another engagement has occurred between the revolting tribesmen and a force of Afghan troops. The ameer's army was defeated, and it is said they are now in a critical condition and suffering from scarcity of food. The tribal levies made by the ameer are not proving very successful, the so-called loyal tribesmen objecting to fighting against the Hazaras.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

At the meeting of the Nebraska Republican state central committee the name of T. J. Majors was placed on the ticket for lieutenant governor, in place of J. G. Tate, found ineligible.

Hon. Bellamy Storer and Hon John A. Caldwell, representatives in congress from the First and Second Ohio districts respectively, have been unanimously renominated.

THE TOILERS.

The switchmen in Buffalo are losing their strike. Trains on all roads are running freely.

Grand Chief Sweeney declared the switchmen's strike off, and the men will apply for their old positions.

Locked-out strikers at Buffalo try to continue the trouble. Grand Master Sweeney is assaulted by a striker.

The Milwaukee road has granted the freight handlers in its Milwaukee freight house the same advance in wages as the Chicago & Northwestern did.

The Amalgamated association and the iron manufacturers at Youngstown, Ohio, have agreed upon a scale. Over ten thousand men in the valley will return to work at once.

At a meeting of the river coal operators, held in Pittsburg, it was decided to reduce the wages of their miners to 3 cents per bushel. It is expected the miners, who number 10,000 will strike.

The dispute between the journeymen tailors in England and the masters regarding the matter of piece work resulted in the employers locking out their men as a matter of protection. Fifty-five thousand tailors are made idle.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

The president of the Olympic club declares that nothing will prevent the three big fights scheduled for next month.

Nancy Hanks fails to lower her record, but Jay Eye See paces a mile in 2:08¼, the fastest time ever made by a gelding.

P. J. Berfield was driven two miles at Hampton Park in 4:48 2-5, breaking the world's record of 4:48 4-5 made by Taylor last fall.

A turf syndicate writer, paid for his trash by the yard, bemoans the fact that Yo Tambien and other prominent western "2-year-olds" are not eligible in the Futurity.

Ives and Slorson are about closing their engagement at the Follies Bergeres, and after a trip to London and a tour through the lake district they will sail Sept. 21, on the steamship Teutonic, for New York.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

A receiver of the Richmond Terminal company is appointed in Baltimore.

An important meeting of the Transcontinental Railroad association is held in New York.

The story that the Northern Pacific will absorb the Wisconsin Central is again denied.

Fifteen miles have been added this season to the Oakes division of the Soo in North Dakota. By this extension the Soo has been enabled to penetrate a rich wheat country.

A circular was issued announcing the appointment of W. L. Martin, assistant freight agent of the Soo, to the position of general freight agent of the same line. He takes the place made vacant by the death of the late J. M. Sawyer.

GENERAL.

The board of prison inspectors of Tennessee have just decided to return the convicts to the mines at once.

At the first business meeting of the general assembly of the Welsh Presbyterians of America in Utica, N. Y., Rev. Joseph Roberts of Minneapolis was elected moderator of the assembly for the next three years.

Enoch Mayser, the oldest printer in the West, died at Burlington, Iowa, aged ninety-one. He was born in Boston in 1801, and was connected with the early journalism of that city. He went to Burlington in 1810.

The vacancy in the faculty of the Southern Indiana Normal College at Mitchell, caused by the recent death of the associate principal, Prof. George E. Williams, has been filled by the selection of Prof. J. C. Dickerson, of Remington, Ind.

The Western coal sales agents have advanced the prices of coal to the West 25 cents, to Buffalo 30 cents; the Eastern coal sales agents have advanced prices of egg to 20 cents, broken 10 cents and chestnut to 25 cents. The production for September will be the same as for August.

Col. Norman M. Smith, of the Eighteenth regiment at Pittsburg asked for detectives to guard the regiment armory which is situated in the heart of the city, and Superintendent of Police O'Mara has failed to force to patrol the approaches to the armory.

W. F. Cowham, proprietor of a large implement warehouse at Jackson, Mich., and also interested in clothing and other kinds of business, has failed for a very large amount. His liabilities will probably exceed $200,000 and his assets will be much less. Chattel mortgages to protect certain creditors were filed to the amount of $57,000.

In view of the rapid spread of cholera in Europe the custom house authorities of Boston have issued an order that no rags shall be landed from any European port until examination are made in each case, in order to be assured that they did not come from any cholera infected district, until they were thoroughly fumigated in a manner prescribed by the department.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Rev. A. Hayden of Faribault has accepted a call to St. Luke's church of Hastings, dating from Sept. 1.

Democrats of Hennepin county renominate all but one of the present incumbents.

A new German paper, the Teutonia, published by Herman Rische, of Red Wing has appeared.

Harvest is nearly done at Pelican Rapids. The crop is a fair wheat yield, from five to twenty per acre. Oats are good.

Harvesting on the Shell prairies is about over. The crop will be light, averaging not over twelve bushels for wheat.

Mrs. Sarah Whifly Sloan, wife of the late Hon. Frank Sloan, died at Winona after a long illness.

Thorpe Bros. & Co.'s elevator burned at Buffington. It contained about 10,000 bushels of wheat, supposed to be insured.

Cornelius and Dan Hessian were arrested at St. Peter for perjury, growing out of the tar and feather case of Katie Boyd vs. Con Hessian.

An Albert Lea special says: The prospect is that wheat and oats will yield not to exceed one-half of the crop of last year, when it was about the average.

A Redwood Falls special says: The hunting season opened with numerous sportsmen here, but a scarcity of ducks. Hunters report chickens very scarce.

The St. Joseph Church of Winona have ordered from Obenbrett, of Milwaukee a handsome pipe organ to be placed in their church edifice by the 1st of March next, at a cost of $2,500.

A Pine City advice says: John D. Vaughan and Otto Kowalke caught a black bass in Pokegama weighing exactly eight and one-half pounds, the largest fish of the kind ever caught in these waters.

A new passenger station at New Ulm is now assured. The Chicago & Northwestern railroad is now making active preparation. The amount to be expended by the company at this point will be in the neighborhood of $20,000.

The firm of Steinbe & Dickman of Sleepy Eye made a voluntary assignment in order to dissolve partnership and settle up the business. They have had frequent quarrels and could not agree. They owe over $2,000, all of which will be paid.

S. A. Clifford, a pioneer settler one mile north of Clearwater, was gored to death by an infuriated bull. Mrs. Clifford, hearing the cries, drove the beast away with a pitchfork and dragged the remains from the yard.

During the temporary absence of the family, the residence of Charles Fish of Sauk Center was entered and a gold watch and chain belonging to Mrs. Fish taken. The burglar helped himself to a hearty supper before leaving.

William L. Fullivan, brakeman on the Great Northern road, aged twenty-four, single, whose home is in St. Paul, but whose headquarters are at St. Cloud, had his leg cut off while trying to board a train at Carlisle after closing the switch.

Crookston is to be lighted by gas in the near future. A stock company with a capital of $50,000 has been formed. The officers are Hon. Hugh Thompson, president; Mayor Anglim, vice president; L. D. Marshall, treasurer, and C. E. Sawyer, secretary.

Fire broke out in the oil room of the depot of the Milwaukee railway at Blooming Prairie the other evening. The building and most of its contents were consumed. Henry Serrold fell from the platform and broke his arm.

Thieves made a raid on A. D. Morris' jewelry store at Crookston and made off with $800 worth of goods. The thieves made an entrance over the rear door through a transom. The police have no clue. The clerk who was sleeping in the store, heard the men escape and gave the alarm. The goods taken were gold watches, chains, rings and charms.

Tom Gardener, alias Haas, of Shakopee, was held to the grand jury at Breckinridge in the sum of $500 for attempted highway robbery of F. E. Baker, traveling agent for the Monitor Manufacturing Company of Minneapolis, recently. After the court adjourned the judge read a notice warning gamblers and other disreputable characters to quit the city at once.

Dennis Ward, who left Faribault in December last, and is supposed to have gone into the Wisconsin pine woods, has failed to report since, and his mother, sister and aunt of this city have sought in vain to get any track of his whereabouts. His aunt, who is a lady of considerable means, is much worried about him, and fears he has met with some accidental death, as he was in the habit of keeping her posted as to his whereabouts, knowing that he would receive all of her property after her death.

Observer S. G. Duffy, of the United States weather bureau at Moorhead, has received notification that beginning Sep. 1 Moorhead will be one of the centers for forecasts and warnings to cities and towns in Minnesota and North Dakota. This work has hitherto been done in St. Paul; but owing to a change in the telegraph rates it has been transferred to Moorhead. It will greatly increase the value of the station, as forty-two cities and towns in the two states will receive daily weather bulletin from Moorhead instead of St. Paul formerly.

NORTH DAKOTA

At a meeting of the Fargo Board of Trade a committee was appointed to confer with the Northern Pacific railroad in regard to the erection of a new depot and a hotel here.

A unique celebration was held in the rooms of the Flambeau Club, at Fargo recently when a class of six graduates from the Houston Narcotic Cure Institute for the Cure of Drunkenness. They were the first to enter the institute three weeks ago, and have stepped forth new men.

Dock Price, a prominent cattle man of Coal Harbor, was shot by William Clark, a neighbor. Price was taken to Fort Berthold and placed in charge of a government surgeon, who says that his wounds are very serious though not necessarily fatal.

Eighteen townships of splendid land in Sheridan county, about 250,000 acres were opened to entry and settlement at the Bismarck land office. This is nearly as much land as the famous Sisseton reservation, but no rush of settlers is expected. The opening has not been extensively advertised, as the land is distant from railroads.

The Merchants' National Bank of Devil's Lake, formerly managed by Fulton & Gowran, and for the past two years one of the E. Ashley Mears system of banks, has been sold to a company of which John A. Percival is president and August Peterson cashier. The names of the other officers are not announced, but are said to include Minneapolis men.

What will prove to be a most sensational case will grow out of a little incident that occurred at Fargo recently. L. C. Johnson, brother of Congressman Johnson, and a prominent Scandinavian attorney, shot a cow belonging to a woman named McCloud. The cow strayed into the lawyer's garden and he ended its life with a revolver bullet. Friends of the woman will carry the case into the courts.

Over 600 delegates have been appointed from the various commercial bodies of Northwestern cities to the international reciprocity convention to be held at Grand Forks. The subjects to be considered at the convention will be the urging of joint action by the two countries in the interest of reciprocity trade relations and navigation on the great lakes to the seaboard by way of the St. Lawrence river.

Excitement is running high in East Grand Forks over a kidnaping case. The other morning Jake Police, of Fargo, arrived in that city in search of his sister-in-law, a pretty Jewish girl of 15 years of age, who has been in this city for the past year working. She was located in a disreputable house, arrested and taken before Justice Dwyer. Police and the girl's sister, who accompanied him from Fargo, pleaded with the girl, and she agreed to accompany them home. An officer stepped out of the room for a moment and Sam Brooker, a hack driver, grabbed the girl, carried her away forcibly, placed her in a carriage and drove rapidly away, with officers and men in hot pursuit. Brooker evaded the pursuers, but was arrested on a charge of kidnapping. He was held in the sum of $500. The girl returned with her sister and brother to Fargo.

IOWA.

Peterson's carriage shop and residence burned at Sheldon. Loss 1,200, insured for half.

About fifty car loads of hogs at the Stockyards at Sioux City had to be shipped to Chicago for lack of local buyers. Both packing houses are shut down.

The Tenth district Democratic congressional convention came off at Humboldt. J. J. Ryan of Kossuth, was nominated by acclamation.

The People's Party congressional convention of the Seventh district met at Des Moines and nominated Prof. E. A. Ott, of Drake University of this city, for congress on the Tenth ballot.

The result of the election held for major of the 1st regiment Iowa national guards was as follows: Lieut. Brown, of Dubuque, 285; Capt. McCollum, 173; majority for Brown, 122. The regiment is composed of 72 companies.

Will Fisher, a young railroad man, married to Miss Cassie Harris four days ago, was arrested at Cedar Rapids charged with bigamy. It is claimed he was married to Agnes Richt, of this city, about two months ago. Fisher claims not to be married to the Richt girl.

The body of the famous Cardiff giant, which has been buried under a livery stable in Independence for twenty years, was exhumed by Bruce L. Baldwin and P. C. Cummings, circus managers, and will be exhibited by them. This was Barnum & Older's giant fraud of 1871.

While a number of national guardsmen were practicing in the Armory at Des Moines, a gun in the hands of Horace Smith, which was supposed not to be loaded, was accidentally discharged, the contents taking effect in the head of Clifford St. John, killing him instantly. Both were members of company A 3rd regiment, better known as the Governor's Guards. The victim was well known and highly connected here, and the tragedy casts a gloom over the community.

Lumpy-Jaw Reported Curable.

Orange Judd Farmer: In March, 1892, M. Nocard, a celebrated French veterinarian, called attention to the fact that actinomycosis of the tongue, so common in Germany, could be cured by the administration of potassium iodide. In proof of the above he says that M. Thomassen of Utrecht, has treated eighty cases since 1885, all of which were cured. All these cases referred to the disease of the tongue, but in April, 1892, Dr. Norgood, of the bureau of animal industry at Washington, treated a young steer affected with the disease of the jaw and cured him completely.

The treatment with iodide of potassium consists in giving full doses of this medicine once or twice a day until improvement is noticed, when the dose may be reduced or given less frequently. The size of the dose should depend somewhat upon the weight of the animal. M. Thomassen gives one and one-half drams of iodide of potassium daily in one dose dissolved in a pint of water until improvement is noticed, which he states is always within eight days. Then he decreases the dose to one dram. The animals do well under this treatment, showing only the ordinary symptoms which follow the use of iodine, the principal ones being discharge from nose, weeping of the eyes, and peeling off of the outer layer of skin. These symptoms need cause no uneasiness, as they never result in any serious disturbance of the health. Experiments are now being conducted on a large scale by the bureau of animal industry in the treatment of lumpy jaw with this remedy, and the results will be published as soon as possible. In the meantime it would be well for all who have animals affected with this disease to treat them according to this method and report the results to the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

What Will a Small Flock Produce?

Western Stockman: On Oct. 1, 1891, a farmer living three miles west of Omaha bought fifty common Merino grade ewes at $2.50 per head. These ewes were bred to a good South Down ram lamb, and during the latter part of February and in March they dropped their lambs, forty of which were successfully raised. The whole flock of eighty-seven head (three of the ewes having died during the winter) were sold June 1, the ewes being shorn, to an Omaha butcher at $3.75 per head, making $326.25. In addition to this the flock clipped 427 pounds of wool, which, with the three pelts, brought $66.50, making an aggregate of $392.75. From this sum the purchase price, with 8 per cent interest for eight months, making $131.75, and we have left $261 as the net produce of a flock of fifty ewes in eight months.

We have not the figures at hand to show what it cost to keep this flock. They were well housed. The ewes and lambs had the run of a large field of rye during the spring. They had a liberal ration of sugar beets, clover, hay and plenty of grain. The ewes were so fat that they were bought for mutton along with the lambs. But this feed was all produced on the farm, and when it is observed that the net gain per ewe was $5.22 per head it is a fair proposition to state that the food the flock ate was marketed at a paying price.

Fixed Stars.

There are no fixed stars in the firmament of mankind. Each shines for the time appointed, and is then blotted out to make room for others. But the heavens never grow wholly dark, for, as one great light fades, flickers, and is extinguished, another appears in an unexpected quarter. Every age has its exceptional men, and, though it may seem impossible to fill their places when they depart, it somehow happens—such is the richness of human nature—that their places are always filled.

A Grateful Boy.

New York Tribune: Little children teach those of larger growth many a lesson. Would that older people were always as thoughtful for their blessings! Little B. had just recovered from a tedious illness and was wild as a colt with the pleasure of being out again. The other day he was invited to a picnic and came home brimming over with the happiness he had enjoyed. That night, when he said his prayers as usual at his aunt's knee, he added on his own accord: "I thank thee for giving that picnic and letting me go to it."

CANNOT BE FOUND

A Three-Year-Old Child Near Fulda, Minn., Lost on the Prairie.

Hundreds of Men Search in Vain for Hours for the Little One.

FULDA, Minn., Special, Aug. 29.—Last evening a farmer named Haberman, who lives about one mile east of town, came in and informed the people that one of his twin little girls, about three years old, was lost somewhere on the prairie. The child went to the road which ran near the house, and with its sister wandered along the highway from the house about a quarter of a mile and out of sight of its parents. A short time after the sister of the little girl which is lost returned and said: "Julia has gone after candy." The parents went in search but could not find any trace of the child, but hunted nearly all day before they alarmed the town people. Search was made until darkness by a few, but about 100 men went out at daybreak, and the search has been continued by hundreds of people all day long. Every foot of the prairies for miles around has been carefully examined and searched without avail. No trace or clue of the missing child has as yet been found, and night has again come and all have gone home and abandoned the search. The opinion is now quite general that the child has been abducted.

FELL IN TORRENTS.

A Severe Rain Storm, Accompanied by a High Wind.

BENSON, Minn., Special, Aug. 29.—A very hard rain storm occurred here this afternoon, accompanied by a strong wind, which broke down a number of trees and overturned small outbuildings in the village. The house of Rev. Chris Pederson was struck by lightning and set on fire, but fortunately no one was injured, although three families with their children were in the building at the time. The damage to the house was slight and covered with insurance.

FERGUS FALLS, Minn., Special, Aug. 29.—There was another downpour of water last night, the precipitation being 1.39 inches. The country is thoroughly drenched, especially to the south.

FARGO, N. D., Special, Aug. 29.—Showers commenced at various places in North Dakota yesterday afternoon and continued through the night. To-day the rain is reported as quite general. There was considerable hail, but it did only a little damage as the grain was generally in shock where the hail fell. The rain puts back threshing for a day or two, but harvesting will commence soon after the rain stops. Farmers do not look with pleasure at the storm.

WILL NOW ESCAPE.

John McNulty, the San Francisco Murderer, Is Dead in Law.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 29.—John McNulty, the murderer who has been in the jail here for over four years under sentence of death, is, in the language of Judge Murphy, who sentenced him, "judicially dead." McNulty was to be hanged yesterday, but the sheriff's counsel advised that official not to proceed, as the governor's reprieve did not specify the time of execution and that the prisoner must be brought before Judge Murphy for resentence. The district attorney will now bring McNulty before Judge Murphy on Monday, but the Judge, speaking unofficially, says: "The time of execution having passed, McNulty, in contemplation of the law, is judicially dead. My court is done with him." If Judge Murphy adheres to this opinion when the matter comes before him judicially, then there is no power in the state to punish the murderer, even by imprisonment, and he will be set free.

RIGIDLY INSPECTED.

Vessels From London and Hamburg Arrive at Quarantine.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The steamships Servia from Liverpool, Lydian Monarch from London and Sorrento from Hamburg arrived at this port to-day and were subjected to rigid inspection. No cholera nor suspicious cases were found, and after being thoroughly fumigated the vessels were permitted to dock. Mayor Grant, President Wilson, of the New York board of health, Police Commissioner Martin, Quarantine Commissioner Allen and Dr. C. F. Roberts, chief inspector of contagious diseases, paid a visit to Health Officer Jenkins this afternoon on the steam tug State of New York. After holding a conference the party visited the quarantine islands on a tour of inspection.

Against Their Records.

INDEPENDENCE, Iowa, Aug. 29.—Among the many good things billed for Rush Park this week are the effort of Nancy Hanks to lower her record on Tuesday. The next day Martha Wilkes will start to lower the world's trotting record. An effort is being made to arrange a match race between Nancy Hanks and Martha Wilkes for some day later. Doble will pilot Nancy and Starr will drive Martha Wilkes in case the race is arranged.

Free Canals.

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 29.—The Mail's Montreal correspondent says he was informed by a prominent Conservative, who is in close relations with members of the dominion cabinet, that the government would probably adopt a policy of free canals before the next session of parliament. Color is given to this statement by a significant article in the Gazette (government paper), which advocates the free use of the canals.

May Change Their Minds.

WINNIPEG, Man., Special, Aug. 29.—A special meeting of the board of trade will be held to-morrow to reconsider the action of the board on Friday in not appointing a delegation to the Grand Forks reciprocity convention. It is now thought a large delegation will attend, as the action of the board has excited general interest in the convention.

Pawned Borrowed Diamonds.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—The local police are anxiously looking for S. N. Jacobs, formerly one of the best known diamond salesmen in this country and a brother of the members of the firm of Jacobs Bros. of Washington. Jacobs is charged with having beaten nearly all the big hotels in the city, with obtaining diamonds from prominent jewelry houses on pretexts of making sales and placing them in pawn. The amount of his illegal transactions is placed at $2,000 and all the returns are not yet in.

IT IS SURE DEATH.

Russian Nihilists Invent a Satisfactory Infernal Machine.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—After years of labor the Russian nihilists have at last succeeded in inventing a perfectly satisfactory infernal machine. The machine was finished in London a few days ago, and those who had examined it pronounce it as perfect a death-dealing instrument as could be devised. The machine is sixteen centimeters in height and four in width. It is rectangular in shape, portable and looks somewhat like a book. Even when charged it can be carried with the utmost safety in the breast pocket of a coat, and none but the initiated would ever imagine that it was anything but a bulky purse. When the time for action comes the nihilist can take it out of his pocket, place it where the explosion is to occur and then calmly walk off to a place of safety. At the appointed moment the machine will explode without the aid of clockwork or even a lighted match. Instead of dynamite a secret explosive is used, and with this the bottom of the machine is filled. Over the explosive is placed a detonater which consists of a chemical product and is set on fire by coming in contact with a drop of some secret liquid. A glass ball holds this liquid, and when an explosion is desired all that is necessary is to let it trinkle drop by drop through the tube, at the lower extremity of which is the small chemical mass resting on the explosive. When the machine is turned upside down, so as the glass ball is at the bottom, no explosion can take place, but when the machine is held upright so the liquid can trickle down to the detonater an explosion

IS BOUND TO FOLLOW.

In the eyes of revolutionists the merit of this machine lies in the fact that it can be operated without danger to the operator. Moreover it is always ready and can be regulated to a moment. Heretofore clockwork or a lighted match was necessary to produce an explosion, and the result was that, once set going the machine could not be stopped. This new machine, however, can be stopped at any moment before the explosion takes place. After placing it in position the operator may decide to postpone the shake up or a while, and then all that will be necessary for him to do will be to turn the infernal device upside down and put it back in his pocket. He will run absolutely no risk in handling the machine, for by means of the five plugs of blotting paper in the glass tube, he can determine the very moment at which the explosion is to take place. If he allows the liquid to trickle very quickly he may confidently expect an explosion in five minutes, whereas if he uses the five plugs of blotting paper he may reckon a full hour for flight before the liquid touches the detonater.

Nihilists consider the invention of this machine almost as important as the invention of dynamite, and are very anxious to learn what steps the authorities will take to guard themselves from it. When dynamite bombs came into use among anarchists the authorities in France and other countries placed many restrictions on the sale of dynamite, and, it is assumed in revolutionary circles that they will pursue the same policy now, and, by restricting the sale of dangerous chemicals and explosives, render it difficult, though hardly impossible, for their implacable enemies to do much harm with this new instrument of destruction. What will make their task especially difficult is the fact that they do not know what kind of explosive and liquid is used in the new machine, and nihilists are determined that they shall not be enlightened on this point.

The Lottery Obeys the Law.

In view of the contradictory rumors circulated regarding the intentions of the Louisiana State Lottery Company and in order to accurately answer numerous inquiries, a representative of the Times-Democrat yesterday interviewed Mr. Paul Conrad, the president of the company, with the result expressed below.

Reporter—Mr. Conrad, it was asserted some weeks ago in the Northern newspapers, and the statement has since been revived recently, that the company is about to remove to Nicaragua, and there, under a government franchise, open up the business on a grander scale than ever.

President Conrad—I have heard something of this, but there is no foundation for it. The company has officially stated that it bows to the decision of the Supreme Court and will respect the laws.

Reporter—Then have you no plans of future action.

President Conrad—I cannot state the case more strongly than was done at the time the company decided not to attempt to obtain a renewel of its charter. I can only repeat that the company will continue in business until the expiration of its present charter and then cease to exist. I cannot understand, after all that has been said, why there should be any confusion in the public mind about the matter.

Reporter—Have you any objection to my stating this as a finality for the satisfaction of the public?

President Conrad—None whatever.

Reporter—Some of the Eastern papers, Mr. Conrad, persistently assert that the lottery company continues to use the United States mails in the prosecution of its business; will you kindly tell me if that is true?

President Conrad—It is utterly untrue. We are obeying the law in its letter and spirit, and our agents everywhere are instructed to obey it. We are using the express companies only in our business, and in all our circulars are printed instructions to all persons dealing with us to avoid the mails.—Times-Democrat, New Orleans (La.)

Over a Hundred Dead.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Only forty-one miners have been rescued from the pit at Bridgend, Wales, and two have since died. Exploring parties are still searching the mine, though all hope of finding further survivors has been abandoned. The number of the dead is therefore placed at 107.

Mr. Nelson dined at noon with friends [J. J. Hill, Banker Mendenhall, etc.] at the Minnesota club yesterday.—Pioneer Press, July 30, 1892.

Mr. Nelson will remain in the city until to-morrow. He dined at the Minnesota club today with J. J. Hill, Judge Searle and Banker Mendenhall, of Duluth.—St. Paul Evening Dispatch (Rep.), July 29, 1892.

Some remarks made in St. Paul within a day or two confirm the rapidly growing belief that the nomination of Knute Nelson for governor was a grevious mistake. There is no question whatever but that a large sized reaction has taken place since the state convention, and men who then thought Nelson would have a walk-over are now doubting if he can be elected by any majority. let alone holding up the small figures of two years ago.

The arguments that Mr. Nelson would command the Alliance vote this year to a large extent, and that his nationality would be a favorable factor have all the appearance of being a veritable boomerang. So eminent a Republican as Mr. H. G. Stordock, of Rothsay, who is a personal friend of Mr. Nelson, says frankly that with his monopolistic and corporation tendencies and associations Mr. Nelson will be unable to regain any of the vote that went to Mr. Owens two years ago. Mr. Stordock says that in addition to repelling all of the Alliance vote the nomination has made it certain that many others will not vote for him because of their distrust of monopoly rule.

The same gentleman finds that the plea made because of Mr. Nelson's nationality that he would prove a vote getter was a wild underestimate of the intelligence and patriotism of a large and important class of voters. Men do not relish being told, as they were by the organs, that Nelson was nominated to catch their votes. They feel insulted to be told that they are regarded merely as clannish cattle, having no independence or thought of their own.

The managers of Mr, Nelson's candidacy were duly warned that just such a condition was likely to follow the nomination, but they were blind in their own conceit and their anxiety to serve the monopolists and corporations and plunged in regardless of consequences, The very reasons that were urged as those which made Mr. Nelson the one available man to nominate are the reasons that are operating against him, with every probability of effecting his defeat.—St. Paul News.

F. H. Gambell, who so successfully taught the spring term of school in this city, will take charge of the St Hilaire school for the ensuing year. Mr. Gambell is a gentleman of ability and a first class teacher and we congratulate St. Hilaire upon its choice.—McIntosh Times.

W. W. Erwin, the eminent criminal lawyer of St. Paul, and G. W Argo, of Sioux City Iowa, are in Homestead, Pennsylvania, where they will defend those of the locked out steel workers against whom Frick has begun prosecution. These gentlemen have been employed by the labor leaders of the northwest to conduct the defense of the Homesteaders. Their sympathies are with them.—Great West.

The railroad grade between here and Thief River Falls is about finished. Contractor Swank took off his crew last Monday and put them to work between here and Red Lake Falls where he has about a mile of work to do. After that is done he will take his outfit to Red Lake Falls and work in the heavy cuts there. The steel crew will probably not be here before the 15th of September. They will lay to Thief River Falls first and by that time the Red Lake Falls grade will be done.

We learn from a reliable source that Editor Hunt, of the McIntosh News, will be a candidate for the responsible and prominent position of fourteenth assistant spittoon cleaner for the next legislature. It is also stated that our candidates for the legislature recognizing in Hunt a man eminently fitted for the position, have promised to do all they can to assist him to the position. Those tremendous brainy efforts of his in behalf of the people should certainly be rewarded. and we know of no one who could fill the above named position with more natural grace than Editor Hunt.

HOW THE NORTHWEST GROWS.

Kalispell, in the Flathead Valley of Montana, is now a year old, and has 1,500 people.

Bonner's Ferry, Idaho, has grown to a place of 500 population in six months. Steamers on Kootenai River run from there to the Nelson, Ainsworth and Kaslo mines.

What splendid agricultural, lumbering and mining resources await development in western Montana, Northern Idaho and Eastern Washinton, along the Pacific Extension of the Great Northern.

Through train service begins Aug 14th, between St. Paul, Minneapolis and Spokane, Wash.

The extension opens up 65 new stations, and is the short line between the east and Spokane.

For further information see Agent S. S. Buzza.

National Economist: In 1888 Alabama came up with a democratic majority of 111,213, Jones, the regular democratic nominee for governor if elected at all, will be by a nominal majority. Gone to meet Kansas' 82,000 republican majority.

The Morris Tribune considers that "Judge Thomas Wilson has a better thing than running as the Democratic candidate for governor. He has accepted the position of attorney for the Omaha road," Mr. Nelson has a still better thing. He can run for governor and at the same time make his railroad connection pay him more than ever.—Globe.

The People's advocate: "I don't blame the Goulds, the Astors, the Vanderbuilts and the Stanfords for grasping their unearned millions. Almost any one else would do it if he had the chance. I blame the infernal fools that have the votes and the power to prevent it and let it go on. I don't believe that one class of people was born into the world bridled and saddled to be ridden and another class born booted and spurred to ride them. If you believe they are keep on voting with the old parties; but if not, cut loose from and vote with us."—Robert Schilling.

The plat and survey of township 152, range 41 has been forwarded by the surveyor general of Minnesota to the local office at this place and the plat will be filed Sept. 19th 1892, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, when applications to enter the lands thereon will be received at the Crookston land office. The tract to be opened to settlers as above set forth comprises less than three sections of land and lies on the west line of the Red Lake reserve.—Crookston Times.

MINNESOTA STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS AT WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School, The Normal Department embraces:

- (a) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades
- (b) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades,
- (c) A professional course for teachers who have completed the necessary academic course elsewhere.
- (d) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at $2,75 per week.

DIPLOMAS.—By a recent act of the legislature, a diploma becomes a state teachers' certificate of the first grade.

The next school year opens at Winona and Mankato August 29 1892. St. Cloud and Moorhead September 1, 1892.

For free catalogues and circulars, giving full information, address the presidents as follows:

FAIR STATEMENT.

E SILVER COINAGE MEANS RELIEF TO WORKINGMEN.

Government from 1790 to 1873 ined Silver as It Does Gold—What ould Happen if Silver Was Placed in Old Position.

everal readers send a request for in-ation on the silver question. They what the "free and unlimited coin- of silver" means, and "wherein it ld benefit the masses of our 65,000,- of people; how much it would in-se the circulating medinm, and what ct it would have on general trade; would it not benefit the mining es at the expense of the others?" y ask also what is the amount of ney in circulation.

he free and unlimited coinage of sil- means that the United States mints ll coin all the silver brought to them no other charge than the cost of coin-, which is a trifle, any owner of the tal being allowed to deposit it at the nt and have it coined on his account receive at once its value in silver ney already coined.

The mints do this now with gold, and m 1790 to 1873 they did it likewise th silver. In other words, the free nage of both metals was the rule and ctice from the establishment of the nt down to 1873—eighty-three years— en silver was practically demonetized being dropped from the coinage. ve years later, in 1878, under the and-Allison act, the right of coinage s partially restored, and a limited ount of silver—not less than $2,000,- 0 nor more than $4,000,000 a month— s authorized to be coined on the ac-unt of the government, the govern-ent buying the metal at its commer-al price, about seventy-three to eighty nts for the dollar's worth, and there- making twenty to twenty-seven cents every dollar coined.

This practice prevailed till 1890, when e existing Sherman bullion act was ssed, which stopped the coinage of sil-r dollars entirely, and at present gold the only one of the two metals allowed be coined.

The ratio of silver to gold in this coun-y is sixteen to one—sixteen ounces of lver being equal in value to one ounce f gold—but owing to the increased de-nand for gold in Europe consequent on e demonetization of silver, the increas-g consumption of it in the arts, and he insufficient production of it in the orld, that metal has become valuable bove the ratio, and at this time gold is orth $1.30 to the dollar in silver. The ractical effect of this is to increase all nnded debts 30 per cent., or, which is he same thing, to reduce the prices of ll products and property 30 per cent., a esult which falls upon all producing nd debtor classes and interests.

If silver coinage were made free this premium on funded indebtedness would lisappear, silver would become the standard for measuring debts, since the debtor would have restored to him the option of paying in gold or silver, and the prices of all products would be proportionately advanced. There would follow also an increase of the supply of money in circulation—for all the silver that might be offered at the mints would be coined into money instead of being used, as now, as a basis for bullion certificates. The more good metal money—gold and silver—a country has the better for the people, for the invariable effect of an abundant supply is to stimulate enterprise, facilitate that interchange of products which we call traffic, increase production and multiply comforts among the people, whereas scarcity of money, as every one knows, is attended by stagnation, inactivity and hard times.

The silver product of our own mines in 1891 is estimated at 58,330,000 ounces, worth, at is coining value, $65,461,365, but at its commercial value only $57,-630,040. The difference, over $17,000,-000, was a loss to the silver producing states. The passage of a free silver coinage act would raise their silver product from its commercial to its coining value, an increase of about 30 per cent., but the silver states would not be the only beneficiaries of the measure, for it would destroy the gold premium of 30 per cent. on the $6,000,000,000 in funded indebtedness of one kind and another resting on the people, and payable, first and last, in the products of their labor. It would accomplish this by restoring to them the right, taken away from them in 1873, of paying in the cheaper of the two metals, which is silver, 412½ grains to the dollar, instead of being compelled, as they now are, to pay in gold, or in silver and paper valued by the gold standard of $1.30 to the dollar.

It is true silver is still a legal tender, and a debtor may pay his obligations to any amount in silver, silver certificates, greenbacks or bank notes; but all paper money is redeemable in silver, and silver is measured, not by the ancient original silver dollar, as it ought to be, but in gold—for the government, under the Bland-Allison act, coined the silver which it bought for $1 into $1.30, thereby forcing the people to pay in labor, or the products of their labor, $1.30 for every silver dollar they get.

Free silver coinage, on a perfect equality with gold coinage, as it existed for the eighty-three years prior to 1873, is the only remedy for this injustice. It would indeed practically take off 30 per cent. from all funded debts; but this would only be taking off what was wrongfully put on, and making debts payable at 100 cents to the dollar instead 130 cents to the dollar, as now. Another effect of it would be to advance the price of labor, products and property by measuring them in silver instead of in dear gold.—Southern Alliance Farmer.

Fifteen daily papers in Colorado, to say nothing about the vast number of weeklies, have indorsed the Omaha ticket. The great enthusiasm in the state will surpass the tidal wave that swept over Kansas two years ago.

SOME REASONS WHY.

A Sound Statement of the Objects of the People's Party.

In taking upon ourselves the responsibilities of political reform and the formation of a new party, we should feel assured that the necessity exists, and especially should we be certain that the platform of principles ennunciated by the new party will insure the perpetuation of a republican form of government and contains the elements of a speedy correction of the evils complained of.

Does the necessity for a new party exist? Let the conditions of the country at large answer. From Maine to California and from Michigan to Florida comes the cry of stagnation in trade, financial distress, a fast increasing population of paupers, with grim visaged want lurking in every city, town and village. These are the conditions which surround us, appealing for redress, and there is none so bold as to doubt the evidences of his own personal knowledge.

In a country like ours, with all the elements of prosperity inherent in climate, soil and citizen, with an unbroken chain of twenty-five years of unprecedented yield of farm, mine and loom, no adequate reason for existing conditions can be assigned except in vicious legislation. To the thinking mind this is self evident.

There is no natural cause for the want of prosperity in the United States, and the responsibility for present conditions must rest upon the leaders of the two old parties which have been charged with the administration of the government conjointly for the last twenty years. Neither can escape or dodge the record they have made. Our general laws are the result of their united work, and each will have to face the history as it has been made.

The three great questions upon which they agree involve all of the active economic polity of our government. To vicious and corrupt legislation on these three questions is attributable in the main our present deplorable condition; and the history of and the declarations through their national platforms make it absolutely certain that there is no hope of relief or reform through either of the old parties; hence the necessity for a new party, organized for the special purpose of obtaining the enactment of laws corrective of the abuses complained of.

Are the demands of the new party based upon just and sound democratic principles, and are they in conformity with the federal constitution and the genius of our government? Will they bring (if enacted into law) the relief sought? These are all questions that should be answered and we confidently believe have been time and again through the reform press and from the rostrum.

The position of the party on transportation is but the logical sequence of the policy of government control, and needs only to be stated to become apparent to all thinking men.

On taxation reformers hold that those who own and control the wealth are the greatest beneficiaries of good government, and should be made to contribute to its support in proportion to their benefits. That a thorough revision of present methods of taxation as now administered is needed is patent to all. The tax rolls of every county in the United States furnish that proof. They are a blasting and withering argument against the present tax laws, and furnish strong proof in favor of just and equal distribution of governmental burdens in this direction.—Southern Mercury.

Sooner Than You Think.

Some think it almost a hopeless task to expect anything in the way of national legislation in the next few years from the reform movement. This is a very mistaken idea. It is very likely that the People's party and its sympathizers will have a majority in the house before long, perhaps hold the balance of power in the next session of congress.

At present the senate has eighty-eight members—forty-seven Republicans, thirty-nine Democrats and two People's party men. So to hold the balance of power the reform element only has to gain a few members. The terms of twenty-nine senators expire next winter and two vacancies are to be filled. It is possible that a large portion of these will be filled by reform men. To do this good legislatures should be elected, especially in every state having senators to elect.

Nothing is required but plenty of work. Every man should see to it that plenty of work is done. Timidity and inactivity will not do anything.—Progressive Farmer.

Only Eight Votes.

Of all the Republican members in the present house of representatives but eight voted for the Stewart free coinage bill. All the rest voted against it.

If this vote fairly represents the proportion in the Republican party favorable to free coinage, then Colorado Republicans should desert not only Harrison, but the party, at once and forever, for it would make it plain that Republican voters in other states were practically unanimous against free coinage.

But the vote does not fairly or at all represent the strength of the free coinage Republicans. It does represent, however, the power of a hostile president to make cowards of weak hearted but well meaning members of congress belonging to the president's party.—Rocky Mountain News.

A One Man Party.

In the consideration of the Stewart free silver bill by the house, the American people have been treated to a spectacle of one man power, such as they have never before witnessed.

It was the wish of Cleveland that the Democratic house should not have a square vote on silver, and it was for this reason alone that a motion for its immediate consideration was defeated.

The action of the house leaves the bill at the foot of the calendar where it will sleep forever.—Southern Alliance Farmer.

Soapsuds Are Valuable.

Few persons know how very useful soapsuds prove when employed as manure. Applied to the roots of vines, fruit trees, roses, etc., they impart a vigor and rapidity of growth which is perfectly surprising. No one who is so lucky as to have a garden should waste this valuable form of manure. It is an excellent plan to have a large tub, and put the soapsuds and dirty water into it till required upon the garden.—Philadelphia Ledger.

MARVELOUS COUNTRIES.

Such Are the Republics of Costa Rica and Nicaragua—A Great Future in Store for Persons of Moderate Means—Something About the Climate and General Nature of the Lands.

The Central American republics of Costa Rica and Nicaragua are in many respects the most wonderful countries on the face of the earth. Nowhere has nature bestowed her favors with a more lavish hand, a fact which is just now being brought prominently to the notice of the whole civilized world, owing more particularly to the vigorous prosecution of the work of construction of the Nicaraguan canal, along the northern border of Costa Rica and southern border of Nicaragua, the most important undertaking of the nineteenth century. The interoceanic canal, while shortening the distances of the world and rendering the commercial ties between Europe, Asia and America closer and stronger, will also attract to Costa Rica and Nicaragua the wealth and enterprise of all parts of the globe. A few facts relative to their wonderful climate and resources, just now being made more available by the completion of their railroads, will prove interesting. Although these republics, geographically speaking, are tropical countries, their climate is not tropical except on the coast, and even there the heat is not excessive except at unusual times, being tempered by the trade winds and sea breezes. Over one-half of the area of the republics have an altitude of from 2,000 to 4,500 feet above sea level. The temperature on the high lands is simply perfect, not varying 10 deg. throughout the year—a continual spring time and never ending harvest. The wealth of their undeveloped mines, and their magnificent forests of mahogany, rosewood, ebony, dyewoods and other valuable woods, are beyond computation. Their agricultural resources are immense. Coffee, sugar cane and cocoa are staple products and yield large returns. Vast fortunes are made in gathering india rubber. Figuratively, the rubber trees of both Costa Rica and Nicaragua are gold mines, which require no shafts, no machinery, no costly experiments, no guesswork and practically no risk of labor. The supply of india rubber is in danger of diminution, and the world has been compelled to look to Central and South America for the bulk of its supply. According to United States government reports, the net annual profits from one acre of coffee is from $300 to $500. A sixty acre banana plantation will return at the end of the second year a net profit of $18,000.

Costa Rica and Nicaragua, by reason of their geographical position, their climate, institutions, the nature of their productions, and the hearty welcome their inhabitants give all foreigners, afford inducements greater than any other country for foreign capital and labor to come to their territories and aid in developing such wealth and prosperity as it is difficult to describe. Men of small means cannot do better than post themselves fully regarding these wonderful republics, and the most practical and feasible plan of investing is in and through a company whose capital, experience and prestige will secure advantages which a single individual could not possibly obtain; and for that reason the Central American Mining and Improvement company has been organized. The company is incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota; capital, $100,000, in shares of $5 each, fully paid and non-assessable. This company numbers among its organizers and stockholders some of the best young business men in St. Paul, who will take pleasure in furnishing the best of bank and other references. The character of the men who represent the company as officers is a sufficient guarantee that all matters pertaining to the welfare of the company will be faithfully attended to and all interests zealously guarded.

For the purpose of developing properties to be acquired by the company and the securing and locating of colonists without loss of time, they have decided to sell 4,000 shares, par value $5 per share, on the following easy terms, viz.: $2.50 per share cash, upon receipt of which a certificate of stock will be issued to the purchaser, and the balance of the par value of said stock, to wit: the further sum of $2.50 per share to be paid to the company from the first dividends of the company. The price of the remaining stock will be advanced from time to time as the resources of the company will warrant. For full information see illustrated pamphlet, furnished free on application. A Fitful Honeymoon.

"How did your friend Passay get along after he married the widow?"

"Not very well."

"No?"

"You see, her previous husband was a great dresser; left bureau after bureau full of clothes. But they didn't fit him."

"No? Large man, eh?"

"Yes. Between you and me I think the fits he got were of another sort."

Don't give up and say there is no help for Catarrh, Hay Fever and Cold in head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream balm for catarrh.—Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. He Could Count.

One day recently Dr. P—, who had company to dinner, sat quietly chatting in a corner of the drawing room, when he was told that a patient had come to see him who was strongly recommended by some fellow-practitioners, and whose card was brought in by the page. The doctor submitted with a bad grace and stepped into his surgery. The visitor was in an advanced stage of consumption. The bronchial tubes were in a deplorable condition and the vocal chords nearly worn out. Our physician was in the habit of ascertaining the condition of the patient by asking him to count, and generally stopped him at thirty-five—quite long enough for the purpose. This time, also Dr. P—asked his patient to count. Time passed on and the guests began to feel alarmed at his protracted absence. One of them opened the surgery door. Dr. P—had gone to sleep in his armchair and the patient had counted up to 8642.—Le Matin.

THE LYTTLE BOY.

Sometime there been a lyttle boy
  The wolde not run and play,
And helpless like that little tyke
  Ben allwais in the way.
"Goe, make you merrie with the rest,"
  His weary mudder cried:
But with a frown he catch her gown
  And hong until her side.

Godde loveth children, and doth gira
  His throne with such as these,
And he doth smile in plaisaunce while
  They cluster at his knees;
And sometimes, when he looked on earth,
  And watched the bairns at play,
He kenned with joy a lyttle boy
  Ben allwais in the way.
And then a moder felt her heart
  How thae it ben to-lorne—
She kissed each day till she been gray
  The shoes he used to worn;
No bairn let hold until her gown,
  Nor played upon the floor—
Godde's was the joy; a lyttle boy
  Ben in the way no more!

HELEN'S GOOD DEED.

"Yes," said the doctor, solemnly, "she shows every indication of going into a decline. Rest, relaxation, change of air and scene—that's what she ought to have."

Mrs. Dardanel looked perturbed.

"Dear, dear," she said; "what a pity! And she's quite a pet of mine, too, dear little thing. She is very quick with her needle and really ingenious—and the way she puts trimmings on a dress positively reminds one of Mme. Antoine herself."

"The seaside cottage would be the place for her," suggested Dr. Midland. "You are one of the lady patronesses, I believe, and——"

"Yes, but the seaside cottage is full," said Mrs. Dardanel. "Not an inch of room unoccupied. I had a note from the matron yesterday."

"Ah, indeed!" said the doctor, fumbling with his watch-seals. "Unfortunate—very."

"But," cried Mrs. Dardanel, an idea suddenly occurring to her much bepuffed and befrizzled head, "there is Mrs. Daggett's farm a few miles farther down the shore. She takes boarders for $5 a week and I believe it is a very nice place. If you think it advisable I will take a month's board for the girl there. I really feel as if the dear little thing belonged to me."

"An, excellent plan," said the doctor, oracularly. "I have no doubt but that a month of sea air would make a different person of her."

Helen could hardly believe her own ears when Mrs. Dardanel beamingly announced her intentions.

"The seashore!" she cried, her pale face flushing all over; "the real sea! Oh, Mrs. Dardanel, I have dreamed of it all my life! And for a long bright summer month. Oh, how shall I ever thank you?"

"By getting well and strong as fast as you can," said Mrs. Dardanel, touched by the girl's enthusiasm, "And here is a $10 bill for you," she added with a smile. "You may need some trifle of dress, or there may be a drive or a picnic or an excursion going in which you will want to participate."

The poor girl's first impulse was to return the money.

"No, you shall not give it back—it is a present from me and I choose that you keep it."

Helen Hyde's heart beat high with delight when first she saw the Daggett farmhouse, a long, low, red building with an immense stack of chimneys, a cluster of umbrageous maple trees guarding it about with shade and a doorway full of sweet, old-fashioned flowers, while in sight of the windows the Atlantic flung its curling crests of foam all along the shining shore. Mrs. Daggett welcomed her warmly; she had been Mrs. Dardanel's housekeeper once and knew the value of that lady's patronage.

"I've just one room left, my dear," she said, "under the eaves of the house. It's small, but it's furnished comfortably and there's a view of the ocean. I could have given you better accommodations if I had received Mrs. Dardanel's letter a day earlier. But four young ladies, teachers in the Ixwood institute, came yesterday and I'm sleeping in the parlor. But we will make you as snug as possible and the very first good-sized room that is vacant you shall have."

Helen was very happy in her little nook, from whose casement she could see the ocean, dotted with white sails.

Mrs. Daggett was a driving, energetic woman. Farmer Daggett was an honest, vacant-faced man who invariably fell asleep of an evening with his chair tipped back against the wall, and every available inch of the house was filled with summer boarders, mostly ladies. There were but three masculine appendages to the house besides its master—and an old clergyman whose parishioners clubbed together every summer to treat him to six weeks' vacation, a literary man of large aspirations and small income who had come hither for rest and opportunity to study up the "skeleton" for his next novel, and old Mr. Mifflin.

It was some time before Helen Hyde fairly comprehended who old Mr. Mifflin was. A bent and bowed little man, with silver hair curling over the collar of his coat, a ruffled shirt like the pictures of our revolutionary forefathers, and blue eyes that glistened from behind a pair of silver spectacles, he shuffled in and out to his meals after an apologetic fashion and sat all the bright afternoons under the maples staring at the sea.

"Who is that old gentleman?" she at last ventured to ask Mrs. Daggett.

The lady frowned.

"It's old Daddy Mifflin," said she, "and I wish it was anybody else."

"Is he a boarder?"

"Well, he is and he isn't," obscurely answered Mrs. Daggett, who was picking currants for a pudding while Helen sat by and watched her. "But he won't be here long. You see, my dear, he hasn't any friends. When me and Daggett came from Vermont and bought this place we got it cheap because of old Mifflin. We were to give him the northeast chamber and they were to allow us so much a month for his keep. It ain't every one that would be willing to have an old man like him about. But he's harmless and quiet and the $2 a week helped us. But now Breezy point has grown to be a fashionable resort and things are changed. And what's worse his folks have left off sending the money."

"I wonder why?" said Helen, her large, dreamy eyes fixed sadly on the old man, who sat under the maples wistfully watching the sea.

"They're dead, p'raps," said Mrs. Daggett. "Or p'raps they've got tired of him. Anyhow, it's three months since we've heard a word, and me and Daggett have made up our minds that we can't stand it any longer, so we're going to put him on the town. Lawyer Boxall says it's legal and right and they can't expect anything else of us. Squire Sodus is to send his covered carryal next Saturday and old Daddy Mifflin'll suppose he's going for a ride. And so things'll go off smooth and pleasant."

"Smooth and pleasant!" Helen Hyde looked across the grassy lawn to the little old man with his mild, abstracted face, his ruffled shirt front, the silver hair that glistened in the sunshine and the white, clawlike fingers that slowly turned themselves backward and forward as he sat there.

"He owned the place once," said Mrs. Daggett, but his sons turned out bad and he indorsed for Squire Sodus' cousin and lost everything. And here he is in his old age, without a penny! What is it, Becky? The oven ready for the pies? Yes, I'm coming."

She bustled away, leaving Helen alone. A sort of inspiration entered the girl's heart as she sat there with the briny smell of the ocean filling her senses and the rustle of the maple leaves murmuring softly overhead. She took Mrs. Dardanel's $10 bill from her pocket and looked long and earnestly at it. She thought of the little one-horse carryall which she and the girls from Ixwood institute who have hired together to drive over the hills and glens all those sweet, misty summer afternoons, of the excursions to Twin Rock by steamer, upon which she had counted; of the new black bunting dress which she had decided to buy. She must abandon all these little darling extravagances if she indulged this other fancy.

"As if there could be any choice," she said to herself.

Then she got up and went softly across the grass and clover blossoms to where Daddy Mifflin sat.

"Do you like this place?" she asked, softly.

"It's home, my dear," he answered, seeming to rouse himself out of a reverie; "it's home. I have lived here for eighty-odd years. I could not live anywhere else."

"But there are other places pleasanter."

"It may be, my dear; it may be," he said, looking at her with troubled eyes through the convex lenses of his glasses. "But they wouldn't be the same to me."

Helen went to Mrs. Daggett, who was baking pies and rolls and strawberry shortcake all at once.

"Mrs. Daggett," said she, "here are $10 which Mrs. Dardanel gave to me to do as I pleased with, and I please to give it to you to keep old Mr. Mifflin here five weeks longer."

"Mercy sakes alive!" said Mrs. Daggett; "he ain't no kin to you, is he?"

"No," said Helen, "but he is so old and feeble and friendless, and—and—please, Mrs. Daggett, take the money. Perhaps by the time that is gone I shall be able to send a little more. My employers are going to pay me generously in the city, and I feel myself growing better able to work every day."

So Helen Hyde adopted the cause of one and for a year she paid $2 a week steadily, even poorer and more friendless than herself, and Mr. Mifflin never knew what a danger had menaced him.

At the end of that time the old gentleman's grandson came from some wide, wild region across the sea, a tall, dark-eyed man with the mien of a prince in diguise.

"My father has been dead a year," he said. "And his papers have only just been thoroughly investigated, so that I have just learned, for the first time, that there is an arrearage due on my grandfather's allowance. I hope he has not been allowed to suffer——"

"Oh, he's all right!" said Mrs. Daggett. "We have taken excellent care of him."

"You are a noble-hearted woman," said the young man, fervently clasping her hand, "and I will see that you are no loser by your generosity."

"It ain't me," said Mrs. Dagget, turning red and white, for Helen Hyde, now spending her second summer at farmhouse, sat by, quietly sewing in the window recess. "I'm free to allow that me and Daggett got out of patience and was going to put him on the town, but Miss Hyde, here, one of our boarders, she's paid for him ever since."

"I beg your pardon if I have interfered, said Helen, blushing scarlet as the large black eyes fell scrutinizingly on her face, "but he seemed so old and helpless that——"

"God bless you for your noble deed!" said Ambrose Mifflin, earnestly.

But there was something in Helen's manner which prevented him from offering any pecuniary recompense to her.

"My grandfather will require your care no longer," said he. "We have been fortunate in our Australian investments and I am prepared to buy the old farm back again and settle here permanently."

And when Mrs. Dardanel began to think about getting her winter dresses made up, she received a note from Miss Hyde, which ran as follows:

"Dear Mrs. Dardanel. I am sorry to disappoint you, but I cannot undertake any more orders, for I am to be married next month to Mr. Ambrose Mifflin and we are to live at the Daggett farm. And, oh! how proud I should be if you would come here and visit me next summer, when the roses are in bloom and the strawberries ripen. Ambrose is all that is nice and I have the dearest old grandfather-in-law in the world. Affectionately, HELEN HYDE."

And all this life's romance had grown out of Helen's month at the seaside.—Exchange.

NEW CALLING FOR WOMEN.

As Couriers They Get Fat Fees and Live on the Best of Everything.

In the numerous schemes for providing "our girls" with employment, writes Mrs. Crawford in London Truth, one outlet which might be greatly developed has been overlooked. The lady courier is not yet to the front. But she is likely to be so. I travelled a short time ago with one. She informed me that she spends as much time in steamers and railways as a queen's messenger or the indefatigable mother of the prince of Bulgaria. As her life is a wearing one, she stipulates for handsome fees. They are often given ungrudgingly to her, and she is boarded and lodged as though she were a duchess when travelling with rich and delicate ladies. The lady courier is expected to be as well posted as the man courier. The one I had the pleasure of talking with is sometimes employed to escort young ladies from one end of Europe to the other, and is sufficiently well born and educated to go with them, if need be into society. She made a number of sea voyages as an assistant stewardess to make herself proof against sea sickness, with which she is no longer troubled. One of her troubles is being expected, when she travels with dull persons of her own sex, to amuse them. As they only care for gossip, and like it to be ill-natured, she backbites to their heart's content. But to guard against the danger of mischief-making she invents her characters. They do quite as well as real. When she deals in eulogium she no longer draws on her imagination. A son-in-law of this useful person is a colonel.

The halcyon days of this lady courier were when South American republics were being boomed on the stock exchanges and money flowed in a steady stream to Buenos Ayres. The ladies who came thence to see life in Europe were indolent, spent freely the capital which their husbands found means of getting for the asking. They never quarrelled with her for high charges, but she had to spare them every kind of trouble, and even that of choosing their confessors in cities where they were strangers. The lady courier I speak of is negotiating the purchase of a villa on Lake Como. She hopes soon to be rich enough to retire to live there.

HIS FASHION IDEAL.

A Crank's Idea As to How a Woman Should Dress.

"Talk about wimmin's close," he was bleating discordantly in a know-it-all voice, "ef I had my way I'd hev 'em lookin' sensible, and not at all kerflummuxed up with gew-gaws. I'd just like to dress 'em 'cordin' tew my notion."

"You wouldn't let them wear trains to their dresses?" suggested one of his auditors.

"Not muchee I wouldn't."

"No corsets, eh?"

"No, sir; nor stiff-boned waists, eyether."

"Suppose you tell us just how you would have them rig themselves out."

"Suttenly, suttenly. I'd have 'em wear a broadcloth skirt and a loose jacket for comfort. Ain't that all right?"

"Go on."

"Short skirts to be tidy—jist comin' to the tops of their shoes."

"Yes, what kind of shoes?"

"Soft leather shoes, shaped like a human foot, sir, and flexible like a glove."

"All right—and their hats?"

"Somethin' like a veil or a mantilly, but no sich styles as they wear now, you bet. And I'd have the hair hangin' down their backs in a nice shiny braid."

"There's women that dress like that now," said one of the listeners.

"Show one to me and I'll marry her termorrow."

"I saw one just the other day, and that was her style to a dot."

"What was she doin'?"

"Selling baskets and moccasins on the dock. She had a blanket over her head."

But the crank who knew how a woman should dress had suddenly disappeared.—Detroit Free Press.

Shaves Often.

"The Chinaman perhaps shaves oftener than any other man on earth," said Thos. A. Dunwiddy of San Francisco at the Lindell, "and with the possible exception of the American Indian he really has less need of it. But it seems to be a fad among the Mongolians of San Francisco, and especially those who are at all well-to-do, to have their faces manipulated by a tonsorial artist nearly every day. A queer little razor it is that they use, too. It is in no respect like our razor except in the keeness of its edge. It is a wee bit of a blade, nicely curved into a semi-circle. With this tool the Chinese barber scrapes the almost hirsuteless face of his customer, and then shaves him around the ears and down the neck to the first bone of the spinal column. It, of course, serves the excellent and highly commendable purpose of cleaning the Mongolian face, neck and ears of dirt very effectually, though the hairs it clips are few and far between. The rounded point of the razor is also inserted into the Celestial ear, and every ambitious hair that dares to show itself in the auricular lobe is clipped before its growth proceeds very far. The Chinaman, you know is scrupulously cleanly about his ears. A growth of hair in them is considered a mark of low birth or of careless and ungenteel habits."

Clover Bloat.

Now is the time for the annual recurrence of this malady. Thousands of cattle die of it every year, yet there are very many cattle men who grow clover abundantly who never have a case of it. It all depends on how intelligently the matter is handled. The true practice is never to turn cattle on fresh clover until all dew or rain is thoroughly dried off, and then only after the cattle are well filled up on other grass beforehand. A great many cases occur where cows have been yarded all night and turned out hungry in the early morning on fresh clover, says Hoard's Dairyman.

The Irascible Father-in-Law.

"My first introduction to the lady who became my wife was not calculated to impress her favorably," said J. H. Hartzell, "I was with Sherman in his famous march through Georgia, and was placed in charge of a scouting party. One day we pulled up at a farm house of considerable pretentions and found the owner a testy old fellow, whose religion was to hate Yankees with his whole heart. We asked for dinner, and were ordered off the place in no very gentle language. We tied our horses and went in. The negroes had all gone, and the old gentleman and his daughter lived alone. The young lady disliked Yankees as much as did her father, and as we entered the house she locked both pantry and cellar, and declared that the enemies of her country would receive no refreshments there. We had no breakfast, and it was now late in the afternoon. Hunger knows no law and I forced the doors. One of my men was an excellent cook, and we soon had a meal that would tempt an epicure. The old man raved about what he was pleased to call 'the damnable Yankee outrage,' and the young lady regarded us with silent scorn. I told them simply that we were famishing and must have food, if not with their permission then without. When ready to depart I laid a $10 bill on the table and the old gentleman seized it and tore it up. Five years later I was introduced to the young lady in Washington, and succeeded in winning her good will, but her father never forgave me."—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Wanted Something Less Dangerous.

The baloon was tugging at the ropes that held it, as if eager to bound upward into the trackless depth of space.

The aeronaut, pale but self-possessed, stood at the side of the basket giving his final directions to the men in charge of the ropes.

As he was preparing to take his place in the frail vessel in which he was about to navigate the air, an excited young man, with a hunted look in his eyes rushed up and asked him hurriedly:

"Will this balloon take up two men?"

"It will," replied the aeronaut.

"Is the basket strong enough for two?"

"Yes."

"Then I want to make the trip with you!"

"Young man, do you know anything about the dangers of a balloon voyage?"

"No, sir; but I'm not afraid of them."

"Do you see that it is getting cloudy in the west, that the wind is raising, and a storm is coming up and may carry us 500 miles from here before we come down?"

"That's all right. It doesn't scare me a cent's worth. I'd rather go than stay, and I'm ready to climb in right now."

"What's your business, young man?"

"I'm a newspaper, reporter."

"O! you want to go along to write the thing up?"

"No!" said the young man, wildly. "I'm trying to dodge the city editor. He's looking for a reporter to send to write up a woman suffrage convention!"

Scrofula Humor

Mr. G. W. Doner.

"For 4 years I suffered with scrofula, Blotches came out all over my body, and swelling on the right side of the neck, and in less than a year I had lost 40 lbs. I was induced by H. L. THE NEWS SUMMARY

The Latest News of the World Condensed and Arranged in Convenient Form.

Washington, Personal, Foreign, Criminal, Casualty and Other Important News.

THE CAPITAL.

An extra session of congress may be called to take action to prevent an epidemic of cholera.

A circular is issued by the treasury department to collectors of customs to guard against cholera.

Secretary of the Treasury Foster, in an address, discusses the question of pauper immigration.

President Harrison causes to be issued a circular recommending that all vessels arriving at American ports be quarantined for twenty days.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, who has just passed her eightieth year, has had ten children, of whom four are living.

The queen of Belgium is among the latest recruits to photography, and pursues her studies with the greatest diligence.

Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind preacher and exchaplin of the house of representatives, has completed his work on the early history of the Mississippi valley.

Rev. J. H. Gambrell, a Baptist preacher, declines a nomination for congress in Mississippi because he cannot afford to give up his church for such a purpose.

Horace Traubel of Camden, N. J., has appealed to the friends of the late Walt Whitman all over the world for a fund wherewith to preserve his cottage as a memorial to the dead poet.

Owen Chase, a veteran Maine woodsman and hunter has killed 222 bears in his fifty years' rambling in the forests, and says that bears are the most cowardly animals on the big game list.

Mrs. Frank Leslie Wilde has returned from England, leaving her recently acquired husband in that country. She is disgusted with his idleness, and proposes to let him work out his own starvation.

CASUALTIES.

Consorts of the steamer Toledo are lost on Lake Superior.

Two fatal and destructive fires occur in New York.

Fire at Alanta, Ga., causes a loss of about $100,000.

The town of Soovenyhaza, Hungary, has been almost totally destroyed by fire. It contains about 4,000 people.

The steam barge Western Reserve is wrecked on Lake Superior and twenty-six lives are lost.

The fast mail train on the Hudson River Railroad was wrecked at New Hamburgh, N. Y., draw bridge recently. Three were killed. The draw was partially open.

The schooner City of Toledo, lumber laden from that port to Chicago, capsized and sunk eighteen miles north of Manistee and eight persons were drowned. The City of Toledo left Manistee, encountering a fierce gale. In attempting to enter the harbor at Pierport the vessel struck the bar and capsized, sinking immediately. The lost include Capt. John McMillan, his two daughters, who were making the voyage with him, and five sailors, whose names are not known. Capt. McMillan leaves a wife and five children at Manistee. The vessel and cargo were owned by the Manistee Lumber company and valued at $5,000.

THE WICKED WORLD.

Mrs. Cochrane of Greenville, Pa., is suspected of having poisoned her father, David Harrison, a wealthy farmer.

A cousin of Alexander Dumas is arrested in St. Louis for passing bogus checks in Boston.

At Omaha George Foss, a chop-house cook, killed himself and Laura Day, his mistress, in a quarrel over the possession of a gold watch.

At Visalia, Cal., detectives visited the house of Chris Evans, one of the Collis train robbers and dug up on the premises two bags of silver containing about $1,500. Evans and Sontag are still at large.

Mr. Servis, a Chicago druggist, is accused of selling brandy and other liquors under the guise of soda water. He cannot be found, but Frank Spencer, his partner, is under arrest.

Dr. James F. Cook, one of the founders of the Bennett Medical college, and for the last twenty-five years a practicing physician in Chicago, is missing, and his friends fear that he has met with some serious harm.

Hugh O'Donnell surrendered himself to Ald. McMasters at Pittsburg and was released on $3,000 bail to answer charges of conspiracy and riot preferred by Secretary Lovejoy. Informations were made by Secretary Lovejoy charging 40 Homestead strikers with conspiracy and aggravated riot. Officers have gone to Homestead to make the arrests.

OTHER SHORES.

A railway train has arrived in Jerusalem from Jaffa, the railway between the two places having been completed.

The failure is announced of Redfern, Alexander & Co., Australian and New Zealand merchants and bankers of London. Their liabilities amount to £250,000.

The South Dublin (Ireland) market caught fire and was burned, together with Warren's hotel, which was crowded with guests, many of whom narrowly escaped with their lives. The damage done by the fire amounts to £120,000.

David Thomas, who engaged to work on the farm of Peter Rutherford, near Winnipeg, committed suicide by jumping into the Red river. Thomas is thought to be the man whom Grand Forks, N. D., officers were after in Manitoba for the murder of W. H. Bortheim of Grand Forks recently.

The Neue Freie Presse contains the important announcement that the mortality among the cholera patients at Hamburg has been reduced 50 per cent by the treatment prescribed by professors North Nagel and Kahler, namely injections of warm salt water. The effect is immediate and marvelous and many patients whose pulse is so feeble as to be indescernible, often recover after this simple treatment. In many cases, however, the effect is so short that a relapse follows.

Exaggerated and sensational reports having been sent from London regarding the accident that befell Mr. Gladstone recently, the representative of the Associated Press has made inquiries to learn the exact condition of the prime minister. The response to these inquiries bear out the statement cabled by the London agent of the Associated Press that Mr. Gladstone sustained no physical injury whatever, from his encounter with the heifer in the grounds of Hawarden castle. He is perfectly well in every way, and the report that he was severely injured is wholly untrue.

Thomas Neill, indicted for the murder of Matilda Clover, was again arraigned in the police court at London, and was committed for trial for murder and blackmail. J. W. McCullock of Ottawa, Ont., testified that he had made the acquaintance of the prisoner at Blanchard's hotel in Quebec. Neill showed him a bottle, saying that it contained poison. He said he had given poison in capsules to women. In the course of their conversation Neill declared that he had had lots of fun with women in London.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

Subcommittees are appointed by the Democratic state central committees.

Olin Welborn has been nominated for congress by the Democrats in the Seventh California district.

The first Mississippi district People's party convention has nominated James B. Burkett for congress.

Democratic congressional nominations: Ninth Missouri, J Beauchamp Clark; Twenty-fifth Pennsylvania, E. P. Gillespie; Ninth Michigan, H. H. Wheeler; Seventh Iowa, J. A. Dyer; Ninth Iowa, J. E. F. McGee.

An attempt will be made at the Texas Republican state convention to secure the endorsement of Clark (Democrat) for governor, that gentleman's adherents believing that in this manner Hogg can be beaten.

LABOR CIRCLE.

Socialist-Laborites meet in New York and nominate candidates for president and vice president.

The Democrats of the Twenty-third congressional district of Pennsylvania, nominated Frank C. Osborne.

The North-eastern switchmen's strike, which has been on at New Orleans since the 14th of Aug., took a serious turn and terminated in four employes and one striker being shot.

SPORTING MATTERS.

Nancy Hanks trots a mile on the Independence kite track in 2:05¼.

THE RAILROADS.

A railroad from South Dakota to the Gulf of Mexico is contemplated.

The Soo makes a big cut for the Grand Army encampment.

The Pennsylvania's new tunnel at the junction of the main line and the New York division in Philadelphia has been completed.

J. J. Hill gives notice that the Great Northern will withdraw from the Transcontinental association. The Atchison and Northern Pacific will probably do likewise.

The following notice was issued from the Northern Pacific freight department: "Farmers wishing to obtain employment for their threshing outfits in North Dakota this fall are hereby notified that three outfits with five men each can find plenty to do at each of the following places: Buffalo, Cooperstown and Minnewaukan."

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

A part of the material for the New Hampshire state building has been shipped from Concord, N. H. The shipment consists of 132 pieces of Concord granite, 102 blocks of Conway stone and eleven barrels of moulded granite for the fire-places.

English music and composers will not be unrepresented at the World's Columbian Exposition next year. Among those who have expected an invitation to attend is Dr. A. C. Mackenzie, who will conduct a performance of his "Rose of Sharon," or some other work.

It is proposed that one of Montana's contributions to the Exposition, to be made by women of the state, shall be a fountain made of natural ore. The design will be selected by open competition. It is suggested that the base be made of native minerals, the bowl of silver and the cup of gold.

William M. Singerly, of Philadelphia, will bring his big steer, the largest in the world, to the Columbian Exposition. The steer was sired by a pure bred Holstein, and its dam is a pure bred Durham cow. The animal is 6 years old and weighs 3,800 pounds. Its height is 5 feet 10 inches, its girth over loin 10 feet 10 inches, and its length from root of ear to rump 9 feet 10 inches. Mr. Singerly will exhibit his steer in the Live Stock Department.

The largest sample of gold quartz ever mined in Montana was taken out of the McIntyre lode. Its weight is 1,785 pounds. It came from near the surface. There are other large samples; which came from the Shafershaft at the depth of 110 feet; one from the Musser shaft; 100 feet and another from the working shaft, 200 feet. All are destined for exhibition at the World's Fair at Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Chicago beer manufacturers have entered into a combination or mutual agreement which will prevent any cutting of prices.

A committee representing the manufacturers of sash, doors and blinds for the Northwest is in session in Chicago, drawing up a new price list.

Judge Morton in the supreme judicial court at Boston, granted a temporary injunction against the order of the Iron Hall in each of two bills in equity. The order entered by Judge Morton is that for the purpose of preserving the status quo pending the hearing upon the application for the appointment of a receiver and an injunction.

The complaint in the attachment proceedings against the Bullock & Wilder Company, railroad contractors, of No. 40 Wall street, New York, for $450,000, brought by Isaac and Leopold Selingman who compose the firm of Selingman Brothers, of London, was filed in the county clerk's office.

H. B. McCelland, who for some time has been teaching school in Encinal county, Texas, for $40 per month, has been informed by English attorneys that he is the only heir of his uncle, the late Lord William Moore, of England, and is therefore possessor of that title, as well as an estate of $2,000,000.

A powerful combine, to be known as the Leaf Tobacco Company, was formed at Louisville, Ky., recently, whose object it is to compete with the newly organized tobacco combine at Cincinnati. Eleven of the wealthiest warehouses of the city are in the deal, and it is expected that before long none here will be out of the combine. The capital stock is placed at $2,500,000.

THE NORTHWEST.

John Theodore, a retired merchant of Wabasha, committed suicide by hanging in his barn.

The residence of J. J. Brown at St. Cloud was entered by burglars and considerable property stolen.

An unknown man, who was lying near the rails, was struck and killed by a Northern Pacific train near Crookston.

An incendiary fire at Faribault destroyed a barn belonging to the heirs of the Remmy estate. The loss was $1,000; no insurance.

A passenger train on the Soo road goes through a bridge neer Barrett, Minn. Six persons are killed, twelve seriously injured and many slightly hurt.

A. Dotle, a shoemaker of Jordan, committed suicide by hanging himself in his shop. Domestic troubles are supposed to be the cause.

The body of Hans Anderson, a farmer who lived near Redwood Falls, was found embedded in a slough. He had been missing six weeks.

T. M. Wilson has decided to accept a bonus offered by the Redwood Falls Board of Trade, and remove his repair shops from Cloquet to that city.

Katie Kiess, aged 13, was fatally burned at her home in Minneapolis by an explosion of kerosene, with which she was attempting to light the fire.

A young man named Charles Roering jumped from a moving car on the interurban railway between Minneapolis and St. Paul and sustained severe spinal injuries.

The state normal school opened at Mankato, recently with a good attendance, especially in the higher classes. There is double the number of high school graduates than ever before.

A boy employed in Wendt & Co.'s drug store, at Minneapolis, by mistake gave tartar emetic for Rochelle salts to Mrs. Harry Reeves. The woman is in a precarious condition as the result.

The residence of Otto Zander, near Salem Corners, was destroyed by fire. Zander was badly burned, rescuing a 7-year-old daughter up-stairs. There is small insurance.

D. Sweeney and John Halbron, two river men, performed rather a startling feat at Winona by jumping from the high bridge to the river, a distace of sixty feet. Neither of the men were injured.

By the explosion of a gasoline stove at Rochester Miss Mary Barron of this city was fatally burned, though her injuries at the time were not supposed to be very serious. Owing to the shock, as well as the burn she has since died.

John W. Davis was arrested at Little Falls some time ago charged by Emma Steffins of Fort Ripley with criminal assault. The girl is under sixteen years of age. They were married in the jail. He was afterward released on bail.

W. J. Roberts, a freight conductor, whose home is at St. James, fell under the wheels of a moving train at Mountain Lake which cut off one leg below the knee. The early passenger train brought him home.

A team of spirited horses attached to a reaper driven by Edward Zeibrath, near Montrose, ran away, and Zeibrath was thrown under the machine. The knives cut off an arm and a leg, from which injuries he died.

Sarah Tobias of Le Sucur took strychnine and was dead in less than an hour. Insanity was the cause, she having returned from the asylum but a short time ago. She was about twenty-three years old and lived with her parents one mile west of Le Sueur.

Scarcely a day passes but what a report is brought to Winona of some depredation or crime committed by tramps either at Minnesota City, a little town six miles west of here, or on the Wisconsin side. A gang of six or seven brutal men made an attack on two young ladies.

While Agent C. J. Fisher, of the Great Northern line at Breckinridge, was making up his remittance the other night, a man entered the office and, presenting a revolver, demanded the money. He secured all in sight, about $150. There is no clue to the robber.

Leonard Roway was assaulted and robbed of $20 while walking about midnight in a lonely locality in Mankato. His skull was crushed, and he is unconscious and not expected to survive. His assailant is supposed to have been Frank Gleffer, who was with him in a saloon shortly before the deed, and left town the next morning.

An investigation of the cells in the Stearns County jail at St. Cloud proves that they are constructed of a poor quality of iron instead of first-class steel. Board of County Commissioners may bring suit against the firm that had the contract. Several prisoners almost succeeded in sawing their way out.

Fred Hahn, a young lad 10 years old living about eight miles south of St. Peter, was accidentally shot and instantly killed while handling a gun. He had gone home from the field to get the gun for his father and was accompanied back by his younger brother. A discussion ensued as to the gun being loaded and in their attempt to find out it was discharged.

WISCONSIN.

A 9-year-old son of John Bremmer, living in the town of Buffalo, Marquette County, was kicked in the head by a mule, and is in a critical condition.

George Lenderback, of Eau Claire, dropped dead on the street while on his way to the doctor's office. Heart failure was the cause of his demise.

Peter McCann, a resident of Chippewa City, six miles north of Chippewa Falls, was arrested on a charge of criminal assault upon Jennie Young.

There is much fear of severe frost in Dane County. Farmers state that a frost at the present time would destroy nearly $1,500,000 worth of crops.

The Quinnesec Logging Company, of Marinettee, are extending their logging railway into the woods at a point near Marinettee.

At Haney, about twelve miles north of Boscobel, several men were working in a hay shed when the large timbers gave away. Two of the men were crushed to death and one other injured fatally.

The artesian Well at Racine has been repaired and the citizens are once more furnished with drinking water. A subscription was taken up among Racine residents to pay for the repairing of the well.

Westley E. Sowards, a farmer living in the town of Hampden, Portage County, was arrested on a complaint of Jay Bradley, who charges the prisoner with having assaulted him with a deadly weapon and robbed him of a team and wagon on the highway.

Mrs. William Walthers, formerly of Waupun, was terribly burned and scalded by the overturning of a kettle of boiling water at her home in Townsend, Ore. Her baby was also scalded and died a few hours later.

NORTH DAKOTA.

A North Dakota man, claiming to be a world's fair representative, is arrested in Colorado for swindling banks.

While cutting grain near Grofton, Christopher Hanson had both legs cut off by a reaper. He cannot recover.

Joseph Nnapp, of Devil's Lake, was knocked down, beaten senseless and robbed of $50 and a gold watch by two highwaymen at Grand Forks, N. D.

Nels Nelson, while hunting near Bismarck was accidentally shot by his own gun. The charge struck him in the head and death was instantaneous. He leaves a wife and child.

The Grand Forks authorities have a man under arrest, captured at Winnipeg, who is claimed to have confessed to parties there that he was an eye witness of the shooting of W. H. Botheim there Aug. 8, which he now denies.

During the performance of Haverly's minstrels at Fargo recently to a crowded house a terrific electrical storm passed over the city. A nervous man in the audience mistook the flashes of lightning for fire in the scenery and cried "fire" repeatedly. The audience was badly excited and several ladies fainted. A panic was averted only by the timely action of a few cool-headed men in the audience.

The body of Peter Swanson, a native of Sweden, was found in Red Lake river at Grand Forks. It had evidently been in the water some days and was partially decomposed. A letter was found in the dead man's pocket addressed to a brother in the old country saying that he intended to drown himself. It was doubtless a case of suicide. Deceased was about 30 years of age.

IOWA.

Charles A. Morgan, of Union township near Atlanta, has left for parts unknown. Since his flight forged notes to the extent of $4,000 have turned up. Fast horses and women were the cause of his downfall.

Will Blessinger, 20 years of age, was injured fatally at Clinton by falling upon a pitch fork. He was on a hay stack and in sliding off, fell upon the upright handle of the fork, which pierced his body almost a foot.

Hill street motor line at Dubuque was sold by the sheriff for $50,000. The purchasers were a new company formed called the Eight Street and West Dubuque Street Railway Company. Articles of incorporation of the new company were filed; capital, $100,000.

Grace church choir of Cedar Rapids sixty-five in number, has been camping at Decorah. One of the members was taken down with scarlet fever. Camp was broken up and the members returned home. The health officers are alarmed at the prospect of an epidemic.

Fire destroyed the old state house at Des Moines recently. The building is a complete ruin. The state house was built in 1840 and used until 1881, when the new state house was ready for occupancy. The fire started through the carelessness of tramps, who have been allowed to lodge in the building.

James Bossingham of Humboldt lost several valuable horses by fire. He believes the fire was the work of an incendiary, and said that he knew the parties and that they should not live. Mike Hessian called upon Bossingham and was severely injured in the attack that Bossingham made upon him. The affair is being investigated.

Henry Sult and his nine-year-old son, a few miles from Gilman, are suffering all the horrible agonies of hydrophobia, and a daughter will probably also fall a victim, all having been bitten by a rabid dog a few weeks since. Several head of live stock was bitten at the same time and have since died, and there is no hope for any of the family.

Disease in Poultry.

Fowls easily take cold, and are then apt to suffer from the disease known as roup. This is a bad form of catarrh and is often fatal. The fowls sneeze and breathe with difficulty on account of the filling of the nostrils with a thick, curdy matter which has a bad odor. The remedy, which should be applied as soon as the trouble appears, is to wash the head and mouth with warm vinegar and then apply a solution of chlorate of potash in water, as strong as it can be made, to the mouth and nostrils with a feather and pour a tea-spoonful down the bird's throat. To avoid this disease the birds must be kept dry and clean. It is exceedingly contagious and much resembles the common diphtheria.

A Cheap Catarrh Cure.

Medical Record: Yawning is by no means a useless act, for it often cures catarrh and other affections of the throat, in many cases giving instantaneous relief. It produces a considerable distention of the muscles of the pharynx, constituting a kind of massage, and under this influence the cartilaginous portion of the eustachian tube contracts, expelling into the pharynx the mucosities there collected. According to M. Naegeli, yawning is much more efficacious for affections of the tube than the methods of Valsalva or Politzel, and is more rational than the insufflation of air, which is often difficult to perform properly.

Statistics on Growth.

British Medical Monthly: The year of greatest growth in boys is the seventeenth; in girls, the fourteenth. While girls reach their full height in their fifteenth year they acquire full weight at the age of twenty. Boys are stronger than girls from birth to the eleventh year; then girls become superior physically to the seventeenth year, when the tables are again turned and remain so. From November to April children grow very little and gain no weight; from April to July they gain in height, but lose in weight, and from July to November they increase greatly in weight, but not in height.

Two Kinds of Crackers.

Babyland: It is no wonder that people, old and young, make mistakes when the same word stands for so many different things.

It was the Fourth of July. A little miss was told to take her afternoon nap and then she should get up and watch the boys put off their fire-crackers.

Pretty soon a heavy thunder shower came on and Aunt Mary went up to see if Miss Rachel was frightened. Evidently she was, for she called out at once:

"Aunt Mary, I don't want, to hear any more water-crackers."

The Exact Truth.

Detroit Free Press: The school boy was showing his teacher some apples he had bought.

"Them ain't no good," he said, throwing out a couple.

"Gracious me, Fred," she exclaimed, "whose grammar do you use?"

"Johnnie Wilkinses," he answered, innocently; "mine's all tored up."

STRANGE STORY OF A DOCTOR.

How He Obtained a Murder Clew Which Was Useless in Court.

"I once picked up a murder clew in a very peculiar way," said Dr. E. P. Roach to a Globe-Democrat man. "I was practicing in Brooklyn and lived next door to a man of considerable means, who was one morning found murdered in his library. He had been struck with a slungshot and then choked. Everything indicated that robbery was the motive of the crime, but the police could get no clew to the perpetrators, and the affair was finally forgotten. The widow's health declined, and I was frequently in attendance upon her. I could not help suspecting that she knew more about her husband's murder than she chose to tell. One night I was called to see her and found her slightly delirious. She seemed to be suffering great mental distress. I laid my hand upon her forehead, and it suddenly occurred to me to question her regarding her husband's murder. Instantly I heard voices of two men quarreling. I recognized one as that of the murdered man, the other as that of his son. There was the sound of a blow, a fall, and the woman gasped as if horror-stricken and lay back on her pillow as though lifeless. I revived her and repeated the experiment with like results. The son was the guilty party. I had discovered her secret, but I realized that such evidence would be worthless in court, and held my peace. The son was afterward killed in a New York dive, and the wife and mother died in the insane asylum."

Honesty.

Twemlo—There's the nickel in my vest pocket that I should have paid for my fare down town.

Wadsleigh—Well, I wouldn't cheat even a street railway company.

Twemlo—Neither did I. You see I forgot and paid the fair out of another pocket!

THE STATE FAIR.

Minnesota's Thirty-fourth Annual Exhibit Opened Yesterday.

In Point of Excellence the Displays Have Never Been Equaled.

ST. PAUL Special, Telegram Sept 6.—The state fair, the thirty-fourth annual exhibit of the products and exposition of the resources of Minnesota, opened yesterday. It was a "first-day" in every sense of the word, and splendid fair weather—the breath of autumn in the air, a touch of its pencil in the sky—but such a first day that by evening the scope of the various displays could be easily determined and an opinion formed of the extent and value of the exhibits. In some departments the fair of 1892 is far superior to any preceding it in the extent and variety of the display. In others it has fallen, behind the high mark set in preceding years. But, as a whole, it is fully up to, if not beyond, the average. And this further important point is not to be overlooked—that in quality the present exhibit is ahead of any the State of Minnesota has known, taken as a whole. Last year so many horses were entered that it was difficult to find stable room. This year not so many are shown, but in quality they were never equaled. Of cattle there are more than in 1891, and they include the finest herds of the Western country. The poultry exhibits have fallen off, but experts pronounce the birds superior to any heretofore exhibited in the state. In the machinery and manufacturing departments there is a superior exhibit.

So the entire long and diversified list might be gone through and the result would show an exhibition which must prove a source of vast entertainment for one class of people and a most valuable object lesson for another. The farmer attends a state fair for instruction and information. Last year Minnesota introduced, for the first time in any state, a little city of tents at her state fair where farmers could not only visit the fair economically, but where, in connection with a farmers' institute, they could hear the best agricultural educators of the country, men it would be impossible to obtain for regular institute meetings. This year the white city of forty or fifty homes has again sprung up, and to-day it is expected that it will be fully occupied by farmers of the state. Morning and evening they will attend institute sessions, hearing agricultural topics, in which they are vitally interested, ably discussed. During the day they will have on the grounds object lessons in every branch of agriculture. It is this departure that makes the Minnesota state fair of exceptional value to the farmers.

Whether farmer or not, the fair offers a thousand things to instruct and entertain. The buildings look as if new. The trees along the central driveway and about the grounds begin to cast a shade and in a few years will be fine specimens. The turf yesterday was everywhere green and velvety. About the stables everything was as spick and span as even a housewife could ask. The grand stand, a splendid specimen of architecture of its class, overlooked a track very nearly in prime condition. In one corner of the grounds a score of windmills—big mills, little mills, tall mills, short mills, mills of wood and mills of iron, mills of many colors revolve until the brain grows dizzy from watching. Under them and all about, over-running buildings and sheds, is of farming implements and machinery, where a man might wander a day with profit, if he is in the farming business. Near the railway entrance is a track where a dozen or more Shetland ponies make the rounds for the little people, and near by are two merry-go-rounds. There is a whole street of eating houses interspersed with catch-penny affairs. There was a sprinkling of people all about yesterday. To-day there will be a crowd. This is the scene out-of-doors.

Inside, some of the buildings are filled to the doors; others show vacant places, but these are few. There is a ladies' department in the main building where all the colors of the rainbow, with a few extra, blend. In this building, too, are some fine displays by St. Paul merchants and an exhibit by the Great Northern road which is worth going much further than the fair grounds to see. The art department is in its old corner. Institute hall has been newly seated, and forming a complete cordon about the wall are 180 frames, each containing a specimen of a grass grown in Minnesota. The grasses are from Prof. Luger, of the state experimental farm, and afford a most interesting study.

Agricultural hall was not shipshape yesterday, but it will look better to-day. Three counties are striving for the $200 prize for the best display. In each are products of the earth to make eyes widen in amaze at the prodigality of nature. The poultry house is not so noisy as it has been, but there are feathered creatures quite enough and of quality to make the eyes of fancier glisten and the mouth of epicure water. The horses are an exceptionally fine lot, notably the Clydesdales and Percherons. The showing of cattle is a royal one. Sheep and swine are excellently represented, and there are goodly numbers of them. These are some of the things indoors.

FAMOUS HORSES.

And then there are Nancy Hanks, Jay Eye See and the less famous trotters and pacers in the stable over on the hill which give assurance of some royal racing during the remaining days of the fair. Yesterday was largely given to preparation. To-day everything will be in place, the contest in several classes will begin, there will be a rush of people, and another successful fair will be under way.

Heavy Frost Predicted.

HURON, S. D., Special, Sept. 6.—Special frost bulletins were issued this evening by direction of the central weather bureau predicting a killing frost in this section to-night. Most of the corn is out of the reach of injury by frost, and only that planted late will be harmed.

A New Secretary Elected.

RED WING, Minn., Special, Sept. 6.—The Duluth, Red Wing & Sioux City Construction company to-day elected Rev. W. G. Rice of St. Paul secretary to succeed the late Hon. F. W. Hoyt.

DOUGHERTY DEAD.

The Well Known Lawyer and Orator Dies After a Long Illness.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6.—Daniel Dougherty, the silver-tongued orator, died at his residence in this city to-day. His death was due to nervous prostration, which affected his brain. He has been ill for several months past, but was recently thought to be recovering by the attending physician. A change for the worse came last night, and he sank until death resulted. Only the immediate members of the family were present, including his son, D. Webster Dougherty, the well known attorney. Daniel Dougherty was born in Philadelphia, Dec. 17, 1836. While a child his mother died and his father married again. It was then that young Daniel left home and began his struggle. His early life was a series of battles for existence. In his eighteenth year he made his real start in life by entering the law offices of William and Samuel Badger. Two years afterward he became prominent as a Democratic speechmaker, and in 1840 he was admitted to the bar. In 1850 he was the acknowledged leader of the Douglass party in this city. In the presidential election that placed Lincoln in the White House for the first term the Douglass party in Philadelphia polled nearly 90,000 votes, which was due largely to Mr. Dougherty's earnest efforts.

STOP IMMIGRATION.

This Is the Advice Given by Ex-Secretary Blaine.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 6.—Mr. Blaine has recently expressed to a friend his views of the clear duty of the government in the matter of the cholera danger, and what the president and congress should at once undertake. An attempt was made to-night to secure a complete interview with him on the subject, but it partially failed owing to the arrival from New York at the Bar Harbor residence of Walter Damrosch, son-in-law of Mr. Blaine. Mr. Blaine said at time of seizure of the schooner Adams, just after Mr. Cleveland became president, that his foreign policy in all things was thought to be a strong one, and that he ought not to express himself before the president had a chance to act. But this time, he says, "the duty is clear and the path plain." In substance it is to close traffic between the old country, Canada and the United States to everybody and everything save the mails and citizens of this country now abroad, and to admit these only after perfect precaution. His idea is that there are not and cannot be commercial relations which for a moment are to be considered in comparison to safety to life. He has always held this country to be dependent on no other, save for some of the luxuries of life, and he thinks while we may lose and cause loss in some quarters, such matters can be easily adjusted. He wanted everything now on the water on the way from the Old World kept from the land, and a discontinuance of all foreign railroad traffic across the states. Then he would have the border policed to perfection, a rigid examination in all cities and towns of fruit, and he believes the president has the power to order by proclamation and that there are no treaty rights to prevent it.

GUARDING AGAINST CHOLERA.

North Dakota Officials Taking Measures to Keep the Disease Out.

FARGO, N. D., Special, Sept. 6.—Dr. Devaux, of the board of health, has been called to Washington to consult in regard to the cholera. Inspectors have been placed on the northern boundary of the state by the national government, but no provision was made for the registration of immigrants. At New York a record is kept of all immigrants, showing where they came from and where they are going, and the state board receives a copy of all who come here here. This shows that from March 11 to Aug. 21 over 100 European immigrants landed at New York for North Dakota, while Dr. Devaux finds over 1,500 European immigrants settled in that state in the same period who came via Neche. He was to-day consulting with Gov. Burke, and the registration will be established even if under state auspices. No danger is anticipated for this season, but if matters are left in the present shape there will probably be much trouble next year, and the superintendent and the state administration are determined to take every possible precaution in time. There will be additional danger next year, as the Soo will then have a line across the [illegible] well.

CHOLERA IN EUROPE.

Vessels Arrived in London and Liverpool with the Disease on Board.

LONDON, Sept. 6.—The steamer Elbe from Hamburg arrived in the Tyne last evening with one of her officers down with cholera. He was removed to the floating hospital that has been provided for cholera patients, where he died this morning.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 6.—The steamer Clement has arrived in the Mersey from Hamburg where two of her crew died from cholera.

HAMBURG, Sept. 6.—The ambulances took to the hospitals yesterday 280 cholera patients, of which number 16 died. This was 45 fewer patients than were taken to the hospitals Saturday, while the deaths were 38 less in number.

PARIS, Sept. 6.—Forty-one new cases of cholera and four deaths from the disease were reported in this city to-day. In Rouen seven new cases and one death were reported.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 6.—There were reported throughout Russia on Friday 3,812 new cases of cholera and 1,791 deaths from the disease.

HAVRE, Sept. 6.—Seven new cases of cholera and nine deaths from the disease were reported in this city yesterday.

The People Are Getting Weak.

RED WING, Minn., Special, Sept. 6.—The Goodhue county People's party convention was held at Hader Saturday with only fifteen delegates present. John Seastrand an independent candidate, was nominated for sheriff, Dr. A. L. Clum for judge of probate and J. C. Dickey for treasurer. There was no enthusiasm whatever in the assemblage, and the general opinion is that the days of the People's party in this county are over.

Fell From His Wagon and Killed.

ELLENDALE, N. D., Special, Sept. 6.—Theodore Jensen fell from a wagon while threshing on his farm two miles west of this city yesterday and was killed. The wagon ran over him.

Twenty Days' Quarantine.

NEW YORK, Sept. 6.—Health Officer Jenkins has issued the president's circular.

"This means," said Dr. Jenkins, "twenty days' quarantine for all vessels from infected ports, though it would include the vessels at present [illegible] will include the Joseph John, sailed from Hamburg on Aug. 26.

We neglected to mention in our last issue the leap year dance given by the ladies of the village in the new Holmes building, August 27th, The affair was well managed and there was a large attendance, The boys all say that it was the best dance of the season and hope the ladies will try it again.

HE WEARS A COLLAR,

The St. Paul Globe has the following to say of the seventh district republican congressional convention and its nominee,

The Republicans of the Red River Valley never heard of Mr. Feig until a few days ago, when State Weighmaster Reese made a trip through this section in the interest of the Kandiyohi man. It was generally supposed that the nomination lay between Corliss of Otter Tail, and Judge Christianson of Polk, with Ex-Senator E. G. Holmes of Becker, as a possibility. Christianson was betrayed by the old gang that has been running the republican party of Polk county for some years, even in his own delegation being taken from him. Of course the men who nominated Mr. Feig have no idea that he can be elected, but they do not care to have a man they cannot handle gain even the prestige of being the defeated candidate.

Neither Corliss nor Christianson was satisfactory to the office brokers of Moorhead, Crookston and St. Paul, and they were turned down without any ado. Ex-Senator Holmes was also too independent to stand a show,

"The nomination of Feig means that the firm of Thompson, Johnson and company propose to run the politics not only of Polk county but of the whole seventh district," was the way a disgusted Polk county man expressed it after the nomination had been made.

A. D. Stephens, of Polk; Marcus Johnson, collector of revenue at St. Paul: Hugh Thompson, of the Crookston land office, and State Weighmaster Reese were present and set up the pins for Mr. Feig.

No citizen is more concerned in the efficiency of the public schools than the farmer. The large cities of Minnesota not only support their own schools and do it cheerfully, but contribute hundreds of thousands of dollars annually to the support of schools in the interior towns and districts of the state. There is occasionally a mild kick at the tax thus levied on the cities for the benefit of the country, but in a general way it is counted fair and just that the cities should help to educate the boys and girls of the country, many of whom are destined to become energetic citizens of these same cities a few years hence. But whether the boy or girl now on the farm goes to the city or not it is necessary, in this age, that both should have more than an ordinary education. The future farmer as well as the future dweller in the city should be broad minded and intelligent. He should not only know his own business well but he should understand the conditions which affect other callings besides his own. If he does not he is always the victim of designing politicians who lie with impudence because they feel sure that their listeners are too ignorant to catch them at it. Every interest affecting the common school should find every farmer in the neighborhood an active supporter. There has been wonderful progress in methods of teaching as well as in methods of farming, and no school or teacher should be allowed to drag around in the old ruts.—Ex.

A party of Fergus Falls people composed of Hon. Jas. A. Compton and son Willie, Frank J. Evans, of the First National Bank and D. C. Dunn, whose home is in Meadville Pennsylvania, arrived in the city this morning with a complete hunting outfit, and under the guidance of Harry E. Ives left for St. Hilaire for a three day's hunt. Mr. Compton is one if the best shots in the state, and Mr. Evans is also a sportsman who knows how to handle a fowling piece, and as the party promised to supply the Commercial Hotel with game for the next three days, besides numerous private families in this city it is expected that there will be very few birds left in the northeastern part of Polk county by Saturday night.—Crookston Times.

It is said that Johnson of this state and Nelson of Minnesota were nominated by the republicans to "catch the Norwegians." In other words these men were put up in the hope of inducing the Norwegians to go back on their principles. If the Norwegians were a pack of geese to follow a leader, if they were a flock of sheep to follow a bell or if they were a pack of ignorant Africans fresh from a wilderness, there might be some reason to suppose that they can be caught with such chaff.—N. D. Independent.

When a child is born the attending physician gets $25 and the editor a cussing if he happens to make a mistake in date or sex. When a marriage is solemnized the minister gets $5 or $10 or even $25; the editor gets a nickel or two perhaps for some extra copies, provided the list of presents is printed, When a death occurs the undertaker gets $25 and the editor a few more nickels for some extra copies. This is a funny world. It seems to be too much one sided, and the editor on the wrong side.—Sturgis Advertiser.

On Friday last the biggest shipment of chickens was made over the St. Hilaire line that has been made so far this season. Conductor Norris had just an even 1,000 birds to unload when he arrived here.—Crookston Times.

In Colorado Weaver met with the most hearty reception. About 5,000 gathered to hear him talk at Denver. Thirty three Democratic and seventee Republican papers have abandoned their parties and come out in support of the People's candidate. The old parties have lost their grip upon Colorado.

John McLogan was at the Great Northern train this morning, grip in hand, bidding his many friends goodbye. He took his departure on the west bound passenger for Kalispel, where he will make his future home having been appointed as chief line man on that division of the Great Northern road, with headquarters at Kalispel,—Crookston Times,

Prof. Todd, of the geological Survey examined the work on the G. N. grade He says the clay is of such formation and the conditions such that the company may expect continual trouble with it. The earth keeps sliding into the river in huge masses resembling glaciers The solid banks on the west also slides in sections every little while. Reports all along the line show that several weeks will be required to repair the backsets occasioned by these slides.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A Leaky Sausage Apparatus.

A little lady walked into a butcher shop and asked for two pounds of beefsteak. When it had been weighed she told the butcher to put it in the mincing machine and chop it up so that she could make meat balls out of it for dinner.

The meat expert, quite an ordinary looking man, entirely unsuited to be the hero of a story like this, followed the instructions, minced the meat and handed it in a paper to the customer. Then he turned in his matter of fact way to attend to a man new to housekeeping who was inquiring if he had any nice mutton steak, and if so how much it was a yard.

The little lady looked at the minced meat and asked the butcher to weigh it again. He did so, and there was just 1¾ pounds.

"There!" said the little lady indignantly. "Your sausage machine has stolen a quarter of a pound of my steak. I've suspected that machine for a long time. You've got to make it good."

"I will not," retorted the butcher. "It's a case of natural wear and tear. Maybe some of the weight of the steak has vanished in the process to which it has been subjected, but there's two pounds of nourishment there."

"The machine either leaks or there's a secret trap that steals my steak," the little lady insisted. "I won't take the meat till it weighs two pounds."

And she didn't.—New York Herald.

MINNESOTA STATE NORMAL SCHOOLS AT WINONA, MANKATO, ST. CLOUD AND MOORHEAD.

These schools are organized for the training of teachers for the common schools of the state.

ORGANIZATION.—Each school comprises two departments the Normal Department and the Training Department or Model School. The Normal Department embraces:

- (a) An elementary course for teachers of rural districts and elementary grades
- (b) An advanced course for teachers of advanced grades.
- (c) A professional course for teachers who have completed the necessary academic course elsewhere.
- (d) A Kindergarten training course (at Winona.)

ADMISSION.—Graduates of high schools and colleges and teachers holding county superintendents' first and second grade certificates are admitted without examination. All others are required to pass an entrance examination.

EXPENSES.—Tuition is free to all who pledge themselves to teach in Minnesota. Text books are furnished at a rental of three dollars per year. Provision is made in each school for economical living. The average cost of furnished rooms with board is about $3 per week. The Ladies Home at St. Cloud offers board, furnished room, heat and light at $2,75 per week..

DIPLOMAS.—By a recent act of the legislature, a diploma becomes a state teachers' certificate of the first grade.

The next school year opens at Winona and Mankato August 29 1892, St. Cloud and Moorhead September 1, 1892.

A NEED OF THE HOUR.

THERE IS MUCH WORK TO BE DONE IN THE NEXT FEW MONTHS.

That Is What Noah Allen, President of the National Citizens' Industrial Alliance, Declares Is the Important Fact for Thinkers to Realize.

Now that the conventions are over and the tickets are in the field marshaling the forces must begin. The lines are drawn, and the most momentous political contest for a quarter of a century is upon us. The lovers of gold and the enemies of liberty, the monopoly fed and trust fattened cormorants, the partisan bigot and political leeches are united against the people. Success at all hazards is their determination.

There is no life too dear, no character too sacred, no ballot too pure to escape their selfish, avaricious assaults. Vilification, slander, libel and personal violence if need be will be resorted to. Organization, colonization, "blocks of five," tens and twenties, fraud, perjury and bribery will be their weapons in the present campaign. Home workmen are to be crowded out and back to make way for imported voters. Exorbitant freight rates are to be extorted from the farmers, merchants and consumers to swell the campaign fund and despoil and corrupt the ballot box. Complete organization, liberal donations and contributions, and perfect obedience to their plutocratic masters is their hope of success.

We must be awake to the necessity of work. To fail to realize our situation and work to meet an unscrupulous and insidious foe is defeat to our principles and danger to our liberties. The need for close, conservative organization was never greater. Open political clubs are insufficient. We cannot afford to drift in fancied security when the political worms are destroying the bulwarks of American liberty. If we would throw off the corporation incubus we must think, act and vote, and see that our votes are counted.

If we have a free ballot and fair count, we must organize and stand together like men and patriots. No organization for the education of the masses in the interests of justice and equality should be allowed to dissolve or lose its power. Each reform organization has a legitimate mission and field of labor.

The Farmers' Alliance, Knights of Labor and kindred organizations are nonpartisan and educational in their character, and are composed of a membership limited to certain classes, and are therefore restricted in their work. But each has a noble and useful work to perform.

The National Citizens' Industrial Alliance is composed of a membership from all stations and callings in life who stand squarely upon the St. Louis platform, and while not a partisan organization it is political and will work for the party adopting its principles, and the People's party having done this we take our stand and pledge our support to Weaver and Field and the People's party tickets in every state in the Union.

Our membership is composed of merchants, farmers, laborers and business or professional men of all callings, irrespective of whether they are members of other reform organizations or not, and we meet upon a common level to devise the safest and best method to meet and resist our common enemy. While working in perfect harmony we occupy a field unoccupied by any other reform organization. The National Citizens' Industrial Alliance is a national organization: its mission is a good one, its existence a necessity.

The work of reform education in business circles, guarding and protecting the ballot against illegal voters, fraud and bribery, is essential, and must be done by reliable, conservative, organized effort. The plans for successful work cannot be laid in open view of the enemy. There is much to be done in an important contest like this that must be well and carefully planned.

Our organization is well adapted for that work—it is for that purpose. Political clubs and committees need all of the assistance they can get, and our purpose is to assist them with well matured and organized plans. Surely we must fight if we would win in this struggle, and to fight well the National Citizens' Industrial Alliance should be thoroughly organized in every city, town and hamlet in the land. Let every patriotic reformer join us, put his shoulder to the wheel and help us on to Washington. With united efforts, patriotism and the people will be victorious. —Noah Allen in Topeka Advocate.

Mean Business in Georgia.

The plutocratic press of Atlanta fondly imagines that it is fooling somebody with its misrepresentations of the relative strength of the two parties in Georgia. If it had a greater love for the truth it would be more respected and more influential. Its bold misrepresentations have ceased to hurt the People's party or to do its own any service.

Everywhere that meetings are held those of the People's party are from four to twenty times larger than those of the Democrats, and the enthusiasm, if not as noisily expressed, is deeper and more earnest. The people are in dead earnest and they can neither be deceived, frightened nor coaxed into again supporting the old parties.—Southern Alliance Farmer.

The Silver Problem in a Nutshell.

Free coinage of silver means $1.29 per ounce. This will make Colorado mines pay big wages and employ thousands of idle men. These men will spend the money; it goes into the channels of trade, and by stimulating trade employs millions more idle men and furnishes the medium for their payment. The rich robbers fight any scheme to have new dollars made, for then the people would not have to go to these rich bandits and pay them for the use of their supply. That is the silver problem in a nutshell. —Pueblo (Colo.) Crisis.

WOMEN OF THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

Much of the Movement's Success in Kansas Is Due to Their Enthusiasm.

Annie L. Diggs writes in The Arena of the women who are influencing politics in the west, particularly in Kansas. Speaking of the beginning of the revolution which overthrew ex-Senator Ingalls, she says:

Politics for the farmer had been recreation, relaxation or even exhilaration, according to the varying degree of his interest or of honor flatteringly bestowed by town committeemen upon a "solid yeoman" at caucus or convention. The flush of pride over being selected to make a nominating speech or the sense of importance consequent upon being placed on a resolution committee to acquiesce in the prepared document conveniently at hand—these high honors lightened much muddy plowing and hot harvest work.

But the farmers' wives participated in no such ecstasies. Hence for them no blinding party ties. And therefore, when investigation turned on the light, the women spoke right out in meeting, demanding explanation for the nonappearance of the home market for the farm products, which their good husbands had been prophesying and promising would follow the upbuilding of protected industries. These women in the Alliance, grown apt in keeping close accounts from long economy, cast eyes over the long account of promises of officials managing public business, and said, "Promise and performance do not balance." "Of what value are convention honors, or even elected eloquence in the national Capitol, if homelessness must be our children's heritage?"

The great political victory of the people of Kansas would not have been won without the help of the women of the Alliance. Women who never dreamed of becoming public speakers grew eloquent in their zeal and fervor. Farmers' wives and daughters rose earlier and worked later to gain time to cook the picnic dinners, to paint the mottoes on the banners, to practice with the glee clubs, to march in procession. Josh Billings' saying that "wimmin is everywhere" was literally true in that wonderful picnicking, speechmaking Alliance summer of 1890.

Before this question of the salvation of the imperiled homes of the nation all other questions, whether of "prohibition" or "suffrage," pale into relative inconsequence. For where shall temperance or high thought of franchise be taught the children, by whose breath the world is saved, if sacred hearth fires shall go out? The overtopping, all embracing moral question of the age is this for which the Alliance came. Upon such great ethical foundation is the labor movement of today building itself. How could women do otherwise than be in and of it?

A Continued Ovation in Colorado.

The tour of General James B. Weaver, the People's nominee for president, across Colorado was a series of constant ovations. In no campaign of any kind in this state has a candidate ever been received with so many and so genuine demonstrations of enthusiasm and so many pledges of support. In Denver he filled the largest auditorium in the city for two successive evenings, thousands finding it impossible to gain entrance to the coliseum. At Pueblo the spacious mineral palace could not hold the throng that flocked to hear him. At Leadville two meetings were necessary in order that the miners might hear the only candidate who is pledged to sign a free coinage bill. At Aspen the welcome given him by the Pitkin county miners surpassed anything ever seen in the way of a political demonstration in the state.

At Grand Junction the farmers and fruit growers of the Grand valley gave evidence of their devotion to the silver cause by an enthusiastic greeting to the champion of free coinage. All along his route, at Canyon City, Salida, Buena Vista, Glenwood Springs and Newcastle, the People's nominee was received with unusual demonstrations of welcome. No such triumphal tour was ever before made by any political candidate in the Rocky mountain country.

Amid all these demonstrations General Weaver has borne himself with a courtesy and a dignity that has gained for him the respect and confidence even of his opponents. His speeches have been frank and able and manly. His arguments have made a visible impression on the people of the state. They cannot be answered by calling him a "worn out politician" or a "demagogue."—Rocky Mountain News.

The Women at Omaha.

The women of the Omaha convention constitute a factor in this great controversy that cannot be forgotten. It was a great political convention that knew no discrimination on account of sex. Women were there occupying seats and doing work as accredited and accepted delegates. Not only this, but broadminded, able and earnest women were there who did valiant and successful work in fashioning and determining the deliberations of the delegates. From the south and the west and the middle states—aye, and from the east also—the women of America were at Omaha. They were there, first of all, to recognize present conditions and to lay on the altar all they have and are for industrial emancipation. The Omaha convention gave to women equal and exact justice with men, and in return every woman in the land should give all her support to the platform and nominees of the Omaha convention.—Nonconformist.

The Feeling in Colorado.

If some of the Denver editors who are claiming a majority of 12,000 for Harrison would come up here and talk with the people they would quickly change their tune, as every one seems to be against the old tickets. If the election was held tomorrow we do not think either of the old tickets would poll fifty votes in Summit county, and are of the opinion that this estimate would hold good in many other mountain counties. The silver people are in it.—Dillon (Colo.) Enterprise.

Soapsuds Are Valuable.

Few persons know how very useful soapsuds prove when employed as manure. Applied to the roots of vines, fruit trees, roses, etc., they impart a vigor and rapidity of growth which is perfectly surprising. No one who is so lucky as to have a garden should waste this valuable form of manure. It is an excellent plan to have a large tub, and put the soapsuds and dirty water into it till required upon the garden.—Philadelphia Ledger.

WHY BICYCLISTS NEVER LAUGH.

Simply Because Americans Always Make a Solemn Business of Recreation.

A correspondent of the New York Recorder writes to inquire why the passing bicyclist has so grave a mien—why he looks as if he might be pedaling his own hearse to the cemetery. The sport of wheeling is described in the bicycle advertisements as so exhilarating that one expects to see the face of a man awheel constantly wreathed in smiles, his cheeks glowing with the vitality imparted by fresh air and exercise. But these expectations are seldom realized. The average cyclist looks as if he had been sent out to subpena a coroner's jury for his own inquest. His average gaze is fixed about a mile and a half up the road, his lips are set and the corners of his mouth drawn until his facial expression is a mixture of grim determination and utter dispair.

Our correspondent wants to know why this is thus, and the query is a natural one. It may be answered, Yankee fashion, by another question: Is it not a fact that the average American always makes a grim and serious business of his recreation? Is it not a fact that he seldom smiles 'in the literal sense of the word' when he is alone? Is it not true that even when he sallies forth for gregarious enjoyment, as it were, on lake-side picnic or distant excursion bent, he makes harder work of it than haying or harvesting? Is it not a fact patent to every good observer that there is too much deadly earnestness and too little laughter in our American life, and is it not true that many of us are never so miserable as when we are pretending to have a good time?

Then why wonder at the solemn phiz of the passing bicyclist? If we find difficulty in smiling at a picnic, how can one of us be expected to grin when he is alone on two wheels with an unstable equilibrium to look after?

A TERRIBLE REVENGE.

A Series of French Duels in Which Only One Participant Was Touched.

A most vindictive duel was fought during the reign of Louis XVI. by a colonel of the French guards, says the Yankee Blade. This gentleman was boasting of the good fortune of never having been obliged to fight a duel. Another officer expressed his surprise, with some indirect allusions to the colonel's lack of courage, observing: "How do you avoid fighting when insulted?" The colonel answered that he had never given offense and no one had ever presumed to insult him. Moreover, that on such an occasion he would consider the character of the person who had wantonly insulted him ere he demanded satisfaction. Upon this statement his interlocutor, in the most insolent manner, struck him in the face with his glove, saying: "Perhaps, sir, you will not consider this an insult?"

The colonel camly put on his hat and walked out of the room. The following morning he sent a challenge to his aggressor. When they came to the ground the colonel wore a patch of court plaster of the size of a crown piece on the cheek which had recieved the blow. At the very first lunge he wounded his antagonist in the sword arm, when taking off the plaster, he cut off an edge of it with a pair of scissors and, replacing it on his face, took leave of his adversary very politely requesting he would do him the honor of letting him know when he recovered from his wound. As soon as he heard he was able to hold a sword the colonel called him out again and wounded him a second time, cutting off another portion of the patch. In like manner he called him out, fought and wounded him until the plaster was reduced to the size of a 3-penny bit, when the colonel yet once more challenged him and ran him through the body. Then, calmly contemplating the corpse with an evil smile, he observed: "I now take off my plaster."

A MORNING GLORY.

ONCE upon a time, somewhere in Somebody's garden there grew a Morning Glory vine. Nobody knew how it came there, for no one had planted it, but it was a pretty little thing, with green hearts for leaves and cunning little palegreen curls here and there upon its fuzzy stem.

She wanted to get off of the ground where she had been all her short life, so she crept slowly along to find something to take hold of that she might climb high up into the bright sunlight. She put out her tender tendrils and felt carefully along, for she was blind poor little thing, and could not see where she was going.

As she reached out she felt something hard. "Ah, perhaps this is something high," thought Morning Glory, so she crawled up the side quite to the top, but she was not high at all—not much higher than on the ground—for it was only a stone shat she had found; so she quietly crept down the other side, and lay there quite discouraged.

There was an old man who used to take care of Somebody's garden, and he saw this plant growing there and groping about for a support, so he fastened a string from a peg stuck into the ground up to Somebody's window sill, and then he quite forgot all about it.

The next morning the Morning Glory felt more cheerful, and she started upon her search again. She had not far to go this time, because the kind old man had fastened the peg very near to where she lay; so she reached about with caution to avoid another stone, and took hold of the string.

The poor, sightless little thing did not know that the old man had put it there for her, but somehow she felt that it would lead her where she wished to go—up toward the beautiful sky and the great golden sun.

So she climbed along the string, slowly at first, then faster each day as she began to know the way, until like Jack's beanstalk, she had reached the window-sill.

Now, somebody, the person who owned the garden, was ill; so ill that he had to stay always in his room with an ugly black bandage over his eyes, and the doctors feared that he might never see again.

He was very unhappy, and was often—oh, so very!—cross; and the servants quite feared him when he spoke to them in a harsh and authoritative voice.

He had no relatives, and he lived quite alone in his great house, with many people to wait upon him and with ever so much money to buy things to make him happy. But the things that one buys do not always make one happy, and he was terribly wretched in his big, fine house.

One morning he groped his way to the open window and put his hand out upon the side of the frame, and he felt a little sharp nail. Now, if he had been gentle the nail would not have hurt him, for it was a harmless little thing; but he made a rough, impatient movement, and it caught his finger and brused it a little.

This made Somebody very angry, and he said some very unpleasant things about the person who dared to put a nail outside his window, and he felt about, very cautiously this time, to find the nail once more, that he might tear it out.

So he moved his hand slowly along upon the sill, and the Morning Glory was reaching her little hand about there at the same time, and their two hands met.

One did not look at all like a hand, but it was one just the same, and the little green hand grasped the great white one and they seemed to know and to understand each other at once, for the little green hand said to the large white one very tenderly, "Oh! so you are blind, too! I am so sorry!"

The great hand did not try to find the nail after that; it just touched the Morning Glory with a soft caress and two great drops fell upon her leaves. They felt strangely and not at all like the cool rain drops which sometimes watered the Morning Glory, and something told her that these drops were tears.

Now, after this, these two—Somebody and the Morning Glory—grew to love each other very dearly, and each day they would feel about for one another, and the dainty Morning Glory would nestle against his bearded cheek, and Somebody would pet her and stroke her leaves very gently.

And the cheerful hopefulness of the little green plant helped Somebody to be a little bit hopeful, too. You see it was harder for him, for he had not always been blind, while she had never seen, and was so used to it that now she hardly minded it at all.

One morning the Morning Glory brought her friend a surprise. She had kept it a secret all the while, and now she proudly put a great beautiful pink blossom into his hand. He could not see that it was pink, but he felt that it was lovely, and he kissed the pretty flower and murmured, "You little beauty," and that made the Morning Glory very happy, for all mothers dearly love to have their babies admired, you know.

And the next morning Somebody had a surprise for the Morning Glory. That was a secret too. No one knew it yet but the doctor, and Somebody drew the little Morning Glory close to his lips and whispered it into her ear. Then the little green hand twined about the great white one and this is what it said: "I am so glad that you are not going to be blind any more." And Somebody understood it, and the Morning Glory again felt two great warm drops which she knew to be tears, but they were not bitter, like the first ones; they were very sweet, because they were tears of joy.

After this Somebody went away and was gone a long time. The weeks passed and he did not return, and the little Morning Glory was very sad; she felt hurt that he had left her so suddenly and with no word of adieu.

Everything was in a state of great bustle and preparation all over the place. Little Morning Glory could hear them hammering and running about, and she felt that something was going to happen. Once she caught the word "bride," and something told her what it all meant, and a little jealous pain went through her heart, for she had once overheard the housemaid telling the cook that all men were fickle, and that when they were away from one they never thought of one at all, and were taken up with whoever was nearest them, and the cook had agreed fully with all that the housemaid had said, and the cook knew men if any one did, she said.

So little Morning Glory hung her leaves in sadness and quite forgot to feel proud of her pretty pink babies—for there were a great many of them now.

Once she felt something tug at her roots and a rough hand grasped her; then a kind voice said: "Don't touch that; master loved the little vine, and it must be left as it is." Oh! how relieved little Morning Glory felt at these words. She reached out and tried to touch the speaker, but the maid hurried away and never saw the little green hands at all.

Soon the nights began to be chilly, and one by one her babies left her and fluttered to the ground, and she herself grew pale and felt very weak and ill, and she feared that she was going to die. How she wished that Somebody would come back; she feared he would be too late.

One morning she heard the door open and Somebody again stood there; there was some one with him now, a beautiful lady, and he held her in his arms and called her "Sweetheart." In his new happiness he had quite forgotten his little friend; and Morning Glory's heart ached as she remembered what the maid had told the cook.

Just then Somebody looked out and saw poor little Morning Glory with her leaves all faded and brown, and he reproached himself because he had not thought of her before.

"Here, dearest," he said to the lady, "this is the little friend that I told you of," and he laid the withered little stem in the lady's delicate hand.

A glad thrill ran through the Morning Glory and she dropped 60 tiny seeds into the soft open palm; then as the wind swept around the corner a sudden shudder seized her, and little Morning Glory was dead.

"See! my pet," said Somebody, pointing to the little black seeds, "that means good luck; it is her gift to the bride."

And the beautiful lady smiled, and she put the seeds in a little box, saying, "Next year we will have another Morning Glory vine there just like the old one."

"No," said Somebody, "never one quite like that, for that one was like a little friend; it really seemed to understand me. But, then, I don't need any one to understand me now, for I have you," and again the lady was folded in loving embrace and Somebody kissed her softly.—Chicago Times.

NO POLES IN CHINA.

Why Telegraph Wires in the Flowery Kingdom Go Underground.

There are no telegraph poles in China. Not because there are no telegraph lines, nor yet because there are not wood suitable for poles. Strangely enough, says the St. Louis Globe Democrat, the reason is purely religious. The Chinese worship their dead fathers and grandfathers, and in regard the resting place of their remains as so sacred that they deem it a sacrifice to allow a shadow to be cast upon their graves.

When the linemen of the first Chinese telegraph companies began operations they were greatly embarrassed in their operations by crowds of inhabitants who followed them about and with the most frightful blasphemies, cut down the poles as fast as they were erected. For some time no explanation could be obtained, but at last the working parties discovered that in more thickly settled districts of the Celestial Empire graves were everywhere to be found, and scarcely a pole could be erected anywhere but that at some time of the day it cast a shadow on a grave.

The difficulty was insuperable, and the Chinese government, anxious as it was to render assistance, stood powerless. So all the wires went underground and it is said the system proved perfectly efficient.

The Oppression of Chinese Women.

The Chinese mother is not educated. Few of them can read. It is common for Chinamen to have two or three wives. When you go to his house you do not see his wife. She does not come to the table. She is a servant. A friend of mine was invited to a Chinese dinner in Shanghai. He was greeted by four Chinamen and pretty, printed and silly women who begged presents of rings and breastpins from the guests—teased them for trinkets. The next day he spoke of meeting some Chinese gentlemen and their wives.

"Wives!" exclaimed his friend. "No; they were not wives. They were playthings—polygamous wives, taken into their own families with the consent of the downtrodden wife. Such mormonism is customary among rich Chinese in Shanghai, Canton and Hankow and other large Chinese cities."

There is no caste now in China except the caste caused by small feet. So every woman who pretends to respectability must deform her feet. The fashionable husband countenances the deformity because it makes his wife too helpless to walk "and it keeps her out of mischief."—New York Sun.

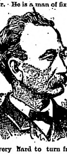
A DARING ADVENTURER.

Capt. William A. Andrews, already famous for his daring adventures in small boats on the stormy Atlantic, has again set sail on a novel and interesting voyage.

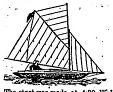
He crossed the ocean twice before, first in the "Nautilus," when he was accompanied by his brother, who has since died, and again in the "Mermaid," both of these trips being made to Land's End, England. A few years ago he again attempted the passage in a boat called the "Dark Secret," but, after battling with contrary winds, high seas and terrific storms, he reluctantly consented to give up his efforts after a struggle of sixty-two days, and returned to America on a bark which kindly consented to take him and his sea-beaten boat back to New York.



The captain is a very interesting character. He is a man of fixed purposes, very hard to turn from the object which he has in view. He has made the subject of small boat sailing such a study that he is prepared to meet every argument against the risks which spring to the minds of his critics, yet the New York Herald put the case in a nutshell when it said: "The fact that Capt. Andrews can cross the ocean in a cockle shell merely proves that small boats are safe when a Capt. Andrews sails them. Amateurs should remember this when the wind begins to sing."

The captain himself says that "half the people who are drowned lose their lives because they do not realize that a boat cannot sink. An iron vessel might, or a ship loaded with a heavy cargo, but a row boat, sail boat or ordinary wooden vessel may capsize, but will, nevertheless, float. The passengers on the great ocean steamers run some risk when they go to sea, but all around the deck they see wooden boats hung up on which they are taught to depend for their lives if the big steamer goes down. These boats are often crushed against the great vessel or are capsized in lowering. I am alone in a wooden boat entirely under my own control, and, in my opinion, far safer than others." An ingenious theory but hardly a fair one.

Capt. Andrews is by trade a piano maker. He built the "Sapolio" at Atlantic City in the presence of hundreds of people, and exhibited it on the Long Pier for several weeks. It is a canvas folding boat lined with half inch cedar and decked over with the same. In order to fold it there must be three long canvas hinges from stem to stern, and the daring Captain writes by an incoming ship—when he is hundreds of miles from shore—that he finds the "Sapolio' in a sea-way is a scrubber but very leaky." No better proof of his coolness and pluck could be given.



The start was made at 4:30 Wednesday, July 20th, the destination being Palos, Spain. Capt. Andrews has instructions to scour the seas until he discovers that port and the starting point of Columbus. It is believed that, sailing in a fourteen foot boat without so much as a hot cup of coffe to vary his diet of biscuits and canned goods, he will, single-handed, eclipse the record of that Spanish-Italian adventurer who almost failed to cross the great ocean, with three ships, 150 men, after securing the Queen's jewels to pawn and having the blessing of the church thrown in. This Columbus is sailing in a boat which had never been in the water until the hour when he started on his 4,000 mile trip. He had been spoken in mid-ocean several times, scorning all assistance and confident of ultimate success.

His effort should interest all Americans as a test of pluck, endurance and good seamanship. That it is not a foolhardy affair is proved by his former success and by the notable trip in which he battled for sixty-two days without reaching the other side. Thousands of people saw the start, his presence at different points on the ocean has been noted by large numbers of vessels, and his landing on the other side will no doubt be made a matter of public demonstation and rejoicing. As he sailed from the pier he said, "In sixty days I will be in Spain," and up to the last reports he had made better time than he anticipated. Every day during the voyage a bottle will be thrown overboard noting the location and other information about the trip.

If Captain Andrews succeeds in reaching Spain and joining in the October celebrations which will be held in honor of the discovery of America, he will then return in one of the great steamers and arrange to exhibit his boat and the log which he writes up day by day, at the World's Fair in Chicago, where he will be one of the features of the magnificent display which the manufacturers of Sapolio are now perfecting. The assurance, we might almost say the impudence, of these aggressive manufacturers in securing a Columbus of their own is probably without precedent in advertising.

MULES BORN AGAIN.

After Four Years Underground the Daylight Makes Them Blink.

"I saw an odd sight in Luzerne county a few days ago," said E. B. Coxe, of Scranton, to C. L. Magee, of Pittsburg, and one or two others in the Fifth Avenue hotel, New York, the other night. "Six mules that had for four years hauled cars in the lower workings of a colliery to and from the foot of the shaft had to be brought up owing to the flooding of the mine on account of fire. The mules in all that time had seen no light stronger than the flicker of the little Davy lamps the miners carried. The sun was in the zenith when they reached the surface, and the atmosphere was as clear as crystal.

"The astonished creatures closed their eyes to shut out the flood of strong light, and kept them tightly closed while they were driven to a pasture lot a mile distant and turned loose. There they stood, trembling as if afraid something evil was about to befall them. Presently they half opened their eyes and peeped around in actual open-mouthed amazement. It was clear that they couldn't understand it. When they became accustomed to the sunlight they elevated their heads and slowly swept culm piles, mountains, sky and horizon again and again. Toward sundown they broke into a chorus of joyous brays, the like of which was never heard from mules before.

"After a quarter of an hour of that music they took to kicking, jumping, whirling about like teetotums and rolling on the sod as though they had gone mad. For four days they spent their time staring at the new sights of field and sky, refusing food and water, not even nibbling at the grass and not as much as blinking an eye in sleep. After they had looked enough their appetite and thirst returned, and they became common everyday mules, but while they were sky-gazing hundreds of people went to see their didos."

Faithful Over A Few Things.

Every student of history remembers Captain Perry's despatch after the Battle of Lake Erie, a sentence terse and yet glowing: "We have met the enemy, and they are ours."

Every one remembers the great and insignificant result of the flight, but few, perhaps, have heard of one humble worker who served his country just as truly there as if he had been on deck amid shot and shell, earning glory as well as the reward of a good conscience.

Just as the ships were going into action the mate of the Lawrence said to Wilson Mays, who was ill and unfit for service:

"Go below, Mays: you are too weak to be here."

"I can do something, sir," was the stout reply.

"What can you do?"

"I can sound the pump, sir, and let a strong man go to the guns."

Then he sat down by the pump, and thus released for active service a man who had more muscle; and when the fight was over, there he was found, with a bullet through the heart.

Doctor Freeman at Yale.

The late Professor Freeman, the English historian, had something of Carlyle's disregard for the ordinary rules of courtesy. It is said that some years ago, when he visited Yale, one of the college professors addressed him as Doctor Freeman.

"Doctor! Why doctor?" returned the historian, who, by the way, had received the degree of Doctor of Civil Laws at Oxford, and that of Doctor of Laws at Cambridge.

"I thought you were entitled to the doctorate," was the reply.

"Suppose I am? So is Gladstone. Would you 'doctor' him?"

"No, sir," said the Yale man, somewhat disgusted. "I certainly would not apply so insignificant a title to a man of Gladstone's eminence."

Oatmeal and Oranges.

No sort of food is better for the complexion than oatmeal and oranges. The finest complexions in the world are those of the Italian and Spanish ladies, who live largely on coarse-grained food and fruit like the orange and banana. It is said that the fact is becoming appreciated, and that some ladies, to acquire and preserve a good complexion, are living almost entirely on oranges. Half a dozen for breakfast, with a cup of coffee; a dozen for lunch, with a glass of milk and a saucer of oatmeal, and a dozen more for supper, with a crust of bread and a sip of tea, may not be high living in the proper sense of the word, but such a course of diet will bring a complexion of peach and ivory which will drive almost any belle out of her head with envy.

Fond of Travel.

The passion for travel, is very common in these days, is satirized in the story of a young woman, who came bounding joyfully into the presence of a friend, and exclaimed:

"Oh Jenny, Jenny! I'm so glad—I am so happy!"

"Why what has happened?"

"Just think—we are going to Paris—Paris!"

"Dear me! How delightful!"

"Yes—papa's been bitten by a mad dog, and has got to go to be treated by M. Pasteur, and I'm going with him to look after him! Oh, I'm so glad!"

He Merely Wondered.

"I see by that sign," said the man in the chair to the barber, "that you hone razors for private use."

"Yes, sir. Have you something that you want honing?"

"No; but I was wondering why you didn't hone the razors you use on your customers."

The seed is planted when you feel "run-down" and "used-up." Malarial, typhoid or bilious fevers spring from it—all sorts of diseases. Don't take any risk. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery invigorates the system and repels disease. It starts the torpid liver into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, and restores health and vigor. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, and builds up flesh and strength. For all diseases that come from a disordered liver and impure blood, skin, scalp and scrofulous affections, it's the only remedy that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure in every case, you have your money back.
You pay only for the good you get.

The worst cases yield to the mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. That's why the proprietors can, and do, promise to pay $500 for a case of Catarrh in the Head which they cannot cure.

"August Flower"
"I am ready to testify under oath that if it had not been for August Flower I should have died before this. Eight years ago I was taken sick, and suffered as no one but a dyspeptic can. I employed three of our best doctors and received no benefit. They told me that I had heart, kidney, and liver trouble. Everything I ate distressed me so that I had to throw it up. August Flower cured me. There is no medicine equal to it." LORENZO F. SLEEPER, Appleton, Maine.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

Acting Secretary Chandler decided in favor of Frederick C. Feigel, of Rapid City, S. D. This decision is based on the new law allowing parties to enter land which is chiefly valuable for building stone under the placer mining laws.

Assistant Secretary Crounse, of the treasury department, says he expects to relinquish charge of his office soon, when he will go to Nebraska to enter the gubernatorial campaign. His resignation was sent to Secretary Foster and by him transmitted to the president.

Unofficial advices received at the department of state from Venezuela were that Gen. Crespo has finally triumphed and the dictatorship has been overthrown. Gen. Crespo has, it is said, been called to Caracas to assume the reins of government and there is now a bright prospect for the restoration of peace.

PERSONAL MENTION.

John Greenleaf Whittier, the Quaker poet, dies at his home in Amesbury, Mass., aged eighty-four years.

The tallest man living today is Chung-tu-Ling, the Chinese giant, whose height is seven feet three inches.

It is said of Dr. Taylor, the Methodist bishop of Africa, that the sun never found him in bed.

Miss Nancy S. Foster has given $50,000 to build a hall for women at the Chicago university.

Rev. Samuel Chapman says: "There is no such thing as fresh air in Jerusalem. It is the sacredest, saddest and just about the dirtiest city in the world."

Daniel Dougherty, the silver-tongued orator, died at his residence in Philadelphia. His death was due to nervous prostration, which affected his brain. He has been ill for several months past, but was thought to be recovering by the attending physician. A change for the worst came the other night and he sank until death resulted. Only the immediate members of the family were present, including his son D. Webster Dougherty, the well-known attorney.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

The whaleback Charles W. Wetmore is totally wrecked on the Oregon coast.

Nine business houses were destroyed by fire at Patoka, Ind. Loss, $2,000; insurance, $1,000.

The Rev. David M. Cooper, a Presbyterian minister at Detroit, had a desperate battle with a burglar armed with a revolver. The burglar was finally overpowered.

George Willis, a farmer near Binghamton, N. Y., murdered his wife, of whom he was jealous, shot Wallace Oliver in the leg and hanged himself.

At Alexandria, La., Pompey Corley shot Pat Williams and the latter's small child during a quarrel. The murderer was jailed.

Alpine, Tex., was nearly swept away by a terrible cloud-burst. Water ran all over the city, being from three to four feet deep. No lives were lost.

Near Cranston, N. Y., the engine, tender and two baggage cars of a West Shore train went into the Hudson river. The engineer fireman and baggage master were drowned.

Dr. G. W. Philips accidentally shot himself at Butte, Mont., while cleaning a 38-caliber revolver. The ball passed through the abdomen, lodged in the hip and was extracted. His condition is critical.

A fire broke out at Dipperz, a village near Cassel, and spread so rapidly that all efforts to check it proved unavailing. When it burned itself out fifty houses had been destroyed.

Andrew A. J. S. Rice formerly a prominent construction official in the Cincinnati Gas Company, fell from the platform of a train coming from the labor picnic and had both legs cut off. He died in a few hours.

There was a powder explosion at Kenners Creek, Fayette county W. Va., in which two men were killed and six were wounded. Cannot get particulars as the telegraph offices are closed in this part of the territory.

SINS AND SINNERS.

C. B. Turner shot and instantly killed James W. Gilmore at Atchison, Kan. Turner admits that he killed Gilmore, but claims that it was in self-defense. The men came from Keokuk, Iowa, two months ago.

Three negroes named Jack Walker, Bill Armor and John Ransom were lynched nine miles east of Paris, Texas. It is thought that the lynching was the result of a quarrel between negroes and whites, which occurred several weeks ago, when Jeff Ashley, a white man, killed a negro named Jarrett Barnet. Great excitement prevails.

One hundred and thirty-five prisoners have been released at Wallace, Idaho. Indictments were found against everyone of them by the United States grand jury, now in session at Cœur d'Alene city, and it is deemed best not to bring them to trial now but keep the indictment hanging over them as an incentive of good behavior.

A lone bandit held up a Pacific express messenger on the Wichita & Little Rock express on the Missouri Pacific railway. The bandit intimidated the messenger by pointing two revolvers at him and finally succeeded in binding and gagging him with rope. He then extracted the key of the express company's safe from the messenger's pocket, and opening the safe secured several thousand dollars. When the train reached Sheffield, a suburb some distance out of the city, the robber disembarked off with his booty.

The grand jury found true bills at Pittsburg against Alexander Bergmann, the anarchist, who attempted to assassinate H. C. Frick. Six indictments were returned, three for entering a building with felonious intent and one each for felonious shooting, aggravated assault and battery, and carrying concealed weapons. If convicted upon all the counts and given the extreme penalty of the law, he will undergo an imprisonment of 30 years.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Three million dollars in gold buried in a convent in the city of Mexico at the time of the war with France has just been found and appropriated by the government.

It is again rumored that Premier Abbott of Canada will soon resign owing to ill health, and that he will be succeeded by Sir John Thompson, minister of justice.

Juli is German, the Hungarian Socialist who disappeared from public life ten years ago, arrived at Victoria, B. C., from Japan. He has just escaped from Siberia.

The United States mackerel schooner Hattie Maud was seized by the Canadian cruiser Curley, while fishing within the three-mile limit at the Bay of Fundy.

Prof. Gouter, of Grieswal University, while ascending the Ougspitz in the Swiss Alps, was overtaken by a snow storm and died of exposure. His guide narrowly escaped a similar fate.

A banquet was tendered in the Crystal palace, London, by seventy Nonconformists to Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage. During the entertainment the guest of the evening was presented with a handsome gold watch.

Mr. Gladstone has written a letter to a correspondent stating that he did not offer Mr. Labouchere an office because of certain incidents connected with Mr. Labouchere's position and occupation. Mr. Gladstone explains that Mr. Labouchere's action in voting against the royal grants was no bar to his holding office.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

President Harrison's letter of acceptance is given to the press.

J. E. Rickards is nominated for governor of Montana by the Republicans.

The Fifth Texas district convention has renominated Congressman J. W. Bailey.

Ex-Secretary Blaine writes a strong Republican campaign letter.

William Sharon resigns as Nevada's member of the Republican national committee because his silver views won't permit him to continue in that capacity.

Republicans of Indiana have begun a suit in the state supreme court to testify the validity of the Democratic gerrymander bill.

Senator Roger Q. Mills states that his health is very much impaired and that he will be compelled to retire from his state canvass in Texas in a few days.

It is claimed that the differences between the Democratic factions in New York have been patched up, and that Hill will make campaign speeches for Cleveland.

THE TOILERS.

In the Labor day sports at Tacoma, Wash., Katie Fox, a charming young miss aged seventeen, ran 100 yards in the girl's race in a fraction less than 12 seconds. The time was very fast. Labor day exercises were the most successful ever held here. The parade was two miles long.

The miners at Coal Creek and Oliver Springs are getting aggressive again. Firing has been going on at the pickets at both places. Additional troops from Nashville and Harriman are now on their way to the mines. All union miners have quit work, which causes surprise as their busiest season is approaching.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Browning has signed with St. Louis.

Cincinnati and Boston will exchange Pitchers Mullane and Stivetts.

The bicycle boys will begin a season of long runs as soon as the races are over.

Pierre Lorrillard has engaged Jockey Simms to ride for him next season at a salary of $12,000.

The veteran third baseman, W. W. Carpenter, is now punching berth checks on a Pullman sleeper.

Jim Wolf has been released by St. Louis.

Pueblo, Col., is overrun with idle pugilists.

Burke, New York's second baseman, is rising in the world. He was recently highly complimented by Manager Powers.

The Washington club has released Manager Arthur Irwin, and Dan Richardson will hereafter manage and captain its team.

Nancy Hanks trots a mile in 2:07 at the Minnesota state fair, thus lowering her own and the world's record on a regulation track.

Poor old Barniel From manager he tumbled to the humble position of umpire and his former serfs are now cussing his umpiring. An exchange says of a recent game: "Manager Hanlon and the players of the Baltimores are very much displeased with the umpiring of Barnie in the three Baltimore-St. Louis games just played. In the last game of the series Hanlon charged Barnie with unfairness and a desire to get even with the Baltimores for dismissing him. Two fines of $25 were imposed, and as Hanlon continued his comment, Umpire Barnie ordered Hanlon to leave the field. The manager retired to the right field entrance, but did not leave. President Von der Ahe was very much excited over Barnie's decisions."

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

H. C. Garvin has been appointed general agent of the passenger and freight departments of the Winona & St. Peter and Dakota Central roads with headquarters at Winona.

Cable advices received at the Northern Pacific general offices say that the steamer Victoria left the port of Yokohama, Japan, on the 6th inst with a cargo of about 2,000,000 pounds of silk, tea and merchandise. The Victoria is expected to arrive at the port of Tacoma on the 20 inst.

The Northern Pacific Railroad Company has issued the following circular to officers and employes in charge of Northern Pacific property: "You are hereby directed to carefully examine all buildings, yards, etc., under your supervision and see that immediate and proper measures are taken to have them in a thoroughly cleanly and healthy condition. There should be no accumulations of any kind permitted. All vaults, water closets, catchbasins sinks etc., must be thoroughly disinfected, and no accumulation of filth of any kind must be permitted upon the company's premises."

GENERAL.

New York seems certain to have a cholera epidemic.

Ground is broken for the great drainage canal from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico.

Three car loads of immigrants from Hamburg, Germany, are allowed to come into the United States at Detroit by way of Canada.

The attempt to reopen the Andover case by instituting a new trial of the charges against Prof. Smith has ended in the dismissal of the case by the board of visitors.

Two cases of smallpox were reported to the New York police from two thickly populated tenements within a short distance from each other. The patients were removed and the places fumigated.

By a process of reasoning at the meeting of the senate coal investigating committee at New York, President McLeod, of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, gave figures to prove that the company is losing 25 cents per ton on all the coal it now ships to Jersey City. He claimed coal had been advanced only 37½ cents per ton over the price of other years.

Charles W. Lewis, of St. Louis, a graduate of Dr. Keely's institute at Dwight, shot at and attempted to kill his wife, baby, and sister-in-law, and then blew out his own brains. His poor aim resulted in his sister-in-law, Mary McGuiggan, being only shot in the hand, his wife in the thigh, and his baby escaped unscathed. Lewis had been deranged since he took the cure.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

A Democratic weekly has been started at Spring Valley.

Slight frosts are reported from various portions of the state.

R Vaaler, of Granite Falls, made an assignment to George Lien for the benefit of creditors. There is not sufficient assets to pay creditors in full.

The wife of a man named Sveboda at Jackson attempted suicide by jumping from the bridge into the Des Moines river, but her cries for help were heard, and she was rescued. His first wife hung herself about one year ago.

While crossing the Northern Minnesota railway track in a buggy four miles from Pine Island Mrs. R. W. Cornwell and Mrs. Libbie Bennett were run over by a train and seriously if not fatally injured.

While riding in a hack at Mankato, Miss Caddie Lee received a severe wound on the temple from a runaway horse that jumped into the hack. The injury may result fatally.

Two boys, aged 9 and 10 years, sons of Fred Hahn, of Belgrade, were playing with a shotgun, when it was discharged, instantly killing the elder one, the charge entering his right side.

A train struck a carriage, in which were Mrs. Sybbie Bennett and Mrs. Rick Cornwell, near Oronoco, severely injuring both. Mrs. Bennett was knocked unconscious and was taken to the Rochester hospital.

The infant daughter of Charles Harrer, of Le Sueur, was saved from drowning in a barrel of water by a shepherd dog. The animal placed its paws on the side of the barrel, and held the child up in his mouth until help came.

Mary Kelsy, of Fulda, eloped with a man named Simon Dunbar. The sheriff of Pipestone county arrested the parties and brought them back to Fulda. Dunbar is charged with entering a dwelling house in the night and stealing clothing of the value of $100.

John Barrett and Paul Mollocoski, both farmers of Benton county, quarreled over a fence dividing their lands, and came to blows. Barrett seized a pitchfork which he ran into the side of his adversary, piercing his right lung and inflicting probably fatal injuries. Barrett is in jail.

Assignee F. W. Paine, of the Iron Bay Company, of Duluth, has been authorized by the court to sell the property of the company for $60,000 to O. H. Simmonds. Simmonds is president of the Phœnix Manufacturing Company, recently incorporated to operate a big plant at West Duluth.

Several hunters had a narrow escape from committing manslaughter near Little Falls. In firing at a covey of chickens they hit an eleven-year-old son of Barrone Dussette. The shot took effect about his face and body, but fortunately did not penetrate deep. The boy will recover.

A Crookston dispatch says: The chairman of the Democratic county committee has issued a call for a county convention Wednesday, Sept. 28, to nominate a full county ticket. Republicans meet Sept. 21. Fusion is talked of, but it is not probable as the Populists have already a ticket in the field.

John G. Nelson and Jacob Bean filed suit in the district court at Duluth to recover $100,000 from the Northern Pacific road and Central trust company, of New York, for failure to comply with the terms of a contract for the sale of 113,000 acres of land in St. Louis and Lake counties. The land is said to contain valuable iron ore.

The G. A. R. post of Mankato has raised $1,000 for a memorial fountain, which will be there soon. This takes the place of a monument and is a beauty. The bronze soldier at the top standing at parade rest is a fit emblem of the cause it represents. It will be dedicated next month, and will be placed in Lincoln park.

C. H. Klemer's woolen mills at Faribault which were destroyed by fire were insured for $5,000 on buildings and $8,000 on machinery and stock, boilers, engine, etc. The loss falls heavily on Mr. Klemer as it was only insured for about one-half its value. The mills have been partially destroyed by fire three times before and the belief prevails that the fire was set by some one.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The North Dakota Independent electors resign.

The North Dakota Democratic convention indorses the entire Independent state ticket.

Devil's lake gets the next Chautauqua assembly. That city offered $7,000 in land, fronting on the lake and purchased 5,000 shares of Chautauqua stock.

The first wheat, 100 bushels, of this season's crop was delivered at the Northern elevator at Neche, the other day. It graded No 1.

Theo. Jensen fell from a wagon load of straw while threshing on a farm two miles west of Ellendale and was run over by a wagon and killed.

The safe of the Gull River Lumber Company, at Jamestown, was blown open by burglars, but they secured only about $20. The city is being terrorized by a gang of desperadoes, and there is talk of organizing a vigilance committee.

The North Dakota Printing Company incorporated at Mandan. The object is to publish a weekly paper called the Independent, the specific policy of which will be to fight Gov. Burke and to support independent candidates for the legislature. The president and secretary are Democrats.

A Grand Forks Special says: The building committee of the Northwestern Protective association has closed a contract with the Heidenrich company, Chicago, for the erection of a mammoth storage elevator on the site donated by the Superior Land company, at Superior. The contract price is $107,000; work to be commenced within thirty days and completed sixty days thereafter.

IOWA.

Charley Anderson was killed in a runaway near Pilotmund, at which place he died after a few hours.

C. L. Lapman, secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company, who lives south of Marshalltown, was struck by lightning and instantly killed.

There is an epidemic of scarlet fever at Arney, between Liscombe and Albion, and the disease has invaded this town. Twenty cases have developed in two days.

The grasshoppers have invaded Iowa, coming over the river from Illinois. Cornstalks, apple trees and growing vegetables are being destroyed by the acre. The damage will be enormous.

James Cochoran, formerly of Blair, committed suicide at Missouli Valley by shooting himself through the head with a 38 caliber revolver. Domestic trouble brought on by excessive drinking was the cause.

Henry Sult and son of Gilman have entered the Pasteur Institute at Chicago for treatment for rabies. They were bitten by a mad dog some time ago and lately showed signs of having hydrophobia.

Mrs. Henry Bartels was killed at Postville. She was digging potatoes between two tracks and stepped upon one to get away from a train approaching on the other. She stepped in front of a train approaching from the other way, and was killed, her neck being broken.

Nels Rye, aged 20, was shot accidentally and instantly killed, on a farm near Northwood, by Ed Eschine, aged 12. The boys were playing with a rifle which went off in the hands of Eschine, the bullet passing through Rye's heart, killing him instantly.

Tom Hallinger, of Bodger, was brought from Chicago and jailed. He is accused of forgeries extending back five years. He systematically worked several banks to pay previous forgeries. The largest haul was $900.

J. P. Sullivan, a 12-year-old lad was caught by a party of toughs at Dubuque and forced to consume a lot of whisky and beer from which he has not yet recovered. His father has begun suit against Ed McDonald, M. Hennesy and J. Anderson for $1,000 damages.

Tansy Kills Moths.

Good Housekeeping: There is one sure preventive of moths and one which I have never seen mentioned. It is tansy. Sprinkle the leaves freely about your woolens and furs and the moths will never get into them. When I was a child my grandmother used to send me to the tansy patch on the hill with a large basket in which to bring home plenty of tansy leaves. In the garret were five large hair-covered trunks, studded with brass nails, filled with her best blankets, coverlets, flannel sheets, etc. Some of them had never been used until my grandmother had grandchildren, nothwithstanding she always had a large family to provide beds for. But the supply of her bedding, linen and other household articles was in excess of the demand.

The large amount of bedding, tablecloths, towels and linen sheets were spun and woven in her father's house, and the girls were given full liberty to take all they were willing to make up for themselves. That was part of their marriage dower. I can well remember how grandmother took the extra supply out of those trunks in the garret once a year, hung the articles on a clothes line down in the orchard, beat them and then put them away again to lie amid the tansy leaves until another year. The fourth generation of her posterity are sleeping under those same blankets and blue and white coverlets now, which proves the efficiency of that remedy of the olden time.

The Influenza.

London Truth: The influenza microbe seems either to have gone to sleep or to have departed from our shores. Let us hope the latter. I came across, the other day, this passage in "Wraxall's Memoirs"—he is speaking of the death of Lord Rockingham in 1782: "A decay to which was added a slow fever, or, as it was denominated influenza, a species of epidemic distemper, by which London was visited at that season, had for some time undermined his strength, without appearing to menace his immediate dissolution."

And to this is appended the following note: "This disease had long been known to physicians, but, after the occurrence of a widespread epidemic, it was given the name which it had already obtained in Italy, from the belief that it was due to the influence of the stars.

We Got the Idea From Pompeii.

Few people are aware that we are indebted to the people of old Pompeii, who were all smothered in the first century of the Christian era, for one of the most important industries of our time—the canning business. Years ago, when the first excavations were made in that buried city, an American came upon several jars of figs. When they were opened the contents were found to be as fresh and palatable as when they were put up eighteen centuries before. Investigations instituted upon the spot proved that the fruit had been put into jars in a highly heated state, and that an aperature for the escape of steam had been left in the lid, which, when it had served its purpose, was sealed over with wax. Yankee ingenuity caught the idea at once and the next year canning factories were erected all over the United States.

Preserving the Rose's Perfume.

Philadelphia Ledger: To those who are weary of the "pot-pourri" and the rose-jar, and who are not satisfied with merely strewing their bureau drawers with fresh rose leaves to dry therein, the rose beads, either to wear at the wrist or to keep in one's work-basket, are very satisfying. Pound the fresh rose leaves to a pulp, and form the pulp into balls; run an oiled bonnet pin through a number of them to keep them propped up for drying, and fasten the bonnet pin sideways in a sunny window. They will grow black in drying, but preserve their rich fragrance. The Turks press them to dry into cut molds, which make an imprint like craven heads on these gummy, delicious balls.

Effect of Drought Upon Wagons.

Lewiston Journal: One aspect of the recent drought was the unusual amount of work it made for the carriagemakers. Such a rattling of tires was never heard before. "We're getting 'tired' to death," said a carriagemaker. "Everbody's wagon is dropping to pieces, and they're all hurrying to the shops to be tightened up." Surely it's an ill wind that blows nobody good, and even a drought makes business for somebody.

A WOMAN'S BLOOD.

Men Touched It for Luck--A Queer Story.

Just where Powell street breaks into Market, is an octagonal cement block set in a sidewalk of cement squares. Any afternoon you will see well-dressed men come up to it, make a cross upon its surface with their cane. After you have seen this mummery repeated a half a dozen times you are apt to ask the reason why.

A post once stood where that octagon block of cement now is. Against this post were dashed out the brains of one of the handsomest women of her day. Her horse ran away with and slipped in turning the corner. She had a red birthmark between the index finger and the thumb of her left hand. This she said was her luck mark, and she surely won marvelously on the stock exchange. Her admirers used to touch the—mark with their lips, if permitted—to bring fortune to them.

When they picked her up, dead, the spot was gone from between her finger and thumb. On the post was a stain of blood—just the shape of the mark, 'twas said.

Men who loved the woman went to that spot, touched the red stain and crossed themselves after that in memory of her.

From this has grown the foolish custom of drawing a cross for luck on the octagon cement block which marks the spot where the post stood.

"Ah! there was a woman!" sighed the man who told the tale.—From the San Francisco Examiner.

Decision Affecting Actual Settlers on Omaha Lands Recently Opened.

Claims of Legal Filers Are Justly Given Preference Over Squatters.

ASHLAND, Wis., Special, Aug. 13.—A decision was received at the United States land office here to-day which is of the utmost possible importance to homesteaders and settlers on the Omaha land grant recently thrown open to settlement. The decision is upon the ground of priory rights of parties who settled upon the land prior to Nov. 2, 1891, at which time it was thrown open for settlement. The case in question was the contest of Jennie Jacobs vs. Charles White and Thomas J. McCoy. McCoy and White settled upon the land prior to its being thrown upon the market, and Jennie Jacobs was a filer, she having entered upon the land after 12 o'clock of Nov. 1. This is the first Omaha case to be decided by the general department, and its full force will be realized by all settlers. The department found Miss Jacobs was entitled to the land and the decision contains some very strong points, one of which is as follows:

"It is very clear from these regulations that no preferred rights to these lands could be obtained by reason of any settlement, residence or improvements thereon prior to Nov. 2, 1891. The old rule that while settlers upon reserved land acquire no rights as against the United States yet as against each other, he who is prior in point of time is prior in right, is expresely declared to be inapplicable to the lands in question, to which no settlement right was allowed to attach until after their final opening to settlement as prescribed, which, as has been seen, was November, 1891."

The homesteader or settler is spoken of very harshly by the commission, who says of White:

"On the other hand, it would seem that White belongs to that class of persons who invade the reservation in an effort to obtain precedence over other and law-abiding citizens, and who cannot be regarded acting in good faith."

Another very similar decision was received, and the opinion of the department in the matter is this:

The acts of settlement alleged by either of the parties prior to Nov. 2, 1891, need not be inquired into, as no priority of right will be recognized as having been instituted or acquired by settlement upon these lands prior to their formal opening to settlement. It will be proper to inquire as to acts of settlement on Nov. 2, 1891, prior to 9 o'clock a. m., when the applications of the respective parties were received.

This decision was a great surprise to all here and will necessitate the rehearing of fully one hundred cases which have been decided by the local officers, in which no evidence pertaining to who was first upon the land after 12 o'clock on the night of Nov. 1 was brought up.

ROYALTY AT THE FAIR.

Emperor William May Attend the Chicago Exposition.

BERLIN, Sept. 13.—William Steinway had an interview with Emperor William yesterday. Mr. Steinway referred to the social and political importance of the Germans in America. While loyal to the land of their adoption, he said, they still loved the fatherland, and they would greet the kaiser at Chicago with boundless enthusiasm. The emperor replied: "My going to Chicago is not at all impossible."

New, Clean Money.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—An order was issued a few days ago by Mr. Leech, director of the mint, to Col. Bosbyshel, superintendent of the Philadelphia mint, to have coined at once $100,000 in silver half dollars for use in Washington during the Grand Army encampment. This is a supplemental order to others given for a large amount of dimes and five-cent pieces to be minted for the same purpose. Treasurer Nebecker has ordered an unusually large amount of small notes, such as $1, $2 and $5 bills, also to be prepared by the bureau of engraving and printing. The purpose of having the large supply of new coins and treasury notes on hand is to enable the visitors in the city at the time of the Grand Army encampment to exchange the worn out and filthy small change and bills that they are likely to bring with them for something clean and handsome. Merchants and others of the city have been notified that they can get new money with which to make change while the veterans are here, so that the latter can take home with them some practical souvenir of the capital city. The idea is not only to benefit the veterans, but to get in a lot of worn out bills that in the natural course of circulation would not reach the treasury for months and years to come.

To Assist the Good Work.

FARGO, N. D., Special, Sept. 13.—Quite a number of ladies met here to-day and organized the Cass county auxiliary to the world's fair board. Mrs. W. B. Douglas was elected president. Mrs. S. G. Roberts, Mrs. L. G. Shinn, Mrs. Van Debogart, Mrs. L. W. Murr and Mrs. M. B. Sowls, vice-presidents; Mrs. C. C. Shengler, treasurer; Mrs. W. J. Clapp, secretary; Miss Lulu Jozies, corresponding secretary. The next meeting will be held here next Saturday and will be addressed by Mrs. A. A. White of Moorhead.

Robbed in His Own House.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Special, Sept. 13.—Capt. J. H. Steady late last night was smoking his pipe in the hallway of his residence, when two masked robbers entered the house, one by the front and the other by the back door, and held him up by pointing revolvers at his head, and relieved him of $27 which he had in his pocket. He was alone in the house, his wife being at a neighbor's. When the robbers entered he was so overcome by the shock that he fainted.

The Neshoto on the Rocks.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 13.—A dispatch to the owners, Robert Rhodes & Bros., says the steamer Neshoto is ashore in Lake Superior between Eagle Harbor and Keeweenaw point. She is reported full of water. She is the largest and best wooden boat on the lakes and is valued at $135,000. She is rated at A 1. It is not believed she will be a total loss.

Blaine Cannot Vote.

AUGUSTA, Me., Sept. 13.—The board of registration in this city held its final session to-day. Among those who failed to have heir names placed on the voting lists is James G. Blaine. The ex-premier of Harrison's administration therefore will be disqualified from voting at the state election on Monday.

FARGO, N. D., Special, Sept. 13.—At the Republican legislative convention for the Ninth district held here to-day John E. Haggart was renominated for the state senate. L. Newman and H. G. Southard were named as members of the house.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

Staten Islanders, Many Years Ago, Fired Quarantined Buildings.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The opposition of the fire island clam diggers to the landing here of the unfortunate passengers of the Normannia is a repetition of the attitude assumed by Staten Islanders many years ago. When the plague was threatened in 1858 the Staten Islanders organized a band called Sephoys. Its members were sworn to raze the quarantine buildings, which were then on the island near Tompkinsville. On Sept. 1, 1858, they carried their threat into execution. Masked and otherwise disguised they went, and, under the cover of night, scaled the quarantine enclosure and fired the buildings. It was a brutal act, for the hospital contained many inmates, some of whom were at the point of death. Many were carried out by rescuers. One person was burned to death. The New York militia was ordered to the scene, and the fifty-gun frigate Sabine went down the bay, anchored off Tompkinsville and threatened to bombard the town. Driven from Tompkinsville, the authorities removed the quarantine hospital to Segines point, the southwestern extremity of Staten island. Temporary hospitals and outbuildings were erected there, but before the place could be put in order the Sephoys again assumed their disguises, lighted their torches and fired that place also. The authorities the following year purchased the ship Falcon to serve as a hospital. They were actually driven from the land to the water to care for the unfortunates. The Falcon served the purposes fairly well until 1866, when the cholera again arrived in New York. The lower bay was CROWDED WITH PEST SHIPS.

The Virginia, the England, Union, Peruvian and the Halvetian, all carrying first cabin and steerage passengers, arrived within short intervals of each other. The Falcon could accommodate but seventy-five patients, while hundreds of persons stricken with the infection were arriving on each steamer. The United States sloop Illinois was pressed into service to accommodate the healthy passengers and another ship was sent down to serve as a hospital boat.

FAIR WARNING.

Vessel Men Told That Their Pest-Laden Ships May Be Sent Back.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Evidently the president, although removed to a distance from the centers of population, is fully acquainted with the gravity of the situation in the port of New York, and proposed to administer a salutary lesson to the officers of the steamship companies, who for the sake of temporary gain continue to subject the people of the United States to the one and the most dangerous source of infection from cholera. Secretary Charles Foster received from the president late Saturday afternoon the following telegram:

"It is an outrage that the steamship companies continue to bring emigrants from infected ports. Say to them that it should stop or it is certain that every ship will bring the disease and we may be compelled to turn back such pest-laden vessels."

"When the dispatch was received," said the secretary, "it was too late to find the agents of the steamship companies, and not being able to do so Sunday I gave a copy of the telegram to Collector Hendry to send to the agents this (Monday morning.) One of the difficulties that the steamship companies encounter is the fact that a large percentage of the people now coming over as steerage passengers are American citizens. Of course our duty is just as solemn and binding to the poorest steerage passenger who is an American citizen, as it is toward the richest cabin passenger. I think that most of the steamship companies are now refusing to bring immigrants to this country, and I trust those who are persisting in it will also desist."

New Grain Rates.

The Great Northern yesterday notified the railroad commissioners of its intention to put in the following schedule of rates on grain:

	Old rate.	New rate.
Glyndon	$0 16	$0 15½
Crookston	17½	16½
Fargo	16	15½
Grand Forks	18	17
Neche	19	18

P. Brennan who has the contract for laying the iron on the Great Northern road from St. Hilaire to Thief River Falls, was in the city this morning and says the work under him is being greatly hindered owing to the scarcity of getting men, He could, he thinks, complete the ironing of the road by Saturday night if he had a full crew, but instead of over fifty men he only has about half that number, and they are being crowded as rapidly as possible.—Crookston Times.

PRESIDENT JIM HILL (of the Great Northern Railroad)—"We don't want your scales, old lady; we will provide him scales of our own."

ACCIDEFTLY SHOT.

A hunting party consisting of G. Frick, Frank Duncombe, of St, Paul, and Carl Johnson and Oscar Post, of this place, went out yesterday morning after chickens. They found a covey of chickens in a grove and the party divided, Frick and Johnson shooting at a chicken while Oscar Post was in range on the other side of the grove and about fifty no. five shot struck him. He was immediately brought home and Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls, sent for. The doctor pronounced the wounds not dangerous except one above the eye. The right arm and leg contain most of the shot and it will probably be some time before he is around again. On the whole Post can consider himself fortunate, considering the size of the shot and the distance, that it is no worse. No blame is attached to the parties who did the shooting as they could not see one another on account of the brush.

The valient Republican champion Knute Nelson, turned tail and fled when challenged by Ignatius Donnelly to discuss the issues of the campaign. This is probably a sample of the agressive campaign promised by the Republicans, Jim Hill should rub his man Knute on the back a bit and give him courage.

L. D. Marshall who has for several years been the superintendent of the Red River Valley Elevator Co., has received a well merited promotion and will hereafter be the general manager of the company. Mr. D. F. McLaughlin a brother of A. J. McLaughlin who bought here last year, takes Mr, Marshall's place as superintendent.

The work of laying track between here and Thief River Falls is progressing very slowly owing to the scarcity of men, They have been working the past week with less than one half the men required and have less than three miles completed. It is expected that the track will be into Thief River Falls some time next week, but it will probably be two or three weeks before it is surfased so that regular trains can run.

It is remarkable how philantropic our protected manufacturers are. Before every national election they will contribute large sums to the republican campaign fund for the purpose of maintaining a tariff system said to enhance and make dearer to them the labor they employ. Such exhibition of unselfish devotion is wonderful in these days when ordinary mortals want, and are trying to get, the earth.—Norman County Herald.

The commissioners who have been at work estimating the Red Lake Pine have arrived at the conclusion that the amount available is 10,000,000,000 feet This is enough to supply the Northwest for many years but isn't it about time some of it was placed upon the market? It is said that a pine land ring has been formed of several republican office holders who are so manipulating things as to prevent the opening of the reservation until they have arranged to secured all of the best lands.—Fertile Journal.

Crookston Times. "For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain the heathen Chinee is peculiar," was the way Bret Hearte put it years ago, but the Americans away from the Pacific coast have never even yet learned much about these peculiar ways. But to show how shrewd they are it is only necessary to call attention to the fact that they are now going to the Sandwich Islands and becoming naturalized so that they can get into this country as citizens of that and not as Chinese. To use a stale old expression, this is whipping the devil around the stump in a pretty shrewd way.

Peter Lindbloom
Bray Tp, Sec. 23.

An early pioneer governor of Kentucky possessing much horse sense and of considerable profanity said: "When things are bad they stay bad, but when they get d——d bad the people up and rights them." His language was more expressive than eloquent. Dear readers, things in Minnesota are d——d bad and it is time for you to "up and right them.,, What with the political rings who dictate from St. Paul through the smaller county rings, who shall hold office, the thieving wheat rings, the elevator rings, the railroad combines and the pine land ring, the people are being systematically robbed, and when they—the people—dare to protest the political bosses' insultingly ask "What are you going to do about it," and talk about vested rights. The people have been slow to anger, but at last rise up in righteous wrath and propose to show the plutocratic political bosses what they will do. The remedy —the ballot—is in their hands and they know how to use it.—Detroit Free Press.

The Marshall County Banner sizes it up as follows; "Policy oftentimes compels parties, and individuals as well to make great sacrifices. When Knute Nelson strayed away from the Republican camp and voted with the Democrats on the tariff question, policy induced him to decline a renomination. It was policy that caused him to declare that he could not serve the people in Washington at $5,000 a year and at the expiration of his term of office became the chief lawyer of a great railroad company at $15,000, In 1890 his party pulled his ears, he squeaked and went the "hull hog." It was policy that caused him to support the McKinley bill on the stump in view of his low tariff record. The Republican leaders of Minnesota have no real love for Knute Nelson and it is policy and nothing else that is giving life to his gubnatorial boom.

LET US KNOW WHOM YOU ARE.

It is Important for Every Thinking Man to Come Out Boldly.

Futile, vain and foolish would be the position of reformers of today if they were not honest in their convictions and determined to carry them out. The masses of this country cannot afford to longer trust those who have been instrumental in blinding the public with false promises. Let him who declares he has violated none of the promises he has made come out from among those who have.

No man can be a true soldier of a cause and wear the uniform and serve in the ranks of his enemies; a good Christian and wear the livery of the devil; nor can he be true to reform and continue to wear the collar and brands of plutocracy, placed upon him by the inexorable decrees of his party caucus. By the brand you wear will you be cut and driven by the herders of reform. He who persists in wearing the brand of Mr. Cleveland's Wall street platform must herd with plutocracy—English and American—and should the grazing (votes) become short and dry in their pastures, our advice to those who become restive and uneasy is to first slip the plutocratic brand put on you at Chicago, and then if you become breachy and break into the reform pastures you will be accorded a place among the reform herd according to your merit.

Do not be deceived; the masses are fully posted as to the political character and sentiments of the head of the Chicago ticket. They will not forget the attempt made to force even a worse platform on the people than the Minneapolis convention did. "Man cannot serve God and mammon," neither can he serve the people and plutocracy. Let us wear our colors like honest men and be ready to say boldly on which side we are in this fight.—Southern Mercury.

Colorado's Interest.

Texas produces cattle, horses, wool, cotton and wheat. The five products are no more important to her, as a whole, than is our silver to us. Suppose a national policy were pending which would surely operate to render all of these products of no worth, or so nearly worthless as that she would have to abandon their growth, what would be said of her were she to give any sort of assent to it; throw up her cap for it; spend her time and efforts in electing the men pledged to carry it out?

This is not an overstatement of the conditions prevailing in Colorado today. We are not like Texas in thus having a number of the staple needs of the world on our list of productions; we have but one, silver. If, under all the circumstances, we should vote for the candidates of either of the great national parties we would commit a graver fault than would Texas if she went for the policy we have spoken of above.

There is no getting away from the conclusion—it is fixed and inevitable. Let us not deceive ourselves a moment longer. The situation with all its direful and dreadful consequences is upon us. Will we then in blind devotion to the two old parties, or either one of them, vote to destroy this one single interest upon which depends every enterprise and hope of the state?

We must face the question now. We cannot, if we would, push the matter aside for solution at some future favorable time. It must be settled now. The next vote we cast will determine if we are true, state loving Coloradoans, or the willing, blind and subservient slaves of plutocracy, who derive our right to live and to work, to vote, from that clique of bankers in Wall street who are bent upon the destruction of our only chance of present subsistence and future hope.—Grand Junction (Colo.) Star.

Free Silver and Foreign Trade.

England and all Europe know that if we were to open our mines to the free and unlimited coinage of silver that Mexico and South America and all the silver producing countries would bring their silver to this country and have it coined into full legal tender money, and as it would not be money in their countries they would not take it back, but would exchange it for such things as they need and that we have to sell, and if they bought goods of us England and Europe would lose the trade of those countries; and to retain the trade of those countries they would have to pay $1.29, the price it would be worth at our mint, and those nations would no longer make a profit of from forty-four to forty-eight cents on each ounce of our silver that we produce with so much hard work. And as all those nations must have silver to keep up the volume of money, they would have to pay our price for it and pay for it in gold if they could not pay for it in any other way.—G. W. King in Denver Road.

The Need of a New Party.

This country is ripe for a third party. The occasion demands it. Never in the history of politics was there such a crying demand for political reformation and revolution. It must come through a new party. The leaders of the old parties are corrupt above all things and pusillanimously wicked. They are owned and controlled, soul and body, by the money power. The people must take their cause into their own hands, organize and fight for liberty. This is the opportunity of their lives. It should not be frittered away. It appeals to the noblest impulses of the human heart, and must not be cast aside.—Winnemucca (Nev.) Silver State.

The Party Organs in Colorado.

The few remaining old party journals of the state are putting in their "strong licks" now, and the crack of the party lash is heard daily. An amusing feature is the anxiety which Republican papers betray to have Democrats stick to their ticket. Weaver, they declare, hasn't a ghost of a chance of carrying the state, but nevertheless they hope the Democrats will stick to Cleveland. Never were the Republican organs so solicitous of the Democratic welfare. They are "playing us for fools," as a correspondent remarks.—Fairplay (Colo.) Flume.

TO THE DOUBTFUL VOTER.

A Vote for Principle is Not a Vote Thrown Away This Year.

We see in the east that the old party organs are advising voters to avoid throwing away their votes on any new party. This hoary headed weapon of monopolistic partisanship was never so stuffed with sophistry as this year.

This is a great year to vote for principle. We will not here discuss the soundness and breadth of the People's party platform, but if any voter is convinced that the new party has trained its guns four square to the solution of the question of private monopolies and still withholds his vote, let him make a careful survery of the situation. The currency and corporation monopolies of this country have a grip upon both the Republican and Democratic parties. President Harrison had to make a tour of railroad and trust attorneys for a man to run his campaign.

In half a dozen northwestern states the result will be determined by the purchasable vote. It is a cold question of money. Take Indiana as an example. Four years ago a private canvass showed that there were 34,000 purchasable votes, and the Republicans required 29,000 of them to carry the election. As the event showed, it took $250,000 to swing these 29,000 into the Republican column. If the Democrats had been able to raise $300,000 the Republicans would have lost the state.

If an elector believes that his country should be run by the people rather than by the corporations, the most effective method of throwing away his vote is to cast his ballot for either Democratic or Republican electors. To a reformer there can be no significance in the success of either of the old parties. They both stand for special privileges of a few and against the interests of the many. They work together whenever there is any danger that a new party will unhorse them both.

In Roger Q. Mills' district a few weeks ago it became evident that the People's party was about to carry the election, and in order to prevent this Republican bankers contributed money to elect a Democratic candidate to congress. Judge Anthony, Democrat, was in consequence elected by a small majority by the purchase of the negro vote with Republican money in two Republican counties. Democratic bankers and railroad attorneys in Kansas have been giving aid and comfort to the Kansas Republicans.

And so it goes, especially through the west and south. As the combat deepens, it will appear that there are but two parties in this great republic—the party of monopoly and the party of the people. The November election is not a horse race nor a game of chance. It is the duty of every citizen to vote his convictions. We are upon the eve of a revival of principle, honor and equal justice.

And again, looking at the contest from a tactical point of view, no man throws away his vote this year if he supports the People's party. A very conservative estimate of the outcome in November is that six southern and four western states—six Democratic and four Republican—will enter the electoral college of the People's party. There will in consequence be no election and the choice of president will be thrown into the house and the choice of vice president into the senate.

If you will take the southern states which will not vote for Cleveland, the Farmer's Alliance states and the silver states, the unit rule prevailing according to the terms of the constitution, it will be readily seen that it would not take very much of a tidal wave to land General James B. Weaver in the presidential chair. The house cannot vote for any name that did not figure in the electoral college. Thus it will be a choice between Harrison, Cleveland and Weaver. It is needless under the circumstances to remind any reformer that his duty is to vote for the party of reform this year unless he really wishes to throw his vote away.—New Nation.

A Specimen from Colorado.

The following special dispatch from Ouray, Colo., to The Rocky Mountain News, of Denver, explains itself, and is fairly representative of the sentiments of three-fourths of former Republicans and Democrats in the state:

Lyman I. Henry, chairman of the Republican county central committee, offered his resignation today as follows:

GENTLEMEN—I hereby tender my resignation as a member and chairman of your committee, and request that this resignation take effect immediately. I have always heretofore acted with and supposed that I was a consistent member of the Republican party. I cannot find any reason satisfactory to myself why I should now act with the party upon the lines laid down in the national platform. I cannot approve of the plank concerning the coinage of silver.

I cannot find any reasonable interpretation of that plank nor any acts or expression from the candidate on that platform to justify me as an unqualified supporter of the free and unlimited coinage of silver on the ratio of 16 to 1. Gentlemen, my personal relations with you have been at all times pleasant; my only regret is that this action on my part may possibly sever the intimate relations and friendly conditions that have heretofore existed between us in the work of politics. My only desire in political action is that the common good of our country may be subserved.

Satisfied with Their Own Way.

With due respect to the opinions of those who have in other states chosen a method different from ours, we must say that the South Carolina plan of getting reform inside the white man's party commends itself to our judgment as well as our taste. The reformers here have all they could get by any possibility by independent action, and besides this there is comparative peace between us.—Cotton Plant.

A Pleasant Surprise.

It will be quite a pleasant surprise to many farmers to learn that they are prospering as never before; somehow there has been a lurking suspicion that the 50 per cent. depreciation in farm and produce values was not indicative of prosperity. Their doubts will be entirely dispelled by the soft cooing of the tariff dispensers—in your mind.—Chesaning (Mich.) Argus.

A Tiny Timepiece.

M. Morquet, a friar of the Florentine order in Paris, has constructed a perfect watch only a quarter of an inch in diameter. Besides the two hands seen on all watches it has a third which marks the seconds, besides a microscopic dial which indicates the days, weeks, months and years. It also contains an alarm, and on its front lid is an ingeniously cut figure of St. Francis. On the back cover, by aid of a powerful glass, you can distinctly read two verses of the "Te Deum."—Philadelphia Press.

GOADED BY TOBACCO.

Smokers Hunting Snipes in the Streets of New York.

"When a man makes but $8 or $10 a week," said a loquacious policeman in the Bowery at daybreak the other morning, "and out of it has a wife and two or three young ones to feed, clothe and pay rent for, he can't have much left for the luxuries of life. Why, a cent to a man in those straits looks as big as a cart wheel does to you. But poor fellows of that kind must have tobacco. It's the only consolation they have. That's why they range through the east side of town between 4 and 6 every morning."

This lecture was brought out by a question. In the gray of morning, when the streets were almost deserted, there appeared as if by magic a horde of men. They were mechanics and laborers, as the dinner pails they carried attested. Some were rough, but all were clean. Soon every crosstown street brought from the west a fresh stream which first filled the sidewalks in the Bowery and then melted away in the throughfares on the East Side.

One might have believed it to be an army of scavengers, for they did not leave a dusting or sweeping lay along the curb line unexamined. It was not uncommon to see a dozen rush simultaneously at a box or barrel that did not look as though it had been disturbed. In all there were about 3,000 of them, and they disappeared as quickly as they came. They were searching for the tobacco stems and other refuse from which the leaf has been stripped in factories and shops in which cigars ar made. There are hundreds of those places in and east of the Bowery, and at night they set the stems out with the other sweepings to be hauled away by the street cleaners; but long before they arise the poor men have gleaned a thousand vessels of every scrap of tobacco they held.

A PLEASANT CUSTOM.

Where Young Men May Freely Stare at Beauty.

In compliance with an ancient Russian custom, all the young men and women of the mercantile class in St. Petersburg assemble on Whit Monday, the former to stare and the latter to be stared at. The young girls, dressed as richly as their means will allow, are arranged in long rows by the sides of the flower beds in the summer garden, with their mammas standing behind them. The wardrobes of their mothers and grandmothers are laid under contribution, and everything bright and gaudy is carefully brought forward to enrich the drapery, the head-dress or the girdle.

Some of the young ladies are so covered with gold and jewelry on these occasions that their natural charms are altogether concealed; indeed, the ludicrous excess to which this sort of decoration is sometimes carried goes beyond what has ever been attempted elsewhere. Thus bedizened, the blushing damsels are drawn up in mute rows, while the papas, in flowing caftans and curling beards, parade their sons up and down. Here and there the papas and mammas try to lead the young folks into conversation with one another, in the course of which certain little looks and emotions may arise, pregnant with future circumstances. Eight days or so after this bridal exhibition private family meetings take place, at which those whose hearts are captivated at the grand show are more formally affianced to one another by their parents and relatives.

ONE OF CALIFORNIA'S WONDERS

Natural Whispering Gallery in Lassen County—A Soldier's Story.

"The queerest country I ever saw," said Simon Askins, for twenty eight years a soldier on the American frontier, to a San Francisco Examiner man, "is that immediately about Dry lake in Lassen county. I was a sergeant there under General Wheaton during the Modoc war. Dry lake usually has no water in it at all. It is almost an arid plain, with some alkali scattered here and there over it, and its area is about two and a half by four miles. On one side are the Pitt river mountains and on another are big pine woods, while to the west are the famous lava beds in which the Indians hid during that last great California struggle with the savages. Well, a winding road leads up from the valley below into the curious basin. If a horse walks on this road anywhere, even two or three miles outside the border of Dry lake, he can be heard for many and many miles up in the interior. The ground all about there sends forth a hollow sound. Reverberations can be heard everywhere. Whether there are any caves or lost rivers there I cannot say, but though I have been almost everywhere on the frontier I never found anything like it. A footfall may be heard like a sound in a great cavern.

"Many a night when, as a soldier on duty, we anticipated an attack from the Indians or the arrival of couriers or supplies, I have put my ear to the ground. If a horse was moving about anywhere within miles he could at once easily be detected. This enabled us to put ourselves in an attitude of defence. It is a great gallery, a whispering gallery it may be called, where the acoustics are so perfect that anything said is published to the world. All the country about there has ears. Even the caw of a crow or the notes of a songster take on a weird sound. In the Indian-fighting days we were very cautious how we moved about there, for a sound of our movements was carried all through the lava beds, where Steamboat Charley, Captain Jack Shacknasty Jim and their bloody hordes were secreted. I know of only one thing that could have moved about there, barring a bird on the wing, without making a noise, and that possibly would be a bicycle with its wheels rendered noiseless by thick rubber bands. I have never visited it since the end of the struggle, but I am sure that some day it must attract great attention."

PENNSYLVANIA miners propose to establish a line of whalebacks from New Orleans to Cuban, South and Central American ports to supply those regions with fuel. The idea is said to be perfectly feasible and sure to return large profits. At present their coal supply comes from England.

Preserving the Rose's Perfume.

Philadelphia Ledger: To those who are weary of the "pot-pourri" and the rose-jar, and who are not satisfied with merely strewing their bureau drawers with fresh rose leaves to dry therein, the rose beads, either to wear at the wrist or to keep in one's work-basket, are very satisfying. Pound the fresh rose leaves to a pulp, and form the pulp into balls; run an oiled bonnet pin through a number of them to keep them propped up or drying, and fasten the bonnet pin sideways in a sunny window. They will grow black in drying, but preserve their rich fragrance. The Turks press them to dry into cut molds, which make an imprint like craven heads on these gummy, delicious balls.

A LOVER'S FANCY.

The withered brown leaves lie
  In clusters beneath her feet;
They were glad to fade and die
  To make her pathway sweet;
And each scattered flake of snow
  In amorous longing seeks
To melt away in the glow
  Of her warm and crimson cheeks,

And the rays of the setting sun
  Steal ninety billion miles
To catch a sight of one
  Of her rare and brilliant smiles;
And the stars of evening fight,
  At the close of the dying day,
To be first to greet her sight
  With a feeble twilight ray;

And the dull old earth rolls on
  With a slow and steady gait,
And his solemn mind upon
  His sweet and precious freight.
No wonder he seems afraid
  To enter the comet's race:
He is bearing a queenly maid
  Through the dizzy realms of space.

—Harry Romaine, in New England Magazine.

THE LESSON HE LEARNED.

A COMEDY OF ERRORS.

MR. JACK CONNYNGHAM, aged forty-five, and his nephew, Jack Conny ng ha m, twenty years younger, lived in Washington City.

They belonged to the same club, and, in spite of the difference in their ages, went in the same set. How it came to pass that the elder man was not called "Old Connyngham," and the other "Young Connyngham," is not known. But it was a singular fact that the uncle retained the prefix "mister" that had been attached to his name for so many years even after the nephew had grown to man's estate and might also lay claim to it. He was simply called Jack Connyngham. This rule was generally adhered to. Had there been no exception to it, we should have no tale to tell.

Angela Morningstar was a beautiful girl, accomplished and bright, the only child of indulgent parents; she was much sought after. Jack Connyngham was foremost in her train of admirers; but although Angela was kinder to him than to any of the others, he yet lacked courage to risk a possible rejection. He felt ashamed of his indecision, and at last resolved to know his fate at the earliest opportunity. Two days after this determination the British Minister and his family gave their annual ball.

Jack attended, hoping to find his divinity there, and be able to tell his love in the mazes of the waltz or in some propitious nook in conservatory or tete-a-tete room. It was late when he arrived, and he looked around for his lady love. He discovered her quite at the end of the room, conversing animatedly with his Uncle Jack. He started leisurely towards them but the crowd was large, and it was several minutes before he could reach the corner they were ensconced in.

In the meantime, Mr. Jack Connyngham and Miss Morningstar were talking.

"The decorations are extremely lovely to-night," said the lady glancing as she spoke at a mass of gorgeous blossoms near her. "Those roses are simply superb."

"But see those orchids, Miss Angela; did you ever see beauty more fully developed in a flower though?"

Miss Morningstar was silent for a moment, then, evidently yielding to an impulse, turned to her companion and said:—

"I'm ashamed to confess it, Mr. Connyngham, but I actually do not care for them."

Mr. Connyngham was shocked. He had an unbounded admiration for orchids, and thought everyone else should see their beauties. Desiring to make this charming girl a convert to his views, he said, leaning towards her, in his zealous way:—

"Why, my dear Miss Angela, do you know I positively adore——"

"Beg pardon, Miss Morningstar, but this is our waltz," interrupted a distinguished attache of the Legation, and angela, with a graceful ad eu, glided away from him, and Mr. Connyngham lost his chance of telling her why he adored—orchids.

Jack reached his uncle's side just as the young couple disappeared. He walked about, vexed at himself for missing his chance, until the evolutions of the dance brought Angela almost to his side as the last strains of the music died away.

Going up to her he offered her his arm and led her to the conservatory. There, amid the sweet odors of the flowers and the silvery tinkle of the fountain, Jack fondly imagined his tale of love could be easily told.

Not so! The glowing words of the speech he had so carefully composed forsook his tongue. He sat by Angela's side for some moments, talking of indifferent things, trying in vain to recall them. At last, in despair, he spoke:—

"Miss Angela, you know I adore you! Can't you love me a little, and—marry me, Angela?"

"I have found you at last, after a fearful hunt, Miss Morningstar," broke in a joyous voice, and the tall form of one of Jack's friends loomed up before them.

Until now Jack had counted Frederick Trewayne a prince of good fellows.

"Confound the man!" he muttered beneath his breath; then turned to Angela, who, though inwardly annoyed, had managed to put on a smiling face.

As she rose, Jack rose, too, determined to say something more.

"Ah! Miss Angela, that little matter we were discussing, you know. Would you kindly drop me a note at the club in the morning, telling me what you will do?"

Angela was almost convulsed with mirth at Jack's confused manner; but she loved him and intended to make him happy. Repressing her mirth she promised to send the note, and passed out of the conservatory with Frederick Trewayne, leaving Jack to cast maledictions on that "confounded idiot!"

Miss Morningstar's chaperon was taken ill, and they left the ball early. Jack heard the unwelcome news while searching for her in hopes of continuing their interesting conversation. He had to content himself with the thought of her note in the morning.

It was late that night when he fell asleep; as a consequence, he did not wake until quite late the next day. His first waking thought was of Angela's letter awaiting him at the club.

Dressing hastily, he rushed off to get it. It was now noon. The winter sun was shining brightly, the sky was blue, and Jack's heart felt happy and light as he hurried into the clubhouse.

"My mail, please, Billings," he said, going up to the old servitor.

"Nothing for you this morning, sir," said the old fellow, with a shake of his head.

"What! Nothing! Are you quite positive, Billings?"

Yes, Billings was quite positive.

Jack sank in a chair in a dark corner of the room and tried to think. Suddenly the thought flashed over him that Angela's silence meant a refusal. She intended to refuse him, after all, and could not bring herself to write the unkind words. He had been deceived. She did not love him.

Then came a wild desire to get away—away from his thoughts, from all that might remind him of her. Acting on a hasty impulse he sat down and scribbled a note to his uncle:

"Gone to New York. Wire me at the Fifth Avenue if wanted. "JACK."

Then, calling a cab, he drove to the station just in time to catch the New York train. Thirty minutes later when his uncle arrived at the club and found his message, he almost tore his hair in desperation.

Jack's train was not wrecked, as he in his wretched state of mind almost hoped it might be. He reached New York safely, and, worn out by his emotions, went to bed and slept a dreamless sleep.

When he awoke there was a telegram awaiting him. It was characteristic of Mr. Jack Connyngham that the message contained only three words:—

"Come home instantly."

There was something new to think of. The telegram gave vast scope for imagination.

Jack was able to catch the early morning train, and reached Washington a few hours later. He was met by his uncle, who drove him to the club, remarking they could talk while they lunched.

After freshening himself up, Jack sat down and waited impatiently. He felt instinctively that Angela was concerned in the matter.

The elder gentleman seemed to have a hesitancy about beginning. Finally he spoke abruptly.

"Five thousand dollars is a neat little sum, isn't it Jack? It shall be yours, my boy, if"—dropping his voice to a confidential whisper—"if you will take a charming girl off my hands."

Jack stared in amazement, unable to speak.

"She's everything that's sweet, good, lovely, and every way desirable," he continued, in nervous haste. "But you know, Jack, I would not marry for all the gold in the world."

Spite of his wretched feelings, Jack burst into a fit of uncontrollable laughter. His uncle looked the very picture of woful anxiety as he told his story.

He waited until Jack had subdued his ill-timed mirth, then continued:—

"You see, Jack, at the ball Tuesday night I was talking with Miss—well, we won't mention names yet—and we spoke of orchids; she said she didn't care for them at all. You know my weakness for the orchid. I wanted to make a convert of her. I leaned over her, alas! I fear too devotedly, and said, 'My dear Miss——, I positively adore——' and before I could finish and say what I adored, an idiotic attache came up and took her away. Don't laugh, old fellow; its turned out pretty serious business. Yesterday morning I received a note from her saying she accepted my interrupted offer, had loved me a long while, and called me 'Dear Jack!' Do you understand? She thought I meant I adored her instead of orchids. Angela Morningstar has always been a great favorite of mine, but she is too progressive; possesses too much imagination."

At Angela's name Jack started, and a light began to dawn upon him.

"Let me see the letter, uncle," he said; and it was handed to him.

Scanning it eagerly, Jack saw with joy that it was his longed-for-letter. A mischievous fate had tossed it into his uncle's unwilling hands. With subdued emotion he read the sweet words Angela had penned for his eyes alone. His heart bounded with joy, but he repressed his feelings and put the letter absent-mindedly into his own pocket. Then turning to his distressed relative he said:—

"I'll do my best, Uncle Jack, to help you out. To-day's sun shall not set before I offer myself to Miss Morningstar and endeavor—to take her off your hands."

"Remember the five thousand," called the elder man, as a further incentive, as his nephew stepped out of the door and walked with a firm, rapid step in the direction of the Morningstar residence.

Miss Morningstar entered the reception-room in a dignified and stately manner. Jack rose eagerly to greet her. Giving a distant inclination of her lovely head, she ignored his extended hand.

"Angela!" cried Jack, in tones of deepest reproach, "what does this mean? Why do you meet me in this manner?"

"It means," said Angela, coolly, but giving signs of repressed emotion, "that I accepted your offer, and gave you permission to come last evening and talk it over. I waited, but you did not come. This evening you put in a tardy appearance. Have you anything further to say to me, Mr. Jack Connyngham?"

At her last words Jack actually laughed. Miss Morningstar drew herself up to her full actual height and started to leave the room. In a moment Jack was upon his knees before, her explaining:—

"You see, darling, Uncle Jack is 'Mr. Jack Connyngham' to everybody; I'm only Jack."

Then as rapidly as possible he told the history of his disappointment and dispair when the letter failed to come; of his hasty trip to New York and of his recall, to find that his precious letter had been given to his uncle. Before he was through Angela's coolness had quite thawed, and Jack was in possession of her hands.

"So you are only Jack, are you?" she asked. "Ah well, it's only Jack I want you know. But in spite of your uncle I shall be Mrs. Jack Connyngham, after all," she said, with a wilful toss of her pretty head.

When Jack returned to the club his uncle was still there. He came up to him, and his eyes asked the question his lips dared not ask.

"Oh, it's all right, uncle," announced Jack, joyously. "I have Miss Morningstar's promise that she will be my wife."

"God bless you, Jack! You are a noble, self-sacrificing gentleman," cried Mr. Connyngham, as he dropped into a chair with a long sigh of relief.

Drawing out his cheque-book he began to write the promised cheque. There was an air of lightheartedness about him that Jack had never before seen.

When the pen was dipped in the ink Jack interposed.

"I guess you'd better not write that cheque, uncle. The fact is, it's due to Angela to tell you that that letter was never intended for you. I was proposing to her that night at the ball, when we were interrupted. She promised to send me her answer at the club. Old Billings gave the letter to you. You didn't want it, but I was wild when I thought she had not written. Now, uncle, I absolve you from your promise."

It took several minutes for Mr. Jack Connyngham to recover from his astonishment. Then he took up the pen he had dropped and wrote the cheque as he had intended.

"It will help you to build the new home, dear boy," he said, handing it to Jack. "Take it, with my blessing. I ought to have had more sense than to suppose such a beautiful young girl as your Angela would look at an ugly old fellow like myself when a charming young man like yourself was at her feet."

Jack and Angela were happy.

Mr. Jack Connyngham, confirmed old bachelor as he was, was happy, too. He had learned a valuable lesson.

It was, never to say anything to a maiden, old or young, that could possibly be construed into a proposal of marriage.

NOVEL RIDING.

Queer Mode of Horseback Riding in La Plata.

"There is no motion of progression so delightful as riding on horseback," writes the author of "The Naturalist in la Plata," who, on the pampas of that country, was taught to ride at a tender age, and learned to look at a man as a parasitical creature, fitted to occupy the back of a horse.

The pleasure of riding flow from the agreeable sensations attendant on flight-like motion, and from the knowledge that something with life and thought sustains us and carries us over the ground with speed and safety, and that, too without any metal or physical exertion on our part.

The author mentions one species of pleasure in riding that few English-speaking riders have ever head of.

When riding by night on the pampas, he used to enjoy lying back on his horse till his head and shoulders rested on the animal's back. His feet were raised till they pressed against the horse's neck, and in this position, made by practice safe and comfortable, he gazed at the starry sky, seeing nothing of earth, but letting his mind absorb the impression created by the vast circle of the heavens glittering with innumerable stars.

To enjoy this method of riding thoroughly the rider must have perfect confidence in the surefootedness of his horse, and the horse must have a similar confidence in his rider. The animal must go over level, grassy ground, and at a swift, harmonious pace.

Then the illusion is that of soaring through space—an enchantment heightened by the muffled sound of the hoofs on the soft sward, which suggests the rushing of wings.

Model of American Manhood.

An English journal says of Buffalo Bill that he "has done more to popularize America in the minds of the general British public than any one or fifty Americans that could be mentioned." This is rather rough on the fellows who parade their wealth and offensive Americanisms at the door of English society, seeking admission. But Cody, constantly in the surrounding of Russian Cossacks, Mexican vacqueros, cow-boys and wild riders from South America, is modest, manly and honest parading no airs and seeking to bring home naught but British shekels. Must we write it down that the proudest success of American manliness abroad is the evolution of a Wild West scout.—Boston Globe.

Mary Understood.

"Mary," said her mistress, "I understand you had two visitors last night."

"Yes, mum," replied Mary, with an upward inflection and a smile.

"Was either of them the young man who called last week, Mary?"

"Oh, no, mum."

"Or the one that came last Sunday?"

"Oh no, mum—nor him neither."

"Well, who was it, Mary?"

"Jes' two boys from home, mumm, Tommy Kennedy an' Willie Murphy."

"It seems to me you have a great many beaux, Mary!" severely.

"Sure, thim's not me beaux at all, mum," replied Mary, with dignity.

"And what do you call them then, Mary?"

"Jes' boys, mum. Sure, if they was beaux, mum, would I be havin' them come two at a time, mum?"

And at this evidence of Mary's sagacity, her mistress retired from the field.—Eleanor Kirk's Idea.

High-Colored.

Prevarication, even when indulged in from patriotic motives, is not only improper but dangerous.

The hostess was helping her guests to lobster, says Crypt, and by the way of making talk she ventured to say:

"I suppose, Mr. O'Finnigan, that you are not accustomed to this dish in your country."

Mr. O'Finnigan's Hibernian pride was touched.

"Lobsters is it ma'am?" said he. "Faith, ma'am, and the shores of Oireland is red wid 'em."

HEADS OF BRASS.

Three Specimens in History Which Are Said to Have Talked.

Upon the authority of several passages of history, we are led to believe that the famous wizards, magicians, and astrologers have constructed not less than six brazen, human-shaped heads that possessed all the faculties of speech. The first of these was the work of Monk Gerbert, who afterward became pope with the title Sylvester II. The head is said to have predicted that Gerbert would be pope and that he would not die until he had said mass in Jersualem. After the first part of the prophecy had been fulfilled, and he had placed the papal tira upon his head, he resolved to live forever by steering clear of Jerusalem. While saying mass one day in a small church in a suburb of Rome, Sylvester was taken with a sudden rigor. Knowing that his end was near, he asked the rector if the church had any special name. Being informed that it was properly called "Jerusalem," he closed his eyes and died within an hour.

The second "brazen-speaking head" was made by one Robert Grosseteste, an Italian bishop who resided in England between the year 1175 and 1223. The third is said to have been the result of 30 years' labor on part of the astrologer, Albertus Magnus, who was born in the year 1205.

Friar Bacon, who died 1284, is the credit of having made a head of brass which constantly repeated the words: "Time's come, time's here, time's past." The marquis of Vilena—1384-1434—also made a speaking head of sheet brass. A Polish disciple of Estello made the sixth and last mentioned of the famous "talking heads of brass."

A Dutiful Daughter.

Mrs. Lakeside—"I don't see why you can't marry Mr. Fatpurse."

Daughter—"Let me please myself this time, ma, and I'll try to please you next time."

Gallant as Usual.

Lady: "Do you not find that I am highly flattered in this portrait?"

Our Gallant Hungarian: "Oh! Madame, what artist would not, having regard to your appearance, feel compelled to flatter you?"

Hard Place to Fill.

New Nurse—"Please—"Please, mum, I can't do a thing with the baby. He cries all the time."

Mistress—"Well, I declare! How stupid of me! His other nurses were colored girls. You'll find some stove polish in the kitchen."

Another police raid is made upon Garfield Park, Chicago, and a millionaire and a policeman are killed and another policeman mortally wounded.

When Traveling

Whether on pleasure bent, or business, take on every trip a bottle of Syrup of Figs, as it acts most pleasantly and effectively on the kidneys, liver and bowels, preventing fevers, headaches and other forms of sickness. For sale in 50 cents and $1 bottles by all leading druggists.

Our Baby

Was a beauty, fair, plump and healthy. But when two years old Scrofula Humor spread over her head, neck and forehead down into her eyes, one great sore, offensive and dreadful, causing such itching and burning that we had to tie her hands to prevent scratching. For 3 years Emma Frederick, she suffered terribly. The first beneficial effect from Hood's Sarsaparilla was that she began to show more life and have an appetite. Then the humor soon began to subside, the itching and burning ceased, and the sores entirely healed up. She is now perfectly well, and so different from before taking HEREAFTER the ritual of the order of Knights of Pythias in the United States will be in the English language only. So orders the supreme lodge of that society. An excellent idea, for English is our national language. The less "confusion of tongues" we have in this country the better.

COPYRIGHT 1891

All alone, both in the way it acts, and in the way it's sold, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for women.

It acts in this way:

If you're weak or "run-down," it builds you up; if you suffer from any of the painful disorders and derangements peculiar to your sex, it relieves and cures. It improves digestion, enriches the blood, dispels aches and pains, brings refreshing sleep, and restores flesh and strength. For all functional weaknesses and irregularities, it's a positive remedy. Hence,

It's sold in this way:

It's guaranteed to give satisfaction, in every case, or the money paid for it is refunded.

They're the smallest, the cheapest, the easiest to take.

But all that would be nothing, if they weren't also the best to take.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets prevent and cure Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels.

"German Syrup"

Justice of the Peace, George Wilkinson, of Lowville, Murray Co., Minn., makes a deposition concerning a severe cold. Listen to it. "In the Spring of 1888, through exposure I contracted a very severe cold that settled on my lungs. This was accompanied by excessive night sweats. One bottle of Boschee's German Syrup broke up the cold, night sweats, and all and left me in a good, healthy condition. I can give German Syrup my most earnest commendation." ⓞ

THE NEWS SUMMARY

The Latest News of the World Condensed and Arranged in Convenient Form.

Washington, Personal, Foreign, Criminal, Casualty and Other Important News.

THE CAPITAL.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the National Bank of Commerce of Minneapolis as a reserve agent for the Austin National Bank of Austin, Minn.

President Harrison has issued an order closing all the government departments, the day set down in the programme for the parade of the Grand Army of the Republic during its encampment.

Consul General Sutton has cabled the state department that the time for free importation of corn has been extended by the Mexican government until Nov, 13. It is important, he says, that this information be given wide publicity, especially west of the Mississippi.

PERSONAL.

Rear Admiral John Cummings Howell, of the United States navy, is dead at Folkestone, Eng.

There are 138 American students attending the Berlin university and only thirty-four Englishmen.

Charlotte M. Yonge, though seventy years of age, is still one of the most active and popular writers in England.

Dwight L. Moody, the evangelist was thrown from his carriage at Belfast, and now nourishes a sprained ankle.

Andrew Carnegie does not own Cluny castle in Scotland, but merely rents it from the head of the Clan McPherson.

A Mr. Goodman of London, has a tested capacity of smoking an average of five cigars an hour for ten consecutive hours.

Gladstone has within a year been hit in the eyes with a crust, almost run over by a cab, sat down upon by the Tories, sneered at by Labouchere and knocked down by a heifer, and yet the grand old man still lives.

Inventor Louis Spellier left five wills in order to place the disposal of his property beyond the reach of accident, and as the heirs are actively contesting this remarkable testamentary document, the whole estate will no doubt be swallowed up by the lawyers.

CASUALTIES.

Some of the most valuable forests in Washington state are burning. The loss will be millions of dollars.

Anna, Ill., was visited by a severe shock of earthquake. Windows and dishes were rattled perceptibly.

Many people are injured by being thrown into an excavation by the giving way of a pavement at Columbus, Ohio.

J. H. Menge & Co., grocers, 17 and 19 Delta street, New Orleans; burned out. Loss, $125,000: insurance, $100,000.

Carter H. Harrison, editor and proprietor of the Chicago Times, was thrown out of a carriage. His arm was broken and he was otherwise injured, but not seriously.

At Carlisle, Pa., the breaking of an axle on an engine on the Cumberland Valley road caused a serious wreck. Twenty-five passengers were badly shaken up. A few suffered serious injury, but none will die.

The Union Transfer and Storage company's buildings and contents, in Indianapolis, burned the other morning. Loss, $200,000; insured. A school building is near by and James McClellan, son of the janitor, got on top of the building to see the fire, fell off and was killed instantly.

In Camilla, Ga., a cabin on the place of Judge J. H. Scaif was destroyed by fire. Two small children and their crazy grandmother were in the yard at the time it caught fire. The old woman carried the children into the midst of the flames and there left them where they burned to death.

The steamer Mary Morton, belonging to the Diamond Jo line, plying between St. Louis and St. Paul, sank near Clarksville, Mo., recently. The vessel was heavily loaded with merchandise, and sank in ten feet of water. She had a light passenger list, all of whom reached the shore in safety. The Mary Morton was valued at $25,000 and her cargo is estimated at $35,000.

THE WICKED WORLD.

The indictments against J. J. West, formerly editor of the Chicago Times for fraudulent issue of stock, has been dismissed.

When confronted by detectives Alfred Henshaw, a prominent citizen of Harrisville, Mich., confessed to a brutal murder committed ten years ago at Strathray, Ont.

John Meyers and his son-in-law, John Brown, of Salem, Ind., got into an altercation and resorted to knives and pistols. A half dozen shots were exchanged and both were fatally injured.

James Wyce was shot through the head and killed by Mrs. John Dalton, at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. He knocked at her door, when she opened it and shot him, thinking he was trying to force an entrance.

Martin Burke, the convicted Cronin murderer, is said to be slowly dying with consumption in prison at Joliet, Ill. Burke says that the prison officials have overworked him, but this the officers deny.

Jerry Trumbley, the prize fighter, was probably fatally stabbed in jail at Chicago by a negro prisoner, Michael Prince, Trumbley has been in confinement for an assault with brass knuckles upon one of the best known merchants in the city, Joseph Fish. Prince, the negro, professes to have been avenging an insult to his race by Trumbley when he stabbed the prize fighter.

OTHER SHORES.

Emperor William of Germany is likely to visit the world's fair.

Venezuelans attempt to levy tributes upon foreign residents, and United States war vessels are dispatched to the scene to protect Americans.

Prince Hermann, of Schauburg-Lippe, has been thrown from his horse while riding near Linse, and sustained a fracture of the skull. His condition is critical.

The threatened strike of all railway employes on the Reading has been averted and the trouble amicably settled.

Miners struck at Walton's mines at West Elizabeth, Pa, Notices have been posted at all the mines of the river district of a reduction from 3½ to 3 cents a bushel for mining coal. There are 5,000 in the river district. All will soon be on a strike, and say they are in good shape to resist the reduction.

SPORTING MATTERS.

Actors and newspaper reporters played a game of ball in New York recently and the former won by a score of 24 to 20.

Sullivan's enemies, while getting back at him heavily, have conducted their insults by wire, "with Sully hundreds of miles away."

One year of total abstinence and a continual course of healthy exercise will place Sullivan on his old time ground," says a patron of the ring.

Zimmerman, the New Jersey cyclist, has lowered the record made by Nancy Hanks on a regulation track. He went a mile in 2:06 4-5. It caused a great sensation.

Johnnie Griffin has challenged clever Dixon for a fight for a $10,000 bet and the largest purse offered under the same conditions that governed the Dixon-Skelly mill.

Duncan Harrison's telegram to Sullivan kicking the ex-champion while he was down has called forth the greatest indignation, and that would-be actor has lost many a friend.

Cliff Carroll, of the St. Louis team refused, to play in the game Sept. 1, at St. Louis and President Von der Ahe suspended him. The trouble is a sequel to an incident in the game against the Brooklyns, Aug. 17, when a ball Carroll was fielding at right field got into his shirt pocket, and O'Brien, the batsman, made third base on the so-called error. Von der Ahe fined Carroll $50 for alleged "indifferent playing." When the salary checks were given the men the $50 was deducted from Carroll's pay. Carroll protested against this and declared he would play no more for the St Louis club.

THE RAILROADS.

NORTH DAKOTA.

The soldiers' home at Lisbon, is dedicated.

Mrs. George Ady, a farmers wife living two miles southeast of St. Thomas, present her husband with triplets, two boys and a girl. All are alive and doing well.

A crazy man, name unknown, boarded the Northern Pacific train at Sanborn the other evening and was taken off at Valley City and deposited in the county jail pending examination.

The Minneapolis & Northern elevator at Grand Harbor, west of Devils Lake burned down. Devils Lake firemen went there but the fire was too far gone for them to render assistance. There was no grain in the building.

The Fifth district Republican convention nominated H. F. Arnold, of Larimore, for the senate, and J. Dexter Pierce, of Hegton, and Mr. Cosmo, of Northwood, representatives.

Alexander Wartenbee of Burton has been in Fargo for a day or two to see what could be done about getting some of his money back. He bit on a green goods swindle in New York a short time ago and sent $400 in payment for $2,500 of the "queer," receiving a box of saw dust in return. He does not receive much encouragement as to seeing any of his good money again.

A dead man was found beside the Northern Pacific railroad, eight miles east of Valley City. The coroner's jury found death was caused by being struck by an engine. Three partially empty flasks were found in his pockets, also $5. He was identified as a stone mason named John, who had been working here for the past few weeks.

Jimmy Flynn, a 4-year-old son of Ald. Flynn, of Fargo, got hold of a powder can thrown out in the back yard of B. D. Schofield's gunsmith shop. The can had a little powder left in it. The boy dropped a match inside of it and while looking at it the powder exploded in the child's face. He will probably loose the sight of both eyes.

While B. F. Fellows, with his wife, mother and two children were driving over a bridge at Spanning Lime Creek, near Mason City, the wagon went down a twenty-foot embankment. All five of the family were seriously injured, the mother and one child fatally.

How a Little Miss Turned Failure Into a Glorious Success.

Presence of mind has turned defeat into victory for generals on the battle field, for statesmen in the senate chamber and for lawyers in the court room. It is a rare gift, but a very young woman who lives in the little town of Hawthorne in the pine woods of Florida, possesses it to an unusual degree, says an exchange. The Sunday school to which she belongs recently gave a Sunday school concert, and, although she is hardly five years old, she showed such willingness to contribute to the success of the occasion that she was entrusted by the teacher with the recitation of a verse.

She applied herself to her task, and at the preliminary rehearsal acquitted herself to the delight of her teacher and the envy of her classmates.

The Sunday afternoon came at last. The church was crowded and the exercises began. The little girl was in a flutter. At last the long waited moment arrived and the superintendent announced her name. She toddled bravely up the aisle and with the help of his hand mounted the steps and stood on the platform facing the people.

"Oh, what a lot of folks are looking at me!" she thought.

In fact, like many an older person in a similar situation, "that" was all she could think of. The verse which she knew so well that she had been saying it in her sleep she could not think of at all.

But she was not the child to give way to defeat without a struggle. If she couldn't think of that verse, she could of another, and so while the congregation was hushed to catch the first syllable from her faltering lips, she piped up in a shrill treble:

Needles and pins,
Needles and pins,
When you get married the trouble begins.

In one respect, at least, her recitation was the success of the afternoon.

Short Essay on Hair.

Brooklyn Eagle: The creature with hair of pure, pale gold, such as the Empress Eugenie is known to have had, with the clear pink and white complexion accompanying it, is an object of reverence by the men and one of envy by the women. "Such hair!" "Will you look?" "What could be more beautiful?" These are the exclamations heard on all sides when one blessed with such a halo of beauty appears in a room ul. Admiration often gets the better of manners, until the tell-tale blush suggests that their murmurs have been too loud and bold. The skilled artist weaves in and out of such hair a chaplet of pearls or holds the braids in place with hair pins of beaten gold. A string of jewels or a diamond comb is often seen in the ball room coiffure.

One of the newest ways of dressing the hair is that of parting it in the middle and wearing it gathered up in a series of loops at the nape of the neck. When this is too severe it is modified by having the hair brushed back, with a couple of love curls left on the forehead.

The Grecian knot seems to be preferred by women who have dyed their hair in one of the so-called mahogany tints which have been the rage. A soft framing is given to the face when the hair is drawn up in pompadour fashion by just the suggestion of a bang in the shape of a few short curly waves, as few faces can bear the plain pompadour drawn up in a smooth line from the forehead without this slight fringe.

The best pins for the hair are small ones of amber or tortoise shell. Rough, coarse pins with sharp ends are to be avoided.

An Inch of Cream.

In gathering cream the creameries use various measures, and of course these will differ as the size of the milk cans used vary. These measures are either an inch or a space. The cream is paid for by these measures. It is an easy matter to tell how much cream there is in one of these measures, but not to find how much butter the cream will make, and this is one of the difficulties met with in this business. There are several kinds of cans or pails used, and these from eight to nine inches in diameter or more. Generally each creamery uses the same can and fixes the measure in relation to the quantity of butter made from one inch in depth of the cream in the can, or a standard measure called a space. To find the quantity of cream, measure the diameter of the can and multiply this by itself, which gives the square of it. Then multiply this by .7854, and the product is the cubic inches of cream in one inch deep of the can. Thus, a can nine inches in diameter will have 63.6 cubic inches in 1 inch deep, and this is usually taken as equivalent to a pound of butter. A quart contains 57¾ cubic inches, and it requires more than a quart of ordinary cream to make a pound of butter. If the can is "half the circumference of a wagon wheel" it will take about enough cream to make four pounds of butter to make one inch in depth in the can.

Potato Tops.

The tops of potatoes after the crop is dug contain much plant food, and as they are mostly rotted down to dust in fall and winter this plant food is easily available. They should not be taken to the barnyard and composted with manure as was once advised. They rot readily enough without composting, and mixing with manure only preserves the spores of the disease, which may otherwise be carried over for the injury of succeeding potato crops. Probably the best use that can be made of potato tops is to save them free from weeds and use as mulch for strawberry beds. Here they rot, cover the land lightly while it needs covering, and do not have to be raked out of the way in the spring as straw often does when it has been used as a winter mulch.

POSSIBLE HORROR

The Steamer Carroll Believed Wrecked Off the Nova Scotia Coast,

Going Down With a Hundred Passengers and a Crew of Forty.

BOSTON, Special, Sept. 19.—The steamer Carroll, Capt. Brown, running between this port and Halifax, is believed to have gone to the bottom with 100 passengers and a crew of forty men. It left Halifax Wednesday morning, and was last heard when thirty miles west off the dangerous Sambro Light reefs, Nova Scotia, where it was sighted by the Britania, of the same line, the North Atlantic steamship line. No word has been received of the Carroll putting in at any point along the coast, and she is now seventy-two hours overdue.

AN AIR-LINE ROAD

From New York to San Francisco, Shortening the Distance 800 Miles.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 19.—William Dallin of Chicago, vice president and general manager of the Atlantic & Pacific Construction company, who is in the city temporarily, gives an interesting account of an air line railroad to be built between New York and San Francisco which will be a shortening of the distance of over 800 miles and a proportionate saving of time. He said:

"Preliminary surveys have been made and charts secured in Illinois, Ohio and Pennsylvania in addition to the work already done in Indiana. We are now surveying the route through New Jersey. The work of grading for the road bed and laying rails will commence in 1893, and the entire road will be completed and in operation in 1900. The cost of the division from New York to Chicago will be $100,000,000 and of the Chicago-San Francisco end $600,000,000. We will secure a right of way extending twenty miles on each side of the road. When we come to a river we will bridge it, and if we cannot go over a mountain we will bore through.

"Our main line will run within a few miles of Chicago. Instead of turning out to take in cities we will build spur tracks to connect them with the main line. We calculate that our road will pay for itself inside of six years. He would look for all the through and local business between New York and San Francisco, and we will get it without doubt once the road is completed. I figure that a dividend of 5 per cent a year, or $15,000,000, would be declared. We will establish a $2,000,000 plant at Benton Harbor, Mich., and there we will build engines, freight and passenger coaches, make rails, and in fact, everything used in the construction and operation of the road." The road will be built with English capital, so Mr. Dallin declares.

READY FOR VETERANS.

Minnesota Visitors to Washington to Be Royally Cared For.

WASHINGTON, Special, Sept. 19.—No state in the Union has made better preparations for the reception of its old soldiers than Minnesota. The committee having in charge the arrangements have everything complete to-night. When the veterans from Minnesota arrive to-morrow each will be given a card upon which he will find plainly printed the location of the headquarters, the department commander's headquarters and the location of the free quarters at the high school building. Besides, a printed folder will be given each visitor from Minnesota containing the name, residence and business place of every Minnesotian resident in Washington, together with all information as to the principal points of interest in and about the city and how to reach them, also hack and other ordinances. Chairman Hoard and Secretary Heck have worked incessantly to make the arrangements complete in every detail. The neat souvenir aluminum badge with the gopher rampant, designed by Mr. Heck, will also be furnished each Minnesota guest. Large transparencies and signs showing where the Minnesota headquarters and the sleeping quarters are have been stretched across the streets.

NOT FIT TO EAT.

Poor Meat Furnished Pine Ridge Indians by the Government.

CHICAGO, Sept. 19.—"If the Indians at Pine Ridge go on the war path again," Capt. Baldwin said to-day, "it will be the fault of Indian Commissioner Morgan.

"The bacon furnished them is simply rotten," he continued, "and nothing has ever been done in season. The government is to blame. Morgan simply refuses to listen to any complaints the Indians make and the contractors have no check placed on them. If the army officers had charge of the provisions and supplied such stuff as the Indian commissioner does it would cause an immediate scandal. I have just returned from the agency. I took Kicking Bear back to his people. He was delighted with his return and promises never to revolt against the authorities again. All the Indians cherished no bad feelings against the whites, but the meat would have made any white man ready to fight the Indian commissioner."

SEVEN MEN KILLED.

Boiler Explosion in Which Many Are Killed or Injured.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—A terrible boiler explosion occurred to-day in Force & Dickison's stave mill at Staples, a small village four miles from here, by which seven men were instantly killed, one fatally injured and about twenty hurt. The dead are:

John Ewing, Michael Dupuis, Joseph Papineau, Isaiah Ghauvin, Jerome Ghauvin (the last two being brothers), W. P. Daust and Maise Oulett.

J. Boone is fatally scalded. The cause of the explosion is not definitely known. Some contend the exploded boiler was old and unfit for use. The boiler was carried fully 200 feet, passing in its flight between two residences. Bricks and other debris were carried in all directions. The two, Chauvins and Daust, were single men; all the others were married, with families demanding upon them for support.

Elkins Hardly Dead.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The rumor about the death of Secretary Elkins cannot be confirmed, and very little credence is given the report. His private secretary to-night told a United Press reporter that he had not heard of the death and appeared rather incredulous. It is now believed that the report is a canard.

The rumor that the secretary is dead, or seriously ill, is denied in a telegram from his home at Elkins, W. Va., to-night. Attorney General Miller says Mr. Elkins is somewhat indisposed, and out of this act the rumor probably grew.

CONDENSED TELEGRAMS

Cardinal Edward Howard died at Brighton, Eng., yesterday of pneumonia.

A military convention between France and Russia has been signed at a meeting between President Carnot and M. DeGiers, the Russian foreign minister.

Augustus T. Kerr, formerly head bookkeeper of the Kansas City offices of the Jarvis-Conklin Mortgage Trust company, headquarters for the Western business of the company, is short in his accounts $20,000. Kerr is now in England.

William Dean Howells has resigned his position as editor of the Cosmopolitan, and the October number comes out without his name on the cover. It is said that he had been unable to agree with John Brisben Walker, the proprietor.

The bodies of Capt. Albert Myers, of the Western Reserve, the little son of Capt. Minch, and four unknown were found on the beach twelve miles west of Life Saving Station No. 12, on Lake Superior. They were in bad condition and were buried by the crew.

Peck Arrested.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Late this afternoon, at the request of District Attorney Eaton, warrants were issued for the arrest of Charles E. Peck, commissioner of the state bureau of labor statistics and his stenographer, Burt Rogers. The arrest is made under section 94 of the Penal code, which makes it a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for five years or a fine of $500 for destroying public records. The charge is that certain circulars and statistics received by Mr. Peck from the manufacturers of this state, from which to compile his report on the effect of the McKinley tariff on wages and production, had been removed from his office and destroyed. The proceedings leading up to issuance of the warrants were begun this morning before Judge Gutmann behind closed doors. Among the persons who were subpoenaed and who gave the testimony on which the warrants were issued were William Dennison, janitor of the private house where Mr. Peck and Mr. Rogers have rooms, a servant girl who has charge of Mr. Peck's rooms, and Miss Chaffer, a clerk in the bureau of labor statistics. The facts secured from Mr. Dennison, are that two weeks ago an expressman brought about twenty-five packages, each about two feet long, a foot high and a foot wide, to the house where Mr. Peck boards, and they were afterward stored in the private bath room.

Commissioner Peck said to-night that he and Rodgers had been served with summons to answer the warrants to-morrow: He then said: "The securing of these warrants of arrest is the culmination of the fight made by mugwumps and anti-Hill Democrats on Gov. Hill and his friends.

A Bird of a Steamer.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The White Star company has commissioned the great Belfast ship builders, Harland & Wolff, to build an Atlantic steamer that will beat the record in size and speed. She has already been named Gigantic, and will be 700 feet long, 65 feet 7½ inches beam and 4,500 horse power. It is calculated that she will steam twenty-two knots an hour, with a maximum speed of twenty-seven knots. She will have three screws, two fitted like the Majestic's and the third in the center. She is to be ready for sea in March, 1894.

Old Officers Re-elected.

CHATTANOOGA, Sept. 17.—At the meeting to-day the army of the Cumberland reelected all of the former officers. The time of meeting was made Sept. 20 and 21, instead of December as reported by the committee. The exact spot where Gen. Ed King was killed was located, and will be marked. At night a symposium was held in Cameron hall. The veterans will return to their homes or go to Washington tomorrow.

Broke the World's Record.

SPRINGFIELD Mass. Special.—The second day's races of the Springfield Bicycle club's tournament was better than the first, and 12,000 people were present. Besides the success of the races the world's mile record was lowered by Harry C. Tyler in a special trial with pacemakers. He broke the record for one mile, standing start, down to 2:08½, amid wild applause for the Springfield club's flyer and the Springfield track, the fastest in the world.

Zimmerman won the day and by defeating all the big men in the great world's record race strengthened his claim to the championship of the world. W. W. Windle of Milbury second, W. W. Taxis of Philadelphia third. Time, 2:21 3-5.

Races at Litchfield.

LITCHFIELD, Minn., Special, Sept. 17.—Races at the Meeker county fair to-day resulted as follows:

First event, three-minute class—Flossie D. won; Francis C. second, Eloise third, Litchfield fourth. Best time, 2:48.

Second event, 2:35 class—Jay won; Atlanta second, Ed Weaver third. Best time, 2:35.

WILL NOT LEAVE LOUISIANA.

What President Conrad Has to Say About the Big Lottery.

NEW ORLEANS, Sep. 19.—President Paul Conrad of the Louisiana Lottery Company was interviewed to-day about the dispatch regarding the company's attempt to purchase a location in the Sandwich Islands. He said: "It is a 'fake' sensation pure and simple, or a malicious concoction, designed perhaps, to prejudice the company in the minds of the people of the United States by creating the impression that our business is to be removed from the legal restrictions and accountability it is now under by virtue of the laws of Louisiana. Were the Louisiana State Lottery Company to become a Hawaiian instead of a Louisiana concern, of course it would be practically an impossibility to enforce claims against it; whereas, being a duly chartered corporation of this State, it is amenable to the laws. Obligations can be enforced through the courts against it the same as against any lawful and responsible company."

"But what are the company's plans for the future? Might not their negotiations be carried on without your knowledge?"

Scarcely such vast sums as are talked of are not carried in one's vest pocket nor expended by one member of a concern without consulting his associates. The owners of the Louisiana Lottery are now scattered over the globe seeking peace or pleasure, according to their condition or taste. Mr. Morris, with friends, have been for weeks cruising about on his yatch, and I doubt if any one has communicated with him on business of any description. Certainly he is not giving himself any concern about lottery business, and I repeat there is simply nothing in this alleged San Francisco story except idle gossip so far as I know, and I think I know all the facts. The Louisiana Lottery Company will live out its allotted time as fixed by its vested rights, say a couple of years longer, doing its business here as it always has and abiding by the popular decision in the recent contest."—Associate Dispatch to N. Y. Times.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 62 cents.

S. M. Dainard drove down to Crookston to-day on business.

Martin Blerk made a business trip to Crookston last week.

Farmers are all busy and business has been light this week.

O. O. Rapp has been receiving his fall stock of dry goods.

The Republicans hold their county convention at Crookston to-day.

The G. A. R. are having their annual encampment at Washington this week.

Ground feed, shorts and barley for sale. Inquire of E. T. Spafford & Co.

O. A. Wiste left last Friday for Crookston where he will work at his trade.

Halvorson Bros. have purchased S. Hoff's threshing rig and start at work to-day.

F. G. Banks, the Thief River Falls real estate agent, was in town last Monday.

Farmers are rushing their work this fall and we can look for a good crop next year.

Frank Gravel of Crookston, was in town last Monday selling groceries to merchants.

E. T. Spafford came over from Thompson N. D., to-day to look over the business prospect.

R. A. Wilkinson, the right-of-way agent for the Great Northern, was in town on business last Monday.

Campaign orators complain this year that it is almost impossible to get the people to come to their meetings.

O. F. Post is improving rapidly and is already able to be out. He will not, however, go hunting for a week or two.

Dr. Tillie, Scandinavian physician of Crookston, will be in St. Hilaire at the Commercial hotel, on Monday Oct. 3rd.

John Stranahan, who has been visiting his parents here for several weeks past, leaves to-day for his home at Watertown S. D.

The village school will commence next Monday morning and parents should see that their children attend the first day.

Miss Carrie Stranahan, left to-day for Rolette where she will visit her brother Levi who is agent for the Great Northern at that place.

James Meehan while driving through here yesterday morning, was unfortunate enough to have his horse run away doing considerable damage.

Andrew Carnigie, purveyor of Scotch whiskey to his excellency Pres. Harrison is declared winner of the Homestead strike and all good Republicans are jubilant.

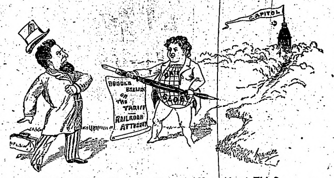
George A. Raiph with a crew of nine men passed through here last Monday bound for the reservation where Mr. Ralph has a large surveying contract. He expects to be gone about three months.

Roy Smith, a brakeman on the construction train, had one of his fingers cut off in the bumpers last Friday. He was taken to Crookston on the engine the same evening.

Threshing is in progress and some new wheat has been brought to market. We have seen several samples which graded no. 2. Most of the wheat this year is shrunken and has a poor color. From present indications very little of this crop will grade better than no. 2.

The County Commissioners have at last decided to build a new county jail. It is to be built of brick and stone with all the latest improvements including steel cages and steam heat and will cost about $18,000. A new jail is needed but we are of the opinion that a plainer and cheaper building would have served the needs of the county just as well.

The construction crew that have been laying track between here and Thief River Falls has been pulled off and taken to Mayville N. D, where they will help finish the work being done there. The company was trying to run both crews but could not get men enough. Both crews are expected to return and complete the work here as they finish there which will probably be in two or three weeks.



CAPITOL
BOODLE BILLING ON THE TARIFF RAILROAD ATTORNEY
DAILY GLOBE
NELSON

The Globe--Not So Fast, Mr. Nelson. How About This?
Knute--Oh, Lord! Well, You See I er--I Forgot All About That.

Gov. Buchanan in his speech welcoming the Farmer's alliance to Nashville, Tenn., uttered these significant words:

"I was honored with the first presidency of your order, and in those days the organization was only a small body. Since then I have contended for your rights and so I still contend. You have had to suffer the contumely of misrepresentation and abuse. You have groped blindly in the dark for a long time. This has been the history of every reform movement and the history of every reform movement has been that from such condition they rose to greatness and to eternal prosperity. Above all things I now call you to stand solidly together. Stop the plow and you stop the world. Then you who drive the plow bind together your common interests and hold them solid forever. Our enemies are seeking to persecute us out of existence, but the very opposition that is trying to crush us will cement us all the stronger together if we only do our duty.

A man with $10,000 at interest at ten per cent in 1868 could buy with his income 400 day's work, 400 bushels of wheat; 1,000 bushels of corn, 2,500 pounds of cotton. To-day, the same interest will buy from 1,000 to 1,500 days work, 1,400 bushels of wheat 2,500 bushels of corn or 20,000 pounds of cotton. The days work have not grown shorter, the measures smaller or the weight lighter. It is the dollar that has grown more costly. It takes more work more grain and more cotton to get it while the interest on the mortgage remains the same. Who has brought about these conditions, the money-lender or the wealth-producer? Who is "working" congress to continue this system, the money-aristocracy or the wealth-producer? Who own the great city dalies who howl for a continuation of these conditions, the rich or the working-men? Who is it that contributes from $5,000 to $10,000 to the republican and democratic campaign funds, the men who get the benefit of the system or the "under-dog" whose labor alone is the only source of wealth? Who is the biggest fool God ever let live, the man who makes "politics pay" or the man who votes to continue this robbery of himself and family?—Fertile Journal.

The Red River Dalen has deserted the Peoples party ticket and will use its influence for the republicans this fall. Those who are informed on the subject state that the Dalen has received a large slice of republican boodle for its flop. It is stated that the bargain also includes the personal influence of Dalen editor which is of course immense.

Twelve years ago the second day of past June a man named Hans Halvorson was murdered at East Grand Forks and although the officers made diligent search for the murderer he was not found and the criminal was never punished. On Tuesday, however, the wife of the dead man swore out a warrant against August Kelle, an East Grand Forks carpenter, charging him with having killed her husband twelve years ago. The accused waived examination and was committed to the county jail to await the action of the next grand jury.—Crookston Times.

As our esteemed friend, Harry Ives of the St. Hilaire Spectator, left the Republican party partially for the reason that the Republican party demands a free ballot and an honest count, we presume that Harry will go over to the Democrats now that the People's party demands federal protection at the polls. The Democrats are the only ones who want a dishonest count, presuming that the Prohibs are are in favor of honest elections.—Ada Index.

We have always been and still are in favor of a "free ballot, and an honest count," but we consider the Republican a la Dudley "blocks of five" scheme fully as disreputable and far more dangerous to society than a dishonest count. Both are fatal to free government and parties who practice either should be forsaken by every honest man.

Globe:—John S. George, of Denver, was at the Ryan yesterday. He has been spending a few weeks at the lakes and left last evening for home. In conversation with a Globe reporter Mr. George said: I have been voting the Republican ticket for a quarter of a century, but this year I am going to vote for Weaver. I am not going to vote that way because I think Weaver will be elected, but because I think the new party is on the right road to reform and should be encouraged. The Republican party has outlived its usefulness, and I think it only a question of a few years when it will be a thing of the past. I am one of those rare individuals who really anticipate a political revolution. How about Colorado this fall? Why, it's a foregone conclusion that Weaver will carry the state. Several of my Republican friends in Denver have told me that they hadn't the slightest idea that Colorado could be held in the Republican column this year. The election might as well be over in that state, so far as naming the winning ticket is concerned.

While handling a lot of syrup barrels at McIntosh yesterday, which was piled one upon another, they commenced to roll and Conductor Norrie was not quick enough to dodge the entire fifty the pile contained—result, his left foot was badly braised and he walks with a decided limp. Harry says his "big toe was flattened out" and it is almost impossible for him to do his work.—Crookston Times.

CHOOSING A CAREER.

A TINSMITH DISCUSSES THE OPPORTUNITIES OF HIS TRADE.

A Practical Talk That Should Interest Thoughtful Parents—What a Boy May Expect in Work and Wages—Details of the Apprenticeship.

Matthew Barr is the walking delegate of the Tin and Sheet Iron Workers' union, and worked for many years as a tinsmith in a shop and in business for himself. "The tinsmith trade," said Mr. Barr to a reporter, "is split into several branches, and to be able to do all kinds of work in tin and sheet iron requires considerable time spent in each department. Sheet iron work, as it is understood in this city, is carried on in what are known as 'furnace shops,' while the manufacture of tin goods is restricted to what are called 'assortment shops.' Apart from these there are the cornice makers and slate and metal roofers, which are included among the branches that tinsmiths must know to round out their knowledge.

"The best age for a boy to begin the tinsmith trade is about sixteen. He ought to have picked up sufficient education from the common schools at this age to give him a fair start in life. No boy is bound out as an apprentice to a tinsmith in this country, but beginners are not looked upon as full fledged journeymen until they reach the age of manhood, no matter how proficient they may be. In some shops a boy has very little show, because there is a system of employment which practically excludes him.

"This is the result of a surplus of labor in other countries. Tinsmiths land here from other lands with but little knowledge of what the trade requires here, but with a general knowledge of the business and the use of tools. They apply for work in shops and they are taken on in preference to the native born boys who desire to learn the trade. These foreign mechanics can learn quicker than a boy generally, and while they are hired for low wages, they in a short time are able to do almost as much work as an expert tinsmith. This system is against the American boy, but so long as there is money in it for the bosses it will be kept up.

"This trade is not such a laborious one that it requires an unusual amount of strength. A tinsmith need not be as strong as a carpenter, blacksmith or bricklayer, but he must have plenty of endurance. He ought to be versatile intellectually, because he is not a mere machine, but is often required to make entirely new things, which can only be done with a fair degree of inventive skill, besides an expert knowledge of the use of tools.

"A boy will never become a good tinsmith if he is not obedient and patient. He will have to do some simple thing over so many times that life will become very weary in the shop before he is set to work upon something that appears to be important to him. In the assortment shops a boy will first be taught how to use the shears. He will be given a lot of old scraps to cut up, and before his muscles get used to the movement he will think that his arm will drop off. He will receive about three dollars a week on the start.

"The foreman watches the boy carefully, and if he does not take hold of the shears and other tools handily in a few days, he will probably remind him that he has made a mistake in his calling. Some boys are put at this and other trades by their parents who would make good clerks and salesmen, but never will be good mechanics. To accustom the boy to the use of the mallet and hammer, he is kept straightening old pipe. When he knows a little about tools and shows the proper spirit in doing his work, he is sent to the journeyman's bench to hold things for him, and in this way gets an idea of the practical use of tools. He may be kept at this for a long time, and this is the period that will test his patience.

"It is always a red letter day for the beginner when the foreman gives him a piece of metal and tells him to make a drinking cup. He has seen it done many times, but when he comes to cutting out the tin and getting it into shape his fingers seem to be all thumbs. He wants to make a good cup, but his anxiety will knock it out of shape. When it is all brightly polished it is taken to the foreman for inspection. Nine times out of ten the beginner is told to take it home as a memento. He feels very happy, but he would not think so much of his work if he knew that the real reason that it was not taken by the foreman was that it could not be sold.

"The boy will soon find this out when the foreman keeps him making cups until he gets a perfect one. From a cup he goes to other things of minor importance, which he is kept at until he gradually acquires skill. It depends upon the boy himself how much time he will waste before he becomes an expert. If he is civil and obliging the journeymen will teach him pattern drawing, and in this way the boy will learn how to block out the models of every kind of work and cut out patterns for himself.

"During the last thirty years there have been many changes in the tinsmith's trade. Machinery has taken the place of hand labor in the manufacture of nearly all utensils, but this has made no change in the tinsmith's condition. Organized labor has protected the workman. The principal machines in the assortment shops are presses giving the general outlines of manufactured goods, and lathes, which are used to perfect the lines of spinning. An important fact in the trade is the wheeling machine, which gives the bright polish and puts on the finishing touches. The polishing used to be done by hammers on an anvil, but the wheeling machine can do better and more work. During the five years that a boy ought to spend in learning this trade he ought to become expert in the use of all the machinery, if he has had the proper instruction. A boy will learn the trade better in a shop than in a trade school."—New York Recorder.

THE COLORS OF WATER.

A Simple Object Lesson That Proved Interesting to a Child.

"Is it not true, grandpa, that water has no color?"

"Yes, dear child, it is blue, but so little so that you cannot see it."

"Can you see that it is blue?"

"No, but still it is blue. Look at this."

I took a little ultramarine on the end of the brush and mixed it with water.

"Does it look blue now?"

"No; I see nothing."

"Nor I. But you saw how I put a little blue color in it with the brush."

"Yes, but there was not enough of it. Put more in."

I silently took the glass and set it on a piece of white paper in the bright sunshine. "Now look from above down into it."

"It is blue," said the little one, clapping her hands, "but only a very little."

"Look at it from the other side, where the sun is shining into it. Is it not a little bit red, like the bell flowers which you picked yesterday?"

"That is wonderful," said the little one. "It is blue from above, a little bit red in the sun, and when we look at it from this side of the room we see nothing!"

"Think about it a little. The glass is as broad as my finger is long. But it is at least three times as high as my finger. When you look at it from the side, you see only a finger's length of water; but when you look down into it, you see through three fingers' length of water—three times as much. You see it blue from the side, and three times as blue from above, don't you?"

"Is that really true?" said the little one, as she measured with her finger. She nodded that she was satisfied.

"Now imagine that the water is as deep as the height of the church steeple, and deeper—that it reaches from here up into Salvan and down to Vernayaz. Then you would see the water from above it all blue."

"Is the lake, then, really so deep?"

"Yes, and deeper."

I will not continue the conversation any longer. It went on with various simple experiments, beginning with differently colored stones, which I let drop into the water, and then placed on the white, then with setting the glass with its weakly bluish contents on differently colored papers, and ended with my trying to make the children perceive how the colors changed when they were seen through the whole depth of the glass. I will not say that the little ones were brought to a full comprehension of the matter, but they stuck fast to the assertion that water is blue, of an infinitely weak blue, and that the blue color cannot be seen till one looks into a certain depth of it.—Carl Vogt in Popular Science Monthly.

Search Lights versus Torpedo Boats.

It is stated that one of the most effective means of protecting a ship in these days of torpedoes (the grouping together of a number of stationary search lights, each illuminating its own section so that the ship is surrounded by an unbroken circle of light), is to be adopted in the new American warships. This has been suggested by a very pronounced defect in the usual search light practice. In order to afford sufficient time for a careful examination of the water's surface at points removed from the ship, the beam of light must be revolved very slowly, and hence during a great portion of the time any particular section of the water is left in darkness. As it takes only five minutes for a torpedo boat to run a distance of two miles, it will be seen that the conditions are all in favor of the attacking force. Before the revolution of the search light is completed there is plenty of time for the torpedo boat to run up and discharge her deadly weapons.—New York Telegram.

An Electrical Sunrise.

A Twenty-third street theater has brought out an electrical sunrise. A curved screen, part of which is made of gauze, so that the light may shine through, extends around the stage, and behind it is an elaborate system of incandescent lamps. The controlling apparatus is so graduated that fifty different degrees of light and shade can be produced, thus causing the sunrise to grow imperceptibly. Another use of the electric current made at the same place is in representing the explosion of a bomb.

A paper shell contains just enough powder to explode and make a flash. This is fired by electricity, while at the same moment another circuit controlled by the same key sets off a gun behind the scenes, which furnishes the necessary noise.—New York World.

Two Epitaphs.

Remarkable are two epitaphs, the first of which is said to be upon a tombstone in the city of Sacramento: "Here is laid Daniel Borrow, who was born in Sorrow, and Borrowed little from Nature except his name and his love to mankind and hatred to redskins; who was nevertheless a gentleman and a dead shot; who, through a long life, never killed his man except in self defense or by accident, and who, when he at last went under, beneath the bullets of his cowardly enemies in the saloon of Jeff Morris, did so in the sure and certain hope of a glorious and everlasting Morrow."

The other, which belongs to a Nevada burying place, is a noteworthy achievement in this line. "Sacred to the Memory of Hank Monk—the Whitest, Biggest-hearted, and Best-known Stage-driver of the West; who was kind to All and Thought Ill of None. He Lived in a Strange Era, and was a Hero, and the Wheels of his Coach are now Ringing on Golden Streets."—Chambers' Journal.

Philadelphia Pretzels.

Philadelphia pretzels are a thing by themselves; that is, the genuine Philadelphia pretzel is, but unscrupulous manufacturers have been making imitations with machinery which have served to lessen the high standard raised by the reputation of the homemade pretzel. The pretzel came over with the Dutch, and it is still found in its original purity in Lancaster and Berks counties, the inhabitants of which have been so many generations in this country that they are unable to speak their mother tongue. They have not been here long enough to learn English, so they make their pretzels as they were taught, and talk the language which they have manufactured.—New York Sun.

THE WOMEN OF LONDON.

Their Curse Is Drink, Resorted To by all Classes.

Here at a moment's glance you may see the distinctive curse of London's poor. The women drink. Mothers, daughters, sisters, wives, grown women, children of tender years—the gin-shop is open to all. Nowhere in New York did I see or hear of women not utterly abandoned habitually frequenting saloons. Nowhere in London is there a public house but the women will be as good (?) customers as the men. It is impossible to overrate the influence, the soul-destroying influence, this has had upon the homes of the poor, for it is by this, I am convinced, that the idea of right and wrong has come to be hopelessly confused where it is not absolutely lost. It is not uncommon to find a mother who since marriage has been a faithful wife, and perhaps before that a virtuous girl, looking on with indifference while her daughter "goes on the streets" and is lost in the unnumbered legion victims hourly sacrificed to the demon of vice. She may regret the fact, as a mother in a wealthier station might regard her daughter marrying beneath her, but there is no shock, no natural horror, at the wanton marring of God's fairest handiwork, a woman's soul. In our long worship of Mammon, the shame of poverty and the shame of sin have got confused; to the poor in their misery the burden of disgrace is but a slight addition to the load they already carry.—Lady Henry Somerset, in North American Review.

A Remarkable Railroad.

Taken altogether the Russian Transcaspian railway is one of the engineering wonders "of this, the iron-bound century." At first it was considered impossible to maintain a road through the shifting sands of the Kara Kum desert, but Gen. Annenkoff, who was Superintendent of Construction overcame what was supposed to be an insurmountable obstacle by covering his railroad with clay and planting the sides with thickets of desert plants and shrubs. But when this had been done and the boardbed assured, a cry went up to the effect that the scheme would have to be abandoned because there was neither fuel nor water along the line. The doughty General solved the water problem by bringing water in pipes from the mountains, and his cousin constructed a locomotive which used petroleum for fuel. But yet there was another great obstacle in the way, the classic Oxus, which would have to be crossed with a bridge 1,000 feet longer than the Brooklyn wonder. This difficulty was finally overcome, and the road is now in active operation.

Jonah and the Whale.

There is nothing in the original texts of the Bible to show that the creature which we are told swallowed Jonah was really the same animal we call a "whale" in this day and age of the world. The word translated into both the Septuagint and the New Testament by the Greek "Katos" means simply a sea monster, and this word was the one used by our Lord in his reference to the account of Jonah's exploit. Matthew xii., 29—41 So far, therefore, as the Hebrew or Greek words are concerned, the monster may have been a shark, a sea-serpent, or some other uncanny denizen of the deep. Hence there is nothing incredible in the statement that Jonah, upon being thrown into the sea, was quickly overtaken by some water monster and swallowed without suffering mutilation. To biblical students it is a wellknown fact that a vessel sailing from Joppa to any Spanish port must pass through a section swarming with a species of shark called a "sea-dog." The sea-dog has a throat large enough to swallow fair-sized men.—St. Louis Republic.

MARRIED ALREADY.

AUNT MELISSA was going to be married.

Kate and I couldn't understand it at all. And we didn't quite like the open and undisguised manner in which Aunt Melissa triumphed over us. For Aunt Melissa was 40, with a network of fine wrinkles around the corner of her eyes, and a figure like an apple dumpling. And Kate was a tall, imperial beauty, while I—well, Joe Meriton said I was the prettiest girl in Marchfield! And my looking-glass didn't altogether contradict the fact.

But you see, Aunt Melissa had a neat little bank account of her own, a brace of mortgages, and owned a block of houses in the very heart of the village. And poor papa lost all his money before he died, and left us to Aunt Melissa's care, so that we were poorer than poverty.

Aunt Melissa, however, had always been very kind to us in her way, but this was all over now. Mr. Specklebury wanted "his dear Melissa" all to himself, and so poor Aunt Melissa, who saw all the world through Mr. Specklebury's spectacles, gave us notice to quit.

"Of course, girls," she said, "I'm very sorry to loose you; but a wife's obedience is due to her husband."

"Whatever we do," said Kate, "we shall be better off than Aunt Melissa; for, Annie, that Mr. Moses Specklebury is a knave," when Aunt Melissa had left the room.

"But Kate, he is the Superintendent of the Sundayschool."

"I can't help that."

"And he always leads prayer meeting."

"I can't help that."

"And he quotes the Scriptures so beautifully"

"Nevertheless," persisted Kate, "he is a knave."

That evening we were with Aunt Melissa, when Mr. Specklebury tip toed in, with that dancing master gate of his which was so disagreeable in our critical eyes. We both rose.

"Don't go, my dear girls," said Mr. Specklebury, with infinite patronage.

"We are not your dear girls," said Kate, flushing up.

"And," added I, "we prefer not to remain."

"Melissa," said Mr. Specklebury, turning with elevated eyes to the bride elect, "will you allow me your chosen husband, to be insulted thus by these upstart girls?"

"Don't, girls," said Aunt Melissa, feebly.

"I can endure much," said Mr. Specklebury, "but not this. Tell them, Melissa, that they can no more remain inmates of your home."

Well, of course, that was the end of it. Aunt Melissa begged us privately not to go until after the wedding, because there was so much to do, but the moment the benediction was pronounced over the newly-joined couple, we knew that we were, to all intents and purposes, turned out of doors.

And Mr. Specklebury had triumphed.

. . . .

It was the day before the wedding. The big cake had just come out of the oven, a huge mass of sugar, citron and chopped raisins. Kate, who was skillful in such matters, had frosted it all over, and she and I were busy in surrounding it with a garland of sparkling sugar roses, while Aunt Melissa was rubbing up the best spoons with a piece of chamois leather, and polishing the glass drops of the girandoles, when there came a ring at the door bell. Aunt Melissa dropped her chamois leather.

"Something's happened," said she.

"Nonsense," said I, "it's only the man with the maccaroon castle and the candy temples. You are nervous, Aunt Melissa, that's all."

Just then the door opened, and Peggy, the maid-of-all-work, trotted in.

"It's a lady, ma'am," said she, "wants to spake wid yez!"

And the visitor, instead of waiting to be shown into the parlor, followed Peggy into the sitting-room, where we were all at work.

"Which of you is it," said she, staring around her, in a careless, self-possessed sort of way, "who is going to marry Moses Specklebury?"

"I," said Aunt Melissa, in an astonished tone, "am engaged to him."

"Well, he's got one wife living already," said the lady. "And that is me I am Mrs. Moses Specklebury!"

"I don't believe you!" almost screamed Aunt Melissa, who had turned a dull, chalky white.

"Here's my marriage lines, then, to prove it," asserted the stranger; "and my wedding-ring; he deserted me."

And the self-same moment Moses Specklebury tip-toed in, behind a basket of flowers which he had brought from the florist's—charged, of course, to Aunt Melissa's account.

"A-hem-m-m!" said the matron. "How d'ye do, Moses?"

Crash went the rosebuds and heliotropes over the floor. Mrs. Specklebury stood looking like Hamlet on the stage when he sees his father's ghost.

"Moses," gasped Aunt Melissa, clutching at his sleeve, "is this true?"

Mr. Specklebury stood limp and helpless in the middle of the room, looking like a whipped cur.

I can never remember just how Mr. Specklebury and his real wife got themselves out of the room. Kate cannot, either. We were both so busy with poor Aunt Melissa, who had fallen, fainting, on the floor, that we had no eyes for anything else.

But there was no wedding for the morrow. And Kate and I, at Aunt Melissa's humble entreaty, remained with her, instead of becoming saleswomen or giving music lessons.

FREAKS OF BULLETS.

They Sometimes Take Queer Liberties, Regardless of Precedent.

It might be of some interest to your readers to learn of the freaks of two bullets that came under my observation in 1877, during the Nez Perce Indian war, in the cottonwood fight, says Lew Wilmot in Forest and Stream.

F. A. Fenn had a bullet cut four holes in his pantaloons without drawing blood, and one burned both lips and loosened a front tooth. This was kissing a bullet in reality.

About one week later I was running a race with some fifteen or twenty Indians. The goal was a small mound. Whoever reached the mound first could hold it. We had some friends coming on the trail, which passed just at the foot of the mound. The horse I was riding was quite fast. I had got 100 yards or so ahead of my companion, and stopped to take a shot at an Indian. After I shot I jumped on my horse just as a young fellow came up. We were on the move, when he said, "Lew I'm shot." I asked him if he was hurt badly. "No, I have caught the bullet."

"All right," said I put it in your pocket."

I let my horse run and soon left him, for I had the trail and the Indians had the grass. I reached the foot of the mound when the nearest Indian was about 150 yards away from the foot on his side. The mound was tolerably steep and about 150 feet high. I let my horse climb as fast as he could. When I reached the top I jumped off and the Indians were on the run to get out of the reach of my long-range Remington. I opened fire and kept it up as long as they were in sight. When the excitement was over the young fellow showed me where he had been shot. The ball had just grazed his arm, making a blue streak about five inches long, and had struck his gun barrel, where it screws into the frame, and had raised a dent on the inside of the barrel as large as a pea; it then glanced and fell into his left hand. The gun was ruined, but it saved his life.

The shot had been fired at me, as the young fellow had not been in sight for an instant.

I tell you those bullets that are out of those government guns, with seventy grains of powder and forty-five grains of lead, are dangerous things to be kissing and catching. No, thank you, I don't want to be around when there are any more flying.

BOSTON BOILED EGG.

But the Boiler Was Thinking of a Different Kind of a Lay.

Everybody who has ever been in any way an invalid appreciates what an imperious thing a convalescent's appetite is. Probably pretty nearly everybody will, therefore, sympathize with this direful case of a certain young man who was just putting by an attack of malaria and craved a soft-boiled egg, says the Boston Transcript. Now, as it happened, the cook of the house was absent and the young man's exceedingly pretty and æsthetic sister proffered her services. The young man huddled himself into a chair in the dining-room. He had no watch about him, but he felt quite sure that quite half an hour must have passed before his impatience roused itself to the point of investigating the kitchen. When he entered the pretty sister was bending over the stove with flushed cheeks and eye-glasses much awry. "Why, what a hurry you're in," she remonstrated. "It has only boiled about a second."

"A second?" Then, as she afterward told of it, over he marched to the clock and said something under his breath that looked very savage indeed; and then he informed her that it had stopped. But that wasn't the worst of it by any means. When she had frantically begun skimming around and finally brought the solitary egg to the surface he gave it one glance and his face fell as only a malarial young man's face can fall, but all he said was: "It's a china nest egg!"

Why Willie Got a Spanking.

His Mamma—Willie, I wish you would go into the pantry and bring me the bottle with a rubber cork in it that you will find on the top shelf.

Willie (returning after a prolonged absence—Couldn't find any bottle with a rubber cork, mamma.

"You didn't look. Go again. It's in plain sight—a big round bottle with a rubber cork in it. Make haste."

(After another prolonged absence) "You must be mistaken, mamma. No bottle there with a rubber cork."

(Goes herself and returns with bottle.) "You good-for-nothing boy! It was standing where you couldn't help seeing it. I've a good mind to"——

"Oh, that's the bottle, is it? Why I saw that one all right enough."

"Then why didn't bring it?"

"You said you wanted one with a rubber cork in it."

(Losing all patience.) "Can't you see this has a rubber cork?"

"Oh, no, mamma. That's a rubber stopper. There's no such thing as a rubber cork."—Chicago Tribune.

Life Was too Short.

A magazine writer assails our venerable departed friend Methuselah because there is no record that in the 969 years of his life he went about Asia advocating the construction of good roads. It is likely that this writer has done great injustice to Methuselah. No doubt the old gentleman was in favor of good roads, but what do we know about the Asiatic legislature of those days? May they not have been much such bodies as we get nowadays? And what can a good, quiet citizen do with a legislature of the present? What leislature could be reformed in the brief space of 969 years, even if a reformer were to undertake the job? Let us see no more criticisms of Methuselah. He did the best he could.

SHE SECURED HER PICTURE.

A Telltale Work of Art Bought by an Embarrassed Young Woman.

The usual routine duties of the Philadelphia customs officers were broken for several of them the otherday by the public sale of seized, unclaimed, and warehoused merchandise which had been allowed by consignees to remain in the bonded warehouses after the expiration of three years from the date of its receipt. Very few of the purchasers obtained bargains. The greatest bargain, at least what was probably considered by the purchaser to be the greatest bargain, at the sale, was a portrait in oil of a lady and gentleman taken in what the Philadelphia Press calls a very affectionate attitude, which was purchased by the lady chiefly concerned for 80 cents. It had been received by mail from Japan in 1887 and was seized and held as dutiable as a foreign work of art, at an appraised value of $52, by the customs officials and placed in custody of the United States storekeeper. The young lady was among the first arrivals and wanted to make some arrangement whereby the picture could be purchased and delivered to her without being exposed to the public gaze. This was impossible, however, the law requiring that all articles must be exposed to view and sold to the highest bidder. When the turn of the portrait to be auctioned off came a united and spontaneous shout of "Ah-h-h," and "Ain't that sweet," arose from the assembled crowd. The poor girl, her face crimson with blushes, stood close by the auctioneer, too much embarrassed to speak.

An unsentimental bidder offered 5 cents for the portrait. This was more than the young lady could stand, and she raised the bid to 50 cents. Then somebody else made an offer of 1 cent more, and in this way the picture was run up to 75 cents. When the young lady bid 80 cents the crowd, thinking they had enough fun, stopped bidding and angry and almost in tears she was allowed to carry off the coveted portrait.

WHEN TERROR WILL FLEE.

A Writer Discourses of the Time Put Off, th May Bea De

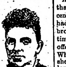
The history of man might be called the decline and fall of error. Formelry, says Walter Besant in the London Queen, we were afraid of everything. Of the sea, because we knew not what was beyond it, or what it might do. It had been known to rise in resistless might and to whelm great cities; monsters had been seen in it—calamaries, krakens, sharks and whales; the sea was a very terrible thing. Then there was the forest; no one could tell what might come out of the forest; wolves were there for certain, and serpents, and very likely human enemies wanting to kill us. Then there were the thousand and one diseases, every one of which was fatal. And there was the vast unknown world beyond—filled with enemies, creatures like men, but speaking an unknown tongue and breathing hatred—devils they were, not men. When this universal error was still unconquered, the historian began and so we know what it was, and how it held the people so that they sought by charms and magic to escape from it and to get a little confidence. Then they began to find out things and gradually the terror was dispelled. They crossed the sea and found out what was on the other side. they penetrated the forests and killed the wild beasts; they learned strange languages and traveled in strange lands; they found out how to ward off diseases. Finally there remains of old the terror only one or two things. Men fear, now, nothing but what they cannot control—some forms of disease; earthquakes, lightning; we shall perhaps, control the lightning; we shall learn the cause of earthquakes; we shall put off death.

The Cow In Later Summer.

About the worst month in the year for the dairy cow is August and early September. On most farms the pastures are shorter than they ought to be for the good of the owner's pocket-book; the days disagreeably warm, and with insect pests the cow's life is not a very enjoyable one. The milk yield decreases and with it, of course, the pounds of butter fat, and also the "check" the dairyman receives for his milk, cream or butter as the case may be. All farmers do not have things arranged so that they can make the cows as comfortable during the warm weather as they were in the spring and early summer weeks, but all can do something toward mitigating the evil effects of short pasture if nothing else. A cow cannot keep up her milk supply if she is compelled to work all day in the hot sun—fighting flies meanwhile—and then is unable to satisfy her hunger. The remedy is to supply food in addition to pasture, says Live Stock Indicator. Green corn fodder is a great help. At this season it will be time to feed roasting ears to pigs. Save the fodder for the cows. Keep hay in the racks in the yard or pasture. It will help. Any palatable food that is at hand will help the cow tide over the most trying month in the year. Where there are comfortable and well ventilated barns it will be found profitable to darken them and keep the dairy herd in doors during hot days. Barns are useful in the summer as well as in the winter. Almost anything that can be done to make the dairy cow comfortable, it will pay her owner to do.

For little chicks, make a run of lath, which can easily be four feet square, with a soap box for shelter, and the chicks will have plenty of room, as well as be safe from the cats and hawks. Move this run to a new piece of ground every day, so as to give the chicks a fresh scratching place, and keep them in the run until they are quite large. They will thrive well, and but few of them will be lost.

Of our 44,838,865 sheep today in the United States it is estimated 30,000,000 are west of the Mississippi river.



I Can Walk a Mile

Easily, although for a long time before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I could not walk a step without help. I had a terrible running sore on my leg, resulting from milk leg. The flesh was black around the sore, which seemed to be eating into the bone. My mother says she never saw such a sore leg. Nothing did me any good till I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. The pain grew less until it ceased wholly, the dark color disappeared, the sore has healed, and the limb is perfectly healthy I cannot speak too highly of

What a Woman Can Do.

She can come to a conclusion without the slightest trouble of reasoning on it, and no sane man can do that.

Six of them can talk at once and get along first rate, and no two men can do that.

She can safely stick fifty pins in her dress while he is getting one under his thumb nail.

She is as cool as a cucumber in half a dozen tight dresses and skirts, while a man will sweat and fume and growl in one loose shirt.

She can talk as sweet as peaches and cream to the woman she hates, while two men would be punching each other's heads before they had exchanged ten words.

She can throw a stone with a curve that would be a fortune to a base ball pitcher.

She can say "no" in such a low voice that it means "yes."

She can sharpen a lead pencil if you give her plenty of time and plenty of pencils.

She can dance all night in a pair of shoes two sizes too small for her and enjoy every minute of the time.

She can appreciate a kiss from her husband seventy years after the marriage ceremony is performed.

She can go to church and afterward tell you what every woman in the congregation had on, and in some rare instances can give you some faint idea of what the text was.

She can walk half the night with a collicky baby in her arms without once expressing the desire of murdering the infant.

She can do more in a minute than a man can do in an hour and do it better.

She can drive a man crazy in twenty-four hours, and then bring him to paradise in two seconds by simply tickling him under the chin, and there does not live that mortal son of Adam's misery who can do it.

Had a Billious Feeling.

In a restaurant down in McLeansboro the other night, says the Mount Carmel, Ill. Register, a party of young fellows were sitting and standing around the stove waiting for the midnight Louisville & Nashville train to come in. One of the gang had been out the night before with his best girl and was exceedingly sleepy. Stretching himself in the chair he was soon in the land of Nod, the upper half of his head unhinged and thrown back, and his mouth so wide open that it resembled the entrance to the Patton tunnel. The boys gazed on him in silence for a few moments; then one of them slipped out to a drug store, from which he soon returned with a small pill of asafetida, which he deftly placed upon the sleeper's tongue. The warmth of the mouth dissolved the drug in a few seconds and the snorer awoke, stretching, gaping, and yawning like a Cherry Grove darky with a premonition of a Patoka creek chill. "Boys," said the victim, "darned if I ain't as billous as a goat! I never in my whole life had such an all-fired mean taste in my mouth." And the shout that went up drowned the whistle of the approaching train.

Wild Hogs in Queensland.

Wild hogs have been increasing at a prodigious rate in Western Queensland. A hog-hunting party was organized at Currawildi, and their bag, after three days' operations, reached the respectable total of 568. Shot guns, improvised lances, and a variety of other weapons were pressed into service, the tallies being—first day, 210; second day, 180; and third day, 160. The hunt appears to have been organized to thin the hogs down, in order to check their depredations. A partiality for young lamb on the part of the "grunters" is alleged to have been in the forefront of their numerous offences.

How Nicefellow Got Even.

Irate Father—"I found my best coat hanging on the fence, with the tail torn all to pieces."

Daughter—quietly—"You shouldn't have left it in the hall."

"Why shouldn't I?"

"Most likely Mr. Nicefellow put it on over his other last night. It was a little cool, and—er—I presume you forgot to tie up the dog."

His Visible Means of Support.

An Atlanta paper relates an instance that took place in the police court recently in that city. A woman who had been begging in the streets was brought up as a vagrant for the third time, but on account of the repeated offense was sentenced for thirty days. Whereupon she begged earnestly that she might be released, as she had a large family to support, and what would her husband and children do if she were sent up. The judge expressed incredulity as to her having a husband, when a man stepped forward and vouched for her as his wife, and said if the Judge would only let her off he would see that she worked in the future and supported her family. The Judge distinguished himself by replying that he would let the woman go and send the man up for six months as a vagrant, since he had no visible means of support. The man was marched out, muttering: "No visible means of support? Good Lord! Ain't my wife in court?"

Injured in a Friendly Scuffle.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Special.—During a friendly scuffle among jockeys this evening John Hawkins, a Minneapolis driver, was pushed from a table, his hip striking on the corner of a small box. He failed to get up, and when raised it was found he could not be moved on account of pain. After an hour he was conveyed to a hotel where he is now lying. The extent of his injury is not known.

Rather risky—the offer that's made by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Risky for them. For you, if you have Catarrh, it's a certainty. You're certain to be cured of it, or to be paid $500. That's what they offer, and in good faith—they cure you, or pay you, no matter how bad your case, or of how long standing.

But—is it so much of a risk? They have a medicine that cures Catarrh, not for a time, but for all time. They've watched it for years, curing the most hopeless cases. They know that in your case there's every chance of success, almost no chance of failure.

Wouldn't any one take such a risk with such a medicine?

The only question is—are you willing to make the test, if the makers are willing to take the risk?

If so, the rest is easy. You pay your druggist fifty cents and the trial begins.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

The secretary of the treasury states that the cholera crisis is practically past.

The president has appointed Gustave A. Schaltz postmaster at Two Harbors, Minn.

The resignation of United States Marshal Boaranki of Wyoming has been requested by the Washington authorities. This is supposed to be due to his not serving promptly a number of warrants in the case of the murder of the deputies in Johnson county last spring.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mr. Gladstone is about to go abroad for the purpose of spending two months in the South of France.

Gen. Butler's book has not proved to be a success, and it will afford no pecuniary profit to its author.

Capt. Francis Moore, who was promoted in rank recently, has commanded the same troop in the Ninth cavalry for twenty years.

Representative W. C. P. Breckinridge of Kentucky has decided to give up his house in Washington and make his home at Lexington.

If Lord Houghton, the new lord lieutenant of Ireland, should wear eye glasses he would pass readily in New York for William C. Whitney.

William Dunphy, the pioneer cattle king of California, died in San Francisco, aged sixty-four years. He was one of the richest men in the state.

D. A. McKinley, brother of Gov. McKinley of Ohio, and Hawaiian consul at San Francisco, died of paralysis. He was sixty-three years old and went to California in 1852.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Seven men are killed by a boiler explosion near Toronto.

Twelve people are killed and a number injured in a railroad wreck in Ohio.

Three horses are killed and their jockeys are injured at the Gravesend races.

The wrecked whaleback steamer Wetmore is going to pieces on the Oregon coast with several men on board.

During a sham bombardment on board the United States cruiser Philadelphia at Baltimore, a shell exploded, killing Capt. Martin King and badly injuring a gunner.

A collision occurred between two sections of a G. A. R. excursion train on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad at Kent, Ohio. Two sleeping cars were badly damaged. Several passengers were hurt, though not seriously.

SINS AND SINNERS.

A Missouri burglar commits suicide after being shot and wounded by a man whose house he was plundering.

A St. Paul peddler commits suicide and carries a terrible secret with him to the grave.

Col. Streator and other military officers are indicted in Pittsburg for assault and battery in the case of Private Iams.

Warrants are issued for the arrest of H. C. Frick and other officers of the Carnegie Steel company for aggravated "riot conspiracy."

At Pittsburg the grand jury has returned true bills against 167 Homesteaders for murder and aggravated riot. It is not known when the trials will begin.

Charles Stenfurth shot and killed Theodore Anderson in a water front saloon at San Francisco and then blew out his own brains. Both men were sailors and the tragedy was the result of an old feud.

Francisco Gonzales, who was arrested at New York, on a charge preferred by the Venezuelan government representatives of fitting out the South Portland and sending her to aid the Venezuelan rebels, was discharged recently. It is intimated that the Venezulaen authorities will purchase a vessel and attempt to overhaul the South Portland before she reaches South America.

By direction of Mayor Washburne, of Chicago, a warrant was served today on Michael C. McDonald, charging him with attempting to bribe Police Justice Woodman to render a favorable decision in the case of a number of men arrested at Garfield Park race track a few days ago. The prisoner was held in $2,000 bail. McDonald is the well known gambler and politician.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Ten Russians have been arrested in Berlin as revolutionary conspirators, and will be probably expelled from Germany.

The steamer America has arrived at Buenos Ayres from Genoa. She had on the voyage twenty-four deaths from cholera and has been strictly quarantined.

The truth of the rumors that cholera had appeared in Vera Cruz, San Luis Potosi, Quetara, Monicava, Candelaro and the City of Mexico is officially denied.

The Eastern ecclesiastical province of the Church of England in Canada has finally adopted the constitution as proposed by the Winnipeg conference, with a slight amendment.

Ryder, formerly American Consul at Copenhagen, who is under arrest for frauds connected with the administration of estates entrusted to him in his official capacity, has been held to await trial.

The report of the inspector general of bankruptcy in New England has been made public. The increase in bankruptcy since his last report was due to the collapse of Baring Bros. and the effects of the McKinley tariff law.

According to Poutney Bigelow, the German emperor's yacht Meteor will not been entered in the race for the American cup. Mr. Bigelow states that the emperor assured him that he had no idea of entering the Meteor.

Dr. Stuhlman, writing from Taboars, repeats that Emin Pasha is within the power of the Arabs at the south end of Albert Edward Nyanza, waiting for assistance to escape. The Arab revolt in Congo state is spreading.

Honolulu advices state that a petition to Queen Victoria for the establishment of a British protectorate over the Hawaiian islands is in circulation throughout the islands, and is being freely signed by natives. It will be presented to the British minister to be forwarded to England.

The New York Times publishes a statement from prominent Cubans there that Senor Marto, prime leader of the Cuban revolutionary clubs here, in Philadelphia, Tampa and Key West, have gone to San Domingo to carry on the agitation there and to continue the work of preparing for another uprising.

The council of the Tin Plate Workers Association assembled at Swansea Wales, have resolved to record their readiness to do all in their power to maintain the Welsh tin plate industry. They have instructed their executive committee to confer with the masters as to the best means of insuring the prosperity of their trade.

The inquiry into the charges of boodling preferred against Sir A. P. Caron, postmaster-general, in connection with subsides granted to provincial railways has begun at Quebec. The evidence adduced on the first day was unimportant. The accused official was present during the proceedings.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

Gov. Flower of New York is said to have sent a check for $40,000 to the Democratic national committee.

Weaver and Field, the Populist candidates for president and vice president, issue an address to the public.

Hon. James G. Blaine has sent the following letter to the Kenebec Journal: It has been stated by many journals that I did not vote at the late elections. My voting place is Augusta. It would have taken three days' time and 250 miles of travel to go there, register and vote. Instead of doing that a Democratic friend "paired off" with me, and thus I saved my vote and a good deal of time, too.—James G. Blaine.

THE TOILERS.

Chicago socialists and labor agitators vote to boycott the world's fair.

A strike and lockout of from 1,500 to 5,000 furniture operatives will occur in Cincinnati soon.

As expected a lockout of furniture workers in Cincinnati has began. The men resolved to not work more than nine hours a day at present ten-hour wages, and the employers, having resolved to not pay ten hours' wages for nine hour's work, fully 1,500 workmen are idle.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Oarsman Hanlon comes to the front again by challenging James Tansbury of Australia to row for the championship of the world. The race will take place in England or California for $2,500 a side.

President Young found it necessary to raise the national league and American association assessments from one-eight to one-sixth of the gross receipts in order to meet the notes of the twelve club league.

Moquette, the four-year-old stallion that broke the world's record at Richmond, Ind., is owned by Mike Bowerman, who drove him. The time was 2:10. He was driven to a pneumatic tire sulky on a regulation track.

Billy Smith of Boston and Billy Maber of Australia fought in the Pastime club at Portland, Or., with five-ounce gloves for a purse of $1,000. They were both within a half-pound of weight—140 pounds—and appeared in perfect condition when they entered the ring. Maber was knocked out in the twenty-fifth round.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

The passenger rate war is over and the Soo gains its point.

An air-line railway is being built from New York to San Francisco which will shorten the distance 800 miles.

The Soo's attempt to unsettle passenger rates is checkmated. Its Eastern connections refuse to honor cut-rate tickets.

Without giving any explanation of its action the Nickel Plate has put into effect a passenger rate of $12.50 from Chicago to New York and $3.50 to Buffalo. On New York business this is a cut of $7.50.

GENERAL.

It is proposed to amalgamate the G. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans.

Two deaths in New York city a few days ago prove to have been caused by cholera.

Indianapolis is unanimously chosen as the place for holding the next G. A. R. encampment.

Rev. Father Cleary leaves the Milwaukee arch diocese and will work with Archbishop Ireland.

Gen. A. G. Weissert of Milwaukee is elected commander-in-chief and Col. R. H. Warfield senior commander of the G. A. R.

A case of Asiatic cholera is reported at a Polish boarding house on Derby street, Salem, Mass. The authorities are investigating.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows has changed the headquarters of the order from Columbus, Ohio to Baltimore, Md., by a vote of 120 to 25.

The Louisiana Lottery company is reported at work in North Dakota again, attempting to defeat the anti-lottery constitutional amendment.

The German-Catholic convention at Dubuque criticises Senator Davis for his anti-Cahensly speech in the senate and threatens to work to prevent his re-election.

Prof. Brooks, director of the Smith observatory, announces the discovery of clouds upon Mars, which at times have obscured the continents and oceans, usually distinctly visible.

The wife of Charles Billings, a poor mountaineer living in Ashe county, North Carolina has just given birth to six children, all boys. They weigh from four and a half to nine pounds each.

David A. Wade of Enterprise, Ky., was married to Mrs. Elizabeth Garvin at Wellston, Ohio. They are a remarkable couple, their ages aggregating 182 years. The groom has passed the century mark.

The Presbytery of Cincinnati has decided by a large majority to put on trial for heretical teaching one of its members, Prof. Henry P. Smith, of the Lane theological seminary. The trial will begin Oct. 5.

A temporary injunction was granted at Boston against the American Protective League. The complainants complain that the order is insolvent, and it is alleged that its liabilities are $2,781,000 and its assets but $101,800. Counsel for the order consents to the temporary injunction. In two weeks there will be a hearing on the matter of appointing a receiver.

The council of administration of the World's Fair is still hard at work on the problem of shortening the program for the dedicatory exercises and it has been practically decided to omit the dedicatory ode, which consists of 20,000 words. The question of orations has been definitely settled. Chauncey M. Depew and W. C. Breckenridge are to be the orators. Their orations will be delivered on the same day and will be co-equal in dignity.

Father John Maczyski, a Polish Catholic priest, of Milwaukee, is charged with swindling John Kramer out of his house and lot, and Kramer began suit to recover the property. Kramer says that in 1890 his wife was arrested for larceny. The priest, who is Mrs. Kramer's uncle, told him to give him his home, or otherwise it would be seized by the persons who were prosecuting Mrs. Kramer. Kramer says he believed the priest and did as he told him. The priest now refuses to deed back the property, which is said to be valued at $3,200.

An unsuccessful attempt at robbery was made at Kenyon by two tramps who saw the old blacksmith, Dick Moore, paid off. The tramps enticed Moore into an out of the way shed, where the attempt was made. Moore wrenched himself loose and escaped. The marshal is looking for the tramps.

The Herbert Block, Farmington, was burned recently. It consisted of three stores, one unoccupied, one by the millinery store of Mrs. Meyer, and one had wheat stored in it. Loss about $2,000; no insurance. Meyer's goods were damaged some.

Spencer Hubbard, a young business man of Red Wing, and Mrs. Coons, wife of a laborer in Betcher's mill, disappeared mysteriously recently. Elopement is charged by the friends of the wife of the former and the husband of the latter.

While George Melins was taking his traction engine over the Whitewater new steel bridge, the bridge gave way and precipitated the engine into the water. Mr. Melins and George Thompson, who were steering the engine, jumped in time to save their lives. They both sustained injuries, however, that may prove fatal.

John Jones, aged thirteen, son of J. D. Jones of Long Prairie, ex-clerk of the supreme court, discharged an old musket at a hornet's nest. The gun barrel was wrenched from the stock striking him on the fore head, fracturing his skull. He is now lying in a precarious condition. The gun had been loaded for a year and the charge was rusted in.

John Buck, an aged farmer of Lanesboro, was killed the other day. He attempted to cross the railroad track in front of an incoming train, and at the last moment seeing that he could not make it, suddenly turned his frantic team and was thrown forward on the whiffle trees, where he was killed, being dragged several blocks.

The preliminary hearing in the case of John Flynn, at Red Wing, charged with murder in the first degree, came up and the prisoner appeared for arraignment but the reading of the warrant and the examination was waved. The prisoner was remanded to jail to await the action of the October grand jury.

WISCONSIN.

An Oshkosh boy named Peterson had his leg taken off by the cars near that city.

The number of students at the Wisconsin University the present term numbers 1,000.

The steamer K. M. Hutchinson, loaded with salt, sank in the Fox River at Oshkosh. The loss will be about $500.

Henry Spiek, living near Platteville, lost a child by black diphtheria.

The friends of high license at Belmont carried their town by a large majority.

James A. Hamilton, a former resident of Janesville, died at his home in Le Roy, N. Y.

The $500 license was carried at the special election at Boscobel by a large majority.

Burglars entered the residence of Daniel Bryant, a Dane County farmer, and carried off a number of articles of clothing, etc.

Baby, the 5-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Graves, of Janesville, fell and broke his left arm above the elbow.

Unknown parties entered the cellar of Mrs. J. W. Jordan, of Sparta, and carried off all her fruit and provisions.

Ladies of Fond du Lac have organized a joint stock association for the purpose of curing, preserving, compounding and preparing pure food products, sauces, and condiments for culinary and hygienic use.

Fred Hyde, of Bear Creek, is Waupaca County's greatest stock and hay producer. He has at present 125 head heavy mares and colts upon his 1,900-acre farm, and has cut this season 275 tons of hay.

Gib Schimerhorn, one of the leaders in the late Marinette strike, who was discharged on a technicality, has been arrested by the H. Witbeck Company upon a similar complaint.

The outlook for the potato crop in Waupaca County is very promising. The yield so far is about the general average, from 150 to 200 bushels per acre of first-class quality.

Tom Hawkins and Charles Burrell have been arrested at Superior on a charge of holding up Fred Messner, of that place, and relieving him of a watch and a check for $50.

The Racine papers report an epidemic of the most virulent type of diptheria on the south side of that city, and that several deaths have occurred among children.

The kiln-shed belonging to P. S. Sparling, of Sparta, together with considerable lumber, was destroyed by fire. The loss will reach $500, with no insurance.

William Kreger, a farmer residing near Jackson, Washington County, has been declared of unsound mind and taken to the Northern Hospital.

Mrs. John Figi, of Green Bay, has been granted a divorce from her husband at Janesville. She was also given the custody of their children.

A young man named Livsey, in attempting to jump off a moving train at Madison, was thrown on the ground and severely injured about the head.

Rose Pagel, of Weyauwega, who figured in a sensational case at that place a year ago, has been sent to the reform school at Waupaca.

Since the opening of the Appleton Knitting Works Company a few months ago, its managers have sold $15,000 worth of goods.

Morris Carnody, a brakeman on the Southern Minnesota road, had his leg crushed under the cars near La Crosse. Amputation was necessary.

The house of Thomas Hoey, of New Cassel, Fond du Lac County, was entered by burglars and some valuables stolen. The thieves entered the barn and had one of the horses harnessed, ready to ride off with, but were frightened away by the return home of the two daughters of Mr. Hoey.

The Ganahe & Gruner Lumber Company, of St. Louis, has closed a deal with McDonald Bros., of La Crosse for the purchase of a tract of pine land in Clark County. The price paid was $33,800.

John Munks, a Janesville resident, was held up at Five Points, near that city, and robbed of $3 in cash and a note for $70. The police were notified and claim to know who the highwaymen are. So far no arrests have been made.

John J. Smith, of Chippewa Falls is satisfied that trouble generally comes in a bunch. He is at present confined in jail at that place, and to make matters more uncomfortable his wife has applied for a divorce at Eau Claire.

Mrs. Anna Schindler, the oldest woman in Green County, died at New Glarus at the age of 95. She was one of the emigrants who came with the first Swiss colony.

The residence of John Walkush, of Berlin, was destroyed by fire, together with part of the contents. The loss will reach about $1,000, partly covered by insurance.

Louis Gehring, the man who was found badly injured near Appleton recently, and whose condition was considered critical, is now in a fair way to recovery.

The report that Whelan, who is in jail at Portage, charged with the murder of Gerald Spaulding last spring, had escaped is unfounded.

The special election held at Appleton on the license question drew out only a small vote. The $200 license was carried by 500 majority. Circulars were distributed by the saloon men in all parts of the city claiming that high license would injure the business interests of that place.

Dr. Charles K. Adams was formally elected president of the Wisconsin University. His salary was fixed at $6,500 with residence, and $500 for further expenses. A committee of five was appointed to arrange for public ceremonies at the inauguration of President Adams.

John Murr, of New York, has been visiting in Appleton the past few days. It is understood that Mr. Murr is interested in the proposed extension of a street car system from Appleton to Kaukauna, which will be built in the near future.

NORTH DAKOTA.

At Winona Mrs. Ellen Kelley, arrested on a complaint sworn out by John Waldron, charging her with selling liquor, waived examination and was bound over to the next term of the district court.

Kulm is the name of the new town at the terminus of the Soo extension on the Organ claim in Dickey county. The new town has already begun to boom on a small scale. The track layers commenced laying iron recently.

Warren Bell while descending into a forty-foot well of the Minnesota & Northern Elevator company, at Reynolds, fell to the bottom, the ladder having broken, crushing his skull. He died thirty minutes afterwards.

A deal has been closed which secures the location of a woolen mill at Grand Forks this fall of sufficient capacity to demonstrate the practicability and profit of the enterprise. Machinery will be brought here immediately. Next year a large plant will be erected.

A Grand Forks special says:—Threshing from the shock is nearly completed, the balance of the grain being in the stack. The weather is superb and grain in fine condition. The average in this county is 15 bushels, mostly No. 1 and 2 northern.

A man named August Kelly has been arrested at Grand Forks charged with the murder of Hans Halverson, of East Grand Forks, 12 years ago last June. Kelly is a carpenter in East Grand Forks. The warrant was sworn out by the widow of the murdered man. The accused waived examination, and was committed to the county jail at Crookston, to await the action of the grand jury.

Wm. P. Jones, alias "Texas," arrested as blind piggers at Devils Lake on complaint of Rev. Wm. Love and discharged for want of evidence, was arrested again on Love's complaint and jailed. Before leaving his pen he broke up bottles and other paraphernalia of the blind pig. Peter Kerstore was also arrested for the same offense on the same complaint.

A Jamestown Special says: There has been nearly a week of good threshing weather and a great deal of the grain is threshed. More machines than ever before are in the country. Reports indicate that in the eastern part of the state work is well along towards a finish. Grain is grading Nos. 1, 2 and 3 northern; much of it going to Duluth; trouble with sprouted wheat getting less and the area of the same seems confined to a few counties; since drying thoroughly grain is in a great deal better condition and is being eagerly bid for by elevators and mills.

IOWA.

The Rock Island passenger and milk train was wrecked near Farnum the other day. No one was injured, but the loss to the company will be about $50,000.

A company boring for oil at Redfield under the management of a Pennsylvania capitalist, at a depth of 175 feet struck a pocket of gas. Another well was immediately begin

Jesse Lewis and Wm. Cortes, small colored boys, were arrested at Keokuk for an attempted assault on a 12-year-old white girl named Madeline Schowalter, daughter of a railroad engineer.

John Brown was arrested at Des Moines, wanted at Council Bluffs for bigamy. Information was filed by his wife a month ago, but Brown had disappeared, but was captured again.

Walter Wray, the 10-year-old son of William Wray, living near Sloan, was crushed to death. He was driving a team of horses, but being unable to hold them they ran away. The wagon striking an obstruction overturned upon the lad, crushing him so badly that he soon died.

A gang of negroes tried to run the town of Spencer recently. Fifty shots were fired in the race war. Five negroes are now in jail. Great excitement prevails among the people and threats of lynching are indulged in. The negroes were tramps, and took possession of the town with the intention of looting it.

Mrs. Mary Marks swore out a warrant at Des Moines, for the arrest of W. J. Culbertson, on the charge of rape. Mrs. Marks is married and lives in South Des Moines. Recently she visited her sister, Mrs. Culbertson, at Runnels, Iowa. She returned to the city as soon as able and swore out the information.

Two prostitutes, Florence Winters and Lora Waldron, attacked Tom O'Day, an attorney at Sioux City, who has been filing informations against prostitutes and who is charged with blackmailing them. They beat him severely over the head and face with horsewhips, and when he started to run pelted him with eggs.

The four children of Mrs. Eckenbach were burned at Missouri Valley. They were sleeping upstairs. Their mother tried to fill a lighted gasoline stove and an explosion followed. She threw the stove downstairs and ran down herself to extinguish the flames. The fire spread and before help arrived the house was a mass of flames. The bodies of the children were burned to a crisp.

DUCKS AS CARRIERS.

A British Officer Advocates Training Them for the Service.

Major Allatt, who is himself a practical pigeon-flyer, states that the Italians employ pigeons very considerably in the Mediterranean in connection with their ships of war. The French also use them regularly and systematically in the Mediterranean during their naval maneuvers. This officer, however, is of the opinion that if we are going to use birds to fly over water for naval purposes, ducks would be better than pigeons, because when a duck gets tired he drops and sits on the water until he is rested, and then gets up again. Ducks, moreover, can fly by night, while pigeons cannot. Major Allatt thinks that seagulls might be trained also for message-bearing purposes.

Major Allatt warns us against some stories regarding long flights by trained pigeons which have been put forth on high authority. It was at his suggestion that an apocryphal tale of pigeons sent out to and returning from the Arctic regions, which he has even imposed upon Yarrell, was expunged from the last edition of that writer's "British Birds." An equally false account of a pigeon flying 1500 miles in America is also extant.

Major Allatt believes the greatest distance pigeons have flown of which we have any accurate record is in the races which have taken place two or three times from Rome to Belgium, a distance of between 800 and 900 miles. But in every one of these cases a very large proportion of the birds have been lost.

SOME FAMOUS HYMNS.

Their Authors Forced to Live Under the Veil of Obscurity.

It seems a singluar fact that apparently nothing in a literary way will relegate a writer to oblivion so surely as to be the author of a world-famous hymn.

Take a few instances:

Nearly every one has heard or sung the line of "Shall we gather at the river?" and yet how many know even the name of the author, much less the fact that he is living?

The writer is the Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D., a resident of Plainfield, N. J.

In Richmond, Ill., lives Dr. S. Fillmore Bennett. To how many is the name familiar, yet to whom is his familiar church song, "The Sweet By and By," not known?

In the Interior of New York State lives Mrs. Annie Sherwood Hawks, who wrote those famed lines of "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Hardly known and never recognized on the streets of New York as she walks out is Fanny Crosby, the author of countless hymns, among them the famous one, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus."

It is odd that the veil of obscurity should seem to be the inevitable reward of those whose pens have given us the hymns which have brought consolation and joy to so many thousands.—Boston Globe.

TOWN DESTROYED

The Little Town of Howard, S. D., Nearly Wiped Out of Existence by Fire.

A Man and Wife Lose Their Lives in the Destruction of Their Own Home.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Special, Sept. 27.—A special from Howard, S. D., says that a fire broke out in Simpson & Hall's sale stable there to-day, and every building on the east side of Main street for two squares was burned in less than two hours. R. B. Allensworth and wife perished in their home. The loss will exceed $10,000, with less than $40,000 insurance. Zizkrick, hardware dealer, loss on building is $5,000, and on stock, $15,000; insurance, $3,500. J. P. Grinager, loss, $12,000; insurance, $8,000. W. T. Shove & C. W. Daugherty, loss, $8,000; insurance, $6,000. The opera house and Allenworth block were burned. The Howard Press block and office are a total loss, valued at $2,000; insurance, $900.

Assistance was offered from Sioux Falls, but too late. A gentleman in Sioux Falls from Howard says the postoffice is also burned, beside a dozen other buildings not enumerated above. Allensworth and wife were old residents of Howard and highly respected.

ESCAPE IMPOSSIBLE.

Victims of the Thomson Gambling House Fire Locked in a Room.

THOMSON, N. D., Special, Sept. 27.—The gambling den which was destroyed by fire here last night was a most offensive sight in the eyes of all respectable citizens, but notwithstanding this, every effort was made to save the building and the unfortunate people who perished in the flames. The intense heat prevented good work on the part of the rescuers. Those who perished were Dennis Kohoe of Bridgewater, Ont., John Swanson from Canada, the body of the latter is yet unclaimed. John Turpin (colored) of St. Paul died of his injuries this morning. John Ellis of Arden Man is severely burned, and recovery is not expected.

Sam Curry of this place is badly burned about the face and neck, but will probably recover; Mike Clarry of Wisconsin, face and arms badly burned, with poor chances of recovery; Hugh McCarthy of St. Paul, burned about the face and hands. The remains of Kehoe will be shipped to Stillwater for burial. No disposition has yet been made of the other body.

This den was run by a colored man named Walter Preston and another negro, name unknown. They are wanted by the sheriff, but both left for parts unknown immediately following the fire. It is said that Preston had these victims, and others who were fortunate enough to escape, locked in an upper room. Escape under the circumstances was almost impossible. The fire was caused by an explosion of gasoline used for cooking purposes on the lower floor. The coroner's jury charges the accident to gross carelessness. No criminal intent was found.

CYCLONE IN NEW YORK.

A Number of Lives Lost and the Property Damage Is Heavy.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Terrific winds are reported prevailing throughout this state to-day. At Otsego the roof was blown off Malone's saw mill and trees and chimneys are down all over the city. The schooner Gazelle was capsized near Fairhaven. The crew clung to the wreck and drifted ashore with the exception of a sailor named Wilson, who was drowned. Fears are entertained for other vessels that are known to be out. In Long Island City a three-story building in course of construction was blown down. John Larsen, twenty-seven years of age, who resided in Williamsburg, was instantly killed. Olas Olson, a carpenter employed on the building, had several ribs broken, and three other carpenters, whose names are unknown, were also seriously injured. The building is a total wreck. The material used in the construction of the building was all second class. Charles Anderson, the boss carpenter, has, been arrested.

CYCLONE AT BROOKLYN.

Something of the nature of a cyclone swept over the city of Brooklyn, blowing down six houses, killing two boys and demolishing trees, fences, signs and everything in its path. Chimneys were blown down and one man seriously injured. Three small boys, Joseph Gould, eight years old; Charles Brown, same age, and one other were playing when the wind struck a brick house at Knickerbocker and Woodbine streets blowing it over. The two boys were buried beneath the ruins. The unknown boy escaped severely injured.

The gale struck five two-story and basement frame dwellings at Cornelia street and Wyckoff avenue and down they went in a heap of ruins. They had just been erected and were owned by William Burge, of Putnam avenue. John Deremiah, employed on the building, sustained a fractured skull and broken leg. Frederick Larkin, a contractor, was struck by a falling tree and fatally injured.

A SCHOONER WRECKED.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 27.—The three-masted schooner John Burt, bound for Oswego, was wrecked this morning near the mouth of Big Fancy creek, on Lake Ontario. One of the crew and the female cook, whose names have not been learned, were drowned. The vessel, it is believed, will be a total loss. The gale on the lake last night was one of the fiercest in years, and the waves are still running very high.

Another Horsethief Captured.

HURON, S. D., Special, Sept. 27.—Thomas Kanna, who once lived in this county and whose wife now resides near Cavour, was arrested and brought here to-day. He is wanted in Iowa for horse stealing and is a member of a gang recently broken up there. He is believed to know something of the disappearance of several horses from this county about two years ago. Sheriff Williams of Kossuth county will take Kanna to Iowa. This is the third member of the gang caught within the past few weeks.

Collided at a Crossing.

MOORHEAD, Minn., Special, Sept. 29.—This morning a freight train on the Great Northern road collided with a Northern Pacific stock train at the crossing of the two roads about a quarter of a mile east of the city, demolishing two cars and killing three animals and wounding several others. The wreck was soon cleared.

Free From Cholera.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—"Cholera is over, and at present the port of New York is free from the disease," was the cheerful report of Dr. Jenkins this noon, when he returned from the islands down the bay accompanied by Dr. Sternberg.

CONDENSED TELEGRAMS

Mrs. Harrison's condition was somewhat improved yesterday.

The Hawaiian government has adopted a new tariff schedule to take the place of the tariff of 1878.

At Fort Sheridan, Ill., yesterday the United States army preliminary rifle practice began. Seventy-two marksmen took part.

Postmaster General Wannamaker has issued an order to establish the free delivery service, to commence Dec. 1, at Decorah, Iowa; Yankton, S. D.; Stevens Point, Wis., and Mason City, Iowa.

Henry Poor & Son, leather merchants of Boston, have assigned. The immediate cause of the assignment was the burning of the tannery of the firm at Winn, Me., the latter part of August. The liabilities amount to about $275,000; assets nearly $500,000.

DEATH OF NYMPHAS HOLWAY.

The Wealthy Lumberman Passes Away at His La Crosse Home.

LA CROSSE, Wis., Special, Sept. 27.—This morning Nymphas B. Holway, the wealthy lumberman, died after an operation, made necessary by an abcess in the stomach. He had been confined to the house less than two weeks, and not many people knew that he was ill. Deceased was sixty-nine years old and a native of Maine. He came to La Crosse in 1854, after several years' work in Maine logging woods and three years' experience in the California gold fields, and engaged at once in logging, which business he followed to the present time. His estate is estimated at $500,000. He was just completing one of the finest residences in the city. Eight children survive him, four by his first wife, all grown up, and four by his second wife, who is a sister of Speaker Hogan, of the Wisconsin assembly. His oldest son, Orlando, is adjutant of the Third regiment, W. N. G. His second son, Eugene, manages a farm of 2,000 acres in Faribault county, Minn. A third son is in the lumber business in the same county. Deceased had his life insured for $20,000.

BLEW THE SAFE.

Burglars Enter J. H. Roche's Saloon, but Secure Little Booty.

ST. PAUL, Special Telegram, Sept. 27.—Early yesterday morning thieves broke into J. H. Roche's saloon, corner Robert and Fifth streets, blew the safe and broke open the cash register, though they only secured $20 as the reward for their trouble, for the safe contained nothing, and the $20 had been left in the register for change. In addition to the small amount of money, the marauders secured three small kegs of whisky, two of which were afterwards recovered from a negro who had bought them at a nominal figure. Where the third one is, remains a mystery. The thieves entered the place through the grating in the sidewalk, which they lifted and went into the cellar, and thence to the upper floor. The police were notified as soon as the theft was discovered, but so far have been unable to discover any clue to the thieves. It is believed that they are well acquainted with the premises, and the detectives think they know who perpetrated the theft. The blowing of the safe, while effectual, was a bungling job and not the work of professionals.

National Bankers Not Government Officers.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Sept. 27.—Gov.-Elect Fuller said to-night:

The alleged statement of B. B. Smalley, of the national Democratic committee, that I hold an office in a national bank, and am, therefore, ineligible to governorship, is without foundation, as I do not now, nor have I ever held any office created by an act of congress. Section 26 of the constitution of Vermont reads: "Nor shall any person holding any office of profit or trust under the authority of congress, be eligible to any appointment in the legislature or of holding any federal office under the state." In 1883 the constitution was amended by a vote of the people, and this section was added: "The words 'office of profit or trust under the authority of congress' shall be construed to mean any office created directly or indirectly by congress, and for which emolument is provided from the treasury of the United States."

Chasing the Roslyn Robbers.

TACOMA, Sept. 27.—The sheriff's posse in pursuit of the Roslyn bank robbers came upon them twenty miles east of Roslyn. A battle ensued and one of the desparadoes was wounded. The others escaped in the darkness. The meeting was a surprise to both parties. Their saddled horses were found in the woods near the track, which the riders had followed on leaving Roslyn. Two of them were positively identified and will be captured within twenty-four hours.

Decline to Serve.

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—George J. Gould and C. McGhee, who were elected directors of the Richmond Terminal company at the recent special meeting, have notified the officials of the company that they decline to serve. C. McGhee, who is one of the receivers of the East Tennessee company, was the only one of the Thomas party that was re-elected, and his declination indicates renewed hostility between Gen. Thomas and the present board.

Goddard and Jackson.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 27.—Parson Davies said to-night that he would, on behalf of Peter Jackson, accept the offer of the Pacific Athletic Club of San Francisco to fight Joe Goddard for a purse of $10,000. Goddard, who is also in this city, also says the offer suits him and he is ready to make the fight.

Reported Withdrawal of Telgen.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Sept. 27.—Dr. M. O. Telgen, Populist candidate for congress, it is reported, has withdrawn in favor of O'Brien, the Democratic nominee. The deal is said to have been effected Tuesday last, when both the Democratic and People's party committees held conferences in this city.

A Pioneer Press special from Princeton tells of the arrival there of Knute Nelson, Dave Clough and others over the Great Northern "by special train from Anoka." The courtesies of Mr. Hill are not confined to dinners at the Minnesota club, it seems. But, possibly, Dave "paid the freight.

Word reaches us this afternoon that the Democratic convention, in session at Crookston to-day has placed J. M. Hanson, of this place, in nomination for county auditor. Mr. Hanson is well qualified for the position and will make a good run in this vicinity, at least he will enjoy the distinction of being the first man in St, Hilaire to be nominated for a county office.

Supt. Speelman received a telegram this morning from the foreman os the construction crew stating that he did not know when they would be able to return and finish the construction work here. This would indicate that are finding more work than they expected. Mr. Speelman has telegraphed twice to find out when they would return but can get no definate information.

Yesterday (Wednesday) says the Mankato Review, the sun crossed the equinoctial line and the day was unusually warm. This is considered by weather prophets a never failing sign of a warm winter, and backing up the corn husks, the musk rats alone remain to be heard from. It is a little early to build their winter homes, but in all probabilities they will fall in line for a mild winter. All of which is death to the coal barons.

Washington, Sept 26,—Col. Lee Crandell, who traveled with Gen. Weaver and Mrs, Lease in their tour of the Southern States in the interest of candidates of the people's party, has returned to Washington, Col. Crandell was an officer in the confederate army serving in a Louisiana regiment, He says the treatment accorded Gen. Weaver and party in the south was a disgrace to civilization, When the mob found out that he had been in the confederate army he says they assured him that had they known it he would have received civil treatment.

Speaking of the present prospect of his party, Col. Crandell takes a rather roseate view of the situation and says Weaver and Field will receive the electoral vote of Alabama, Mississippi, North Carolina, Florida, California, Nevada, Oregon, Colorado, Kansas Nebraska and Minnesota, with good prospects in Virginia, Texas, Georgia and Arkansas. He counts Tennessee and West Virginia as certainly Republican.

The republican rally at McKinnon's hall last evening was a quiet humble little affair, that was in marked contrast for which the g. o. p., was noted before its humiliating fall two years ago.

Last night the only thing suggestive of enthusiasm was the music and even the band seemed to be affected with the prevailing gloominess, and the music was of that sad and solemn nature which was most suitable to the occasion, and the feelings of those who took part in it. It was indeed a pathetic picture, and it was no wonder that it brought tears to the eyes of the handful of leaders present as they looked back upon the days of their glorious victories, and then saw to what they had degenerated.—Crookston Times.

Knights of Labor Journal: The 12,394 business failures in the United States last year—an increase of 1,700 over 1890—are not so much an indication of exceptional stringency in the money market as of the tendency toward concentration in commercial matters. The big capitalists are eating up the smaller ones, and, whether the times are good or bad it is becoming increasingly difficult for the small trader or manufacturer to exist. Production and distribution are getting into fewer hands and it is for those who suffer by the process to say whether they wish their lot and that of their children to be the condition of wage-slaves to a handful of plutocrats or partners in a national system of industrial organization. There is no alternative.

Plow and hammer: A prominent lawyer of Tiffin, when asked if he would support Brice for the presidency if nominated replied: "Yes. The millionaires run this country and they ought to run it. They always have and always will. We do not want any ragged breeches brigade controlling affairs in this country." We wonder how this lawyer would get a living if it were not for the ragged breeches brigade. We wonder if this ragged breeches brigade does not only furnish the products but through it the money that allows the lawyer to live from the sweat of other men's brows.

"A vote for Weaver is a vote for Cleveland," says the Denver (Col.) Republican. "A vote for Weaver is a vote for Harrison," says the Louisville (Ky.) Democratic Courier. We say a vote for Weaver is a vote for an honest, upright man, and in favor of honest legislation.

It pays to be a renegade republican If a man wants a nomination on the republican ticket all he has to do is to repudiate the demands and principles of his party, become a political rebel for a few months and he can have anything he wants. Six years ago Knute Nelson was disloyal to his party and voted for the Mills bill. He was rewarded by being given the nomination for governor. Two years ago Halvor Steenerson bolted the party and took the stump for the alliance. Yesterday he was rewarded for his perfidy by being given the republican legislative nomination. Yes, it pays to be a bolter and a kicker.—Crookston Times.

The politicians and plutocrats says that the country has prospered. Yes it has prospered. Yes it has we'll admit, but there are so few that own this prosperity, Thirty thousand men own all the prosperity that has accumulated in the past twenty-five years, which shows that if these thirty thousand men are the country, it has prospered. But the great mass of people are bankrupt. It is time for the people to prosper, The plutocrats have shown us how, and if we don't do it we are greater fools than Thompson's colt, that swam the river to get a drink.—Fertile Journal.

An issue which must be hedged and protected by all the power of the two leading parties combined is worth no more than the breath that declares it. The people make the issues and they will find a way to express them, whether Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison want them or not. The issues which the press is the most deeply concerned about are the labor problems and the money supply. There are questions of tariff that are not yet adjusted, but it is not by any means the thing the people are most concerned about. Nonconformist.

In these days, when stump speakers are given to gloomy periods and to telling the people what a dredful state the country is in, one would never imagine that there is a sunny side to politics. But there is, notwithstanding, a very sunny side, and much of the sunshine has been embodied in a book entitled "The Sunny Side of Politics," just published by the by the Price-McGill Company, of St. Paul. In it are contained stories, witticisms, anecdotes and reminiscences, dating from old Whig times until the present day and dealing with all sorts and conditions of people. The Chicago Inter Ocean says that "it is full of good side shaking laughs and a book to be enjoyed by all classes" The Boston Traveler calls it "A remarkable collection of remarkably good stories." The Denver News says that there is "in this volume a host of witty and entertaining stories." The Cleveland Plaindealer calls it "A relief to the earnest arguments and wearying platitudes of the political campaign," which it surely is, for the book is just the thing to while away an autumn or winter evening. If your local bookseller does not happen to have it, send stamps or postal note for 50 cents to the Price-McGill Company, St. Paul, Minnesota, publishers.

MINNESOTA WHEAT COMBINE SUPPLEMENT

EVERY FARMER SHOULD READ HOW HE HAS BEEN ROBBED BY ELEVATORS AND RAILROADS.

ROBBED BY A RING

Full Story of the Great Crime Against the Minnesota Farmer.

The Minneapolis Wheat Ring Crushing the Wheat Grower to the Wall.

Millers, Elevators and Railroads Leagued in One Gigantic Combine.

Letters and Documents That Drive the Crime Home to the Robbers.

A Withering Expose of the Crime Made by the Chicago Herald.

Chicago Herald.

Farmers in the wheat-growing states of the Northwest will be astounded by the revelations made in a book which will be issued from the press today, and which will lay bare for the first time the vicious workings of a combination of elevator men, millers and railroad men to deceive and swindle the farmer, the merchant and the world at large. For years it has been known that a combine existed in the Northwest to control the output of wheat, but so wide-spread and so powerful was its influence that it successfully baffled the efforts of conscientious men to expose its iniquity. The home of the ring is in Minneapolis. From this favored point it has been enabled to fasten its fangs upon such great wheat-growing states as the two Dakotas, Washington and Oregon. But while it was reaching out to delude and swindle the farmers of those states it did not overlook the wheat-growers of its own commonwealth.

The Startling Publication

links the names of United States Senator Washburn, Charles Pillsbury, the "flour king," and other elevator and milling men and representatives of the great railroad interests to the infamous ring, and the array of evidence which it produces in eighty pages of closely printed matter cannot have any other effect than to bring the thousands of farmers in the great wheat belt to a realizing sense of their peril and an understanding of their impoverished condition. Throughout this reign of stealthy robbery and incredible duplicity the combine has enjoyed the all-powerful immunity which the Republican party of Minnesota could extend to it. The exposure, now so complete and so unanswerable, involves not only the potent influence of the men already named, but H. L. Loucks, president of the Farmers' Alliance of the United States, who is now on the stump for the so-called People's party in Texas, and who it is charged in the book was brought under the influence of Pillsbury in a most remarkable way.

No Escape for the Farmer.

The story of the infamous career of the ring explains to a great extent the miserable condition of the farmer in the wheat belt of the Northwest. At no time during its reign could he escape its clutches. From dawn to dusk of each day a conspiracy existed and still exists to rob him of the full value of the result of his toil. Out of this systematic plan of robbery the ringsters have been enabled to grow richer and richer and to strengthen the grip of the Republican party upon the states in which they had the savage effrontery to carry on their schemes. Next to the startling association of President Loucks, of the Farmers' Alliance, with the combine which, it is charged, practically wrecked the Farmers' Alliance Elevator company, a corporation organized by the farmers of Dakota, to which they sold their wheat and from which they got a price far in excess of that paid by the trust, the most sensational charge in the book deals with Charles A. Pillsbury, the millionaire flour king. Early in 1889 H. F. Arnold, of Larimore, Dak., representing the farmers of his neighborhood and of the combine, went to Pillsbury for advice as to the probable benefit they would reap in building an elevator of their own and selling the wheat to him. They were in sore stress for money. For years they had been ground down by some mysterious influence of which they had no knowledge, and it was their prayer that the "flour king" should give them advice on a project which they were confident would help them out of their dilemma. The scheme had to be squelched in the interest of the trust. If it were carried out at Larimore it would be given a trial at other points, and the result would have proved disastrous to the ringsters. Pillsbury replied that there was no money in the elevator business, and that the elevator companies had for years been losing money. Eight weeks previous to writing this letter, Pillsbury wrote a letter of entirely different character to the manager of the American department of the Credit Lyonnais bank, of Paris, France, in which he assured that gentleman that the elevators had always paid well and that the average of one of his companies for five years had been 30 per cent and the profits of other companies had been in some cases 40 and in other cases 50 per cent.

The Proof Positive.

The book does not assume that the trust exists and then seek to show how it can be wiped out, but it begins with the proof of the actual existence of the combination, and such proof is by letters written by members of the alleged combine themselves. This is its force, and it will necessarily have tremendous effect on the campaign. It has even been said that it will stir up the farmers of the Northwest to such an extent that there may be scenes enacted in Minnesota and its neighboring sister states paralleled by the doings of the farmers several years ago, when they burned elevators on the mere suspicion that the elevator companies were robbing them of a living price for their grain. The book claims that the proof presented is the first authentic evidence of the combine's existence. It is not entirely clear how this proof was obtained, but that the letters, facsimiles of which are given, were written by Charles A. Pillsbury, Senator Washburn, and half a dozen other presidents of railroads, elevator companies, banks, etc., there is very little doubt. The letters were mostly written to the Credit Lyonnais bank, in response to an inquiry from that bank as to whether or not the elevator companies of the Northwest were paying dividends, if so how much, and whether it would be safe to lend them money for meeting their current requirements. No little part of the sensation attending the publication of the document will be the position of the bank which wrote for confidential inside information, obtained the confidence of the elevator magnates and millers, and then betrayed it.

At Tremendous Profit.

The book affirms that the combine has been paying for several years such a low price for wheat that it can sell it in Minneapolis and Duluth at a net profit of from 10½ to 25 cents per bushel. The evidence begins with a description of the Minneapolis Millers' association, which is alleged to have been the combine up to 1886, when its charter expired. This organization, it is shown, fixed what was known as the "list price" for wheat, and that the twenty-five or thirty elevator companies, each running from 100 to 150 elevators at country points, entered into articles of agreement by which they agreed not to pay over the list price. This agreement is set forth in the book, and particular attention is directed to two clauses. The first of these provides that no offer over the regular list is to be made for wheat in any case, and no offer is to be made for wheat before it is delivered up to the elevators. The second clause provides that in no case shall the minimum dockage on unclean wheat be less than one pound per bushel. The book says that there are four methods by which the farmer is robbed of his wheat. These four robberies are alleged to be committed at the country elevators, and are in addition to other systematic methods of robbery practiced at the terminal elevators, and are boldly said to be by the orders and under the direction of the officers of the elevator companies.

THE GIGANTIC ROBBERY.

Four Methods Under Which It Was Shrewdly Conducted.

The four principal systems of robbery practiced at the country elevators are taken up and described seriatim. It is alleged that, as all the elevators are banded together and refuse to pay more than the fixed price, which is the list price, for grain, the farmer is prevented necessarily from going to any other elevator and getting a higher price for his wheat. It is claimed that the railroad companies co-operate with the elevator companies and refuse him cars so that he cannot ship the wheat to terminal points himself and is obliged, therefore, to sell it to the country elevators. Numbers of independent buyers have gone to country towns where combine elevators are paying this low or list price for wheat, and have paid the farmers a higher price; but they have not been permitted to continue paying a good price for wheat. The trust is alleged to have gotten rid of them by one means or another. In some cases it is said they were bought off; in others they were intimidated, and in others they were ruined by tricks which, if the book did not contain so much that was powerful evidence, would read more like romance than fact. The country elevators, by this combination, each received a pro rata share of the wheat brought in by the farmer, it is claimed, and averaged up their profits in such a way that no one elevator had any advantage over another elevator. The heaviest part of the country elevators' profits, it is alleged, is by the four systems of robbery heretofore mentioned. A description of these four systems is this:

First—The country agent is alleged to use a brass kettle, graduated, into which, by a simple trick and sleight-of-hand, he lets the wheat fall. Because the wheat is not solidly compressed in the kettle it is possible by manipulation for four different grades to be made of the same wheat. The wheat may be the first quality of wheat, No. 1 hard, but by this device it is made to appear to be only No. 1 northern, which is a grade lower, and between which two grades there is a difference of four cents per bushel. Running it down to the lowest grade, which the agent is able to do by skillful practice, there is a steal of as much as 12 cents on the bushel.

Second—This is the use of a seive so coarse that it permits kernels of wheat to go through it and fall on the floor. The seive is used in determining the amount of dockage—that is, the amount of dirt or refuse in the wheat which must be subtracted from its proper weight. By the use of a seive with coarse meshes the country agent is alleged to steal five, six or seven pounds, as the case may be, out of a bushel of wheat which weighs sixty pounds.

Third—The charge is made, and is accompanied by an illustration, that the country agent has a board under the floor of the elevator, one end of which is communicated with by a nail under his foot, over which nail he puts his heel. The pressure drives that end of the board down and tilts the other end of the board up. The latter end presses upward underneath the scale, and by the pressure with his heel the agent can make the wheat weigh light, and can rob in proportion as he puts force into his leg. One to ten bushels on a load of wheat is alleged to be the fruit of this robbery. It is further alleged that lead is put in the bottom of 200 and 300 pound weights and painted over.

Fourth—This robbery is alleged to be the great one of price. A very elaborate discussion is contained in the book of the price paid by the elevator companies to the farmers at country points of shipment and the price which those elevator companies get for the same wheat when they deliver it at Minneapolis and Duluth. The figures for a number of months in a number of years, taken from the reports of the market price, are given. Two or three instances may suffice to show what the general tenor of these figures is.

RINGSTERS' PROFITS.

How the Farmers Were Mulcted Out of Their Hard Earnings.

It is shown that the elevator companies paid in October, 1889, 61 cents per bushel for wheat at Crookston, Minn. This wheat was sold in Minneapolis for 77 cents, and Duluth for 78 cents. The difference between the price the elevator company paid for it and the price they got for it was therefore 16 and 17 cents. They paid freight on it of 10½ cents per bushel, so that the net profit was 5½ and 6½ cents on every bushel of wheat. This is net, and after all expenses of handling and freight have been paid. The output of wheat in the Northwestern country is, on an average, 100,000,000 bushels per year. In many cases the profits were much higher than these figures—in some cases running to 10, 15 and 20, and even 25 cents per bushel. In one month, it is shown, a bushel of wheat at Fargo, N. D., was bought at a profit of 20 cents between Fargo and Minneapolis, and repeated instances are enumerated of this tremendous profit in the buying and selling by the elevator companies of wheat. The showing derives added importance and significance from Charles A. Pillsbury's written statement to Mr. Arnold, of Larimore, that there was no money in the elevator business and that the loss by the elevator companies had been very great for a number of years. This statement is shown to be one of a series of repeated misrepresentations by the alleged conspirators to ease the minds of the farmers, who believed, although they had never before had any positive proof, that they were being deprived of more than the rightful profit accruing to the handlers of wheat. It is also evident that if the combine did not prevent competition and make it impossible for the farmers to ship the wheat themselves, the farmers could do so and make this profit of 6½ cents or more per bushel themselves. Great stress is laid upon the alleged continued and persistent misrepresentations by the so-called combine as to profits in the wheat combine.

Proof of the elevator companies knowing of the robberies by the elevator agents is purported to be given in a number of instances, one of which relates how a country agent for a well-known elevator company had an over-run, so-called, but which is understood to be merely a steal, of 10,000 bushels of wheat. It is alleged that this elevator company had repeatedly written the agent encouraging him to bring his elevator out ahead at the end of the year. It is said to be a common practice of the elevator companies to terrorize their agents into stealing from the farmers by various tricks and devices. One of the Pillsbury elevators, the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company, is charged to have paid for many years a bonus of from $50 to $500 to its country agents when they brought their elevators out ahead. In the instance above referred to the agent had been told that the company would make it satisfactory to him, and he expected something in the way of liberal compensation, but was very much disgusted when presented with a $250 gold watch and chain. It is said that he determined to steal for himself thereafter, and did so with such success that he is now the owner of a system of elevators in the Northwest, and is a member of the alleged combine.

INSNRUCTED TO ROB.

The Startling Testimony Given by Young Holcomb.

The book carries the proof of this systematic course of robbery directly to the doors of the officers of the elevator companies in an affidavit by a young man named Holcomb. This affidavit asserts that Holcomb mixed wheat for many firms while employed by one of the Pillsbury elevator companies, and that such mixing was done by and with the instructions of the officers of the company. The latter gave such instructions, he swears, with the knowledge of and by the consent of the directors of the company. He also says in his affidavit that he was instructed by Charles A. Pillsbury to "skin" all wheat and "raise" all grades on all wheat which was loaded out for shipment to other mills than those of Charles A. Pillsbury & Co., but to be very careful and not mix any wheat intended for the mills of the firm of Charles A. Pillsbury & Co. It is alleged that Charles A. Pillsbury was a member of the elevator company which employed Holcomb.

There are forty or fifty letters from J. H. Hiland, general manager of the Minneapolis Millers' association, the so-called trust, United States Senator Washburn, Charles A. Pillsbury, C. M. Amsden, general manager of the Minneapolis and Northern Elevator company, owned by the Pillsburys; S. A. Harris, president of the Northwestern National bank, of Minneapolis; E. Cardin, general manager of the Northern Pacific Elevator company; D. M. Robbins, president of the Northwestern Elevator company, and others. These letters all agree on the point that the elevator companies of the Northwest have made enormous sums of money during the last few years, and each letter is corroborative evidence that the profits ranged from 22 to 30, 40 and 50 per cent on capital stocks ranging from $300,000 to $1,000,000. Mr. Pillsbury and others who wrote the letters probably never imagined that those written to a Paris bank in 1889 would get back to America and be used in the presidential campaign of 1892, nor did it occur to Mr. Pillsbury himself that the letter written to Arnold, the Larimore farmer, and the letter to the Paris bank, the first to a point far distant in the Northwest and the second to a point thousands of miles away in Europe, would ever come together and be used as proof that Mr. Pillsbury and those associated with him had deceived the farmers and the rest of the world on this side the Atlantic as to the profits which they were making out of the wheat business.

From a letter written by Mr. Pillsbury to the Paris bank, it appears that the Minneapolis and Northern, one of his elevators, averaged during six years a little more than 30 per cent dividends; that the Empire Elevator company, in which Mr. Pillsbury owned half the stock, averaged for several years 40 per cent dividends; that the Northern Pacific Elevator company, the leading line on the Northern Pacific system of railroads, averaged "30 or 40 per cent dividends," to quote Mr. Pillsbury's exact language, and that the Northwestern Elevator company averaged 22 per cent dividends for five years on $700,000 capital. Mr. Pillsbury said that Van Dusen & Co. owned the largest line on the Northwestern railroad system in Minnesota and Dakota, and without knowing much about it, he would not be surprised if they made larger dividends than any other elevator company in the Northwest.

WASHBURN CAUTIOUS.

The Senator Suspected an African in the Woodpile.

Senator Washburn's letter seems to have been a very cautious one, as he was not certain why the French bank wrote to him to ask for information relative to the profits of the elevator companies. In making his statement of the condition of the companies he said he was not entirely clear as to the character of the information the bank desired, and that, if it would write him a little more definitely the object for which the information was required, he might be able to give additional facts of value. This letter contained the statement that the Northern Pacific Elevator company made a dividend of 40 per cent in one year, and that other companies had paid 25 per cent and 30 per cent dividends. E. Cardin, general manager of the Northern Pacific Elevator company, gave away some of the inside history of the alleged trust's methods in his letter to the bank, while Pratt & Porter, managers of the Empire Elevator company and Atlantic Elevator company said in their letter in response to inquiries by the bank that their elevators had earned from 20 to 50 per cent on the capital invested by them. D. M. Robbins, president of the Northwestern Elevator company, admits in a letter written by him that his company had averaged during four years dividends of 22 per cent on its capital stock. S. A. Harris, then president of the Northwestern National bank, in his letter to the French bank, showed that the average dividends for six years of the Northern Pacific Elevator company had been 30 per cent; of the Minneapolis & Northern, 31 per cent, and of the Northwestern Elevator company, 22 per cent. C. M. Amsden, general manager of the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company, wrote to the French bank, stating that this company, which is owned by the Pillsburys, operated 140 elevators throughout the Northwest, handling from eight to ten million bushels of wheat per year, and that this company had always paid dividends ranging from 20 to 40 per cent and that the same had averaged over 30 per cent since the business was started.

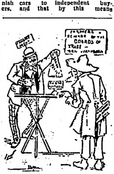
WHERE THEY WILL COUNT.

The Damning Letters Are Placed Side by Side.

The book, which is entitled "A Gigantic Conspiracy," places these letters side by side with the letter written by Mr. Pillsbury to Farmer Arnold stating that the elevators were losing money, and side by side also with his statements that his company and all other companies in the Northwest never, in their most prosperous years, averaged over 1½ per cent profit. The testimony before the house committee on agriculture and the state judiciary committee seems to have been ransacked by the compilers of the book, with the result that they have tangled up C. A. Pillsbury and shown where he made a statement in one breath and contradicted it in another. This testimony in these two committee meetings was taken, it will be remembered, in the fight for the passage of the anti-option bill. The examination of Mr. Pillsbury on those occasions brought out statements which were in substance that the elevator business and the milling business of the Northwest were not profitable, and that the wind-selling on the boards of trade throughout the country and option trading were the direct and only causes which he knew for the failure of the farmers to get a reasonable price for their wheat.

"A Gigantic Conspiracy" claims in a very elaborate argument that the wind-selling or option trading of the boards of trade has nothing whatever to do with decreasing the amount which the farmer receives for his wheat, but that the cause of the poor price for this cereal is found in the combination among the Northwestern elevator men and millers. It is sought to be shown that not only do the Pillsbury-Washburn milling interests in the Northwest deprive the farmer of a fair compensation for his crops, but that they also rob the millers of Indiana, New York, Maryland, Michigan and other states wherever milling is conducted by using the best grade of wheat for their own mills and permitting only the "skin" or mixed grades of wheat to go out to other mills. It is claimed that they carry this fraud to the extent of shipping "skin" wheat to Europe, and it is alleged that the character of the wheat on the European markets fixes a standard price and that that standard price governs the price of wheat in the West and Northwest, so that the effect is that the farmer gets for his finest grade of wheat the price of the cheapest grade. It is said that the European millers cannot compete, consequently, with the high grades of flour made by the Pillsburys, and this same rule applies to our domestic millers who are not in the Northwestern combine.

United States Senator Washburn receives a scoring at the hands of the compilers for his failure to mention at any time in congress the facts which he stated in his letter to the Paris bank to the effect that the elevator companies had made good profits, and he is also accused of bad faith in endeavoring to put the blame for the condition of the wheat market on the boards of trade when he must have known from these letters, as well as through his actions as a president of the "Soo" railroad, that the fault did not lie with the boards of trade, but was directly traceable to the millers and elevator men of the Northwest, aided and abetted by the railroads. A direct charge is made against Senator Washburn that as president of the "Soo" railroad he co-operated with the elevator men in preventing competition with the combination. It is asserted that he ordered the general manager, one Underwood, not to furnish cars to independent buyers, and that by this means competition was stifled. The evidence of one man is given who says that had this competition been permitted he could have paid the farmers a larger price for wheat than the combine elevators were paying and made as much money in sixty days at selling wheat as he had made in farming for eight years, so much less than its real price is being paid for grain by the members of this gigantic association. A fac simile of the letter written by Senator Washburn is printed and the feelings of the junior senator from Minnesota are not spared in this arraignment of the moneyed men of the Northwestern states. A cartoon shows Senator Washburn's "poverty-stricken" million dollar house as compared with the "palatial" mansion of the farmer. The Pillsburys are cartooned as robbing with one hand the farmer and endowing institutions in their old home in New Hampshire and the University of Chicago and educational colleges in Minnesota with the other.



FARMERS BEWARE OF THE BOARDS OF TRADE

BUNKOED.

STIFLING A COMPETITOR.

The Method Employed to Get Rid of a Man in the Way.

Probably the strongest evidence in the book is that furnished by C. C. Wolcott. It seems that in pursuance of its plan to stifle competition the trust bought up Wolcott in Larimore, Dak., where he was buying wheat for himself. A contract was made with him by the Minnesota and Northern Elevator company by which it agreed to pay him $5,000 per year for five years for no other reason apparent than that he was to stay away from Larimore, Dak., and not buy wheat there. He had been paying several cents more a bushel than the trust paid, and of course the farmers had been shipping their wheat to him because they could get more money for it. The history leading up to this contract is a very interesting one and is set forth in full in the book. It seems that the Minnesota and Northern Elevator company paid him for two and a half years and then stopped, and Wolcott now has a suit against the company in St. Paul to recover the balance due him. It is asserted that the combine resorted to all sorts of tricks to keep him from buying wheat before they finally made this contract with him. During the two and a half years that the contract was lived up to by the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company, owned by the Pillsburys, Wolcott received a great many letters from C. M. Amsden, general manager of the company, and these letters are the strongest evidence presented by the book. One of them, for instance, tells Wolcott that Charles A. Pillsbury requested him to "steer his man Loucks" out of Pillsbury's territory. Loucks is president of the Farmers' Alliance of the United States and is the man who is alleged to have been brought under the influence of Pillsbury, who was anxious to do away with the competition of the Farmers' Alliance Elevator company, run by the Farmers' Alliance, through Loucks, then president of the Dakota Farmers' Alliance. Another letter by Amsden directs Wolcott to do what he can toward preventing the establishment of a farmers' elevator, which was calculated to break the power of the combination at the point where it was proposed to establish it.

In one letter Mr. Pillsbury's manager suggests to Wolcott to take an interest in a mill which certain Eastern men were about to build at Park River, Dak., so that Wolcott could be on the inside and could induce the milling company to become a member of the combine, or, if they refused, he could wreck it. All of these letters by Amsden amount to this, that Wolcott was to act in the interest of the combine in breaking up farmers' elevators, in running independent buyers out of certain towns, in manipulating Loucks so that he could be prevented from doing the combination any harm, and generally to strengthen the combine's power and influence, but by means which were not only disreputable, but would seem to be in direct contravention of the anti-trust statutes of the state of Minnesota.

"FARMERS' FRIENDS."

A Pair of Americans Tried and Found Wanting.

Mr. Pillsbury has always been supposed to be the friend of the farmer, as has also Senator Washburn, and the effect of the book is to show that both these gentlemen are entirely without any consideration for the farmers' welfare, but have been all along, despite their protestations to the contrary, working together and in effect, if not actually, robbing the wheat raiser with very little compunction and much boldness. Mr. Pillsbury, it would seem, notified Senator Washburn when Farmer Arnold wrote him regarding the profits in the elevator business that Mr. Arnold and other farmers thought of starting a farmers' elevator at Larimore, Dak. Notwithstanding Mr. Pillsbury's statement to Mr. Arnold that there was no money in the elevator business, Senator Washburn, through his milling firm of Washburn & Crosby, started a 50,000 bushel elevator in Larimore, and did a big business, in the face of the positive assertion by Mr. Pillsbury that there were too many elevators, and his efforts to discourage Arnold and other farmers from starting an elevator company at that point. This fact is used as evidence of the co-operation between Pillsbury and Washburn, and it is alleged that the Hatch anti-option bill was drawn in C. A. Pillsbury's office, and that document, which created so much discussion and excitement during the summer session of congress, was a calm and deliberate attempt on the part of this milling combine in the Northwest to manufacture sentiment, having for its object the demonstration that boards of trade, through option dealing and future selling, were ruining the farmer, making it impossible for him to get anything for his wheat, and reducing the agriculturists of the country to a condition little better than that of the peasants and serfs. It is shown that notwithstanding Senator Washburn's criticism of the anti-option trading, and his statements that it was ruining the country, he had taken a "flier" on the Chicago board of trade himself, and in a deal with Mr. Pillsbury had undertaken to corner the wheat market. Evidence is produced that he lost $500,000, if not more, in this attempt, and that he had to be tided over by C. A. Pillsbury, Tom Lowry, the street car magnate of Minneapolis, and Loren Fletcher, who is a candidate on the Republican ticket for congress from one of the districts in Minneapolis.

HUGE POLITICAL SCANDAL.

How the Republican Party Is Behind the Great Scheme.

The Republican party in the state of Minnesota is connected directly with the big wheat steals, and it is alleged that the Pillsburys, Candidate Fletcher, who is said to be a stockholder in the trust company, and other combination people control absolutely the Republican machinery of Minnesota, and are now supporting Knute Nelson, the Republican candidate for governor, and dictating the entire policy of that political party. It is stated that the affairs of the Republican party are settled in Pillsbury's home, and that he and those associated with him control Gov. Merriam and induced him to pardon out of the penitentiary the young man Holcombe, whose admissions of thievery have heretofore been given. It is alleged that Holcomb was merely a scapegoat for wealthier and more influential people, and that he is said to have received $50,000 for spending in Stillwater penitentiary a term which would have amounted to one year had not Gov. Merriam pardoned him out. A letter from the warden of the Stillwater penitentiary is printed, showing that no petition was ever filed for Holcomb's pardon, and that this act of Gov. Merriam's was by the secret influence of the wheat combine.

It is also broadly hinted that United States Senator Washburn paid $200,000 to be elected to the United States senate, and from a casual reading of the book it appears that the wheat combination absolutely controls not only the warehouse and railroad commissioners and all the machinery of that political office, but also the Minnesota state legislature itself. A prominent railroad man, alleged to have been in the combine, is stated to have said that it costs less to buy members of the legislature who are farmers than to buy any other class of legislators, for the reason that the farmer's price is usually the mortgage which he has on his farm. As to the evidence of the trust's domination of the railroad and warehouse machinery, a minority report by E. J. Moore, a member of the Minnesota legislature, is given, and also a letter written by C. C. Wolcott to a legislative committee which met in St. Paul in March, 1892, to try to ascertain whether it could get any evidence of the existence of the wheat combine. It is stated that the letter of Wolcott was never read before that committee, and the intimation is made that a majority of the committee was bought off, and it is stated that the minority report of Moore, which showed the existence of the combine, was suppressed in all the newspapers in the Northwest through the trust's alleged influence. The letter written by Wolcott to the investigating committee states that he lost wheat in large quantities by stealing in terminal elevators, and that he devised a scheme to ascertain where the stealing occurred. He says that he got state weights on wheat put into an elevator owned by the Pillsburys, and state weights out of that elevator, and that he got state weights on identically the same wheat into an elevator owned by Senator Washburn, and state weights out of that same elevator, and that the weights of the two elevators varied to a very large and extraordinary extent, showing that there was robbery between those two elevators, but exactly where he could not say. He says in his letter that Mr. Pillsbury settled with him for the shortage in wheat, paying him $1,000 in cash.

RAILROADS IN IT.

They Refuse Farmers Cars in Which to Ship Wheat.

In its figures on the profits made by the elevator companies and the mills on wheat, the book shows that while the profit between the farm and Minneapolis and Duluth is anywhere from 5 to 25 cents a bushel, the profit from Minneapolis to Liverpool amounts to only about 2 cents. Between Minneapolis and Duluth on the one hand, and New York on the other, there is no profit on a bushel of wheat to amount to anything. Freight discrimination by Northwestern railroads is also very clearly charged. It is shown that no regard whatever is paid by the railroads to distances, but that in many cases they charge the same price for hauling a bushel of wheat from a point within 20 miles of Minneapolis or Duluth that they charge for carrying wheat from a point 400 and 500 miles from those two cities. So far as the railroads are concerned, the evidence is that they refuse the farmers cars in which to ship their wheat themselves, putting them off under one pretext or another so that the farmer is compelled, and has no other choice, providing there are no independent buyers, to sell his wheat to the trust elevators, taking for such wheat whatever price they are disposed to give him.

The direct evidence as to the combination of the elevator companies existing at this time is that they are all banded in what are called the Northwestern and Southwestern Elevator associations, and that the general manager, arbitrator, agent, or whatever else he may be called, of these associations is one Frank H. Irons, with headquarters in the Corn Exchange building in Minneapolis. It is charged that Irons makes up every night what is known as the list price and sends it as a night message to the agents of the elevator companies at all country points; that no regard whatever was paid in making this list price to the market quotations; that Mr. Pillsbury prohibits the sending of market reports to his country agents, in order that they may be kept in ignorance of what the Minneapolis, Duluth,

Dear Sir:-

Referring to your favor of the 3rd inst. would say that we have been delayed in answering several days endeavoring to obtain more information for you, but find it very hard work to get full information from all the companies as it is not customary to publish statements of this kind in this country. But we will give you what we have that is reliable.

The largest elevator company in the northwest is the Minneapolis & Northern, with a capital stock of $825,000, which would probably sell for 50 per cent premium. It has averaged during the past six years a little over 30 per cent dividend. We are very large stock holders in this company.

The leading company on the Milwaukee & St. Paul R. R. system is the Empire Elevator Co., formerly Pratt & Porter. We own half the stock of this company and it has averaged for several years past 40 per cent dividends.

The Northern Pacific Elevator Company is a very large company and is the leading line on the Northern Pacific system of railroads. We think it has averaged 30 or 40 per cent dividends.

The Northwestern Elevator Co. is next to the Minneapolis & Northern the largest company on the Manitoba R'y system. It has a capital stock of $700,000 and has averaged 22 per cent dividends for the past five years.

G. W. Van Dusen & Co. own the largest line of elevators on the Northwestern R'y system in Minnesota and Dakota. We cannot get any reliable information as to what they have paid, but would not be surprised if they had made larger profits than any other elevator company in the northwest.

The Red River Valley Elevator Company, the Minnesota & Dakota the North Dakota Elevator Company, Brooks Bros. are all first class companies and have all paid very well, and we have no hesitation in buying their receipts or in advancing money on them, but have no inside, reliable information as to their profits.

If there is any more information we can give you we shall be glad to do so.

Yours truly

June 18, 1889

Mr. H. F. Arnold,

Larimore, Dak.

Dear Sir:-

In answer to your favor of the 17th, would say that our grain elevators have not paid at all well lately simply because there have been too many elevators and too little wheat. Even on a big crop the elevator business has been overdone in your section and more elevators have been built than can be profitably run. We think you can buy elevators to better advantage than to build them. It is a very risky business. The loss during the last year has been fearful, and wheat was graded one or two grades higher in the country than it would pass in Minneapolis or Duluth.

Yours truly

Messrs Charles A. Pillsbury & Co

Minneapolis Minn.

Dear Sirs,

Desiring some reliable information respecting the Grain & Elevator business in your State I take the liberty of addressing you on the matter.

I should esteem it a great favour if you would kindly give me in confidence the names of a few of the leading elevator Companies & your idea as to whether they are actually in a prosperous condition.

Can money safely be loaned to them & what rate of interest could be obtained?

At what season of the year are their requirements the largest?

What dividends have they been paying during the last five years?

Thanking you warmly in advance for your kind reply & at your disposal this side!

Yours very faithfully

THE LETTER FROM FRANCE.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

READ HOW THE INDEPENDENT AND COMPETITIVE WHEAT-BUYER HAS BEEN SQUELCHED.

Chicago and New York prices are, and that the list price, in other words, is the mere arbitrary act of General Manager Irons, and is sent by the agreement which has heretofore been referred to the elevator companies, who bind themselves not to offer more than such list price and not to make any offer for wheat before it is brought up to the elevators.

GENERAL MANAGER IRONS.

The Arbitrary Advance or Reduction of Prices.

The testimony is given of a detective who for several months made an investigation into this system conducted by General Manager Irons, and in his evidence this detective shows that he got information of the existence of the combine from Robert I. Irons, a son of Frank H. Irons. Young Irons informed the detective, a man named Scott, that his father notified the elevator companies of the arbitrary reduction or advance in price, and instructed them how they should notify their people, and they notified a number of private buyers who were supposed to be independent buyers by postal card. The farmer is led to believe that these independent buyers are not in the combine, but from this evidence it would seem that they are, and it is also in evidence that the wheat combination has in many instances started elevators, which they called farmers' elevators, and through which they gave out the idea that they were not members of the combine, and hence would deal with the farmers squarely and honestly. The farmers, finding that these elevators marked "Farmers' Elevators" paid no more for wheat than the elevators known to be in the combine paid, concluded that the combine elevators were paying as much as the independent buyers, as represented by the alleged farmers' elevators, were paying, and hence they were getting a fair price for their wheat.

The book is full of an exposition of this sort of tricks. Mr. Scott, in his testimony, gives a partial list of the names belonging to the elevator combine, produces postal cards used by Mr. Irons in notifying the elevator companies and testifies as to the use of a set of books by Irons upon which he saw the names of the North Dakota Elevator, Minneapolis Elevator company and other companies. The book shows that in addition to the robbery of the farmers by grades, weight dockage and price, the elevator companies charge 3½ cents per month for storage, cleaning etc., on each bushel of wheat, and that though they ship the farmers' wheat out of the elevators months before the farmers present their tickets for payment at the prices prevailing when the tickets were issued, they still continue to charge the farmer storage on his wheat. In other words, the point is made that the farmers pay enormous sums each year for wind wheat; that is, they are paying for storage when the wheat is not in the elevators, but has been shipped out months before. The Northwestern and Southwestern associations are still in existence, and it is alleged that the robberies and other tricks described are being practiced at the present time.

GRIPSACK LIARS.

This Class of Peripatetics Receive Their Reward.

One interesting showing made by the publication is the system of deceit and misrepresentation practiced by the elevator companies on the farmers through their traveling men. It is claimed that salaries are paid to head men of $5,000, $10,000 and $15,000 per year; that the traveling agents receive $5,000 and $10,000, and that the expense of the combination is enormous in every respect. "Talks to give the farmers" is said to be a stereotyped circular which the combination issues to its traveling men. This circular instructs the traveling men what sort of story they must tell when the farmer offers objections to trust methods. It directs them to tell the farmer that there is no money in the elevator business, and that the elevator companies would just as soon go out of the business as not; that they are paying for wheat every cent they can afford to pay and are not making any living profit, and particularly the traveling agent dwells on the fact that the elevator companies are grading wheat higher, docking lower, and generally giving the farmer a better show than the terminal elevators in their turn are giving the elevator companies. The idea is to make it appear that the farmers are well treated, and that the elevator companies are losing money, and the strongest possible endeavor is made to keep the farmer from organizing and starting opposition to the combine elevators.

In a letter written to one of these traveling agents the general manager of the trust said he inclosed a check for $2,000 as a token of appreciation of the agent's faithful service and his expeditious manner of quieting all differences in the country. The agent was told in this letter that he was a "jim-dandy," and that the combine was getting up another secret organization, and wished to try to secure his services in the "bloody work." He was asked if $10,000 a year and expenses for himself and family, including "all his dizzy girls in Minneapolis and on the road, leaving out only St. Paul," would be any inducement to him. He was told that he might perhaps make more at something else for that year, but the combine would double his pay next year if it did not drop all its chips on Chicago wheat. Numerous instances where independent mills and independent farmers' elevators were established, and where they were intimidated into paying the same price for wheat that the trust paid, are given in the book. The contract made with Mr. Wolcott by the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company is said to be merely a sample of contracts made with independent buyers when they are bought off. This contract provided, among other things, that Wolcott should not engage in the wheat buying business, or in handling wheat in any way, or be interested in the same directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person or persons at any point or place where the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company might own or operate elevators during the five years of the contract. In the suit pending in St. Paul the elevator company has answered, admitting the making of the contract.

LOUCKS' CHANGE.

The Farmers' Alliance President's Position at Least Suspicious.

The affidavit connecting President H. L. Loucks, of the Farmers' Alliance of the United States, with the stifling of competition by the wheat ring, is made by C. C. Wolcott. Wolcott and Loucks were associated together in establishing the Scandinavian Elevator company, the name of which was subsequently changed to the Farmers' Alliance Elevator company. While Loucks transacted the business of the company in Minneapolis Wolcott went to Europe, and tried to interest foreign capital in the enterprise. His failure to do so, he alleges, was due to the efforts of Charles A. Pillsbury, who followed him to Europe, and made the English millers believe that there were no profits in the elevator business in the Northwest. Mr. Pillsbury is said to have offered, as a proof, to sell his elevators for 50 cents on the dollar. Wolcott's mission in England was unsuccessful, and he returned to Minneapolis, where the facts as set forth in his affidavit occurred. The affidavit states that up to a certain day, when he had an interview with C. A. Pillsbury, President Loucks had always taken the position that the elevators paid, and that there was in existence a wheat combine such as is described in the book. After that interview, it is alleged, he took an entirely opposite position, and claimed, as did Pillsbury and the rest of the members of the alleged ring, that there was no money in the elevator business; that the farmers were treated well, and that they had no cause to complain.

The interview between Loucks and Pillsbury referred to is described by Wolcott as follows: He says that about the last of July, 1889, he was called upon at the West hotel, Minneapolis, by Charles A. Pillsbury, and that in a general conversation Mr. Pillsbury brought out the fact that he thought Wolcott was able to handle the farmers and that he wanted the latter's help and was willing to pay for it. He said that Loucks, who was then president of the Dakota Farmers' Alliance, gave him more trouble than anybody else, and he asked Wolcott if he thought he (Wolcott) could handle Loucks. Wolcott's reply, as he swears to it, was, "I think, Mr. Pillsbury, that Mr. Loucks is built like you, that he is out for money." Wolcott says he told Pillsbury that Loucks' farm was mortgaged, and that he knew of no one who objected to making money easily. He says that Pillsbury inquired of him whether he was sure of this, and, upon his stating that he was, Pillsbury told him that he must have a talk with A. J. Sawyer, now dead; John Q. Adams and others who were interested with him. They parted, and Wolcott says that the next day, while he was in the office of the Scandinavian elevator company, the clerk handed him a letter addressed to H. L. Loucks. Wolcott supposed that the letter was on business of the Scandinavian Elevator company, and as he was as much interested in that company as Loucks, he opened the letter. He swears that it was from C. M. Amsden, general manager; that it requested Loucks to call upon him as soon as he reached Minneapolis. Loucks was then out of the city, and on his return Wolcott handed him the letter, explaining that he had supposed it was on the company's business and had opened it. After reading it Loucks stated that Amsden seemed to be anxious to see him as soon as he got home, and he guessed he had better go at once. He said he did not know Mr. Amsden and went out. He returned shortly afterward and told Wolcott that he had called upon Amsden, who had said that it was not he who wanted to see Loucks, but that it was C. A. Pillsbury; that Mr. Pillsbury had made a mistake in signing Amden's name to the letter. He advised Loucks to go and see Pillsbury at once. Loucks told Wolcott that he called on Pillsbury, but was out. Wolcott says he left the Scandinavian elevator office, was absent probably an hour, and on his return found Pillsbury and Loucks together, engaged in a deep and animated conversation. What passed between them he does not say, nor is he prepared to state, but he swears he had a talk with Loucks the next day on the wheat question, and that Louck's views and ideas upon the subject of the wheat combine had experienced a sudden and extraordinary change.

SUDDENLY DUMB.

Loucks Stops His Denunciation of the Combine.

Before the consultation with Pillsbury, Loucks is alleged to have been loud in his denunciation of the wheat combination, but afterward he made excuses for it and in various ways indicated that some influence had been brought to bear upon him that had changed his mind. Wolcott swears that Loucks neglected the affairs of the elevator company, and that the company, which had been organized in opposition to the trust, after continuing for a few months, went out of business. Loucks is alleged to have put the blame for the condition of the farmers upon binding twine and farm implement trusts, claiming that these trusts, and not the elevator trust, were keeping the farmer down and preventing his making any money. Loucks has lately formed an alliance with the people's party and has been making speeches in the South. The People's party, the book says, has taken no position whatever in this matter of the wheat ring, so far as the state of Minnesota is concerned, and one of its former members, W. W. Erwin, of St. Paul, is quoted as saying that in view of the action of the People's party's late convention he was satisfied that "behind the leaders of the party is a secret conclave of the politicians, monopolists and railroad magnates who make up the terrible combine which now rules the markets and politics of this state with an iron hand." Mr. Erwin is a prominent lawyer in St. Paul, and he is quoted as saying that this combine is close to the life of every man in this country, and that instead of marshaling every man in the state to political battle on that vital question, the leaders of the People's party had turned a deaf ear to the entreaties of old fighters and acted in a manner indicating that some influence had been brought to bear upon them.

THE PRICE OF WHEAT.

A Fictitious Cost for Freight Added to Each Bushel.

On the subject of a combine controlling the price of wheat a strong point is made in the book from the fact that the alleged trust fixes the price of wheat in Minneapolis and Duluth upon the fiction that wheat bought in Chicago is shipped to those two cities. The price in those two cities is the price of wheat in Chicago with the addition of this fictitious cost for freight between Chicago and Minneapolis and Duluth. It is pointed out that wheat bought in Chicago is never delivered in Chicago, and that therefore the price of wheat ought to be in Minneapolis and Duluth what it is in Chicago, less the cost of shipment from those points. The following is quoted from the publication:

"This uniform acquiescence in a fiction not true, in fact, but uniformly accepted by all the dealers in Minnesota and the Northwest, is the combine itself. It is this agreement and surrender of the elevator men and dealers that constitutes the very essence and fact of the combine, for if wheat at Duluth, with equal freights to the seaboard, should be of the same value as like wheat at Chicago, then this agreement on the part of the dealers and elevator men that the price at Duluth shall be the price at Chicago less freight from Duluth to Chicago, arbitrarily and of necessity fixing a price to be paid for wheat just so much beneath its actual value as the freight rate from Duluth to Chicago shall be—this is the combine.

This inducement to base the market at Minneapolis upon the market at Chicago offers an inducement to all transportation lines from Minneapolis to Chicago to most heartily co-operate with the combine dealers and elevator men to maintain that price, or, if it is possible that the railroad and transportation lines fix the price, then till the elevator men and dealers acquiesce in the price fixed by the railroads.

Mr. Moore in his minority report says a private and individual buyer in Minneapolis on the same day or the next day sells in the Chicago market the wheat which he has just purchased in Minnesota; that this sale is in pursuance of a combination, and was so proved by the testimony of Mr. Pillsbury that wheat sold in Chicago was never delivered in Chicago, but was in fact delivered in Duluth. "Wheat in Duluth," says Mr. Moore, "can reach the seaboard for the same rate as wheat in Chicago; therefore, wheat bought on a price at Chicago, but delivered at Duluth, never being delivered in Chicago, is a confiscation from the producer from whom such wheat is purchased in Minnesota of the amount of the freight from Minneapolis to Chicago. They may call it business, they may call it trade, they may call it financial prudence, or class it under any name they denominate, but it remains logically a decrease in the value of all wheat tributary to Duluth."

THE THROTTLERS.

Something About How the Corporations Combine.

On the subject of railroad corporations affiliating with the wheat combine, the book says that no disagreement or competion in rates prevails among the rival railroad corporations distinctly separate in their organization and ownership, and whose individual and special interests in the natural order of things would require them to compete before the people for carrying the trade. It is also alleged that all forms of competition in Minnesota between the different railroad corporations for the purpose of securing a carrying trade of wheat and grain has been utterly destroyed. The carriage and transportation of wheat in Minnesota and the Northwest is at the same rate on all rival railroad systems. The logical imputation is that all the railroad systems, through uniform action and with a uniform rate, transact business to a common purpose and with an understanding that they will not compete the one against the other for the trade. The distinct and different railroad systems each employ on their own account traveling men, who move from one line to another to establish business, solicit business, and get a proper share of business in the vicinity of the line. The testimony on this subject of the railroad traveling agents stifling competition is that each agent of the different roads makes it his business to see that the elevator companies on all other roads do not pay more than the list price for wheat. Thus by watching each other they compel the elevators on all roads to adopt the list price. The testimony shows a number of instances where the railroad companies have directly interfered to enforce the list price. It exhibits many marked instances of distinct attempts and acts which would naturally follow from the policy admitted to be the policy of all the railroad systems of Minnesota to prevent rate wars by the adoption of uniform prices throughout the state. It is said that it will remain a mystery as to what compensation the different railroad systems receive from the great wheat combine in consideration of the surrender by these respective systems of the entire fruits of competition and the adoption of uniform prices and weight rates. The moving cause of this surrender of competition by the distinct railroad companies is alleged to lie in the fact that the present rates received by the railroad companies are so remunerative in their character that it is financial policy on the part of each road to surrender competition in view of the enhanced freight rates on the traffic which it receives.

FORTUNES FROM FARMERS.

Net Profits Said to Run to Enormous Figures.

The profit of the Pillsbury mills is a subject which is ventilated. Having shown that the elevators are enormously profitable the book next proceeds with proof of the equally large profits of the Pillsbury-Washburn mills. Pillsbury's testimony before congress, in which he declared that the millers had paid the farmers more for wheat than they had gotten out of the farmers, and that it was only by the employment of the highest art in the milling business that any money was to be made, is contrasted with the net profits of three concerns composing the Pillsbury-Washburn Milling company, limited. This company was formed of the firm of C. A. Pillsbury & Co., the Palisade and Lincoln flour mills and the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company. Senator Washburn is a partner with Pillsbury, and these two gentlemen are managing directors in the corporation, which was capitalized in this country at $1,000,000 and floated in England at $5,000,000. The figures show that in 1855 the net profit of these three concerns was $1,226,273, and in 1888 $1,260,860. The least profit that they ever made in six years was $803,391, except one year, 1886, when they made no profit at all, but a loss of $159,784. The reason that there was a loss in 1886 is explained by the fact that the milling and elevator combine attempted in that year to corner the wheat market. It was in that year that the general manager of the trust wrote to a traveling man that the latter would probably make more at something else for that year, but his pay next year would be doubled if "we do not drop all our chips on Chicago wheat." They managed to get the price up to $1.10, but it dropped so suddenly from that figure that Senator Washburn, Pillsbury and all those in the combine succeeded in getting out only by the skin of their teeth. The profits of all the elevator companies given are very large, and in one case it is shown by chartered accountants who examined the Atlantic elevator, in which Senator Washburn is a large stockholder, that for less than a year the profits were $30,000. Proof is submitted that, although for less than a year the profits were $30,000, the elevator company returned its property to the tax collector of Hennepin county, Minnesota, as worth only $1,000. The Atlantic Elevator company is not only largely owned and controlled by Senator Washburn, but is also located on the "Soo" line, Senator Washburn's road.

STEALING FROM THE FARMER BY THE COMBINE

"NOW WE UNDERSTAND EACH OTHER."

OVERRIDING THE LAW.

No Prosecution of Those to Whom Holcomb Sold.

In the control of the railroad and warehouse commissioners and its inspectors and other subordinates by the wheat combine, the charge is made that Chief Inspector Clausen, who has recently promulgated a new scheme for grading wheat which he says is going to benefit the farmers, raised the "dockage" in one case and made first-class wheat inspect No. 2 when there were any number of buyers doing an independent business who would have taken it as No. 1 wheat and would have paid a price in excess of the price paid by the combine. The charge is further made that no prosecution was ever had of the firms to whom Holcomb is alleged to have sold the wheat which he stole from the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company. The railroad law of Minnesota is quoted as providing for the forfeiture of a $50,000 bond given by each elevator "wherever such elevator mixes any grain of different grades together, or combines different qualities of the same grade for the purpose of storing or delivering it, or wherever such elevator attempts to deliver one grade for another, or in any way tamper with the grain with a view to securing any profit thereby." Holcomb's testimony is clearly to the effect that the officers of the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company ordered this done, and yet it is shown that the railroad and warehouse commissioners never proceeded against the Pillsburys, the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company nor anybody else concerned in the alleged robbery.

THE COMBINE'S SENATOR—"SAY, FARMER. THERE'S THE FELLOW THAT'S GOT YOUR STUFF!"

It is asserted that "were the Republican government of Minnesota not under the control and dominion of the wheat ring, were it not of the utmost importance that the ring should have its aid in successfully evading the consequences of its bold and conscienceless disregard of all law and justice, were the leaders of the wheat combine not pledged to maintain in power the Republican office-holders, who know they cannot be elected without this powerful aid, and were the Republican party in earnest in its pretended interest in the farmers' welfare, there would be no difficulty in breaking up this audacious combination." It is pointed out that Mr. Pillsbury and Senator Washburn have grown rich in the wheat business; that Senator Washburn has a home in Minneapolis which cost him $1,000,000; that the Pillsburys' homes cost well up into the millions, and that the list of endowments made by the Pillsbury family to the University of Chicago, a school in Minnesota, a library in New Hampshire and gifts in other cities aggregated nearly half a million dollars. It is also pointed out that John S. Pillsbury, a managing director of the Pillsbury-Washburn Milling company, limited, was governor for three terms in Minnesota, a member of the state senate and occupied other offices through the Republican party; that C. A. Pillsbury was a state senator for several terms, and it also is alleged that the Pillsburys have said that they have all the money they want, and do not care for anything now but political honors.

DEMOCRATS OFFER RELIEF.

How Farmers Can Bring the Great Combine to Time.

The plank of the platform of the Democratic convention of Minnesota is quoted. It denounces "the rapacious and lawless combination which has grown up in this state with the connivance of the Republican legislature between the elevator companies, the mills and railroads, by which our grain markets have been monopolized and our farmers robbed of the fruits of their hard labors. We reaffirm our belief that this combination rests upon the fact that the railroads of this state have disregarded one of their primary functions, the provisions of suitable means for handling grain, and have given the same over to the control of private persons, and we again declare our belief that the remedy, simple but efficacious lies in the legislature requiring the roads to assume their proper function, thus giving every station a free and open market."

The book points out that the remedy is with the farmers, merchants, laborers and all those who are affected by the depressing influence of a monopoly and trust which controls a necessary of life, and that they must vote for that party which will pledge itself, and fulfill its pledge, to break up this combination by compelling the railroads to furnish facilities direct to the farmer for shipping his wheat, without the intervention of the elevator companies, to whom, as the plank in the Democratic platform says, is delegated this function. The book claims that so large are the stealings of the combination that if the farmer could get those stealings in a fair price paid for his grain he could then build granaries, and store his grain himself. Thus favored the wheat would not go in the visible supply as it now does through the elevators, and hence every bushel of wheat held back would enhance the price of every bushel sold.

It is said that there is a great deal more evidence back of that put out in the book, which is being reserved when the Republican machine of Minnesota attempts to refute the charges, as it will undoubtedly do.

THE ELEVATOR INFAMY.

Chicago Herald.

To attention need be called to that recital of wrong inflicted on the farmers of the Northwest appearing in the Herald of today. Americans will read it, with amazement and indignation. Foreigners will read it with surprise that such a condition could exist in a free country. Wherever the record goes it will carry the convincing proof of a gigantic robbery. The elevator monopoly of the Northwest has done darker deeds than those which cost King George his colonies.

How brief is the story of their infamy! Lands which should have been the sacred heritage of the people were sold to them on terms which insured a species of slavery. The products of their farms were taken from them at prices which they could not control. If they protested they were taunted with helplessness. If one of their number, richer than the rest, undertook to buy their grain at prices nearer its worth, he was driven from the business. He was ruined. His town was ruined. The very neighborhood which had supported him in his noble rebellion was compelled to share in the general ruin. One hand of the monster monopoly was reaching over the country, over the world, capturing recruits for this army of victims; the other was extracting from slender purses the hard-earned dollars of the farmer. And out of the myriad forced contributions the elevator monopolists have heaped up fortunes beyond the dream of any avarice save their own.

The mill owners of Minneapolis have been partners in the infamy, because they have held stock in the elevator companies. The railroad men have been necessary partners in the plundering. The farmer alone against these three has been as helpless as a lamb in the jungles of India.

No more shameful indictment has ever been read against Americans. Credulity is taxed to believe that men who owe every advancement in life to the rural labor of that Northwest section should so grievously oppress it, so bitterly pursue their unnatural domination. But the record cannot be doubted. The network of chains in which the farmers were held is uncovered and bare to the eyes of the world. The open boast of monopoly's infamy appears in its letters to foreign investors. The day of its doom should be read in the ballot of every farmer from St. Paul to Portland.

But it is more than a question of buying wheat at a fixed starvation price. The thralldom of the Northwestern farmer is the thralldom inflicted by the Republican party. It is an outcome of the theory that some men are born to poverty and others to affluence. It comes of the doctrine that the many should contribute to the enrichment of the few. Americans have been crowded from the shops where trades are followed. The best and most independent of the foreign population which has reached our shores has followed the farmers and the dispossessed mechanics to the waiting fields of the Northwest. They have labored through the weary months to swell the volume of an unprotected product, have sold it to men who have made their money under the wing of protection, and sold at prices these same men chose to give them, and then they have purchased with the meager returns a thousand articles whose price was swelled by protection. The picture would be incomplete without that villainous touch of taunting. When under stress of great suffering the farmers complained they were told the option traders of Chicago were to blame for the general oppression. Two of the chief offenders have struggled with well-pretended earnestness through one session of congress to pass a law closing the boards of trade. The farmers have believed them, and have wished them well in the enterprise. It is needless to say the effort will not be repeated.

The elevator owners and the millers and the railroad men have "worked" the farmer to their temporal profit and their everlasting shame. If in the light of the record this day published the scales do not fall from the eyes of the farmers their proof will be complete that American monopoly can crush from the breasts of its victims all vestiges of manhood.

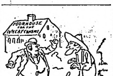
CONTROL REPUBLICAN RING

The Mill and Elevator Combine in Full Charge of the Republican Machinery of Minnesota.

In Its Giant Grasp the Wheat Ring Holds Conventions and Primaries to Accomplish Its Ends.

Terms of the Contract by Which the Elevator Company Bought Wolcott and on Which He Now Sues.

The wheat ring robbery in Minnesota and the two Dakotas, the facts of which were fully set forth in the SUNDAY GLOBE, has attracted national attention and is being discussed and denounced by every leading paper in the country. The stupendous frauds therein exploited almost pass comprehension, and the ring which has compassed them is conceded to be a greater combine than ever before existed in the country. In pursuing its investigations, the Chicago Herald has found H. A. Odell, who will be remembered by most Minnesota politicians and from him elicited an interesting story, showing how the ring secured the aid of and was held in power by the Republican machinery of this state. It says:



THE COMBINE AGENT—"WHAT! BUY AN ELEVATOR! DO YOU WANT TO GO TO THE POORHOUSE, TOO?"

The combine had to enter politics. I was necessary to have a number of legislators, warehouse and railroad commissioners, and even a governor, to assist in manipulations. In Minnesota the Republican party has been the dominant party. The controlling spirits in the elevator combine are Republicans. As such they have manipulated conventions, and controled the party machinery. There is a gentleman in Chicago today who has acted his part in this connection. His name is H. A. Odell, and he is a recent acquisition to the legal fraternity of Chicago. His office is in Room 705, Rookery building. Mr. Odell formerly lived in Minnesota, where he owns a farm. He was an active politician in Minnesota, and the confidential friend of Gov. Merriam. He has always claimed that a farmer who confined himself legitimately to the farm could not make a living.

At the time of Mr. Odell's advent in Minnesota politics Gov. McGill was the occupant of the executive mansion. The present governor, Mr. Merriam, was anxious to prevent Gov. McGill from securing a renomination at the hands of the Republican party. A renomination in those days meant a re-election. Mr. Odell determined that his political future was contingent upon the success of his friend Merrian, and acting on this conviction he assumed the role of confidential agent and friend of the gubernatorial aspirant. The first assignment of Mr. Odell was to visit the country newspapers and induce them to espouse the cause of Mr. Merriam. He did so and did it well except in one instance, regarding which a good story is told. The available information in Minnesota today is that Gov Merriam paid a good round sum for his nomination; some say that it cost him $200,000. He was liberal in his disbursements up to a certain point, when he began to suspect that his agents were not as economical as they might be. Mr. Odell, while not one of the suspects in particular, was questioned closely as to his operations. While going over the country newspaper accounts it was discovered that Mr. Onell had not only paid the mortgage on a certain paper, but had also paid the overdue printer's bill of the proprietor. The gubernatorial aspirant objected. "Why did you give that man more money than his mortgage called for?" asked Mr. Merriam. "Oh, well, I paid off the mortgage, and then the fellow declined to support you unless the printer's bill was also paid," laconically replied the agent. The gubernatorial aspirant smiled and said something about the shrewdness of the country editor.

McGill's Strength Traded.

As stated, McGill was governor of the state at the time, and he was correctly or otherwise supposed to be the elevator combine's candidate for renomination. It was not supposed by the combine that he could be defeated. Merriam's strength was underestimated. He was credited with having no strength until the very day of the convention. Merriam and his confidential friend Odell kneww differently. They calculated with accuracy. When the convention assembled the McGill following, practically the elevator interests of the state, discovered Merriam's strength and hastened to get in line. They wanted to be in the band wagon, and if possible occupy the front seat. Merriam did not have sufficient votes to nominate him and felt the necessity of placating the elevator people. He was willing to trade and did, according to the inside history of the nominating convention. One Fletcher is at present a Republican candidate for congress in Minnesota. He was a friend and political associate of Gov. McGill and closely allied at the time with the Pillsbury-Washburn elevator interests. This man Fletcher, seeing that his favorite candidate for governor was likely to be slaughtered, approached Candidate Merriam and his friends. Mr. Fletcher, in the interest of the elevator combine, told Merriam that a sufficient part of Gov. McGill's strength would be turned over to him on the condition that he, if nominated and elected, would permit the elevator combine to name the railroad and warehouse commissioners. Mr. Merriam was nominated by the Republicans and elected governor, admittedly, through the support and influence of Gov. McGill's former friends. The railroad and warehouse commissioners nominated and confirmed by the new governor were satisfactory to the elevator combine.

During the campaign for the governorship Mr. Odell, as the agent of Merriam, endeavored to enlist the farmers in his patron's political fortunes. He associated himself in this movement with C. C. Wolcott. The effort resulted in quite a formidable showing. At one time during the early stages of the campaign Odell said to his companion in the movement: "I see the farmers are going to get on top and I think we better get Merriam to come out as the farmers' friend." He suggested that his colaborer go see Merriam with this object in view, but the wily Merriam declined to have anything to do with the farmer in politics. Odell was persistent and finally induced H. L. Loucks, president of the Farmers' Alliance of the United States, to visit Merriam and urge upon him the necessity of coming out as the particular friend and champion of the farmers. Loucks' mission was also unsuccessful. Merriam declined to be other than the Republican candidate. He afterward regretted this course, and in a conversation with a friend in this city after his election as governor said: "I made the mistake of my life. If I had stood by the farmers at the time I could have had anything in the state I wanted. As it is, they identify me with the railroad and elevator interests."

No Money for the Farmer.

Odell made a speech at the St. James hotel in Minneapolis at one time. The meeting was called in the interest of the farmers. He commenced his speech by saying that he was a farmer, and that he could not make a living by legitimately following farming. He had a farm in Southern Minnesota, he said, and had never been able to make a living from it. He charged that he had shipped potatoes, hay and wheat to market only to be robbed, claiming that the state weighmasters were in league with the elevator combine to rob the farmer of his products. He said it was a gigantic steal from the time the products left the farm until they reached the rapacious hands of the combine. One of the state weighmasters was present during Odell's speech and interrupted him. The interruptions became noisy, and the state official and Odell got into an angry altercation, which was continued after the termination of the meeting.

Mr. Odell, as the friend of the Republican nominee for governor, also had an incidental experience with S. M. Owens, who was the Farmers' Alliance candidate for governor two years ago. Owens was a vigorous candidate. He was vehement in his denunciation of the elevator combine, and came out in a letter at one time during the campaign saying that the elevator men earned 35 per cent on their investment. The elevator people denied the charge, and under pressure forced Owens to withdraw the letter. Owens at the time claimed that he had the information from one of the clerks in the elevator offices in Minneapolis. But the clerk failed to substantiate the charge at the critical moment. Owens was free in saying he would like an opportunity of proving he was right in his declaration as to the earnings of the combine. He expressed this desire in the presence of various parties. Finally it came to the ears of C. C. Wolcott, and he agreed to furnish the data, for which Owens expressed warm gratitude. Wolcott came to Chicago, and in a conversation with Odell incidentally informed him that he proposed furnishing the data to Owens. Odell had business in Minneapolis presumably, for the next day he left for the Flour City, and it is a matter of history that Owens never after displayed any desire for the information enabling him to establish the exact profits of the combine.

Gov. Merriam is a candidate for the seat in the United States senate now occupied by Cushman K. Davis. The one who can develop the most strength in the legislative caucus of the Republican party is to have the party nomination and the support of the other as against all combinations. That is understood by those manipulating Republican politics in Minnesota. Both aspirants have the friendship of the elevator combine.

Cheating All Around.

H. A. Odell was seen in his office yesterday noon. He had read the Herald synopsis of the elevator conspiracy. He said: "I have been away from Minnesota and Minnesota politics for several years, and I do not care to be quoted in the matter. The matter has always been one of politics. I don't care to be personally mixed up with it. Yes, I did make a speech at the St. James hotel, as you say. Well, yes, that was on a particular occasion. I don't care to say anything about it. Charges and counter charges have been made as to the elevator men. The farmers have reiterated the charges and the elevator people have denied them. The charges have been insisted upon and as vigorously denied. I am not in a position to say anything as to my personal knowledge.

"The elevator system of the Northwest is a complicated affair. There is room for cheating on both sides; that is, room for the elevator people to cheat the farmer, and the superintendents to cheat the elevator proprietors. In either case I think it results not so much from intention as to the practices in vogue. For instance, a superintendent is placed in charge of an elevator at Larimore, Dak., say; he is paid so much a month, and the particular object he has in view is to make the elevator of which he has charge come out even; to see that it is not short at the end of the season. To accomplish this he employs his best judgment. If his judgment is at fault the farmer is the victim, and if he is over cautious the elevator proprietors are the beneficiaries. In other words the process is this: A farmer brings his grain to the elevator uncleaned. He brings it just as it comes from the thresher. It is full of dirt and straw, and the elevator superintendent says to him as the wheat is running to the bin, 'I will have to deduct so much,' just as his judgment indicates, whether it is one pound or fifty pounds to the load. If the superintendent's judgment is bad, if he deducts too much, the farmer gets the worst of it; if not enough, he gets the worst of it, because the elevator officials deduct it from his allowance at the end of the season."

No Chance to Lose.

"Then the elevator proprietors lose nothing in either case?"

"Well, not in this illustrated case, but the superintendent can, if smart, beat the company in various ways. But it is a fact that the farmer prefers to sustain his dockage to purchasing machinery to clean his grain and employing men to run it for him. It is more economical. The whole thing is a question of judgment on the part of the superintendent. The dockage amounts to less than the cost of operating a cleaning machine with the price of labor at about $1.50 per day. I think the greatest robbery of the farmers of the Northwest is in the matter of produce. The small dealers, the stores, rob them That is a greater evil than the alleged elevator combine. Yes, I know Mr. Wolcott, and I expect he will drag me into this case if he has anything to do with it."

As viewed from a political standpoint W. G. Ewing voices the local sentiment. He said yesterday: "I have just returned from Maine, where for three weeks I have been engaged in campaign work. I have read the publication and I have examined the proofs of the facts therein stated, and I am strongly impressed with the conviction that the book should be placed in the hands of the farmers in all the Western states. The evidence of a combination between the elevator and milling companies of Minnesota, as stated in the article, seems to be unanswerable, and demonstrates the fact not only that the farmers of Minnesota and both Dakotas have been systematically robbed, but also that the combination has been able to control the price of American wheat in the European markets by reason of the poor quality exported.

"The farmers of the whole Northwest will be convinced that by some kind of manipulation they have been defrauded in the grading of their wheat and in weights, and they will further appreciate the fact that under the laws of Minnesota such a result would be practically impossible except by the connivance of the state officials with the milling combinations."

Terms of Wolcott's Contract.

This contract, made this 16th day of September, 1885, between C. C. Wolcott, of Larimore, Dak., party of the first part, and the Minneapolis & Northern Elevator company, party of the second part.

Witnesseth: Said first party, in consideration of the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000) per year, to be paid to him by said second party, in quarterly installments, commencing from the date of this contract, at the end of each quarter for five years, agrees to work for the interests of the said second party in the territory of Dakota, in the following way, to-wit:

1. He shall furnish said second party, or its agents, from his bank at Larimore, or other places, such amount of currency and in such denominations as said second party may desire, and at such places and times as said second party may direct, to be sent by express or otherwise, as said second party may direct; the express charges and risk to be borne by said second party, the same to be so furnished free of charge to said second party at Larimore, Dak., for not to exceed ten stations.

2. Said first party is neither to purchase for or by himself, directly or indirectly, nor for or through any other person, directly or indirectly, wheat in the territory lying north of the Northern Pacific Railroad company's main line in the territory of Dakota, during the five years above named, except as he shall buy for said second party as said second party may direct.

3. Said first party agrees to use his best endeavors, influence and ability for the interests of said second party during the time named so far as its wheat purchasing and elevator business is concerned, and agrees to use his best efforts and endeavors to induce persons in said counties having wheat to be taken to and stored in elevators to take the same to the elevators of said second party.

4. Said first party also agrees not to engage in the wheat-buying business, or in handling wheat in any way or be interested in same, directly or indirectly, by himself or by any other person or persons, at any point or place where said second party may own or operate elevators during said five years.

In consideration of the faithful performance of the foregoing agreements on the part of the said first party, said second party agrees to pay said first party the sum of five thousand dollars ($5,000) per year, to be paid in quarterly installments at the end of each quarter. But it is agreed by both parties hereto that in case any other elevator or warehouse shall be built at Larimore for the storage or hauling of wheat, during said five years, or if said first party or any other person (other than the regular wheat buyers now at Larimore) shall, during said five years, purchase wheat at Larimore at above what is known as list prices, or if said party shall purchase wheat anywhere in Dakota, contrary to the terms of this contract, then said second party at its option may cancel this contract at any time by giving ten days' notice to said first party.

Said second party is to keep deposited at the Northwestern Bank of Minneapolis, or such other bank as said parties may agree upon, sufficient funds to cover all requirements that said second party may make on said first party in furnishing said currency.

In witness whereof, said parties have hereunto set their hands and seals, the day and year first above written.

The suit has been continued by the defendants from one pretext or another from time to time. It is looked for the next term of the federal court, and if no further delay results from the manipulation of the combine, it will be judicially determined.

WHEAT IS KING.

The basis of Minnesota's wealth is the fertility of her soil. No state in the Union, no land on God's green earth is more favored by Nature in all that makes for bountiful harvests. The accumulated richness of ages rests in her bosom, and gentle showers and glad sunshine combine to keep her fecundity perennial.

Wheat is the civilized world's staple food stuff. Men can get along without everything else, but men cannot get along without bread. On it their lives depend. Fancy and caprice govern in most mundane matters. Fashions pass away and change. Tastes alter, and what was popular yesterday finds no market today. Wheat alone is superior to such fluctuations. The demand for it and the need of it persist and increase with the flight of time.

Minnesota admits the existence of no competitor in the production of this great commodity. Her soil endures the strain of successive crops because its strength is exhaustless. The grain in the ear reaches its full perfection beneath the bright, cool skies of our summers. A noble race of freemen working intelligently and faithfully in our fields make the most of God's bounty. We can raise wheat in Minnesota, send it to Liverpool, 3,000 miles away, and there win the prize for quality and price in open rivalry with the whole world.

These are extraordinary facts, but no one disputes their truth. Wheat rules the world, and the farmers of Minnesota own the wheat. The profits of whoever controls a monopoly are enormous. The man who invented the telephone reaps from it a revenue which exceeds the powers of easy calculation. And yet not one person in ten thousand contributes to his royalties. Every man, woman and child who breathes the vital air pays for the Minnesota farmers' product. The farmers of Minnesota ought to be the richest class of contemporary society. They have in their hands the supply of the world's greatest need. They produce the best wheat at the least cost. Why is it that they do not find their business profitable?

A GIGANTIC CONSPIRACY.

The GLOBE has given some of the reasons in its discussion of the issues of the pending national campaign. This morning it gives another one when it tells the history of a gigantic conspiracy. The profits of wheat raising in this state are stupendous. But the farmers do not get them.

The methods of modern business favor the growth of combinations. There is a combination in Minnesota which for strength, secrecy and effectiveness surpasses anything the inventive genius of man has yet devised. It includes the state's railroads, its elevator companies and the leaders of the Republican party. Its purpose is to control the world's wheat supply, and up to this point it has succeeded.

The Democracy places the evidence in the case before the people, that they may weigh it. It appears in full in a pamphlet which will have the widest circulation. On another page of this morning's GLOBE it is summarized in as short a space as its importance will permit. No one who is interested in tales of daring and adventure can afford to overlook it, because the boldest achievements in this direction yet recorded are here transcended. No one who loves this state and cares for its progress in greatness ought to pass it by, because it discloses the secret of our prostrate industrial life, and points out a remedy.

If figures and documents can prove anything, the compilation thus made shows that the farmers of this state are living in subjection to a band of cruel taskmasters. They get up early, and toil even by the light of the moon, and the price of the commodities they produce is fixed, not by the honest determination of the law of supply and demand, but by the iron will of the elevator ring. Over their backs is swung the lash of a moneyed power, and they take what it is their owners' pleasure to give them, or they take nothing. Annual dividends of from 20 to 40 per cent measure the returns of those who buy at what price they will. An endless struggle with poverty is the fate of those who sell at what price they can. Wheat rules the world, but it is the elevator company's magnate, not the farmer, who holds the scepter.

A STATE ISSUE.

For this condition of affairs the Republican party is responsible. The leaders in the combination are the leaders of the Republican party. Under the encouragement of successive Republican legislatures, which refused remedial legislation, our farmers have been reduced to serfdom. On the issue that everything is all right, KNUTE NELSON stands today side by side with H. W. CHILDS, the Republican candidate for the attorney generalship, and asks the support of the people. The railroad attorney and the author of the report whitewashing the elevator ring embody the spirit of Minnesota's Republicanism concerning the question. As the representatives of the Republican party they claim that the past is without blemish, and that the future can be made no brighter for our agricultural interests than by a continuance of what has been.

The enemy has twitted the Democracy with concentrating the campaign on national problems. Here is a state problem on which it challenges discussion. In its own platform it said in words that can not be misunderstood:

> We denounce the rapacious and conscienceless combination which has grown up in this state with the connivance of Republican legislatures between the elevator companies, the miller and the railroads, by which our grain markets have been monopolized and our farmers robbed of the fruits of their hard labors. We reaffirm our belief that this combination rests upon the fact that the railroads of this state have abjured one of their primary functions, the provision of suitable means for handling grain, and have given the same over to the control of private persons; and we again declare our belief that the remedy, simple but efficacious, lies in legislation requiring the roads to assume their proper function, thus giving to every station a free and open market.

At its own convention it nominated for the governorship DANIEL W. LAWLER, who is "no man's man and wears no man's collar." The Democracy does not admit that the past in Minnesota has been all right. It declares that it has been all wrong, because it believes that it is wrong for the farmers to labor and the plutocrats of Minneapolis to reap the fruit of their toil. The Democracy denounces the shameful past, and promises a remedy for the future. If the Democracy is put in power, the Minnesota wheat ring will cease to exist. Here is an issue joined. Let the people be the arbiters.

BUYING PICTURES.

REPORTER CHATS WITH SEVERAL WELL KNOWN ARTISTS.

o Painters Pretty Generally Agree That One Should Buy the Paintings Which Please Him—Judgment Is Capable of Cultivation and Will Improve.

"How do people buy pictures?" Colin ampbell Cooper repeated. "Well, I ppose the majority of collectors conilt the advice of a dealer or some arst, and yet there are those, not prentious connoisseurs, either, that know good thing when they see it, and rince unusual wisdom in their purhases. To some, however, self reliance investing on a large scale in paintgs has proved rather a disastrous oxeriment. The other day a collection ade by a man thirty or forty years go was sold. There was hardly half a ozen good things in it, simply because e bought and he did not know what he as getting.

"Art in this country is gradually wakng up. Perhaps the Centennial might o called the American Renaissance. Ve know infinitely more about art than ur grandparents did, and with opporunities increasing from year to year it s fair to suppose our children will show still more marked improvement in aste. Greater facilities for traveling ave done much to bring about a change n our little world, and the tendency of ur art is rather toward the cosmopolian than provincial. Naturally, time is equired to educate the public taste long artistic lines.

"I think people will buy more pictures when they understand painting is not an ccomplishment merely a pleasure to he eye, but that it is a part of educaion, of civilization. It will require time to realize this. Exhibitions are visited and the majority like to look at pictures with an admiration, rather ephemeral. When the picture is out of sight the impression is gone. With a general diffusion of art paintings will be bought not solely because they appeal to the senses, to personality, but for their artistic qualities; not simply because the subject illustrated is rather a pretty idea, but because the work is technically a good art production."

Stephen Ferris said: "The world is full of good pictures to be bought for reasonable prices, but unfortunately many thousands of dollars, many fortunes, are spent for nonsense, while good work remains unsought and unbought. Common sense is happy capital in picture buying as in any other business. One can hardly provide a set number of rules to be observed in buying. Many books have been written on military science, yet the world has seen comparatively few fine generals. Judgment rules the world, and in picture buying one person is more successful than another because a spirit of superior intelligence dictates his purchases."

Thomas Eakins would like to have people buy pictures that please them and appeal to their taste. "The majority are afraid to buy what they like; they must have some one else's advice. Well, if they start with bad art, perhaps before long they will come to the good. Let people buy what they want."

"I have not thought much about buying pictures," said Mr. Frederick Waugh. "We artists are more chiefly concerned in trying to sell them. It is the privilege of the artist to paint pictures which appeal to people; which they understand and want to have for their own. But he should have a high standard, and he cannot succeed if he lower it to cater to the popular taste. He is fortunate if in working out his ideas he pleases the public and yet does not lose his independence nor forfeit his originality. His work may be appreciated by large numbers, but it is always certain that some few will recognize his endeavor and will want to buy it.

"In the Old World art is accessible to all. The Luxembourg and the Louvre are filled permanently with the masterpieces of all ages, the best that have been done. There, too, the spirit of union is strong among artists. They gather together and talk of everything pertaining to the art world, consequently they live entirely in a congenial climate and they grow and develop in an essentially art atmosphere. Impressionism? Yes, this is the great word nowadays. Many have an idea that it is a synonym for vaguely treated and partially unfinished pictures. Impressionism claims to record facts as observed by the artist. Sincerity to nature is its aim. After all, there is nothing so beautiful as truth, and the nearer we get to it, as we find it in nature, the better artists we are."

"Many Americans buy pictures," Mr. F. de B. Richards responded, "because they have accumulated money, and pictures are the proper thing to have. Generally they know very little about it, and a dealer does the work for them. If people purchase pictures to flatter their vanity, let them spend big sums and buy high priced pictures. If they buy for pleasure, let them buy what interests them. I remember meeting Edwin Forrest after a sale. 'I've bought a picture,' said he. 'They told me not to do it, because very likely it is not original. But it pleases me, and I should buy it if it were by somebody I never heard tell of.' A picture pleasing to the eye is a source of education for the time being at least. Adverse criticism may lead a man to scrutinize it and study it more closely than if he had bought one he did not like half so well."

"I think I should be inclined to buy what I liked personally," was the opinion of Edwin Swift Balch, "not forgetting that the pictorial qualities should not be lost sight of in the desire to get a pleasing subject. Good handling, the proper placing of values and meritorious color, allied to a sympathetic subject, will tend to keep our interest in a painting alive."—Philadelphia Times.

The oldest mine, which is now worked as a copper mine, is in the Musashi province of Japan. It was opened 1,183 years ago.

Two Stories of Lucky Miners.

A few of the many stories that are told of miners' luck will enable the reader to understand how and why the heads of whole communities may be turned in mining regions. Jim Whitlatch, the discoverer of the Whitlatch-Union mine, near Helena, led a typical western miner's life. The mine in question is now owned in England and has produced $20,000,000 in gold. After Jim Whitlatch had sold the property for $1,500,000 he went to New York "to make as much money as Vanderbilt." He was a rare treat to Wall street, which fattened on him, and in one year let him go with only the clothes on his back. He returned to Montana, began "prospecting" again and discovered a mine for which he got $250,000. He went to Chicago to rival Mr. Potter Palmer in wealth and returned just as he did from New York—"flat strapped," as he would have expressed it. He made still another fortune and went to San Francisco, where he died a poor man.

Another Lewis and Clarke county mine—the Drum Lummon—provides another such story. It was discovered by an Irish immigrant named Thomas Cruse. Although he owned it, he could not get a sack of flour on credit. He sold it to an English syndicate for $1,500,000. But he remains one of the wealthy men of Helena.—Julian Ralph in Harper's.

How Opium Is Gathered.

It is a sort of garden cultivation, the poppy plants being grown in little squares or beds intersected by tiny water channels for irrigation wherever this is possible. The growth of the plants is carefully tended, and at length the time comes when they burst out into flower, and the fields look like a sheet of silver as the white petals of the flowers glisten in the morning dew.

These beautiful petals are the first produce of the crop, for the women and children of the cultivators' families come forth and pick them off one by one and carefully dry them, so that they may serve afterward as the covering of the manufactured cakes of opium. Then the poppies, with their bare capsule heads, remain standing in the open field until it is considered that they are ripe for lancing. The cultivators then come forth in the evening, and, with an implement not unlike the knives of a cupping instrument, they scarify the capsule on its sides with deep incisions, so that the juice may exude.

In the early morning the cultivators reappear with a scraping knife and their earthenware pots, and they scrape off the exuded juice and collect it in their pots. And this is crude opium.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Tragic Kindergarten Episode.

A certain kindergarten is blessed with the attendance of a very original youth named Richard. He is a very honest little boy and highly respected by his parents, but the other afternoon when he came home he acknowledged frankly to his mother that a punishment had been inflicted upon him at the kindergarten.

"Why, what have you done?"

"Well, you see," he answered, "Johnny and I got tired of being good, and we made up our minds that we would just get our heads together and holler out the very naughtiest word we could think of, both together."

The mother was inexpressibly shocked. Johnny was another very nice and well bred boy. But she managed to ask:

"Well, what did you say?"

"We just screamed out 'Bedbug!' as loud as we could!"

Probably this tragic episode has never had its duplicate in the history of kindergartening.—Boston Transcript.

A Snake That Is Found in Many Places.

The common snake, which bears the scientific name of Tropidonotus natrix, is one species of a genus (Tropidonotus) which extends over Europe and North America, and from northern Asia to north Australia, there being seventeen or eighteen Indian species alone. Our common snake may serve as an example of the largest family into which serpents are divided—the family Colubridæ—of which there are upward of 165 species in India alone. This family contains most of the harmless snakes, and it is also illustrated by a small snake, Coronella austriaca, which some years ago was discovered to be an inhabitant of Dorsetshire and Hampshire. The Coronella feeds exclusively on lizards, slow worms and small snakes. Though harmless, it will bite.—Quarterly Review.

The First False Hair.

In very early days, as now, the hair was sometimes thin and it had to be eked out in various ways to make believe that nature had been spendthrift to all alike. About the first description extant of woman's hair speaks of "plaited locks," known as "Gretchen braids" to us. To make these braids seem longer, silk the color of the hair was braided in. Then they they took to putting the braids in cases of silk, elongating them with all sorts of stuff till they looked like umbrellas in covers. The Chinese pigtail is a modification of this style.—Washington Star.

Punished by the Czar.

The czar of Russia knows how to brace up his military officers to their duty. A merchant of Charkoff was murdered by soldiers, and it was shown that had the officers of the regiment stationed in the town maintained proper discipline the murder might have been prevented. As a punishment for this they have been ordered to pay a yearly pension of 5,000 rubles to the widow of the murdered man.—Toledo Blade.

Not Surprised.

Neighbor (breathlessly)—Oh, Mrs. Harddluck, your little son Johnny found a dynamite bomb, and took it into a stable down town and broke it with an ax, and blew up the stable and all the buildings around it.

Mrs. Harddluck—Land sakes! I wonder what that boy will be up to next.—Good News.

In the Business of Revolution.

The Englishman imagines that revolution and treason are serious affairs and must be conducted with set teeth and grave face. Not so the men of the Latin races. To them revolutions are like race meetings, with a certain amount of danger added. An Englishman feels disgraced at the idea of recurrent revolution. Not so a Frenchman or a Spaniard.—London Spectator.

PARODIES ON OLD PROVERBS.

A Clever English Writer Gives His Epigrammatic Views on Marriage.

A correspondence has been opened in the pages of the Daily Telegraph on the vexed question of marriage in general, and of English wives in particular says "The Linkman" in London Truth. As a bachelor my experience of wives—in the plural—is extensive, and it is the more desirable therefore, that I should contribute my share towards the discussion. I have tried to condense the views which I uphold on this subject, and the more important of these will be found in the following distorted proverbs of the Pall Mall:

Marrying is believing.

Two's matrimony and three's divorce.

Divorce is the mother-in-law of invention.

A little matrimony goes a long way.

Infidelity begins at home.

Put not all your lovers in one basket.

Everything has an end—marriage has two.

To marry is human, to divorce is divine.

Set a wife to catch a wife.

A "smart" lover covers a multitude of sins.

Matrimony breeds contempt.

A lover in time saves nine.

You must go to the divorce court to hear what news at your home.

When the lover preaches beware of your wife.

When a woman falls every man calls.

Wives of a feather flock together.

Every smart woman has her day in the box.

Home rules often insures peace with honor.

Where there's a wife there's away to the court.

A divorcing man will catch at a straw.

It is easy to marry down hill.

Wife, life and strife rhyme together, but there is very little reason in either.

Marriage is paved with good adventures.

What matrimony conceals divorce reveals.

There are none so wived as those that will not marry.

Fine friends make fast wives.

Some men marry because they are young, some because they are old, some because they are busy, others because they have nothing to do. There is but one valid excuse for marrying—because you want to.

THE SUN GOING OUT.

In About Ten Million Years There Will Be No Light.

It seems that the sun has already dissipated about four-fifths of the energy with which it may have originally been endowed, says an exchange. At all events it seems that, radiating energy at its present rate, the sun may possibly hold out for 4,000,000 years, or 5,000,000 years, but not 10,000,000 years.

Here, then we discern in the remote future a limit to the duration of life on this globe. It does not seem possible for any other source of heat to be available for replenishing the waning stores of the luminary.

It may be that the heat was originally imparted to the sun as the result of a great collision between two bodies which were both dark before the collision took place, so that, in fact, the two dark masses coalesced into a vast nebula, from which the whole of our system has been evolved.

Of course, it is always conceivable that the sun may be reinvigorated by the repetion of the same startling process. It is, however, hardly necessary to observe that so terrible a convulsion would be fatal to life in the solar system.

Neither from the heavens above nor from the earth beneath does it seem possible to discover any rescue for the human race from the inevitable end. The race is as mortal as the individual, and so far as we know, its span can not under any circumstances be run out beyond a certain number of years which can certainly be told on the fingers of both hands, and probably on the fingers of one.

FIRST BEAUS ARE BASHFUL.

Extravagant Youths in Their Teens Generally the Brother of a Chum.

The first beau appears along about when we are 14 to 15. There have been, of course many little boy admirers, but a writer in the Philadelphia Times says the genuine gallant does not materialize until we put on long dresses and commence making ourselves up for young ladies, a comprehensive phase that all girls will understand. He is usually the brother of some especial chum of ours, and in this way we are enabled to see him more often than if we had no reason for going to his house. He is exceedingly bashful before people, but can talk a blue streak when we are alone. He squanders his allowance on ice cream, soda and caramels, and on rare occasions invites us to a church sociable or concert. He is always one of the group of youths who wait outside the church or Sunday-school door, and he is the one always to escort us to our homes on such occasions. We are teased unmercifully about him, and really enjoy it, though pretending to be fearfully indignant and provoked about it. This sort of thing goes on until something happens, as some things have a way of doing, and either he goes away to college or we leave for boarding school, or perhaps a quarrel or a change of residence occurs; at any rate, years perhaps will roll away before we see a bearded man who bears not the slightest resemblance to the blushing, rosy-cheeked boy we called our first beau.

IN A PHOTOGRAPH GALLERY.

Affectations and Peculiarities of Persons About a Pose.

"Well," said the photographer to a New York World man, "its funny how people will take attitudes when they find the camera pointed at them. You tell them to look pleasant and at once their faces take an expression of ghastly smirk, or if the sitter be a young lady she almost always wants to be taken side face, looking down with a conscious simper. People with turned up or very long noses invariably wish to be taken in profil, while the cross-eyed man with a huge mouth is always taken front face.

"It's no use. I've been in the business for years and now I don't argue with them any more. I just let them have their say and then I try to have mine.

"Now, see this tall man coming in. He'll cross his legs and put one foot in the sphere of the lens so that it will take the size of two, and this old lady with two or three chins will be taken with front face and look like Humpty Dumpty."

They both did.

Mr. J. C. Jones, of Fulton, Ark., says of S.S.S. "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial RHEUMATISM that made my life one of agony. After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and commenced using S. S. S. After taking several bottles, I was entirely cured and able to resume work.

LIFE IN DEATH.

Calm Death, God of crossed hands and passionless eyes.
Thou God that never heedest gift or prayer,
Men blindly call thee cruel, unaware
That everything is dearer since it dies.
Worn by the chain of years without surprise,
The wise man welcomes thee and leaves the glare
Of noisy sunshine gladly, and his share,
He chose not in mad life and windy skies.

Passions and dreams of love, the fever and fret
Of toil seem vain and petty when we gaze
On the imperious lords who have no breath,
Atoms of worlds, we call them lifeless, yet
In thee they are divine, despot of days,
Pure, everlasting, all containing Death!

NICETTE.

"You are a dead man!" said the Doctor, looking intently at Anatole.

Anatole staggered.

He had come gayly to pass the evening with his old friend, Dr. Bardais, the illustrious savant whose works on venomous substances are known all over the world, whose nobility of heart and almost paternal goodness Anatole had learned to know better than any other living soul; and now, without the least hesitation or preparation, he heard this terrible prognostication issue from those authoritive lips:

"Unhappy child, what have you done?" continued the Doctor.

"Nothing that I know of," stammered Anatole, greatly agitated.

"Tax your memory; tell me what you have eaten or drank—what you have inhaled,"

The last word was a ray of light to Anatole. That very morning he received a letter from one of his friends who was traveling in India; in the letter was a flower plucked on a bank of the Ganges by the traveler—a strangely formed red flower, the perfume of which—he now recalled the fact vividly—had appeared to him to be singularly penetrative. He hastily drew forth his pocket-book and produced the letter and its contents, and handed them to the savant.

"No doubt is possible!" cried the Doctor; "it is the Pyramenensis Indical the deadly flower, the flower of blood!"

"Then—you—really—think——"

"Alas! I am sure of it,"

"But—it is impossible!—I am only five-and-twenty years of age, and feel full of life and health!—"

"At what hour did you open that fatal letter?"

"This morning, at 9 o'clock."

"Well—to-morrow morning, at the same hour, at the same minute, in full health as you say, you will feel a pain in your heart—and all will be over."

"And you know of no remedy—no means of——"

"None!" said the Doctor.

And covering his face with his hands, he sank into a chair overcome by grief.

In face of the profound emotion of his old friend, Anatole understood that he was really condemned.

He hurried from the doctor's house like a madman. His forehead bathed in perspiration, his ideas all confused, going he knew not whither, as he sped on and on amid the darkness of the night, taking no heed of the loneliness of the streets he was traversing. For a long time he pursued this blind course, until at length, finding a bench, he sat down upon it.

How many hours had he still to live?

The persistent and distressing sound of a racking cough brought him back to consciousness; he looked in the direction whence it came and saw, seated upon the same bench, a pale and weak little flower girl—a child not more than 8 years old, who, as Francois Coppee says,

Dies of the winter while offering us the spring.

That verse of the poet's recurred to the mind of Anatole; he felt in his waistcoat pocket and found there two sous and two louis. He was going to give the poor child the two sous; but remembering that he had only a few hours longer to live, he gave her the two louis.

This incident did him good.

He had been like a man stunned by a blow on the head; his bewilderment was overcome now, and he began to reassemble his dislocated ideas.

"My situation," he said to himself, "is that of a man condemned to death. A man in that position may still, however, hope for pardon—many of that sort are pardoned in our days. In past times even some had been saved from the ax or the cord to devote themselves to some difficult or dangerous piece of work—the launching of a ship, for example, or, as in the time of Louis XI., to marry an old woman. If I were consulted in the matter I should prefer to launch a ship. Unfortunately I shall not be consulted during the short interval of time that remains to me. But, by the way, how long have I got to live?"

He looked at his watch.

"Three o'clock in the morning! it is time to go to bed. To bed! waste in sleep my last six hours! Not if I know it. I have certainly something better than that to do. But what? Of course—to make my will."

A restaurant—one of those which keep open all night—was not far off. Anatole entered it.

"Garcon, a bottle of champagne—and ink and paper."

He drank a glass of Cliquot and looked thoughtfully at the sheet of paper before him.

"To whom shall I bequeath my 6,000 francs a year? I have neither father or mother—happily for them! Among the persons who interest me, I see only one—Nicette."

Nicette was a charming girl of 18, with blonde tresses and large black eyes; an orphan like himself—a community in misfortune which had long established between them a secret and complete sympathy.

His last will and testament was speedily drawn up: universal legatee, Nicette.

That done, he drank a second glass of champagne.

"Poor Nicette," he mused; "she was very sad when I last saw her. Her guardian, who knows nothing of the world outside his class of wind instruments at the Conservatoire de Musique, had taken upon himself to promise her hand to a brute of an amateur of fencing whom she detests—the more because she has given her heart to somebody else. Who is that happy mortal?—I haven't the least idea; but he is certainly worthy of her, or she would not have chosen him. Good, gentle, beautiful, loving Nicette deserves the ideal of husbands. Ah! she is the very wife that would have suited me, if—if——

"By Jove, its an infamy to compel her to destroy her life—by confiding such a treasure to such a brute! I have never before so well understood the generous ardor which fired the breasts of the wandering knights and spurred them on to the deliverance of oppressed beauty! And now I come to think of it, what hinders me from becoming the knight-errant of Nicette? My date is settled—at 9 o'clock—after that it will be too late; now, therefore, is the time for action! The hour is a little unusual for visiting people; but when I reflect that in five hours hence I shall be no more, I conclude that I have no time for standing on etiquette. Forward!—my life for Nicette!"

Anatole rose—and then, perceiving that he had no money, he gave his gold watch to the waiter in payment for the champagne—a watch worth 500 francs.

The garcon took the chronometer and examined it closely, weighed it in his hand, opened it, and finally put it in his pocket doubtfully and without thanking Anatole.

It was 4 o'clock in the morning when he rang at the door of M. Bouvard, the guardian of Nicette. He rang once, twice, and at the third tug broke the bell wire. At length M. Bouvard, himself, in his night dress and in great alarm, came and opened the door.

"What is the matter—is the house on fire?"

"No, my dear M. Bouvard," said Anatole, "I have only paid you a little visit."

"At this hour!"

"It is pleasant to see you at any hour, my dear M. Bouvard! But you are so lightly dressed—pray get into bed again."

"I am going to do so. But, I suppose Monsieur, that it is not simply to trouble me in this way that you have come at such an hour? You have something of importance to say to me?"

"Very important, Monsieur Bouvard! It is to tell you that you must renounce the idea of marrying my cousin Nicette to Monsieur Capdenac."

"What do you say?"

"You must renounce that project."

"Never, Monsieur! never!"

"Don't fly in the face of Providence by using such language!"

"My resolution is fixed, Monsieur; this marriage will take place."

"It will not, Monsieur!"

"We will see about that. And, now that you have had my answer, monsieur, I'll not detain you."

"A speech none too polite, Monsieur Bouvard; but, as I am as good-natured as I am tenacious, I will pass over it and remain."

"Stay, if it pleases you to do so, but I shall consider you gone and hold no further conversation with you."

Saying which M. Bouvard turned his face to the wall, grumbling to himself—

"Was ever such a thing seen?—rousing a man at such an hour!—breaking his sleep, only to pour into his ears such a pack of nonsense!"

Suddenly M. Bouvard sprang into a sitting posture in his bed.

Anatole had possessed himself of the Professor's trombone, into which he was blowing like a deaf man, and sending from the tortured instrument sounds of indescribable detestableness.

"My presentation trombone!—given me by my pupils! Let that instrument alone, Monsieur!"

"Monsieur, you consider me gone; I shall consider you—absent, and shall amuse myself until you return. Couac! couac!—fromn! brout! Eh? That was a fine note!"

"You will get me turned out of the house; my landlord will not allow a trombone to be played here after midnight."

"A man who evidently hath not music in his soul! Frrout! frrout, prrr!"

"You will split my ears!—you'll spoil my instrument!—a trombone badly played on is a trombone destroyed, Monsieur!"

"Couac! prounn, pra—pra—pra——"

"For mercy's sake give over!"

"Will you consent?"

"To what?"

"To renounce the idea of that marriage?"

"Monsieur, I can not!"

"Then—couac!——"

"Monsieur Capdenac——"

"Prrrroum!——"

"Is a terrible man to deal with!"

"Frrroutt!——"

"If I were to offer him such an affront he would kill me."

"Is that the only reason which stops you?"

"That—and several others."

"In that case leave the matter to me; only swear to me that if I obtain Mons. Capdenac's renunciation my cousin shall be free to choose a husband for herself."

"Really, Monsieur, you abuse——"

"Bouac, frrroutt, fluit, brroutt!——"

"Monsieur, Monsieur—she shall be free."

"Bravo! I have your word. Will you now allow me to retire? by the way, where does your Capdenac live?"

"No. 100 Rue des Deux-Epees."

"I fly thither! Until we meet again!"

"You are going to throw yourself into the lion's mouth, and he will teach you a lesson you deserve," said M. Bouvard, as Anatole hurried from the bedchamber and shut the door after him.

Without a moments hesitation Anatole betook himself to the address of the fire-eating fencer; it was just 5 o'clock when he arrived there. He rang the door bell.

"Who is there?" demanded a rough voice behind the door.

"Open—very important communication: M. Bouvard."

The sound of a night chain and the turning of a key in a heavy lock were heard.

"Here is a man who does not forget to protect himself against unwelcome visitors!" remarked Anatole to himself.

The door opened at length. Anatole found himself in the presence of a gentleman with a mustache fiercely upturned, whose night-dress appeared to be the complete costume of the fencing school.

"You see, always ready; it's my motto."

The walls of the swordsman's antechamber were completely covered with panoplies of arms of all descriptions—yatagans, poisoned arrows, sabers, rapiers, one and two-handed swords pistols—a regular arsenal—enough to terrify any timid-minded observer.

"Bah!" thought Anatole, "what do I now risk? At most two hours and a half."

"Monsieur," said Capdenac, "may I be allowed to know—"

"Monsieur," replied Anatole, "you want to marry Nicette?"

"Yes, Monsieur."

"Monsieur, you will not marry her!"

"A! thunder!—blood! who will prevent me?"

"I shall, Monsieur!"

Capdenac stared at Anatole, who was not very big; but appeared to be very decided.

"Ah—young man you are very lucky to have found me in one of my placable moments. Take advantage of it—save yourself while you have time; otherwise I will not answer for your days!"

"Nor I for yours."

"A challenge—to—me! Capdenac—do you know that I have been a master of the art of fencing for ten years!"

"There's nothing offensive about me, Monsieur!"

"I have fought twenty duels—and had the misfortune to kill five of my adversaries, besides wounding the fifteen others! Come, I have taken pity on your youth—once more, go away!"

"I see by your preparations that you are an adversary worthy of me and my long growing desire to confront a man so reputable. Let's see! what shall we fight with? Those two double-handled swords standing by the fire-place? Or those two boarding-axes? With cavalry swords, or would you prefer a pair of curved yatagans? You hesitate; can't you make up your mind?"

"I am thinking of your mother and her coming distress."

"I haven't a mother to be distressed. Would you rather fight with a carbine; pistol or revolver?"

"Young man—don't play with firearms."

"Are you afraid? You are trembling."

"Trembling? It's with cold."

"Then fight, or at once renounce the hand of Nicette."

"Renounce the hand of Mlle. Nicette! By Jove, I admire your bravery! and brave men are made to understand one another. Shall I make a confession to you?"

"Speak!"

"For some time past I have myself had thoughts of breaking off this marriage, but I did not know how to do it. I consent, therefore, with pleasure to what you wish; but, at the same time you must see that I can not appear to give way to threats, and you have threatened me."

"I retract them."

"In that case all is understood."

"You will give me, in writing, your renunciation?"

"Young man, you have so completely won my sympathy that I can refuse you nothing."

Furnished with the precious document, Anatole flew back to the dwelling place of M. Bouvard; he had a considerable distance to walk, and by the time he reached the professor's door it was nearly 8 o'clock in the morning.

"Who is there?"

"Anatole."

"Go home and go to bed!" cried the professor savagely.

"I have got Capdenac's renunciation of Nicette's hand! Open the door, or I will break it down."

M. Bouvard admitted him, and Anatole placed in his hand the momentous paper. That done, he rushed to the door of Nicette's room and cried!

"Cousin, get up—dress yourself quickly and come here!"

"It appears, Monsieur, that I am no longer master in my own home!" exclaimed M. Bouvard. "You go and come and order as you please. To make you understand that I will have nothing more to say to you, I—I will go back to my morning newspaper, in the reading of which you have interrupted me."

A few minutes later Nicette, looking fresh as dawn, arrived in the drawing room.

"What is the matter?"

"The matter," said M. Bouvard, "is that your cousin is mad."

"Mad? So be it," replied Anatole. "Last night, my dear little cousin, I obtained two things, the renunciation of your hand by M. Capdenac and the promise of your worthy guardian to bestow it on the man of your choice—the man you love."

"Do you really wish me to marry Anatole, guardian?"

"Eh?" cried Anatole, his breath nearly taken away.

"Since I love you, cousin!"

At that moment Anatole felt his heart beat violently. Was it from pleasure at the unexpected avowal made by Nicette, or was it the agony, the death symptom predicted by the doctor?

"Unfortunate that I am!" he cried. "She loves me—I am within reach of happiness, and am to die without obtaining it!"

Then, taking the hands of Nicette feverishly within his own, he told her all about the letter, the venemous flower he had scented, the prognostication of his old friend, the will he had written, and the steps he had successfully taken to release her from the claim of Capdenac.

"And, now," he said, in conclusion, "I have only to go home and die!"

"But it is impossible!" cried Nicette. "This doctor must be mistaken; who is he?"

"A man who is never in error, Nicette—Dr. Bardais."

"Bardais! Bardais!" cried Bouvard, bursting into laughter "Listen to what my newspaper here says: 'The learned Dr. Bardais has been suddenly seized with mental alienation. The madness with which he has been afflicted is of a scientific character. It is well known that he was absorbingly engaged in an inquiry into venomous substances, and latterly he had fallen into the delusion that everybody he met was under the influence of poison, and endeavored to persuade them that such was their condition. He was last night transported to the Maison de Santé of Dr. Blank.'"

"Nicette!"

"Anatole!"

And the two young persons fell into each other's arms.—Strand Magazine.

MENTONE CAVE BURIALS.

Discovery of Relics of Men About Seven Feet Tall.

Near Mentone, but on the Italian side of the frontier, there are several caves in the cretaceous sea cliffs, whose contents have long attracted the lively attention of archæologists. Unluckily they have been worked over so much that the original stratification is no longer apparent, but throughout the mass, flint chips and rude bone implements have been abundantly found, of such character that they have been unanimously referred to palæolithic man, to that period of his existence in Western Europe which De Mortillet has called Solutreen.

Thus far all is harmony, but in this deposit at various depths skeletons have been unearthed and a lively discussion ensued as these should be considered also of palæolithic time or of later date. This debate has been renewed by fresh discoveries of such remains in February last, a good description of which, by A. Vaughan Jennings, appears in Natural Science for June. They are said to be of unusual size, relics of men from six and a half to seven feet tall, but it is well known how easily one is deceived in measuring skeletons. With them were worked ornaments of bone and shell, necklaces and finely chipped arrow-heads. These indications point conclusively to the fact of deliberate interment at a period when mortuary ceremonies were definite and solemn rites, and unquestionably therefore to neolithic times. In spite of the depth at which they were found—perhaps twenty-five feet below the modern level of the cave floor, they must be accepted as indorsing De Mortillett's rejection of the human remains as palæolithic.

Dangers of the Copper Kettle.

A correspondent of the 'Sheffield Telegraph' says: A Sharrow gentleman was always unwell at home, and invariably got better when he left it. The symptoms were those of lead-poisoning, including the much-dreaded "drop wrist." An idea struck him—it was the copper kettle. He had it cut in two, and found the alleged copper kettle was three parts lead, which the hot water had liberated and assimilated with the sufferer's system. The copper kettle has been discarded, and there is no more ill-health. A gentleman brought me the lid of one of these so-called copper kettles. The surface only was copper, the rest was lead, which left the copper freely to the thumb touch. It is said that a large number of people have recently experienced all the effects of lead-poisoning, and the evil has been traced to the copper kettle, which is now a discarded utensil in many households.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL

DIGEST OF THE NEWS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

All Important Occurrences of the Past Week, Boiled Down and Arranged for Rapid Reading.

The Capital.

Edmund Johnson, United States consul at Kiel, Germany, is removed for fraudulent practice.

Secretary Rusk declares the United States free from pleuro-pneumonia and removes the last quarantine.

Justice Lamar, of the United States supreme court, suffers a stroke of paralysis, but will recover.

Postmaster General Wannamaker has issued an order to establish the free delivery service, to commence Dec 1, at Decorah, Iowa; Yankton, S. D.; Stevens Point, Wis., and Mason City, Iowa.

Personal Mention.

United States Minister Patrick Egan is now on his way home from his post in Chili.

Prof. Charles Elliot Norton is engaged in editing the letters of James Russell Lowell for publication.

Mrs. Henry Whitall Smith writes that there are one thousand American girls now studying the art in Paris.

Blondin, the famous tight-rope walker, who is sixty-eight years old, is still in the business. He has lately had great success in Europe.

The famous tenor Sims Reeves, who has finally left the lyric stage to become a professor of music in London, is about seventy years of age.

Gen. James W. Husted, the New York Republican politician who served more terms as speaker of the assembly than any other man in the history of the state is dead.

The acquittal the other day of the Marquis de Mores from the charge of having killed Capt. Mayer in a duel is a proof of French sentiment with regard to duelling—a sentiment that corresponds with that of a jury in Mississippi or South Carolina.

Canadian customs officers thought that the trunk which John Boyd Thatcher of Albany was taking with him to Chicago looked suspicious, and they bored holes in it and injected carbolic acid to kill supposed cholera germs. The contents of the trunk were ruined.

Accidental Happenings.

A cyclone occurs in New York state, with some loss of life and heavy property damage.

Two persons are burned to death in a fire at Howard, S. D., which destroys property valued at over $100,000.

Three men were killed and three seriously injured in a wreck on the Vandalia line near Greenville, Ill.

Seven persons are killed by a railroad collision at New Hampton, Iowa. Two others are believed to be in the wreck.

At Ottawa, Kan., the residence of Samuel Adkinson, near Teloup, was struck by lightning, killing Mr. and Mrs. Adkinson and their two children, one four years and the other seven months old.

The woolen mill of Sayles & Jenks at Warren, Mass., was wholly burned recently. The loss is about $300,000; insured for $275,000.

The Sea View House at Cottage City, Mass., took fire recently and was burned to the ground. The fire originated in the basement near the kitchen, and it is thought resulted from a stray spark getting into a lot of cotton waste which was near the engine. The wharf known as Oak Bluff landing quickly ignited and was completely destroyed and the old skating rink to the north of the wharf was badly damaged.

Among the Wicked.

Jacob Breitenstein, whose wife had sued him for divorce shot her fatally at San Francisco, Cal., and then inflicted a mortal wound upon himself.

Arthur D. Sloan is to be taken from Texas to Nebraska to be tried for killing his step-father and brother at Fontainelle, Neb., several years ago.

A family feud which has existed for a long time in the Freel family of Stockade, Wyo., culminated the other night in the shooting of Hank Freel by his nephew, Jesse Freel.

J. Walker, while hunting on the Anim River in New Mexico, was attacked by Apaches. They killed his horse and dog, and Frank Stattas, who was with him, has not been heard of, and it is thought he has been killed.

W. R. Crosset, cashier of the People's bank of Hope, Ark., disappeared recently. His absence was not discovered for two or three days, when it became known that he had taken all the bank's money. Attachments for $10,000 are out. He was a member of the Methodist church and was considered a highly moral citizen.

Lena Schmitt, a German woman of Bordentown, N. J., murdered three small children by choking them to death in her house. One of the victims was her own son and the other two were little sons of William Bowkner, a neighbor. The children's ages ranged from one to three years. The woman is believed to be insane. She cannot tell why she committed the murders.

A suspicion of murder has crept into the case of J. S. Wicks, the New York millionaire who was killed by a fall from a window of a disreputable house at Detroit, Mich. His friends now declare that he had $900 in cash on his person when he entered the place where he met his death, but no trace of the money has since been found. The jury brought in a verdict of accidental death, but Mr. Wick's friends have engaged detectives to probe the case to the bottom.

GHOST THAT DRIVES A PLOW.

Strange Apparition That is Now Puzzling Florida Farmers.

A respectable farmer named Peterson, who owns a place a few miles from town, says a Fernadina special to the Philadelphia Times, brings a curious story of a ghost that haunts his cornfield and plows by moonlight. He says that he first noticed the apparition about a month ago when sitting up with a sick child. He happened to look out on the field about the hour of midnight, and to his amazement he saw the figure of a man guiding an ox team over the ground. The animals, man and plow were all as plain to be seen as if it had been daylight, though the rest of the field was in comparative gloom.

Not knowing what to make of this singular light he called his eldest son to go and see who the stranger was. The boy went at once, and his father watching him, was further amazed to see the lad walk right through the plow and man as if there was nothing there. When the boy returned he declared that he had found nothing and nobody in the field. Mr. Peterson was resolved to go, and he did so, but could see no traces of the man and team, though on returning to the room from which he had seen the sight he found them as plain as before. The man was dressed in the clothes of a laborer, and wore a large broad-brimmed hat, which completely concealed his features.

He was intent on his work and never raised his head, but would crack the whip he carried over the back of the oxen, but without noise. Since this time Mr. Peterson says he has repeatedly seen the phantom plowman and has called his neighbors in to see it with him, though always on going into the field nothing was to be found. The people about declare that the figure is that of the farmer who owned the place before Peterson bought it, and who early one morning was found dead in this field, and it was thought by his own hand.

VAST ARMIES IN EUROPE.

Russia Has a Standing Force of Over a Million and a Half.

Giving the countries alphabetically, Austria-Hungary leads, with an active army of 875,000 men, a first reserve (men who have served their time "with the colors") of 290,000 men, and a second reserve, of men who have served their time in the first reserve, of 866,000; the grand total is 2,032,420 officers and men. France has a war force of 4,160,472 officers and men; 1,124,000 are in the active army, 910,000 in the field reserve, 950,000 in the first and 1,176,000 in the second reserve. Germany has 2,913,599 officers and men, of whom 810,000 are with the colors, 405,000 in the field reserve, 900,000 in the first and 790,000 in the second reserve. Great Britain has a regular army of 136,843 men, a field reserve of 68,200 men, a first reserve of 750,000, a second of about 224,000, and a total on paper of 1,179,350. Italy has 925,000 men under arms, a field reserve of 201,000, a first reserve of 1,398,000 a second reserve of 17,800, and a total of 2,522,814. Russia has the largest standing army, 1,698,000 men always under arms, with field reserves of 1,124,000; first reserves amounting to 1,101,300 men; 4,000,000 in the second reserve, and a total of 7,914,000. Turkey keeps 155,000 men with the colors, but has an estimated reserve of 617,000 men. As between France and Germany, some critics expect France to beat Germany. The French have matched every improvement made by the Germans in military matters, and they will fight for revenge, which, the Globe-Democrat thinks, is a feeling that will help them. It will be a great war when it comes.

RENAN IS NO MORE

The Great French Writer Dies After a Very Brief Illness.

He Suffers Most Terrible Agony During His Closing Hours.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Joseph Ernest Renan, the distinguished philologist and author, died, to-day, after enduring intense sufferings.

The ailment which resulted in M. Renan's death was contracted on Tuesday. On that day he went driving and caught a severe cold, which speedily developed into congestion of the lungs. He was slightly better yesterday morning and his friends took hope that he would rally and recover. They were doomed to deep disappointment, however, as towards evening his legs and stomach began to swell and he suffered great agony. His condition necessitated a painful operation, which had the effect of weakening the patient's vitality. After the operation Renan fell into a state of heavy somnambulance, from which he never recovered. He died at 3:20 o'clock this morning.

THE CHOLERA FLEET.

Only One Steamer Thereof, the Bohemia, Remains in Quarantine.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The steamer Bohemia is all that remains of the cholera fleet. Her passengers, who were removed to Hoffman Island, were all reported well this afternoon. Dr. Abbott reports all well at Swinburne island. The patients are all convalescent. The following steamers are anchored in quarantine having on board steerage passengers: Indiana and Nevada from Liverpool Massalia from Naples and the Polaria from Stettin. The Indiana, Nevada and Polaria were carefully disinfected yesterday, and are only waiting the action of the government as to whether their passengers can be landed. The Massalia will remain here for some days yet under the health officer's supervision. Action will be taken to-morrow, no doubt, on the Indiana, Nevada and Polaria by the authorities at Washington. The Hamburg-American liner Dania will be cleared tomorrow and allowed to proceed to her wharf at Hoboken. The tramp steamers Laurestina and Newminster are still anchored, and will probably have to lighter their cargoes, which consists principally of sugar. The steamers Gothia from Stettin and Slavonia from Hamburg still remain in quarantine. The Moravia will have the remainder of her cargo discharged into lighters by Wednesday, and will sail for Hamburg direct.

CRONIN'S MURDERER.

A Convict in the Oregon Penitentiary Believed to Be the Man.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—According to a story which will appear in to-morrow's Chicago Times, the long sought murderer of Dr. P. H. Cronin has been found. He is said to be Thoms Geohegan, who is now confined in the Oregon penitentiary under the name of Thomas Coleman. Geoghan is a well known crook and was in this city at the of the Cronin murder, but has not heretofore been suspected of conspiracy in the crime. The Chicago police deny that they are looking for Geohecan, or that they want him on any particular charge, but dispatches received here to-night from Portland declare that the penitentiary officials admit that application has been made to have the man brought back here. Geohegan is said to be the man who actually dealt the blows, which killed the physician. One of the attorneys who assisted in the prosecution of the Cronin murderers said to-night that it was always known that one of the murderers went to the Pacific coast, but that all trace of him was lost there.

SCANDALOUS AND TRAGIC.

Mysterious Death of a Young Man in the Company of Another's Wife.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—There is some little romance and considerable mystery connected with the death of Frank Mezick, the young man who committed suicide by taking morphine yesterday while in the company of Mrs. Hathaway. The woman in the case is not quite twenty years old, and is the wife of a wealthy contractor in Cleveland. She quarreled with her husband and came to Chicago two weeks ago. She says she has been stopping at the Wellington hotel for the past week under an assumed name, but refuses to give the name under which she registered. Mezick and the woman had been together during the afternoon and the woman claims he took poison. Mrs. Hathaway says she was very much frightened and wanted to call a physician, but Mezick insisted upon her going with him in a cab to the house of Mrs. Etta Lawrence on Twentieth street. The couple arrived at the above number about 7:30 o'clock in the evening and were met at the door by Mrs. Lawrence. Mrs. Hathaway explained that her companion was sick and requested that he be given a room. Being acquainted with Mezick, Mrs. Lawrence readily gave him a room. Mrs. Lawrence assisted Mrs. Hathaway in removing Mezick's coat and he lay down on the bed. Mrs. Lawrence left the room and went down stairs. In about five minutes Mrs. Hathaway ran down stairs and told Mrs. Lawrence that Mezick had taken morphine. Mrs. Lawrence refused to allow her to leave the house, sent for a physician, and the two women went together to Mezick's room. He was unconscious, and upon the arrival of the physician was past aid. Mrs. Hathaway then went for Dr. Tallman, and upon his arrival the police were notified and Mezick was removed to Mercy hospital, where he died this morning. Mrs. Hathaway was taken into custody to await the action of the coroner's jury and to be used as a witness before that body.

NEXT SEASON'S WORK.

Contract for River Improvements, Under the Recent Appropriation Awarded.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Special, Oct. 3.—Maj. Alexander Mackenzie, in charge of the Mississippi river improvements from Minneapolis to the mouth of the Missouri river, has let contracts for work to be done next season under the $600,000 appropriation of the last congress as follows:

For construction of dams and shore protection between Glenhaven and Dubuque, A. J. Whitney of Rock Island, $14,750; between Genoa and Prairie du Chien, Albert Kirchner of Fountain City, Wis., $51,500; between Dubuque and Clinton, Patterson Bros. of Keokuk, Iowa, $49,750; between Reed's Landing and Minneiska, Jacob Richman of Fountain City, Wis., $40,675; materials for furnishing brush between Minneiska and La Crosse, Wis., Jacob Schmoker of Fountain City, Wis., $12,200; rip rap between Minneiska and La Crosse, Edgar R. Leach of Richmond, Minn., $2,500; stone wall rock, Rock Island Rapids, D. M. Richardson and S. Monroe of Portsmouth, Ohio, $11,000; rip-rap rock between Keithsburg, Ill., and Montrose, Iowa, Wm. Englehard of Fort Rosa, Ill., $3,000; brush between Keithsburg, Ill., and Montrose, Iowa, Philip Pence of Lomax, Ill., $750; rip-rap rock between Minneapolis and Lake Pepin, M. Abera and Charles S. Jogren of Hastings, $12,100; brush between Minneapolis and Lake Pepin, Frank N. Truax of St. Paul Park, Minn., $3,250.

Pecuniary Assistance.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The Press association says that the amount of the grant voted by the government to enable the British East Africa company to remain in Uganda for at least three months longer is £12,000. It also says that it is probable that after the evacuation of the territory by the company a British commissioner will be appointed to take charge of affairs there. The grant to the British East Africa company is the result of a communication which Lord Roseberry, secretary of state for foreign affairs, recently sent to the officers of that organization, saying that the government agreed to the evacuation of Uganda by the company, but that in order to avoid the dangers that would arise from an immediate withdrawal, the government was willing to give the company pecuniary assistance in order that it might prolong the occupation for a stated period.

A Furious Gale.

LAVACA, Tex., Oct. 3.—Last night a furious gale swept Lavaca bay. It was the severest hurrible one of 1886. Tee harbor was full of boats, as it was meeting day for the Fish and Oyster union. Over twenty boats were badly damaged. Some were totally destroyed. A number of buildings near the shore were wrecked. No lives were lost. No estimate of the damage has yet been made, as a number of boats have not been heard from. On account of these latter, much anxiety is felt.

Blazing Timber.

CAPE MAY COURTHOUSE, Va., Oct. 3.—A forest fire yesterday broke out between Belle Plaine and Woodbine, the Jewish settlement of Baron De Hirsch. The fire raged all yesterday and to-day, burning thousands of acres of timber and cut wood. Despite the efforts of the men who are fighting it, the fire continues to advance towards Woodbine and to-night is still burning fiercely. The loss already amounts to many thousands of dollars.

Lost Dories.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 3.—Capt. Schmitt, of the Netherlands Oil Tank steamer La Campine, from Antwerp, reports speaking the fishing schooner Ada M. Hall of Gloucester, Mass., on Sept. 17. The master of the Hall reported that during the gale on the previous day he had lost two dories, in which were five of his men.

Funds for Evicted Tenants.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The movement to raise funds in America and Australia is meeting with the opposition of the Evicted Tenants' association, an organization composed of McCarthyites. It is expected that the promoters will be required to give a guarantee that the fund will be used solely for the benefit of the evicted tenants.

General of the Jesuits.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Padre Martino has been elected Jesuit general. He is a native of Bourges, is of humble parentage and forty-four years of age. He is a distinguished theologian and scientist.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 60 cents.

The weather this fall, so far, has been almost perfect.

L. Ellington, of Crookston, is in town to-day on business.

John Dow, of Grand Forks, is in town on business to-day,

Mr. John Halvorson is in Crookston this week visiting friends.

Dr. Tillier, of Crookston, was in town the first of the week on business,

Elmer Stranahan made a short trip to Crookston last Monday returning yesterday.

Matt Skala, of Red Lake Falls, was shaking hands with old friends in the village to-day,

Born—To Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Dahl, on Oct 4th, a boy. Mother and child are doing well.

Farmers are progressing rapidly with their fall work and a few weeks will see all completed.

Emil Brink, who has been harvesting int the vicinity of Park Rapids the past month, returned last Monday.

Adam Zeh. of Thief River Falls Democratic nominee for Register of Deeds, was in town to-day calling on his many friends here.

A number of our young folks attended the dance given by the Thief River Falls Base Ball Club last Friday evening They report having had a very pleasant time.

Minton Holmes had a severe hemorrhage of the lungs last Saturday and he has been very sick since then. Drs. Dunlop and Tillier, of Crookston, are in town to-day in attendance.

A Mr. Windom, of Wisconsin, made a political speech here this afternoon in the village hall. He had an audiance of twenty-six, actual count, and of course told his audiance that the peoples party was going to pieces fast.

The Fosston line now has a daily train and Conductor Norry will have charge, Conductor Connelly will hereafter have charge of the St. Hilaire run. Jack's many friends will be pleased to hear of his good fortune.

The price of wheat still continues to rule low no. 1 hard being only worth 60 cents in this market. The price of wheat has been declining for over a year now and it certainly would seem as if it had nearly reached the bottom.

J G. McGrew and O. H. Lucken of of Crookston, are in town today. They held a republican meeting at Thief River Falls last evening at which, we understand, nearly twenty-five persons were present. Surely the Republicans are not much on the "enthuse" in this section at present,

Chas. A. Johnson, of Rocksbury, was in town on business yesterday, and "gives it out cold" that the People's party is on the gain in this part of the county. He says that he has been over most of this part of the county and he is of the opinion that the farmers of this section will vote solid for the People's party nominees.

The construction train arrived here last Sunday with a crew of about seventy-five men and they commenced work on Monday laying track to Thief River Falls. They will have the steel laid in to Thief River Falls this week, It will probably take a couple of weeks to surfase the track ater which regular trains will be run.

In relation to the case of Leon Wichterman and S. Palen mentioned in last week's daily and weekly Times we will state that upon investigating the case we are lead to believe that County Attorney Holston had nothing to do with it except as a notary, and did nothing in the matter for which he could be centured or blamed.—Crookston Times.

As a factor in controlling prices the tariff cuts but a small figure, which is well understood by the money changers As long as the tariff can be kept before the people as the main political issue the money question will not be agitated and Wall street will continue to control our financial legislation in the interest of millionaires and the creditor classes, —Shelbyville (Ill.) People's Paper.

NOTICE FOR BIDS.

THE FARMER'S DREAM.

(Of a Plausible Future.)

The Spring Valley Sun, a democratic sheet has the following to say of Mr. Donnelly:

It is a wide spread impression that Mr. Donnelly will poll a larger vote for governor than S. M. Owen received two years ago. In many western counties the Populists are making a tremendous fight, and it is clear that those politicians who are fighting on what they are pleased to term the "Revolt against Donnelly" are doomed to disappointment. The old Alliance organization is swallowed up by the Populist party and in addition to the Alliance the People's party has scooped the labor organizations of the cities and hundreds of the disgruntled from the other parties. Therefore to count for a fall-off in Donnelly's vote is poor politics. There never has been a time when party ties lie so loosely upon men as now. Silver, Tariff Reform, Government ownership of railroads, and kindred topics has loosened partisanship; made men restless: provoked discussion alienated party allegiance and mixed things generally, The situation is the most complex. Donnelly is making the fight of his life, He has doubtless one eye on the U. S. senatorship. Whatever men may say against him or about him, he stands to-day, admittedly the most versatile speaker in the Union. The following of Donnelly is an ardent compact belligerent phalanx. All Populists are heroic in their advocacy of principles, Opposed to the monopolistic and plutocratic tendencies of the time, the peoples party recruits heavily from the order organizations of the country. Donnelly is a general. He grasps ideas quickly. He is a master on the stump. In wit, anecdote and repartee he has no equal Laborers, every man who toils and sweats, plow-holders and breadwinners —the vast army of tax payers—the people who produce and who hate millionaries—the product of the policy of that protection that boasts capital and lets labor shirk for itself—all these hanker after the leader Donnelly in a greater or less degree. The Sun sees much in Ignatius Donnelly to admire It admires his talent and his bravery. He is consistant in life-long battles against the plutocrats. It likes Donnelly "for the enemies he has made." Enemies from the bloated ranks of bounty jumpers, draft-dodgers and stay-at-homes, when the youngest Lieutenant Governor Minnesota ever had" was giving his all to the boys in blue to save the Union. Mr. Donnelly will speak in this city before the campaign closes. The Sun will shine for him on that occasion. He is making a gallant fight and thousands are rallying around him. He is at the head of the vast army of producers. Donnelly, march on! Your case is just. November will be your hour of satisfaction.

Gentlemen, unless the old parties get in some tremendous work in October, Mr. Donnelly is elected governor of Minnesota by a solid majority. You can count on it to-day, But we cannot foresee the effect of the money power. The Australian ballot is in our favor, however.

We are surprise. After "belting" the state—and occupying nearly every county, excepting in southwest, we are thoroughly satisfied. Let the other "feller" do the the screaming from now until Nov. 8th—and the pooh-poohing Just keep a steel brace along your spinal column. Unless there is a revulsion the state of Minnesota is ours. We have been told of defections to offset our great increase. Upon examination the "defections" have been mythical There are no defection, but great gains The gains in the northwestern counties have not been large. How could they be? Take a township with 77 votes and with 76 peoples party votes to one for the enemy—and that one the postmaster—how are you going to get a gain there!—unless you bury the P. M. Minnesota for the peoples party! At all events the fight is between Lawler and Donnelly. Nelson is not in it.—Great West.

It now transpires that the great champion of reform known as the "Red River Dalen" after advocating the election of H. E. Bowen for congress during the past two months, has got tired and laid down to rest. Whose standard it will hoist next, is probably not known outside of the republican headquarters over which A. D. Stephens presides. It is laughable so see the astute journalistic prostitute put on airs of innocence while it secretly flirts with the political lotharios of both the old parties. Never mind ducky, don't take so much trouble to conceal your actions. the people are onto you anyway and you might as well take down the entire ticket from A to Z and get over into the demo-republican camp where you belong.—Crookston Tribune,

EROS COMES TO STAY.

Once a fowler, young and artless,
To the quiet greenwood came;
Full of skill was he and heartless
In pursuit of feathered game;
And betimes he chanced to see
Eros perching in a tree.

"What strange bird is that, I wonder?"
Thought the youth and spread his snare.
Eros, chuckling at the blunder,
Gayly scampered here and there.
Do his best, the simple clod
Could not snare the agile god.

Blubbering, to his aged master
Went the fowler in dismay,
And confessed his disaster
With that curious bird that day:
"Master, hast thou ever heard
Of so ill disposed a bird?"

"Heard of him! Alas, most truly!"
Quoth the master with a smile;
"And thou, too, shalt know him duly.
Thou art young, but bide awhile;
And old Eros will not fly
From thy presence by and by.

"For when thou art somewhat older
That same Eros thou didst see,
More familiar grown and bolder,
Shall become acquaint with thee;
And when Eros comes thy way,
Mark my word he comes to stay."
—Eugene Field in Chicago News.

The Cobweb as a Styptic.

When Bottom was "translated" and introduced to the attendants of Titania he endeavored to ingratiate himself with Good Master Cobweb by saying, "When I cut my finger I will make bold with you." To arrest bleeding the application of a cobweb to the wound has long been a rural custom. Experience has shown that the gossamer of which the web is composed forms a very useful styptic, but a very fatal objection to its use arises from the fact that as an application to an open wound it can never be guaranteed as surgically clean, forming as it does a net for insects and at the same time for the germs of many an infectious disease.

Evidence of this was produced before the Liverpool coroner recently touching the death of Martha Roberts, who, following the timehonored custom, had applied a cobweb to her wounded hand to stop the bleeding. Blood poisoning followed upon its application, and this terminated, unhappily, in a fatal issue It is not a solitary case. The principles of asepticism have not yet become part of the intellectual equipment of the people, neither have its lessons succeeded in overcoming prejudice.—London Lancet.

A Matter of Opinion.

She had been having fun with Dudekins right along and he made up what mind he had to get even. It took the form of a brilliant and cogent conundrum, whose answer Dudekins thought was locked in his manly bosom.

"I have a conundrum for you, Miss Fannie," he said, when he saw her next.

"Ah," she replied, "what is it? Who gave it to you?"

"I made it up myself," he asserted bridling somewhat.

"Indeed! What is it?"

"Why are my clothes like the moon?"

She hesitated a moment and Dudekins began to look triumphant.

"You may think," she said slowly, and Dudekins somehow felt the sand slipping from under him, "it is because they have a turn in them, and you have a perfect right to think as you please, but, Mr. Dudekins, opinions differ."—Detroit Free Press.

Leaves Used for Paper.

Leaves of trees were used for writing purposes very early by the Egyptians, and probably by the Greeks. The Hindoos continued the use of this material until within a few centuries. Even at the present time books of leaves are not uncommon in the south of India and the island of Ceylon. The leaves of some Asiatic trees, from their size and smoothness, are admirably adapted for books If we may judge from the name "leaf" being still applied to the paper of books, we should imagine these leaves to have been formerly the principal material in use.—New York World.

A Cunning Child.

"Oh, Tom, the baby is so sweet! Today he took off his shoe and threw it in the fire, and when I told him that he was a bad, bad boy he only said 'Nah.'"

"'Nah,' eh? Well, what do you think I'm made of—money? That's the second pair he's lost in a week."

"Oh, no, dear; it was the mate of the one he tore to pieces."

"Oh, that's different—isn't he cunning!"—Harper's Bazar.

A Loving Jay.

Olive Thorne Miller tells of a jay that she once tamed, and that repaid her kindness with every mark of gentle regard. The jay never squawked at her as he would at others, but whistled gently and cooingly. He always got as near her as possible, and did as near kissing as a bird can; that is, he laid his beak on her cheek.

Cabmen's Examinations.

Cabmen have to pass an examination in knowledge of London streets before they can obtain a license, and this is far more necessary than might be supposed, for 691 men in the year 1889 failed in the examination, and not a severe one at that, while 1,211 were passed.—London Tit-Bits.

Dinner Table Amenities.

Young Van Sprawl—I believe in being above board in all that I do.

Old De Goute—Then I wish you would stop kicking me under the table.—Kate Field's Washington.

The Roumanian has, in every walk in life, a fierce and savage pride which causes him to abhor the idea of medicine and surgery, and to consider the loss of a limb as terrible as that of life itself.

Nine-tenths of the stuff used as bay rum in New York, and other places as well, is not bay rum at all, but a mixture of the essential oil of bay with common rum or alcohol.

Dr. Goodfellow writes that "toast is more easily digested than ordinary bread, inasmuch as it contains a greater percentage of hydrocarbon."

Two Stories of Lucky Miners.

A few of the many stories that are told of miners' luck will enable the reader to understand how and why the heads of whole communities may be turned in mining regions. Jim Whitlatch, the discoverer of the Whitlatch-Union mine, near Helena, led a typical western miner's life. The mine in question is now owned in England and has produced $20,000,000 in gold. After Jim Whitlatch had sold the property for $1,500,000 he went to New York "to make as much money as Vanderbilt." He was a rare treat to Wall street, which fattened on him, and in one year let him go with only the clothes on his back. He returned to Montana, began "prospecting" again and discovered a mine for which he got $250,000. He went to Chicago to rival Mr. Potter Palmer in wealth and returned just as he did from New York—"flat strapped," as he would have expressed it. He made still another fortune and went to San Francisco, where he died a poor man.

Another Lewis and Clarke county mine—the Drum Lummon—provides another such story. It was discovered by an Irish immigrant named Thomas Cruse. Although he owned it, he could not get a sack of flour on credit. He sold it to an English syndicate for $1,500,000. But he remains one of the wealthy men of Helena.—Julian Ralph in Harper's.

How Opium Is Gathered.

It is a sort of garden cultivation, the poppy plants being grown in little squares or beds intersected by tiny water channels for irrigation wherever this is possible. The growth of the plants is carefully tended, and at length the time comes when they burst out into flower, and the fields look like a sheet of silver as the white petals of the flowers glisten in the morning dew.

These beautiful petals are the first produce of the crop, for the women and children of the cultivators' families come forth and pick them off one by one and carefully dry them, so that they may serve afterward as the covering of the manufactured cakes of opium. Then the poppies, with their bare capsule heads, remain standing in the open field until it is considered that they are ripe for lancing. The cultivators then come forth in the evening, and, with an implement not unlike the knives of a cupping instrument, they scarify the capsule on its sides with deep incisions, so that the juice may exude.

In the early morning the cultivators reappear with a scraping knife and their earthenware pots, and they scrape off the exuded juice and collect it in their pots. And this is crude opium.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Tragic Kindergarten Episode.

A certain kindergarten is blessed with the attendance of a very original youth named Richard. He is a very honest little boy and highly respected by his parents, but the other afternoon when he came home he acknowledged frankly to his mother that a punishment had been inflicted upon him at the kindergarten.

"Why, what have you done?"

"Well, you see," he answered, "Johnny and I got tired of being good, and we made up our minds that we would just get our heads together and holler out the very naughtiest word we could think of, both together."

The mother was inexpressibly shocked. Johnny was another very nice and well bred boy. But she managed to ask:

"Well, what did you say?"

"We just screamed out 'Bedbug!' as loud as we could!"

Probably this tragic episode has never had its duplicate in the history of kindergartening.—Boston Transcript.

A Snake That Is Found in Many Places.

The common snake, which bears the scientific name of Tropidonotus natrix, is one species of a genus (Tropidonotus) which extends over Europe and North America, and from northern Asia to north Australia, there being seventeen or eighteen Indian species alone. Our common snake may serve as an example of the largest family into which serpents are divided—the family Colubridæ—of which there are upward of 165 species in India alone. This family contains most of the harmless snakes, and it is also illustrated by a small snake, Coronella austriaca, which some years ago was discovered to be an inhabitant of Dorsetshire and Hampshire. The Coronella feeds exclusively on lizards, slow worms and small snakes. Though harmless, it will bite.—Quarterly Review.

The First False Hair.

In very early days, as now, the hair was sometimes thin and it had to be eked out in various ways to make believe that nature had been spendthrift to all alike. About the first description extant of woman's hair speaks of "plaited locks," known as "Gretchen braids" to us. To make these braids seem longer, silk the color of the hair was braided in. Then they took to putting the braids in cases of silk, elongating them with all sorts of stuff till they looked like umbrellas in covers. The Chinese pigtail is a modification of this style.—Washington Star.

Punished by the Czar.

The czar of Russia knows how to brace up his military officers to their duty. A merchant of Charkoff was murdered by soldiers, and it was shown that had the officers of the regiment stationed in the town maintained proper discipline the murder might have been prevented. As a punishment for this they have been ordered to pay a yearly pension of 5,000 rubles to the widow of the murdered man.—Toledo Blade.

Not Surprised.

Neighbor (breathlessly)—Oh, Mrs. Harddluck, your little son Johnny found a dynamite bomb, and took it into a stable down town and broke it with an ax, and blew up the stable and all the buildings around it.

Mrs. Harddluck—Land sakes! I wonder what that boy will be up to next.—Good News.

In the Business of Revolution.

The Englishman imagines that revolution and treason are serious affairs and must be conducted with set teeth and grave face. Not so the men of the Latin races. To them revolutions are like race meetings, with a certain amount of danger added. An Englishman feels disgraced at the idea of recurrent revolution. Not so a Frenchman or a Spaniard.—London Spectator.

BLUFFED DOWN BY A PARSON.

A London Thug Who Thought the American Preacher Carried a Gun.

"I had an adventure in London last spring, of a very unpleasant nature," said Rev. Theo. Swain, a Memphis minister, the other day. "I was wandering about the city sight-seeing one day and finally found myself near the notorious Whitechapel district. I was approached by a begger, who appeared to be a complete physical wreck. I questioned him, and his story was so pitiful that I concluded to investigate it. He said that he lodged in the next block, and thither we went. He led me into a gloomy old building and up three pairs of rickety stairs to a little stuffy room lighted only by a dirty sky-light. Once in there he locked the door, laid aside his crutches, pulled off his gray wig, and stood up, a powerful six-footer in the prime of life. 'Well,' said I, 'I see that you are a fraud; what do you want with me?" He replied that he wanted my purse, watch and chain, and to enforce his claim produced an ugly looking knife. 'It will do you no good to cry out,' he said, 'for you cannot be heard in the street, and no one in this building will come to your aid.'

"I had sized him up pretty close and concluded that he was bluffing, that he would not dare kill me in the very heart of London, so I assumed a very careless air and told him if he robbed me he would have to kill me first, and that he might just as well get at it. 'Oh, I know that you have got a pistol, but I'm not afraid of it,' he said. 'Most Americans carry pistols for just such cattle as you,' I replied with all the coolness I could assume. 'Now, if you are not afraid of it why don't you get to work?' I saw that he was cowed, and throwing my hand to my hip pocket, I stepped forward and said firmly; 'Give me that knife.' He handed it to me without a word, unlocked the door and held it open for me to pass out. No, I had no pistol—never carry one; but I made no more visits to the dens of London beggars without a burly officer at my elbow."

THE practice of denistry is of great antiquity, for, as early as 500 B. C., gold was used for stopping teeth and gold wire was employed to hold artificial teeth in position, and it does not seem then to have been a new art. Herodotus declares that the Egyptians had a knowledge of the disease of the teeth and their treatment. In the writings of Martial, first century, a man is mentioned as either stopping or extracting teeth. The date of the introduction of artificial teeth into England or Europe is uncertain. They came to America from England, but just when it is difficult to determine. "The Mathematical Jewel," published 1585, contains an account of Sir John Blagrave, "who caused all his teeth to be drawn out, and after had a sett o ivory teeth in agayne."

Rev. Samuel Longfellow was a verse-maker, and once compiled a collection of hymns for publication. When he asked a fellow parson to suggest a title for the work the friend thought it might be called a Sam-book.

PUBLIC SCHOOL CELEBRATION.

Official Program of the School Celebration of Columbus Day.

The following is the program adopted by the executive committee for the occasion of the Public School celebration of Columbus Day, Oct. 21:

1. Reading of the President's Proclamation, by the Master of Ceremonies.
2. Raising of the Flag by the Veterans.
3. Salute to the Flag, by the Pupils and singing of "America."
4. Acknowledgment of God, Prayer or Scripture.
5. Song of Columbus Day, by Pupils and Audience.

Columbia, my land! all hail the glad day
When first to thy strand Hope pointed the way:
Hail him who thro' darkness first followed the Flame
That led where the May-flower of Liberty came.

Dear County, the star of the valiant and free!
Thy exiles afar are dreaming of thee,
No fields of the Earth so enchantly shine,
No air breathes such incense, such music as thine.

Humanity's home! thy sheltering breast
Gives welcome and room to strangers oppressed.
Pale children of Hunger and Hatred and Wrong
Find life in thy freedom and joy in thy song.

Thy fairest estate the lowly may hold,
Thy poor may grow great, thy feeble grow bold:
For worth is the watchward to noble degree,
And manhood is mighty where manhood is free.

O Union of States, and union of Souls!
Thy promise awaits, thy future unfolds,
And earth from her twilight is hailing the sun,
That rises where people and rulers are one.

6. The address, "The Meaning of the Four Centuries."

A Declamation of the Special Address prepared for the occasion by the Youth's Companion.

7. The Ode, "Columbia's Banner."

A reading of the Poem written for the occasion by Edna Dean Proctor.

This is the end of the Official Program. Whatever additional Exercises, Patriotic Recitations, Historic Representations, or Chorals may be desired should follow this. The Addresses by Citizens and the singing of other National Songs should also follow, not precede nor interrupt, the Official Program.

Whittier used to admit that he had no ear for music and could not tell "Yankee Dood'e" from "Old Hundred."

A Sure Case.

"I tell you," said the new policeman, "I'd like to arrest somebody. I haven't had a show yet."

"Well," replied the veteran, "you just tackle the first man you see carrying an umbrella. The chances are that you will make a case.—Washington Post.

SOME enterprising American newspaper should at once send a reporter to Russia to examine into the conflicting stories about matters and things in that empire. We had just got into the way of thinking that the czar and his people were not so bad and nasty as previous accounts indicated, when a writer in the Fortnightly Review comes forward with tales of cities so filthy that they pollute the atmosphere from afar and streets in such condition that children and even soldiers have been known to drown in them upon falling from the primitive sidewalks.

FERN'S NEW GOWN.

BY CORA LOWE MARCEAU.

"WHAT! Another new gown?"

And the glance which flashed under the bushy, iron gray brows was enough to make Fern start and pull her handkerchief nervously.

"I said that I could not go to the party without it," she faltered, growing red and white by turns, eager, hopeful and despairing as she watched his astonished face.

"Didn't I give you money for a gown last week?"

"Yes, father, but that was a street dress—I made it myself and saved enough to get a pretty chip hat and——"

"Very commendable, very."

And the architect turned to his drafting table and once more knit his brows over his work, evidently forgetting even her presence.

Poor Fern was ready to cry. She turned away in despair and met the assuring smile of the broad, bland, homely face of Meloria the overworked and underpaid domestic.

"Sure, sir, ye can't refuse her. The child never gets off the patch. Now give her the money—it won't take—how much did ye say, Miss Fernsie?"

"Not more than $10, because I'll use my old——".

"Haven't got $5 to spare," came the brusque retort, as Mr. Hayward drew a long straight line in a foundation.

Fern turned away once more. Even Meloria was doomed to a rebuff and Meloria was generally considered invincible.

But not so, the sturdy young woman advanced to the table and placing her rough red hands upon the edge and leaning forward, said with unctuous determination:

"Then, sir, pay me my back salary or you'll get no shirts. There is not one ironed and there won't be none till you pay me or her."

And she laughed triumphantly as the architect drew himself up proudly before her.

"Leave the room, Miss Impertinence, Fern, if you permit——"

"She is not to blame that I don't get my pay," stanchly replied the girl, without moving an inch, "and if I leave, the dear knows when you'll get all those shirts ironed. I've foreseen trouble this good while and I just ironed your clothes as you needed them. That"—pointing tragically to the glistening, starched linen—"That is the last one ye have."

Fern trembled visibly. Her father's expression changed from rage to astonishment, from astonishment to submission.

"How much do I owe you?" with an effort at offended dignity.

"Twenty-seven dollars and thirty-five cents, includin' the starch and soap I bought on my own account."

"Impossible," he replied, with a dissenting flourish of a foot-rule in one hand and compass in the other.

"Well, I'm ready to hear what ye says."

"Oh, Meloria! What shall I do if you go?" asked Fern, in an agony of suspense.

Meloria shook one hand behind her to assure her young mistress, but the front of the attack was severe and unrelenting as ever.

"Not a cint less—sure many another girl would be chargin' ye wid extra for the Thursdays I've staid in and brushed your clothes for lodge meetin' an' Sundays."

"And your gown, Fern?"

"Oh—" Fern was just going to say "never mind." but Meloria interrupted.

"Ten dollurs, sir."

"Well, since you are so foolishly extravagant, I'll give it to you. And as for you," turning a wrathful face to the servant, "you may gather those plans up and——"

"Hooray! Now, Miss Fernsie, ye'll have the dress and if ye don't be the belle of the ball, Meloria Gillighan ain't the sense of a bat," and gathering her duster and chamois skin under her arm she waved her hand in triumph and noisily left the room.

When alone with her father Fern began to beg his pardon for her companion's behavior, but her father only received the overtures with a sniff of contempt. Most people he could awe with one of his terrible glances. Fern loved him dearly, but stood in mortal dread of his anger and sullen frowns. Meloria was the only individual of those under him in the social scale who could brave the terrific scowl of disapprobation.

"You uphold that wretched creature in her unbounded impertinence, but she shall leave; she shall leave."

Fern turned away with a sigh. Meloria was the stanch alley in every contest and Fern often wondered how long her patience would exist under the usual tension of her father's unreasonableness, and dreaded her following her threats into execution.

It was worse than useless to argue with her father, so she quietly began to sort the papers and roll his plans into long cylinders of the glistening fabric.

After a time her father donned his scrupulously neat but old-fashioned over-coat and much-brushed silk hat, and with the pompous air of a railroad president, informed her that he would not return until evening.

"You may inform Miss Gillighan that I shall have lunch down town." was his cutting finale, as he drew on the neat black gloves which Fern had mended so carefully the night before.

"Oh, father," she pleaded, "I shall feel that you are angry with me if you don't."

Mr. Hayward fumbled in his vest-pocket, not that he did not know its exact contents down to the punched dime which the conductor on the elevated knew as well as he, but just to assume an air of displeasure and poverty.

"I shall have to come he answered at length, "since my household has become so extravagant. Why, your mother's wedding gown did not cost so much."

"Who knows but that this may be mine?" is the merry retort that rings through his memory as he picks his way past Meloria and her pools of soapsuds upon the front steps, but the broad, smiling and malicious "Good luck to ye, sir" is thrown upon barren soil, for he deigns no reply to his humble pensioner.

That afternoon Fern and Meloria held consultation, and in spite of the latter's disgust Fern decides that she will outrage society and wear her old dotted swiss.

"I'll surprise father," she decided triumphantly. "You see, Meloria, I'll cut it out at the neck, and make little puffed sleeves of this wide sash, and do you know I'll feel much better than in the cheap gauze I had thought of, if you will iron it nicely?"

"That I will if ye'll promise to pay a good mite for the sash and ribbons."

Mr. Hayward scanned his daughter with premediated disapproval. In his heart he had never seen a fairer picture than the living embodiment of youth and modest beauty before him.

The swiss remodeled and made after a bede pattern with the firm round throat bare and the white arms uncovered from the elbow, but the radiant face, with its dusky eyes glowing in childish anticipation, would have beautified any dress.

When to his criticisms she laughingly cried that he was a thorough man not to know it wasn't new at all and had been trimmed in all those fluttering ribbons for $3 he grew voluble in his praises and blushed uncomfortably as she offered to return $7.

"No," he answered, trying to become facetious: "we will see what the ultimatum is and may be you can have it toward your wedding gown."

Both laughed at the absurdity of the speech, but when Meloria heard a carriage stop and went down to receive her young mistress her honest blue eyes opened wide to see the distinguished-looking man who helped her over the pavement to the door and lingered a moment to be sure that she was not at all fatigued and to receive her faltering and blushing thanks for his and his mother's kindness in bringing her home.

One month later Fern is invited to Mrs. Lansing's to tea and she avoids Meloria's eyes as she asks her to iron the famous swiss dress.

"Mr. Lansing asked me to wear it to-night, and, Meloria—he says he would be so pleased if I would wear it the evening three months from now when I become his wife, because I wore it when first he saw me."

But in spite of the domestic's entreaties to add a bit of lace or something "dignifyin'" Fern added nothing to its simplicity for either occasion except a spray of maiden-hair, the sweetest and most fragile of the ferns for which she was named.

HUSBANDS WHO RAN AWAY.

Two of Them Whose Experiences Differ Slightly in Details.

There was a prominent business man in Washington whose disappearance was recorded several years ago. He walked out of the house after breakfast one morning and did not return. The newspapers recorded his disappearance and the family was distracted. At first the usual report of financial troubles started, but the New York World says, this was found to be groundless. Two years passed without any word from the absent man and then one morning he arrived in a western town to which his family had moved and told the story of his absence. The morning that he left Washington he had gone to the depot, driven by an uncontrollable impulse, bought a ticket for New York, and boarded the train. Arriving in the metropolis he took a Liverpool steamer. In Liverpool he walked from the steamer's dock to another wharf and took passage on a sailing vessel without any idea of the ship's destination. When his normal senses returned to him, after an interval of two years, he found himself engaged as bookkeeper on a big sheep ranch in New South Wales, Australia. Thereupon he dropped his new situation as suddenly as he had taken it up and retraced his travels back to America.

Another Washingtonian took a similar trip abroad for five months, with the difference that he did not lose his senses. He was engaged in a social game of poker with a number of friends late one night, and somewhat under the influence of cheerful spirits other than those superinduced by the excitement of the game. Suddenly the door opened, his wife walked in, seized her lesser half by the ear and walked him home. As she was a woman of determined nature he concluded that it was best to submit for the time. The next morning, however, he went to the bank and withdrew his entire investment of $2,200 took the cars for New York, then sailed to Liverpool, took ship for South America and brought up in Montevideo. All the time he was pouring down various brands of drink which would require an eighteen-carat gold cure to eradicate. Just five months after leaving home the man opened his door one morning with a 10-cent piece in his pocket and accosted his wife with: "Well, what have you to say about it, anyhow?" The wife had her say, and then they resumed the even tenor of their ways.

SHE LOVED HER SHOP BAG.

Mrs. Marsden Carried It Through Dark Siberia.

There is another woman on record who illustrates the devotion of the feminine gender to its bag. She is Mrs. Marsden, who recently made a tour through Siberia to investigate the condition of the lepers of Russia. She made the journey on horseback and she had no lack of pockets, for her attire was decidedly masculine. Full trousers were tucked into high boots; a long jacket with wide sleeves and many pockets adorned the upper part of her person and a revolver and whip furnished ample means for protection. A whole band of Cossacks, moreover, accompanied her as a body-guard, and to them any of her belongings might have been intrusted. But she carried a bag. It was probably simply the force of habit, for what need a woman had for a bag who was amply supplied with pockets, provided with firearms and riding on horseback through forests and bogs, it is impossible to see. But it is true that the habit is acquiring a fearful hold upon its devotees. A morning's shopping, a trip to Europe, a voyage of discovery, nothing can be undertaken without the bag.—From the New York World.

"August Flower"
"I am happy to state to you and to suffering humanity, that my wife has used your wonderful remedy, August Flower, for sick headache and palpitation of the heart, with satisfactory results. For several years she has been a great sufferer, has been under the treatment of eminent physicians in this city and Boston, and found little relief. She was induced to try August Flower, which gave immedaite relief. We cannot say to much for it." L. C. Frost, Springfield, Mass.

COULDN'T EAT BANANAS.

Dreadful Disabilities Imposed on Hawaiian Women.

Reverence for royalty was one of the most marked characteristics of the ancient religion of the Hawaiians. It was formely a crime punishable with death to pass through the king's shadow or sit higher than his head. His person was sacred and protected by a strict system of taboo. In the royal palace the taboo stick, with which the king announced his excommunications, is exhibited. It is a wand with a carved stone cap. If this stick was lowered on the approach of a courtier, he was compelled to withdraw immediately, and was recognized as being in disgrace. The king's will was absolute, but the majority of the Hawaiian monarchs seem to have been of a kindly disposition and to have made no improper use of their extreme power. It was due to one of them that the taboo system was abolished. The system bore with grievous weight upon the women. They were forbidden the use of some of the most common articles of diet such as bananas and certain kinds of fish, on pain of death. It was taboo for a woman to enter the eating-house of the men or one of the "helaus" or temples. Before the arrivals of the first missionaries the reigning king, out of consideration for some of his women, declared the taboo abolished. The work of converting the natives to Christianity was greatly assisted by this voluntary renunciation of the old heathen system, says the Overland Journal. The power of the priests was broken by it, though their influence was still strong with the natives. The source of the awe in which they were held is easily understood, when one considers that they were formerly invested with the right of choosing the victims for the human sacrifices. Later they depenped largely upon the "anana," or power of praying people to death, to retain their influence. No amount of argument can disabuse the native mind of a belief in this particular kind of enchantment. It is not the priests alone who practice it. It is believed that any one can compass the destruction of an enemy by a sufficient exercise of will power. In fact, so strong is the popular conviction on the subject, or so weak the vitality of the race, that it is sometimes sufficient merely to convince a man that some one has determined to pray him to death.

An instance is related by one of the early missionaries of a man who became thus convinced, and set the day and hour of his own death. Mr. Armstrong was resolved that the man should not die. He accordingly procured a sufficient amount of chloroform and kept him unconscious until the fatal hour was past. His astonishment on being roused was boundless, but the bold ruse saved his life.

No Hope for Them.

A deep gloom fell on the assemblage in the dining-room in Fickleby's boarding house recently when he read from a newspaper that the best preventive against cholera was good nourishing food. "We're goners," groaned Mr. Butsby, who sits at the corner, and the rest of the company moaned aloud.—Buffalo Courier

The use of Ely's Cream Balm, a sure cure for Catarrh and Cold in head, is attended with no pain, inconvenience or dread, which can be said of no other remedy.
I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so entirely without solicitation. I have used it half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Just What is Wanted.
Business is alive to a great coming event, and in the hurly-burly of its preparations for the Columbian Exposition in 1893; too much is already seen on the streets of a fanciful or amusing nature, both superficial and catch-penny. There has been observed a void in the line of the strictly useful; combining therewith instructive object lessons and the beautiful in art. Books there may be by the score, but the experience of the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia shows that the mass of these were mere trifles and unserviceable. The horde of visitors were ever at loss for a handy pocket guide of official stamp, not only reliable, but pleasing and always fit to keep. Just what is wanted of this unique kind has happily already made its appearance, and we have before us "THE OFFICIAL PORTFOLIO OF THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION," illustrated from Water Color Drawings.
This Portfolio is a rare and beautiful exponent of the main architectural features of the Great Exposition at Chicago in 1893. The fourteen magnificent structures are faithfully exhibited, while the Bird's-eye View gives a realistic glance at the lay of the grounds, with their principal buildings, lagoons, etc. The illustrations are exact reproductions, in water color effects, of the original drawings, made especially for this purpose from the official plans, by America's best known water color artist, Charles Graham. The pictures therefore are not only official, but they are genuine works of art, and competent critics pronounce them to be equal to the finest productions of a similar kind of the famous art centres of Europe.
It is simply wonderful how such perfection in art, accompanied by a full descriptive matter, can be served to the Great Public in so cheap and handy a form. But, a copy of this exceptionally fine production will be sent to any address upon receipt of 10 cents in postage stamps by The Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md.

Is it Not Wonderful?
The unequalled cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla certainly entitle it to be called "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Jacob A. Kunkel, a reliable farmer of Mt. Royal, York Co., Pa., says that a running sore broke out on the leg of his nephew, Milton A. Kunkel, when he was 5 years old. It grew to a great size and the leg became weaker until he could not walk. Two years ago they began giving Milton Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a short time he began to improve. The sore healed up.

Milton A. Kunkel.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
restored perfect health, and he is now, at 13 years, lively and rugged. Mr. Kunkel says: "His cure is little short of a miracle."

Doesn't "look" as she ought—the weak, nervous and ailing woman. As long as she suffers from the aches, pains, and derangements peculiar to her sex, she can't expect to.
But there's only herself to blame. With Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, she's a different woman. And it's a change that can be seen as well as felt. The system is invigorated, the blood enriched, digestion improved, melancholy and nervousness dispelled.
With the "Favorite Prescription," all the proper functions are restored to healthy action. Periodical pains, weak back, bearing-down sensations, nervous prostration, all "female complaints" are cured by it. It's the only medicine for woman's weaknesses and ailments that's guaranteed to do what is claimed for it. If it doesn't give satisfaction, in every case for which it's recommended, the money is returned.

Lord Tennyson, poet laureate of England died after a short illness at London, he was unconscious for several hours before the end came.

The great French writer, Joseph Ernest Renan, died at Paris recently. He caught a cold which developed into congestion of the lungs. He suffered most terrible agony during his closing hours and his last words were words of comfort to his heart-broken wife.

Dr. Douglass, the famous throat specialist, who abandoned his practice and devoted all his whole time to Gen. Grant for six months during the great general's last illness, died in Washington, from the same disease which carried off the ex-president.

Col. James H. Rice, of Indianapolis, exauditor of the state, one of the best known business men and politicians of the state, died of pneumonia, after a protracted illness. The interment took place in New Albany.

Record of Casualties.

A fire in Buenos Ayres destroyed property to the value of $2,200,000.

The Goulding fertilizer works at Pensacola, Fla., were destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000; partially insured.

Immense damage has been done to the Michigan fruit and vegetable crops throughout the state by the severe cold snap of the past few days.

A lot of wreckage and the bodies of six men have floated ashore near Cherry Grove, N. C. There is nothing to indicate to what vessel the men belonged.

The plant of the Cary-Ogden company, manufacturers of paints and vernishes, in Chicago, were entirely destroyed by fire. Loss, $160,000; insured.

The whaleback steamer Charles W. Wetmore, wrecked off the north shore near Mansfield, Ore., has begun to go to pieces. Her entire cabin has been washed away by the heavy swells.

At Coldwater, Mich., Nora Standish was thrown from a buggy and fell on her head, dislocating her neck. Two men pulled on her head as hard as they could. The bones sprang into place with a snap. She soon recovered consciousness and will live.

Sinful Doings.

Edward S. Dann, the Buffalo, N. Y., bankwrecker, kills himself to avoid trial.

It may be necessary to employ troops to quell the county seat war at Culbertson, Neb.

One Miller, an outlaw in Texas, shot the bloodhounds which the officers were using to track him and escaped.

Near Carrollton, Ill., David Cado shot and instantly killed his wife, from whom he had separated, and then mortally wounded himself.

At Baird's Chapel, seven miles west of Prescott, Tex., a fatal shooting occurred, the participants being Newman Sheffield and his brother-in-law, Pink Allen, Sheffield was shot through the heart.

Fred Covell, found James Mooney drinking beer with Mrs. Covell at Chicago recently. The wife ventured the excuse that Mooney was a schoolmate of hers, but Covell promptly cracked Mooney's skull with a beer bottle and fled. Mooney died.

Conductors on the Covington and Cincinnati street railway were caught enriching themselves by resurrecting cancelled tickets and turning them in again.

J. B. Moorehead, the theatrical manager who recently committed suicide in New York, it is claimed did so to fulfill a pledge given to the suicide club of which he is supposed to have been a member.

A verdict of plain suicide was returned at Chicago in the case of Frank Mezick, who met death from poison, in what seemed suspicious circumstances, while in company with a woman who gave the name of Mrs. Hathaway, of Cleveland.

An attempt was made to rob the Keystone bank at Erie, Pa., recently. Four men entered the bank and, during a struggle, one of the robbers shot Frank Kempler, the assistant cashier. The men fled without securing any money, but after a hot chase, all were captured.

Charles Miller, mayor of South Omaha, and for twenty years agent for the Pacific and American Express companies, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head. He had been acting strangely for two days. No cause can be assigned for the deed, his accounts with the express companies are all right.

Capt. John Williams, of the schooner A. P. Bliss, has disappeared, says a Milwaukee special, leaving a letter in which he admits that he is an embezzler to the extent of $10,000, the receipts of his last trip. The Bliss is owned by A. B. Paully of this city. Capt. Williams is one of the best known sailors on the lake and was very popular.

The Foreign Budget.

Over an inch of snow fell in Bruce, Ont., one day recently.

The British steamer Camiola, bound from Cardiff for Malta, foundered near the Scilly Islands, off the coast of Cornwall. The crew were saved.

Hugh Ryan, contractor for the Canadian Soo canal, gave an undertaking that the canal would be finished, ready for the opening of navigation, in the spring of 1894, or two years ahead of the time originally anticipated by the department.

The Popolo Romano of Rome states that at a meeting of the cabinet council Finance Minister Grimaldi announced that the budget deficit would be recovered without resorting to burdensome taxation or increasing the public debt.

While on a shooting excursion in Scotland the Duke of Connaught fell down the steps of a Scotch hunting box and severely injured his knees. The injuries are not serious enough to cause anxiety.

A mail train was stopped by robbers near Krowka, Russia, and plundered of half a million roubles in money and a large quantity of valuables, baggage, letters, etc. It is suspected that railway officials had something to do with the affair.

Hector Jonathan Cremieux, the well known French dramatic author, has committed suicide. He was the author of a large number of plays and wrote the librettos for many well known comic operas. He was born in 1828.

Prince Peter of Coburg, grandson of Dom Pedro, the emperor of Brazil, suddenly went crazy recently at Vienna. He claims that he is the emperor of Brazil and has been cheated out of his rights, he grew so violent that it was found necessary to confine him in an insane asylum.

The latest news from the Venezuela revolution show that the long struggle is nearing its end and will result in the overthrow of the government which has made such a persistent fight. A cable received from Venezuela reports a battle in which six hundred were killed. The revolutionary forces were victorious. This means the downfall of the government.

The Press Association says that the grant voted by the government to enable the British East African Company to remain in Uganda for at least three months longer is £12,000. It also says that it is probable that after the evacuation of the territory by the company a British commissioner will be appointed to take charge of affairs there.

Gabriel du Bray, died at Paris recently. Gabriel du Bray, one of the most productive of modern French sculptors, was born in Paris in 1818. He became a member of the Legion of Honor in 1857, and eight years later he was made an officer of the order. He exhibited several pieces in the arts department of the Paris world's fairs of 1855 and 1867.

FOUR CENTURIES AGO.

THE DISCOVERY OF AMERICA BY COLUMBUS.

The Celebration of the Great Event Begun in New York—A Parade Consisting of Over Thirty Thousand Young Americans.

Celebrating in Spain.

New York, Oct. 11.—Yesterday was the opening day of the secular part of the celebration of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, and New York is in gala dress. Its streets, its public buildings, its stores and warehouses and its homes are gay with flags and bunting. Even the trucks and wagons that passed through the streets, the cars that rolled up and down its avenues, the trains that puffed along the elevated roads, the very horses were decked with flags in honor of Christopher Columbus. In the synagogue on Saturday, in the churches, Hebrew and Christian, was celebrated in service of song the landing of Columbus four hundred years ago.

The delay in starting which is the almost invariable feature of all civic parades, was not absent, and it was nearly 11 o'clock before the order to march was given. The route of parade arranged was down Fifth avenue to Seventeenth street, to Fourth avenue, to Fourteenth street, where the parade disbanded. The marching was in the following order: Platoon of mounted police; band; Grand Marshal Col. David S. Brown and twenty-five aides. The grand marshal's standard was a yellow satin banner, and he and his aides and the division marshals wore sashes and batons. They were all mounted. John Winfield Scott was marshal, Brown's chief of staff and adjutant general. Maj. George M. Barry was assistant adjutant general, Lawrence Myers chief aide. In the public school division there were twenty regiments, 202 companies and 10,500 pupils in line. Beside there were over a thousand students from Long Island city public schools. James R. O'Beirne was marshal for the Catholic school and college division. The Catholic schools and colleges of New York were well represented, and altogether there were 30,000 persons in line. Many bands were distributed among the different regiments of the school and college divisions.

While the line of march of the parade was banked on either side by crowded masses from the starting point at Central Park place to the disbanding point at the University place, the greatest number congregated in Madison Square, Union Square and Washington Square. The west side of Fifth avenue at Madison Square was occupied by an immense stand with 3,200 seats. Of these 200 seats were reserved for the newspaper reporters and each seat was furnished with a writing desk. Opposite was a stand that seated 6,000 persons. Among those seated there were Vice President Levi P. Morton, Secretary of the Treasury Foster, Gov. R. P. Flower and his staff, Gov. Tillman of South Carolina, United States Marshal Jacobus and many local officials. This stand was placed in charge of ex-Mayor Wickham. Long before the procession reached Madison Square the head of the advancing column, preceded by a platoon of mounted police, could be seen advancing down the avenue. As it reached the square itself, Vice President Morton, Gov. Flower and the other officials present arose and stood uncovered until the 30,000 boys and youths in the procession had passed the stand. The boys preserved excellent order and passed the stands with the steady tread of veterans. Their bearing won them continuous and well merited applause. On one stand were 2,000 school girls, dressed in red, white and blue, who sang patriotic songs as the procession passed by. At Washington square, two stands seating 5,000 spectators, had been erected. There the mayor and school commissioners left the ranks and took seats reserved for them on the stand, from which they reviewed the procession as it passed by on its way to Fourth street and University place, where it disbanded. President and Mrs. Cleveland with a party of friends witnessed the parade.

The great parade of school boys demonstrated the patriotism of the rising generation. Twenty-five Harlem school boys, however, gave evidence in a more effective way by tearing down and trampling under foot an English flag that was displayed at the front of a Harlem store. At 8 o'clock this morning the boys, ranging in age from twelve to seventeen years, were coming down Columbus avenue on their way to join the big parade. Near the corner of Ninety-third street they saw a large English flag floating in front of a cigar store kept by an Englishman. No other flag was displayed, and the boys, thinking it un-American to display a foreign flag without a United States flag with it, gathered in front of the store and demanded of the storekeeper to either raise a United States flag beside the English one or to lower the English flag. This the keeper of the store refused to do. After considerable angry discussion and several threats on the part of the boys, one of the little fellows, climbed upon the shoulders of one of his larger companions and took down the English flag. As soon as the others could get their hands on the objectionable flag they tore it into hundreds of pieces and scattered the fragments about the street, trampling them under foot amid the cheers of the older onlookers. The Englishman was indignant, and it looked for a time as though he would attack the boys. The sympathy of the crowd, however, was evidently with the boys, and he considered discretion the better part of valor, and after threatening to have the boys arrested for malicious destruction of property he returned to his store.

Celebrating in Spain.

Cadiz, Oct. 11.—Enormous crowds watched the departure of the gunboat Valderno, conveying Queen Regent Christina and the royal party for Huelva, where they will take part in the Columbus celebration. The gunboat was escorted by a fleet of foreign warships. The balconies of the buildings along the quays were handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, and filled with ladies and children. The scene was a most pretty and animated one. The harbor was filled with all kinds of craft gaily decorated. When the warship arrived off Huelva she was met by a transport on which were Senor Canovas Del Castello, the municipal authorities, the diplomats who are visiting Huelva, and a number of other dignitaries. Twenty-three Spanish and foreign men-of-war were ranged in line, and as the gunboat with the royal party on board entered the bay the nearest warship fired a royal salute. This was repeated by the next ship in the line and so on until every one of the twenty-three vessels had saluted little King Alfonso, who was with his mother on the Conde Valderno.

William Louis Kelly Will Speak.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—The arrangements for the Columbian banquet at the Auditorium Oct. 12 are complete. Among those who will deliver addresses will be Archbishop Feehan of Chicago, Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Special World's Fair Commissioner Thomas B. Bryan, Judge Moran, Hon. William Louis Kelly of St. Paul, President William A. Amberg, of the Columbus club, and President C. C. Bonney, of the world's congress auxiliary. A poem, "The World Givers," will be read by Maurice Francis Egan, of Notre Dame university.

TOOK THE OATH.

Mr. Shiras, the New Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Washington, Oct. 11.—The opening session of the October term of the supreme court of the United States, with the attending circumstances of the induction in office of the new associate justice, George Shiras, Jr., filled the court room to overflowing to-day. At noon the members of the court were announced and took their seats. Associate Justice Shiras, accompanied by ex-Associate Justice Strong, the last preceding member of the court from Pennsylvania, brought up in the rear and took seats at the clerk's desk. After the usual announcement of the opening of court, Chief Justice Fuller said: "I have much pleasure in announcing to the gentlemen of the bar that since the adjournment of court the existing vacancy has been filled by the appointment of Mr. George Shiras, Jr., of Pittsburg. Mr. Shiras is present and ready to take the oath." The clerk of the court, Mr. McKinney, then read the commission issued to Mr. Shiras, at the conclusion of which the new associate judge arose and read the oath. Judge Shiras was then conducted to his seat at the extreme left of the chief justice, next to Justice Brewer. As he stepped up n the level occupied by the court, the new member stopped, bowed gracefully to his associates who stood facing him, and as formally returned the salutation. Justice Brewer received him with a hand-shake, and then all members of the court took their seats.

For the Third Time.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 11.—Gov. Peck today issued a proclamation convening the legislature in special session on Monday, Oct. 17, to reapportion the state into state senate and assembly districts, and to take such action and amend such laws as the legislature may deem necessary by reason of such decision of the supreme court.

The last clause relates to changes in the general election law by which the publication of election notices need not be made for six weeks or more prior to election day. It will also be necessary for the legislature to limit the time to a few days within which legislative nominations of the joint districts may be certified to the secretary of state to be certified by him back to the various counties interested. It is not likely that the law declared void will receive a very extensive overhauling.

Pugnacious Politicians.

Rondout, N. Y., Oct. 11.—When the carpenters at work on the new Methodist church in Madaline, Dutchess county, ceased work Saturday night Gen. Watts Depuyser appeared with a large portrait of President Harrison, which he ordered one of the men to nail on top of the church. Gen. Depuyser is paying for the building of the church, so his order was promptly obeyed.

Early Sunday morning an enthusiastic young Cleveland man climbed the steeple and pasted a picture of Cleveland over that of Harrison. A great crowd had gathered in the meantime and the young Democrat was justily cheered. One of Gen. Depuyser's employes next attempted to climb the steeple, but was set upon and dragged away.

A general fight ensued. While it was in progress the man with Harrison's picture broke away and succeeded in climbing out of reach and covering the picture of the Democratic candidate. No sooner had he reached the ground than another man succeeded in getting above the crowd, and amid a shower of stones climbed sloly upward. Soon Cleveland's picture was again in place.

Gen. Depuyser was very angry and demanded that the picture of Cleveland be torn down, but the Democrats were determined and the picture of Cleveland remained in its conspicuous place all day.

Terminal Facilities.

Seattle, Wash., Special, Oct. 11.—The Great Northern to-day commenced condemnation proceedings to acquire three blocks near the heart of the city for the purpose of building a great passenger depot and acquiring facilities for handling passengers and freight. General Manager J. P. Shelby and Judge Thomas Burke, attorney for the road, officially announced the purchase of the property, which virtually settles the question of the main terminal of the Pacific coast. At no other place west of St. Paul is the Great Northern making such elaborate preparations for building up and handling traffic. The condemnation involves about $400,000 worth of land. Mr. Shelby says that President Hill repeatedly tried to gain the co-operation of other companies for a union depot, but was invariably met by the proposition to virtually surrender his franchise on the water front. The general feeling is that Seattle will be the main terminal of the road west of St. Paul.

Going to New York.

Washington, Oct. 11.—A special meeting of the members of the cabinet was held at the state department this afternoon for the purpose of arranging for federal participation in the Columbian celebration in New York this week. It was decided that all the members of the cabinet should be present in New York at some time during the week to represent the administration. Vice President Morton is already there, and so is Secretary Noble. Secretary Charles Foster will be there to-morrow. Secretaries Tracy, Elkins and Rusk will take a train to-night and witness the naval review to-morrow. Postmaster General Wanamaker and Attorney General Miller will probably start to-morrow, but the secretary of state will be detained here until Thursday morning, when he expects to leave Washington in time to be present at the banquet Thursday evening. If President Harrison goes at all he will probably leave Washington to-morrow night.

Will Sue For Libel.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, Oct. 11.—James Tarrant, who, while demanding a retraction, was met with a revolver in the hands of H. H. Lampman, of the Sunday Forum, a few days ago, has engaged an attorney to bring suit for libel against the Forum. This is on account of another article in the Forum yesterday, in which Tarrant was accused of bad associations and many hard names were applied to him, and he was also accused of being an agent of the gamblers, who Lampman claims intended to kill him on account of recent raids by the police.

Minister Hirsch Resigns.

Washington, Special, Oct. 11.—Solomon Hirsch, minister to Turkey, arrived in Washington last night, and to-day handed in his resignation. He was appointed from Oregon. His reasons for resigning are purely on the grounds of private business and personal considerations.

Maj. Joseph Magone, who started in July last to walk from Oregon to Chicago, 2,100 miles, has completed his journey. He is eighty-two years old, and, with the exception of swimming a river in Oregon on a mule's back, he walked every step of the way.

Gen. Ruger Reports.

Washington, Oct. 11.—Gen. Ruger, Commanding the department of Colombia, has submitted his annual report to the secretary of war. A considerable portion of the document is devoted to a review of the Coeur d'Alene mining trouble in Idaho, and the part taken by troops in its suppression. The general condition of affairs in the department relative to Indian matters, discipline, and also what concerns the well-being of the troops at the different posts, he says, has been satisfactory. Decidedly better progress during the past year has been made in the professional instruction of officers, owing in a great measure to the better and more systematic methods recently put in force for the army at large. There has been a decided decrease in the number of desertions during the year.

FUNERAL OF THE POET.

THE DEAD LAUREATE BEING HONORED.

Tennyson's Body Will Be Followed to Its Last Resting Place by Many Prominent People—Rumors of Von Caprivi's Resignation.

Over the Sea.

London, Oct. 11.—The body of Lord Tennyson will be conveyed from Haslemore to London to-morrow. The transfer is to be made without display of any kind and as privately as possible. When the train bearing the remains arrives at Waterloo station the casket will be placed in a plain hearse and conveyed to Westminster Abbey. Here the body will be met by the dean and will be placed in St. Faith's chapel, where it will remain until the funeral, which takes place on Wednesday. Prior to the ceremonies Wednesday the relatives and friends of the dead poet will form a procession behind the coffin and will follow it up to the grave. The prince of Wales and Lord Salisbury will attend the services. Lady Tennyson, Hallam Tennyson and his wife will walk immediately behind the coffin as the chief mourners. They will be followed by the dead poet's grandchildren and the widow of Lionel Tennyson, Mrs. Birell, and a long line of notable persons.

Hon. Most Rev. White Benson, D. D., archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England and Metropolitan, assisted by Very Rev. George Granville Bradley, dean of Westminster, and all the members of the chapter will conduct the services. Included in the services will be two anthems, one written by John Frederick Bridge, the organist at Westminster Abbey, to words of Lord Tennyson's poem "Crossing the Bar." The other anthem consists of unpublished lines of Lord Tennyson. The hymn sung will be "Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty," which was Lord Tennyson's favorite hymn.

On Saturday last Hallam Tennyson sent the following dispatch to Hon. Robert T. Lincoln, the United States minister to Great Britain, which reached him at Liverpool: "Will you be a pall bearer on Wednesday at 12:30 at Westminister Abbey?" Minister Lincoln replied: "Your telegram reached me just as I am sailing for America. I regret most deeply that my departure prevents me from accepting your kind invitation, and having the honor of representing my countrymen on this occasion, so affecting to all the world and not less mournful to America than to England." Lord Tennyson's family are anxious to have America represented among the pall bearers, and to-day they asked Mr. Henry White, secretary of the American legation, to act in place of Mr. Lincoln. Mr. White has signified his acceptance of the invitation. All the members of the Tennyson family assembled at Adleworth to-day to take their last look at the dead before the coffin lid was closed and screwed down. No change had occurred in the features since death, and the poet looked as though he was in a restful sleep.

A Day Of Thanksgiving.

Baltimore, Oct. 11.—The triennial general convention of the Protestant Episcopal church to-day adopted a resolution that whereas the president of the United States has issued a proclamation calling for the observance of Oct. 21 as a day on which the people shall in their places of public worship, make grateful recognition of the signal favors received from God by this land since its discovery, this convention will meet in St. Paul's church of this city on the morning of the day already indicated, that we may render thanks to God, who at the first did open this Western continent to the explorer and later did inspire and direct our fathers in laying the foundations of that religious and civil liberty whose blessings have since been shared impartially by millions of our fellow men of every race and every clime. The devotional exercises of the convention to-day were conducted by Bishop Walker of North Dakota, assisted by Rev. R. G. Robert of Missouri. The house of deputies was called to order by Secretary Hutchins. Under the call of reports from committees, the committee on expenses asked that 500 copies of their report be printed for distribution, and that the committee be discharged. The house then took up the revision of the prayer book, beginning at resolution 23. The resolution was lost. Resolutions 25, 26, 27 and 28 were carried without discussion. Resolution 29 was then called up. It is as follows: "That in the form of solemnization of matrimony between the word 'which' and the words 'it commanded,' in the exhortation, there be inserted, 'is an honorable estate, instituted of God in the time of man's innocence, signifying unto us the mystical union that is betwixt Christ and his church; which fiedwith his presence and the first miracle holy estate Christ adorned and beautithat he wrought in Cana, of Galilee and——.'" Carried. Resolutions 30 and 31 were lost. Resolution 32 was adopted.

The Same Old Rumor.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—The Hanover Courier says it has learned from what it deems a good source that the difference of opinion that has arisen between Chancellor von Caprivi and the Prussian ministers, especially Eulenberg, in regard to the military bill, is so acute that both the chancellor and Count Eulenberg have resigned their offices. The statement has not, however, been confirmed, and it is believed that the facts have been exaggerated. The National Zeitung says it is able to confirm the statement that Emperor William recently said that he was determined to pass the military bill at all hazards, that although he withdrew the school bill he would not withdraw the military bill, that he would dissolve the present reichstag if the bill was badly received by that body, and that he would dissolve the new reichstag if the appeal to the country did not prove satisfactory.

Pretty, but Incorrect.

Washington, Special, Oct. 11.—A Washington morning paper has a story that Col. C. A. Lounsbury of North Dakota is the most flourishing and likely candidate for commissioner of the general land office. The record which Col. Lounsbury has made is given in detail, and it is claimed that he is indorsed by the entire Northwest. The story is very pretty, but it is unfortunately without foundation. The fact that none but a trained lawyer and one of recognized legal standing will be appointed to a place which requires knowledge of the law, and which in itself is almost judicial, bars Col. Lounsbury.

Could Not Collect Cash.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 11.—The Wightman Electric Motor company, of which J. R. McKee, President Harrison's son-in-law, is the president, has assigned. Inability to collect moneys due is the cause. The company has an extensive plant here and may reorganize.

Escaped From Jail.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Special, Oct. 11.—An intoxicated thresher was locked up Saturday. Early yesterday his cell was found to be empty. With the bed post he had wrenched the bars off the window and left for parts unknown.

IN THE LARGE CITIES.

St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., Special, Oct. 11.—In a desperate battle last night between Officer McBride and Barney Kelly, the officer was injured in so serious a manner as to cause the gravest apprehension for his recovery. He received a kick n the side which may result in his death. Doctors Cogswell and Woods were sent for and they attended the injured man. They are of the opinion that his injuries are very serious.

The officer was walking his beat on Jackson street when he saw a man lying in a doorway near the corner of Sixth street. He found that the man was asleep, but when he got him awake he found that he was very ugly. He took him to the nearest box, at the corner of Sixth street, for the purpose of calling the wagon. He had sounded the alarm and had his ear to the telephone when he was assaulted by his prisoner, who had become thoroughly awakened. The man sprung upon McBride's back in his attempts to throw him to the ground and there then ensued a most desperate battle. McBride is a strong man and a very athletic, but the desperation of the prisoner semed to add additional strength to his muscle. He finally succeeded in getting the officer on the ground and seized his ear between his teeth. The struggles of the officer released the hold of Kelly's teeth, and the latter jumped to his feet. As the officer was recovering himself the rough gave him a terrific kick in the side, just above the thigh, and the officer fell back on the sidewalk. Again the heavy foot descended, but the plucky officer had caught hold of the foot, and he held fast. Finally, with a supreme effort he got upon his feet, grappled with the rough and succeeded n throwing him to the ground. After he had secured his prisoner, he went to the box again and almost fainting with the pain of his injuries, called for the wagon. He then fell to the sidewalk in a half-conscious condition.

In the struggle which the thug made for liberty the combatants were rolled almost half a block away from the patrol box. In a few minutes the wagon whirled around the corner, and on stopping at the box it was seen at a glance that there was something wrong. The door of the patrol box was open and the officer's key was hanging to the lock with a piece of broken chain hanging to it. The two men were soon discovered, and they were quickly placed in the wagen. It was thought McBride was dying, and the horses were sent on a gallop for the station. On the way, however, he recovered consciousness. He complained of a pain in his side, and after the prisoner had been locked up he was taken to his home in the wagon.

At the regular meeting of the Minnesota Historical society last night Hon. Alexander Ramsey presided and the following members of the organization were present: Capt. Blakeley, A. Catcart, J. B. Chaney, Judge Grenleaf Clark, W. P. Clough, John Espy, Charles D. Elfelt, H. S. Fairchild, N. P. Langford, John D. Ludden, D. A. Monfort, Charles E. Mayo, Gen. B. Sanborn, H. P. Upham and J. Fletcher Williams. After the usual routine matter had been disposed of Mr. Williams reported that the society was in receipt of many new donations consisting in the main of books, pictures and manuscripts, many of which possessed more than ordinary historical value. In the course of his remarks Mr. Williams said that nearly all the available space for such things used and that some plan should be devised by which additional room might be secured. The committee, consisting of Messrs. Flandrau, Clark and Fairchild, appointed to prepare a programme for the celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America reported that the interesting ceremonies would occur on Friday, Oct. 21, at 11 a. m., in the house of representatives at the capitol, and that arrangements have been made for an appropriate poem from the pen of H. L. Gordon of Minnapolis and an oration from Assistant Attorney General H. W. Childs. Mr. Williams has already sent out over 500 invitations to prominent citizens and nearly all the members of the society will be present with their ladies. The hall will be tastefully decorated and Mr. Williams is anxious to secure Italian and Spanish flags to hang with the stars and stripes.

Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn. Special, Oct. 11.—From every corner of the United States Congregational clergymen and laymen are now being whirled along in the cars toward Minneapolis, and when the sun sets tonight there will be nearly 500 of the delegates to the triennial national council of the Congregational Churches of the United States in Minneapolis.

Among the arrivals yesterday were Rev. William Moore of Hartford, Conn., registrar of the council, Rev. W. A. Hobbs of New York and Rev. E. Lyman Hood of New Mexico. These gentlemen were present at the meeting of the American board in Chicago last week, and attended the meeting of the Congregational ministers at Plymouth church yesterday afternoon and spoke to the brethren of the meeting. A committee was appointed on ministerial supply, consisting of Reverends G. H. Wells, Smith Baker and George R. Merrill. This committee will arrange to supply the local pulpits with visiting ministers next Sunday.

The church federation plan, as proposed by the Congregationalists and referred to the Methodist conference with their compliments, finds only partial favor with the brethren. The question came up in the Methodist conference yesterday on the report of the committee on inter-denominational comity, which was as follows:

We note with gratitude every tendency towards stronger fraternity among the various branches of Christ's church.

We desire a league offensive and defensive, with all that exalt our common Lord. Believing, as we do, that the divine favor has been manifest in the origin and history of various denominations, we are not of the opinion that diversity of operation necessarily antagonizes the spirit of Christ's prayer for the unity of his church. To build up Methodism at the expense of a sister denomination is foreign alike to the spirit of Wesley and of Christ. We, as Methodists, stand ready to co-operate with all Christian people for the suppression of the saloon; for the defense of our public schools; for the purification and defense of our municipal governments; for the maintenance of our sacred day of rest and worship, and for the evangelization of that portion of our population which knows not the purer Christian life.

While not willing to assume the outward restraints of an interdenominational court, we cheerfully accord with the intent, inspiring such plan, and will co-operate with sister churches in endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

This report was adopted on the spot and unanimously. It is the methods proposed that the Methodists can't swallow. They don't want to be in anything that interferes their independence of action.

Thomas Burns, who was employed in an elevator in St. Louis Park, was killed by a freight train on the St. Louis road yesterday.

Nathan H. Roberts, a pioneer resident of Minneapolis and an ex-alderman of the Seventh ward, died at his home, 2581 Cedar avenue, Sunday evening. He was seventy-seven years of age. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Lowered the Two-Year Old Record.

Louisville, Oct. 11.—In the Transylvania $5,000 stake to-day a Massachusetts horse, Kremlin, of the Allen farm, Pittsfield, Mass., took the prize in straight heats in neck and a half finishes. Bither, his driver, held him down with never a break in the three miles. Kremlin had a record of 2:11 3-4, and so had Walter E. Kremlin's best time in the race was only a quarter of a second under his record. But the unexpected and really great event of the day was the breaking of the two-year-old race record by one second in the second heat of the second race by William Penn. Time, 2:18 1-2.

Henry Irving is the proud possessor of thirty odd and valuable editions of Shakespeare.

SHOT BY MASKED MEN.

HARD CITIZENS ARE FILLED WITH LEAD.

Two Prisoners Are Murdered While in Charge of Wyoming Officers—The Borden Murder Case to the Front Once More.

Crime's Calendar.

Casper, Wyo., Oct. 11.—Meager details of the shooting of two men between Bonanza and Pyatville, in Johnson county, have reached Casper. The men men killed are Dahb, the man who last year fought a pistol duel near Landerwice, and a strange Texan.

It seemed that the two men were arrested for horse stealing two weeks ago and given examination and turned loose. Instead of leaving this country as expected, they attempted to terrorize the community by shooting at the people, and were again arrested and sentenced to jail at Buffalo. Constable Reilly started with the men for Buffalo, a distance of 150 miles, across the Big Horn mountains.

A party of masked men came upon their camp the first night and overpowering the officers, filled each prisoner full of bullets, and mutilating them in fearful shape. The men are supposed to be horse thiefs and belong to the gang operating in Southern Montana and the Yellowstone country.

Was Not Poisoned.

Tacoma, Oct. 11.—Chester F. Griesemer, who was found dying in a Philadelphia hospital, was one of the most prominent real estate men in the state, and was well known in fashionable society here. He went East on business six months ago and was expected back soon. He had an excellent reputation and it is believed by his friends that he was drugged and robbed.

Physician Sidebotham has completed a post mortem examination on the body and finds that death was due to a complication of diseases hastened by rum, and not by poison as was at first supposed. Greisner was a native of Pennsylvania, where his father is a well known business man.

Startling Evidence.

Boston, Oct. 11.—The Boston Globe publishes a thirteen-column story from Fall River, setting forth in detail new and startling evidence for the prosecution in the Borden murder case, which, it says, is in the hands of the police, and is to be given by twenty-five new witnesses, who will testify for the state at the coming trial of Miss Lizzie Borden. The evidence, the Globe states, is forthcoming from people, all of whom stand high in the community where they live, and who could have no motive for speaking maliciously or untruthfully of the defendant. A number will testify, so it is claimed, of seeing Miss Lizzie Borden at a window at a time when she must have been standing over the dead body of Mrs. Borden. Others, it is said, will testify to having overheard a quarrel between Lizzie and her father on the night previous to the murder. Frank Burroughs, a lawyer of New York, formerly of Fall River, is, it is said, the attorney consulted by Lizzie Borden about the property rights in a father's estate should a stepmother die first.

Grand Jury Charged.

Pittsburg, Oct. 11.—Chief Justice Paxson to-day charged the grand jury as to what constitutes treason against the state in the cases against the members of the Homestead strikers' advisory committee. The criminal court was crowded almost to suffocation. After detailing the causes leading up to the Homestead strike Justice Paxson said:

"The mutual right of the parties to contract in regard to wages and the character of the employment, whether by the piece or by the day, whether for ten hours a day or less, is fixed as any other right which we enjoy under the constitution and laws of this state. It is a right which belongs to every citizen, laborer or capitalist, and it is the plain duty of the state to protect them in the enjoyment of it.

"We can have some sympathy with a mob driven to desperation by hunger, but we can have none for men receiving exceptionally high wages in resisting the law and resorting to violence and bloodshed in the assertion of imaginary rights. The men had a right to refuse to work and persuade others to join them, but the moment they attempted to control the works and resorted to violence they placed themselves outside the pale of the law."

Were Hacked to Pieces.

Mobile, Oct. 11.—Hacked to pieces with an ax and then cremated was the awful fate of Richard L. Johnson and his charming eighteen-year-old daughter.

A gang of desperate negroes is supposed to have committed the horrible crime. The tragedy occurred at Johnson's plantation, near Davis' Ferry, Monroe county, Friday night.

Seven negroes have been arrested, and the people of the neighborhood are searching the country round about for several more, who are thought to have taken part in the bloody affair.

The first known of the crime was about midnight Friday night, when the neighbors were attracted to the Johnson home by fire.

The house was burned to the ground and the charred remains of Johnson and his daughter were found in the ruins. His skull had been split in half, and the body of Miss Johnson was litterally hacked to pieces.

Students Shot By a Farmer.

Lawrence, Kan., Oct. 11.—This evening Fred Bissell shot and seriously wounded Higgins and Jack Cracroft, students of the Kansas university, because they walked across the land which he has warned all students to keep off. Both were members of the university foot ball team and were returning home from a practice game. Higgins' wounds are probably fatal. His left hand and arm were torn away and a number of shots lodged in his left breast. Cracroft is shot in the right leg, but will recover. Bissell has been arrested and acknowledges that he did the shooting.

An Ingenious Crook.

New York, Oct. 11.—A crook who has been charged with one murder, implicated in many daring robberies and at the same time is the inventor of a contrivance for frustrating burglaries, is a prisoner at police headquarters. He was arrested on Friday last for having burglars' tools in his possession. He is known as John Gilmore, George Price, John Clare and George J. Bedford. In his home were found more burglar tools, three dynamite bombs and three patent mail pouches with certificates of patents issued in 1886 to George J. Bedford of Anamosa, Iowa.

Fast Going to Pieces.

Port Huron, Mich., Oct. 11.—The wreck of the steam barge Nashua lies three miles below Bayfield. The starboard side, from fifty feet aft of midships to the stern, is completely carried away. The bodies of none of the fifteen victims on board of the steamer have been found.

The Premier Disaster.

Seattle, Oct. 11.—Two tugs have succeeded in pulling the steamer collier Willamette from the Premier. The twelve persons injured in the collision Saturday are at the hospital and progressing fairly well. The body of William Richardson, the last of the five victims, was recovered yesterday. The Premier lies in twenty-four feet of water. It will cost $20,000 to raise her.

Carnegie Favors Protection.

London, Oct. 11.—Andrew Carnegie, writing from his residence in Scotland, contributes a long letter on free trade and national wealth to the Times. Mr. Carnegie says he believes as firmly as the Times that free trade is not only best, but that it is necessary for Great Britain, but for a new continent, with undeveloped resources, it may be the best policy to temporarily protect through import duties certain articles in order to secure the home supply. Mr. Carnegie then expounds the views of American protectionists. He says that the high cost of living of the American workingman is a thing of the past. He can buy more with a pound in the United States than can the British workingman with the same sum in Great Britain.

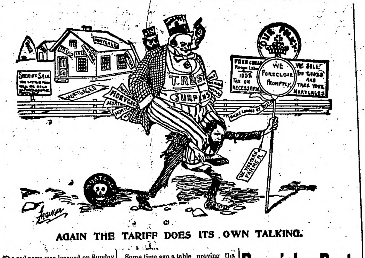
Ignatius Donnelly, the People's party candidate for governor will speak at Crookston on Friday evening Oct. 14th. Mr. Donnelly is the brightest and most entertaining political speaker in Minnesota and all who can should go down and hear what he has to say about the principles of the People's party.

We are in receipt of the quadro-centennial number of the New York Press. It contains fifty-two pages every one of which is artistically printed and highly interesting even including the advartisements. It is well worth perusing as a sample of modern enterprise and progress. If you wish a copy send five cents to The Press, New York.

Let us try a change. Ever since the state of Minnesota was organized the republican party has been in charge. All bad laws all failures to pass good laws, and all the outrages that capital has imposed on the people can honestly be charged to the Republican party. Let us have a change. Let us elect Donnelly governor. He certainly cannot make matters any worse for the farmer, and it is certain that the railroads, elevators and national banks are not subscribing to his campaign fund, which cannot be truthfully be said of some other candidates. We say again, Let us try a change.



AGAIN THE TARIFF DOES ITS OWN TALKING.

The sad news was learned on Sunday that Minton Holmes, who has been sick with consumption for a week past, had died early that morning, Few who heard a week before that he was sick thought that he would be taken so soon but as the week went by it became evident to his friends that he could not last much longer.

Minton Holmes was born in Goodhue county Minnesota, in June 1863. His early life was spent on a farm where he remained until he left to attend the state normal school at Winona. He came to St. Hilaire in 1884 and formed a partnership with C. G. Rapp in the general merchandise business which they continued for about four years, after which the partnership was dissolved, and Mr. Holmes with his brother started in the hardware business and a couple of years later in the grain business. In 1888 his health failing and fearing that he had consumption he spent a winter in California and another in Texas. Not seeing the improvement he desired in the fall of 1890 he left for Bergen Norway where he remained until this fall reaching here on Sept, 1st. Mr. Holmes was married at Bergen Norway, on May 18th to Miss Clare Vedeler, The end was sudden and unexpected, It started a week ago Saturday with a hemmorrifage of the lungs, the end coming as stated above on last Sunday morning. Mr. Holmes was admired and respected by all who knew him. He was a young man of good moral habits, first-class business tact his death was mourned by a large circle of friends. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon and was attended by a large number of friends, Rev. James Moody conducted the funeral exercises.

THESE ARE PLAIN FACTS.

If the government can make a good bond, it can make a good dollar.

If the government can loan money to banks and World's fairs it can loan it to the people.

If it is right to loan it to a corporation it is right to loan it individuals, if they furnish good security.

If its bonds are good security, land is as good or better.

If a government has to issue bonds to borrow money on, how can it ever expect to pay the debt off in money.

If the government can make money and is the only power that can make money, who does it issue interest bearing bonds to to get money back from the people, if it is not to fill the pockets of a favored few.

Fisher Bulletin; A People's party political club was organized in Fisher Saturday night last. The meeting was held in Roberton Hall and was participated in by a large number of voters, who are not in sympathy with the democratic or republican teachings. The Populists—as the party is generally known—at the above meeting, were considerably elate over their prospects of electing the entire state, but more particularly the county ticket, next month. In this belief, they were seconded by County Attorney Holston and Sheriff Grundysen, who made speeches, The officers elected by the club are as follows: John Gleason, president, Julius Wagner, vice-president, E. A. Sweet, secretary, H. B. Haney, treasurer, A public meeting of the club will be held in Roberton Hall on Tuesday night next.

Norman County Herald: Prosperity to the farmer means prosperity to the business man with whom he deals. Every additional dollar that the farmer is able to realize from his labor means another with which to buy more furniture, better clothes, more labor saving machinery, more books, everything adds comfort to his life.; more education for his children, more cheerfulness and more strength. For every dollar that he is robbed of, be the same by means of unequal taxation, excessive freight rates or depressing the price of his products, he must retrench on all these things and curtail his purchases.

Great West: Mr Donnelly has already made a gain of 25 000 votes in five cities of Minnesota, over the vote for Owen in 1890. This means a plurality gain of 40,000. Putting the republican loss at 15.000 and the democratic loss at 10,000, and Donnelly's gain over the republicans is 30,000. The gains all over the state are wonderful. The fact is that 40,000 is a moderate estimate of Donnelly's plurality gain over the republicans.

When any man says to you that Gov. Donnelly is constantly changing his politics just ask him to quote a speech or a vote any time in the last twenty years, that is inconsistent with the doctrines he preaches to-day, Insist on an answer and a specific one. He can't give it. Then ask him to give a vote of Gov. D. that was not on the side of liberty, justice, and the rights of labor, in field or in workshop,—Great West.

East Grand Forks Courier: August Kalle, arrested some few weeks ago on a warrant charging murder, sworn out by Christine Halvorson a widow residing some three miles north of town, had his examination before Justice Christianson at Crookston on Tuesday last and was discharged there not being the slightest evidence to even warrant the man's arrest. Axel Whalstrom sometimes referred to as the "Norwegian Bishop" was roundly scored by Kalle's attorney for the part he played in inducing Mrs. Halvorson to swear out the warrant. In her affidavit Mrs. Halvorson claims that in June 1880. Kalle killed her husband, Lars Halvorson, while the truth of the matter is that Halvorson while undergoing intense excitement brought on by a too liberal use of bad whiskey, fell from the railroad bridge and not being used to water was drowned.

Polk County Journal: At their meeting this week the county commissioners opened the bids for the new jail and awarded the contract for the brick-work to Wm. Erdmann for $13,975. The work of excavation for the cellar was commenced this morning and Mr. Erdmann says he will have his part of the work done before extreme cold weather sets in. The Diebold Safe and Lock Company are to put in the cells and such work for the sum of $4,790, and W. F. Porter & Co. will put in the steam heating apparatus for the sum of $2,090, When completed Polk County will have as complete a jail structure as can be found in the state.

ALLIANCE AND PARTY

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT LOUCKS, OF THE N. F. A. AND I. U.

It is the Duty of the Alliance to Vote in Support of Its "Political Views," but the Protective and Educational Organization Must Be Perpetuated.

To the Members of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union:

For years we have been studying political economy—"the science of government"—from a strictly nonpartisan standpoint, the only correct method of arriving at the truth in politics. With unparalleled unanimity and enthusiasm we have united on a series of demands which have been adopted, affirmed and reaffirmed by our supreme council, our state, county and subordinate Alliances. Last February at St. Louis they were indorsed by twenty-one other great labor organizations.

These demands are the result of many years' patient study and discussion of the labor problem. We believe they are just and essential. The time has now arrived to test whether we are going to be practical or not. The only way to secure the enactment of these demands into law is through political action—legislation. We have passed through the stages of discussion, resolutions and demanding. These are all preliminary and necessary to the final act of voting. Unless followed up by our ballots all that we have done will have been in vain. The difficulty that now confronts us as an organization is that while we are a unit on our demands we are not as to methods of securing them. We all must agree on the common sense proposition that the only way of securing them is to vote for them. Unfortunately our partisanship in some cases has proved stronger than our allegiance to our principles.

When we first made our political demands, we to that extent became a political organization. In doing so we did not become a political party, nor do I think we, as a class, ever should. So long as other classes and professions remain organized as classes or professions we, too, must perpetuate and strengthen our organization. But having, as an organization, made certain political demands, there was an implied promise that if they did we would support them; if not, we would oppose them. We have been met with the contention that this would interfere with our political freedom. Before taking the obligation we were assured that it "will not conflict with the freedom of your political or religious views."

The Alliance has been an educator. Our demands are our "political views." Instead of interfering with, we urge our members to stand by and support and vote for their political views. It is the only honest and consistent thing we can do. If you believe any other platform of principles of more importance than ours, then they are your political views, and it is your duty to support them in preference to ours. Our demands can only be crystallized into law, through the medium of a political party.

I lay down three common sense propositions: 1. It is always necessary to follow up a political party, after they have promised, to compel them to keep their promises. 2. It is very improbable that any political party will enact our demands into law unless they first promise to do so. 3. It is utterly ridiculous to expect a political party to enact our demands into law so long as they are fighting them. The man who has sufficient faith to believe that they will has enough to remove a mountain; but faith even of that kind will never move a political party. They live on and are moved by votes. Our first duty as citizens is to examine well the promises of all political parties as contained in their platform of principles, and to follow it up by their record to learn which political party is our party.

One political party having adopted our demands, it would be in direct conflict with our obligation to ask you to support a political party that has not done so. Worse—it would be asking you to violate the sacred right of franchise, which should be guarded as the ark of our covenant. As an organization we are in honor bound to support our principles. As citizens it is our duty to vote our principles. Our order is on trial. We have reached a point where we are certain to lose some members, and it is wise to consider the situation carefully.

To push on aggressively and in earnest we will lose those who love their old party bondage better than our principles. To be weak or vacillating at this critical time will insure the loss of the earnest, aggressive membership, who are honestly advocating our principles as of paramount importance to that of any political party. No true Alliance man can hesitate which course to pursue. Admitting a loss, which we must, which method will insure us the greatest gain? Unquestionably the honest, manly, consistent course of voting as we talk, resolve, demand and pledge. Experience in the state elections, where we have voted for our principles, has demonstrated that our gains have more than balanced our losses in numbers and strengthened us immensely in prestige and influence.

A few may be led away with the idea that because a political party has adopted our demands our efforts should now be concentrated solely for the party. This would be a grave mistake. We must perpetuate and strengthen our organization as a bulwark of our principles, present and prospective; a tower of strength to aid the party adopting our demands, and a terror to the party fighting them. In other words, we must remain independent of and superior to political parties.

Our only hope and safety is in perpetuating and perfecting our organization, pressing forward consistently and persistently until victory is assured. Fraternally,

H. L. LOUCKS,
President N. F. A. and I. U.

Weaver and Field.

Where are they? They are not at Loon Lake or Buzzard's Bay lolling around in luxuriant idleness with their mouths hermetically sealed by a national committee that is run by Wall street money and represents Wall street's interest. No, indeed; no such useless tasks devolve upon them. They are fighting manfully for the rights of the great common people who now feel the hand of oppression in this country, and for the freedom of a posterity that will have a right to hold the present generation responsible for the liberties bequeathed to them by the revolutionary fathers. If every voter in the nation could hear Weaver deliver one speech, Cleveland and Harrison might pool their issues and stay at Loon Lake and Buzzard's Bay all their lives if they chose, because they would have no public business to interfere with their lazy and selfish occupation.

General Field, the gallant old soldier, has one leg buried on the battlefield of Slaughters Mountain, on the 9th of August, 1862. He is hale and hearty and apparently in possession of all the fire and vigor of the prime of life. He makes his appointments at a long distance every day, and stands on one leg for a 2½ hours' speech without fatigue. He is a wonderful campaigner, and carries conviction to the hearts of his audience by his evident candor and sincerity, while he convinces their minds by his sound arguments and his great store of facts and information.—National Economist.

Tired of Such Prosperity.

In a recent address delivered in Omaha W. L. Green, of Kearney, Neb., "brought down the house" with the following remarks:

In Iowa the mortgage indebtedness has increased $2,000,000 per year. This is prosperity, is it? McKinley says that a mortgage is an evidence of prosperity. I had one or two of these evidences of prosperity, and I went home and told my wife about it; but, do you know, in spite of all I say to my wife—in spite of McKinley's statements—in spite of all the Republican campaign literature I have taken home, my wife insists that she wants to get rid of that evidence of prosperity? When McKinley was in Nebraska he had said that he had a mortgage on his house, but he was to blame, as he put it there himself. A highwayman meets you in a dark alley, and holding a revolver to your head says, "Money or your life." You give up your money. But you alone are to blame. You did it yourself. Of course you put the mortgage there yourself. You had to do it to preserve the lives and happiness of loved ones.

Filling the Chasm.

In introducing General Weaver, the chairman of an immense People's party meeting at Dallas, said:

We are nearing a crisis that will put to a crucial test the conservatism of every man in this nation. The capacity of man for self government is on trial. You today are confronted with 1,000,000 tramps begging for subsistence, 2,000,000 laborers on a strike, and five states in this union in open revolt with militia in the field to compel obedience to law. There are causes for this. The war is over; we are living in a period of profound peace. There ought not to be any sectional hate, but as men and women we ought to come together and work for one great government. There ought not to be a bloody chasm. We have commenced to fill up that chasm. We have put Ingalls in it and have put Sherman in it, and by November, with God's good grace, we will put Roger Q. Mills in it.

A Big Change in North Dakota.

A New York dispatch says: "Senators Hansbrough and Casey have been in New York together two or three days with Alexander McKenzie, of North Dakota, and have had repeated conversations with Chairman Carter and other members of the national Republican committee regarding the campaign in North Dakota and other northwestern states. McKenzie has promised the committee that North Dakota will give an old time majority not only for the national, but that the state and legislative tickets will be successful." It is possible that Alex McKenzie can no longer deliver North Dakota to whom he pleases. There has been a big change here, as Alex will see when the returns are all in.—North Dakota Independent.

Sick and Dejected.

The Jones crowd are sick and dejected over present ills and future prospects. They would like to undo many things which they have done and do many things which they have refused to do. There is no health in them. Twenty counties in Alabama can control the state under the present election law, should the probate judges, clerks and sheriffs of those counties conspire to accomplish that result. These counties can count enough votes to defeat the remainder of the state in any election. The little, petty despotism thus enthroned will have to tremble and fall to pieces under the demand of the people for their rights and liberties.—Alabama Alliance Herald.

Mr. Blaine "Indorses."

Mr. Blaine's letter followed fast upon the lengthy deliverance of his late chief. But the curious reader will find therein no word specifically commending Benjamin Harrison, candidate for re-election to the presidency. One single sentence in praise of the ticket of Harrison and Reid would have outweighed, in the mind of the perturbed Chairman Carter and his associates, all that the ex-premier finds to say in praise of McKinleyism as tempered by reciprocity.—Boston Globe.

Get papers from the south if you wish to learn about how the People's party is dying in that country. Weavar is obliged to speak three and four times a day in the same town to reach all the people who desire to hear him. It is one Fourth of July celebration all the time.—O'Neill (Neb.) Tribune.

Why He Desired a Cannon.

It is related that an Indian chief once approached General Crook and wanted to borrow a cannon. "Do you expect me to loan you a cannon with which to kill my soldiers?" the old veteran inquired. "No," the chief replied; "kill soldiers with a club; want cannon to kill cowboys."—Cor. Topeka Capital.

THE ACADIANS.

Romantic Figures in Pioneer History—Their Fortunes and Friendships with the Indians.

"The romantic traditions of Acadia begin with the ill-fated settlement of the Island of St. Croix, the cherished enterprise of zealous Countess Guercheville, and multiply fast with the advent on these western shoes of the gallant explorers De Monts, Poutrincourt, and champlain, and their friend and fellow-countryman the versatile Lescarbot, Acadia's first historian and poet," writes Arthur Wentworth Eaton in the New England Magazine. "In 1604, these chivalrous men first guided their shallops into the blue Acadian bays, and however much the common lust of power and greed of gain may have possessed them in the progress of their settlement at Port Royal they showed themselves good fellows, in whom sentiment and feeling abounded, and who amidst all their necessary toils and privations, on the rough seas or in the wild forests, never forgot that they were gentlemen. Unlike some of the English colonist, they dealt so kindly and kept such good faith wit the Indians that these children of the forest, from their chief down, were always their warm allies. When their treasury was full they would buy game and fish from the Micmacs, and wash their savory dinners down with good French wines. When it was empty they would make the best of their lean fortunes, and with gun and fishing rod, on the wooded hills and in the tide-swept river, find their own provisions. When De Monts would come back after some unsuccessful voyage to remoter parts of his domain, with broken rubber and torn sail, Lescarbot would decorate the fort with laurel and make a poem in the noble explorer's praise. When Father Biard converted the old centenarian chief, Memberton, whose heart had been completely won by these Frenchmen by their generous hospitality and the deference they showed his age and rank, they made his baptism on the shore of the basin an imposing ceremony, and with the echoing woods behind them, sang the church's Te Deum loud and clear."

Girls Who Run.

It used to be said, writes "A Male Observer" to Woman, that there were two things which a woman could not do. One was to run the other to throw a stone. Up to now she has not learned to do the latter feat, but at the former she is—provided she can run at all—an adept. The last generation of girls could not run They were told that it was hoydenish and tomboyish and every thing else to do so. They were forbidden by all the canons of good behavior and propriety to go no faster than a walk, like a team crossing a country bridge. If by any mischance it became absolutely necessary for them to run, the way they went it was calculated to make a man weep. They wriggled, they waddled, they stepped on the sides of their feet, they held their heads down to hide their blushes. The "running girl" now can catch a "bus" and subside into a seat breathing as gently as an infant. Unless some special poet arises we need not hope to see justice done them by words of description. Until then we lay this tribute at the feet—the very pretty feet—of the girl who runs to catch a passing 'bus or to escape from a sudden shower. N. Y. Recorder.

Modern Wives.

I am inclined to think, says Lady Violet Greville in the Graphic, that women, as a rule, are what men make them, and a husband of 22 or 23 lacks experience in wife-training. If only marriage were like a Civil Service examination! So many questions to answer, so many qualifications to fulfill—how easy it would be to prepare for two modern languages, or one, music or drawing, algebra or cooking, as the case may be! A man in the colonies knows what he wants a wife for—to cook, to sew, to scrub, to wash; in short, a respectable unpaid general servant, ordinary female labor being unattainable. But what does a man in London know of his requirements? The wife he married when he was a struggling junior at the bar, or a tradesman in a small way, is out of touch and out of harmony with his surroundings now that he is Lord Chancellor, or the head of a firm and a rising M. P. qualifying for a baronetcy. The small clerk needs a cook, the artist or literary man an intelligent companion; the brilliant statesman a woman who will exert a soothing influence over him, see that he has soup and wine when he returns from his work, and keep away from him all disagreeable and tedious admirers. Every great man requires and finds such a one—generally, unfortunately, however, in some one else's wife.

Military Precision.

Wit and presence of mind sometimes prevent audacity from giving offence. A story is told of a subordinate officer who so correctly estimated his general's character as to inspire in him a friendly feeling by a bit of daring repartee. He often dined at the same table with the general, and that gentleman for some reason became tired of seeing him. So one day he said to the young man, "Do you know the military exercises?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well. Right about face! March!"

"Pardon, general," said the soldier thus summarily ordered to go; "have you forgotten the proper order? before marching, one must take one's place," and he sat down to the table, and was promptly joined by his superior officer.

How Much to Sleep.

Some one says of sleep: "Six hours for a man, seven for a woman and eight for a fool," but there was never a more misleading statement. The amount of sleep one needs depends on the amount of mental work he does while awake. Men whose brains are never busy can get along with five or six hours' sleep a day, even though their hands are always employed during the waking hours, but the mental worker must have more or go crazy. To attempt to imitate Napoleon, who, it is said, could get along with four or five hour's sleep will drive any ordinary man into an insane asylum before the end of a year.

Why He Stopped Asking Questions

Mrs. G.—No; but I've heard of a woman who set a young man trap and caught a bear.—Detroit Free Press.

"German Syrup"

I must say a word as to the efficacy of German Syrup. I have used it in my family for Bronchitis, the result of Colds, with most excellent success. I have taken it myself for Throat Troubles, and have derived good results therefrom. I therefore recommend it to my neighbors as an excellent remedy in such cases. James T. Durette, Earlysville, Va. Beware of dealers who offer you "something just as good." Always insist on having Boschee's German Syrup.

CURES RISING BREAST

"MOTHER'S FRIEND" is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing woman. I have been a mid-wife for many years, and in each case where "Mother's Friend" had been used it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and worth the price for that alone. MRS. M. M. BREWSTER, Montgomery, Ala.

BAFFLED.

He played upon the simple stops of men
With ease, assurance, arrogance, almost;
To lift them into ecstasy with a toast—
Goad them to fury with a vitriol pen—
Fling favor in their faces and again
Compel it back—to mount an unreined host
And curb or spur it as he pleased the most;
This was child's play to him—the master, then.

At once the power to rouse and to control
He had, to awe, charm, anguish and console—
A fascination that transcended art;
Yet he despised this magic bitterly,
(Vain to one test as rhymes to lay the sea—
It could not win for him a woman's heart.
L. McK. Garrison.

THE WIDOW'S LOVE POWDER

When he first saw her she was a widow. She was still quite young, not over six and twenty, and her short, curly hair, of a dark brown shade, made her look even younger.

There was a pathetic look in her gray eyes that first drew Marsh Kendall's attention to her—that and one other thing that appeared extraordinary to him.

He had been loitering around the little suburban station waiting for the train to the city until the heat had brought on one of the severe headaches he so much dreaded. A man cannot abuse nature as Kendall had, working all day and half the night in the mines for months at a stretch, without nature resenting the neglect of her laws.

So it happened that while the spirit of the mines had rewarded his zeal by casting gold galore into his toil-worn hands, nature had retaliated by visiting him with a severe nervous headache every few weeks.

An accident had delayed the train for an hour, and Kendall took advantage of the delay to look up a drug store and obtain temporary relief for his aching head.

Not two squares from the station he found what he was looking for. A little, one-story building displayed the sign, "Drugs and Medicines," and Kendall entered the store and looked around for the druggist. A slight rustle behind the prescripton case made him turn his eyes in that direction in time to see the person emerge.

It was the young woman with pathetic gray eyes and short curly hair, and she advanced with an air which strove to be business-like and brisk. The years that he had spent away from civilization had not robbed Marsh Kendall of his innate reverence for woman. He removed his hat with a courteous if somewhat ungraceful bow and asked for the druggist.

"I am the druggist; what can I do for you?" asked the young woman, a little smile playing round the sad curves of her mouth and chasing the shadows from the depths of the gray eyes.

Kendall's perception was keen, and after another glance at her he noticed the dress of black, unrelieved by a single glimpse of white, and thought she had taken the place of her dead father, or possibly her husband, and was trying to breast the billows of commercial life.

A woman conducting such a business was a novelty to him, but during the ten years he had been away strange things had happened and Kendall accepted this as one of them. Reluctantly, however, for he was one of those men who think of a woman adorning a home and making it the brightest spot on earth for husband and children, not as a bread-winner.

"What would you advise for a severe headache?" he asked, recovering from his first surprise.

The little curly head was bent slightly sideways, as the druggist reflected. "Antipyrine is good, and antikamnia, too," she said, "but perhaps these are still better," and she took a box from a shelf and extracted some grayish-looking capsules from it.

"These are marked 'sure cure,'" she said, "and I have no doubt if you have faith enough they will carry out their promise."

Man is a creature of such imagination, that as soon as he had swallowed a capsule, washed down with a glass of cold water, Kendall's headache began to subside.

Reluctantly he left the store and stepped into the hotel across the street. He wanted very much to know the history of the young woman, yet shrunk from asking about her. He was relieved of this necessity by the landlord, who was only too glad to have some one to talk to.

"Guess you was surprised to see a woman runnin' drug store, wasn't you?" he asked with a little chuckle.

"I was, indeed," replied Kendall," and the question in his eyes led the loquacious landlord on.

"She's the Widow Kingsbury and her husband was a druggist. He was a triflin' kind of a fellow, never half good enough for her and he took from bad to worse. They had been married six years when he died after a protracted spree. Then she found out that he had taken the money she had toiled and worked for to help pay his insurance premiums and spreed with it.

"It was perfectly heartrendin' to see her despair when she found out how he had deceived her and left her with only the little store. She was sick after his death—that accounts for her curly hair—but as soon as she could creep around she opened up the store and has kept pluckily at it ever since."

Kendall ground his teeth at the recital. His heart gave a great throb of pity for the poor little druggist, and "pity is akin to love."

He had come down to the little place to look at some property that was for sale. It was rather a grand country house and although the price was reasonable he had concluded not to take it. But now, for obvious reasons, he changed his mind, and feeling much better walked around to see the agent and close the deal.

That night he remained in the village and again dropped into the little drug store to buy a box of capsules. He flushed redly as he asked for them, saying that it was "always better to be prepared." Nor was this the last box of them that he bought from the village. After his removal to his new home he rarely passed a day without dropping in and purchasing some. The widow's tender heart was touched with pity for the poor man who needed so much medicine for his headache, and "pity is akin to love." Had she seen the stack of unopened boxes of the magic capsules in Kendall's medicine chest the inconsistency of her sex would doubtless have prevented any change in the widow's sentiments. About two months after his first visit to her store Kendall came in and found an awkward country gallant going in just ahead of him.

"Want a nickel's worth of love powders," he snickered.

With a flush in her cheeks the widow bowed to Kendall and turned to wait on the countryman. She took down a bottle of fine, white powder and weighed the amount. As he took it the fellow said: "My chum used it and it worked fine. He spread it on candy and give it to his girl and they wuz married last night. Hope I'll have as good luck."

Kendall looked at the druggist questioningly as the fellow departed.

"It's what they call love powder," she said with a little forced laugh. "I hate to sell it but they will have it. Of course there's nothing in it—only their imagination. They think that if they can get a person to eat it their love is secured."

She stepped behind the desk to attend to something and Kendall was alone. Quick as a flash he drew a box of bonbons that he had bought for the widow and noiselessly moved over and secured the jar of love powder. He sprinkled it generously over the confections and slipped the bottle back into place. As he did so he lifted his eyes and saw the widow regarding him in a mirror that hung behind her desk.

Perhaps it was the expression in her eyes that gave him courage, for he turned and went back to her.

"I have brought you these," he said handing her the box of bonbons.

A demure smile which she could not repress played around the corners of her mouth as she gravely thanked him and opened the box.

One, two, three pieces she ate, and then Kendall, whose heart was wildly beating as he endeavored to speak, coolly asked: "Has it done its work?"

"I think it has," she said, faintly, and Kendall's arms were around her and her head was on his breast, the sad look gone forever from her lovely gray eyes.

Pig Feeding.

To make the production of pork profitable the stock must be kept growing steadily from infancy until ready for market. From three to four weeks old is the most critical period, and it often taxes the skill of the feeder to tide over this period without unfavorable results. The first requisite is to furnish a separate enclosure, in which the young pigs may dine unmolested by older hogs. This should be located near the feeding place of the dams. Prepare and place in this low troughs, such as are made by nailing together at right angles two boards, one five and the other six inches wide; this will make troughs about four inches high. Deeper troughs should be used as the pigs grow older. Keep the feeding place of the pigs clean, dry and inviting, by supplying straw in wet, muddy weather. The initial feed should be shelled corn, as young pigs will crack and eat kernels of corn before they will notice even the most dainty prepared slops, and in tempering the system from milk to stronger feed it has no equal, as it is not likely to produce dysentery.—Theo. Louis, in Farm, Stock and Home.

Steered a Middle Course.

A writer in Harper's Magazine says that some years ago, when stage travelling was more common in the White Mountain region than it is now, a well known driver had a curious accident.

The night was dark and cloudy, and both lamps upon his coach were brilliantly lighted. All at once he heard the gallop of an approaching horseman.

The road was narrow, and the driver pulled up his team to let the man on horseback go by. The next instant there was a tremendous collision with his leaders, and he jumped from the box to see what could be the matter.

It turned out that the other man, an Irishman, had ridden squarely between the leaders, and the three horses were floundering together in the mud. With much difficulty they were disentangled, and explanations were in order.

"How in creation did you get in there?" asked the coach-driver. Didn't you see my lights?"

"Faith an' I did," said Pat; "an' I thought I'd go between 'em."

Allspice.

The island of Jamaica produces about all the allspice that is used. It is known, also, as pimento, or Jamaica pepper. The tree on which the berries grow is evergreen and the flowers grow in dense clusters; these develope into small green aromatic berries, the size of black pepper. If allowed to ripen they become pulpy and lose some of their pungency. For commercial purposes, the berries are gathered when green, carefully dried in the sun, and afterward packed in bags holding 160 to 180 pounds, and shipped. Pimento trees grow in many parts of tropical America, but nowhere do they thrive as in Jamaica. The trees are never planted by man and receive no cultivation worthy of of the name. The seeds are dropped by the birds, and the rains and the tropical sun do the rest. Surplus trees are cut down and become walking sticks and umbrella handles. This spice is more mild and innocent than most other spices, and is sold by the grower for twopence a pound.

Coming to the Point.

There are some subjects which, the more they are explained, the more, in Tennyson's phrase, they are "darklier understood." A lecturer on theosophy had concluded a long and careful address, and said to his attentive audience:

"If there is any question which any one of you would like to ask, I shall be pleased to answer it."

For a moment there was silence; then an earnest-looking gentleman rose and said:

"I should like to know, professor, whether anybody has ever discovered a reliable cure for warts."

ABOUT THE CHOLERA.

Cholera Is Never Generated in This Country and Can Come Here Only By Importation.

The most important fact about cholera, a fact to bear in mind and to emphasize, is that it is a disease which is never generated on this continent and can come here only by importation, says Dr. Lewis A. Sayre, in the Forum. It has never travelled faster than it could be conveyed by sea or by land, and it has always followed the track of human migrations or of commerce. After every visitation in America or in Europe, it has been completely stamped out in both these continents. When it has come again it has always been brought from its home and breeding place—Asia.

If quarantine is a successful method of prevention by communities and by continents, as it has been proved to be over and over again, the same method is applicable, to a great degree, to personal prevention of the disease when it has invaded a community. Cholera is not communicated directly from one person to another, even under circumstances of the greatest intimacy; yet it is spread only by patients afflicted with the disease. By means of one infected person in whom the disease has manifested itself by only an apparently insignificant diarrhœa cholera can be conveyed to a whole locality. This person may travel without further development of the disorder, but he may leave behind him matter which may give rise to the most deadly epidemic. It is thus no longer inexplicable how the cholera in its wanderings takes no defined course, but spreads indifferently, now from west to east now from east to west; now with the wind and now against it; in cold weather as in warm weather: how it always follows the routes of travel; how it does not go from place to place in a shorter time than is required for men to travel the same distance, and how, since the building of railways, it has been able to spread more quickly than before. Sometimes it has made great leaps. In the localities visited by the disease, the houses and streets in which those infected reside are of course the places of the greatest danger. It has happened that a single house or street has for a long time been the only infected locality. But while those buildings or neighborhoods first visited by the cholera are being depopulated, the infection sooner or later is easily communicated to other houses and streets, partly by means of common privies and partly by other ways, surely by water if by any means the water supply has been affected.

PINZON.

The Humble Associate and Patron of Columbus—The Man Who Held the Purse-strings.

"Pinzon had no acquaintance at court, he was without title or rank, he was under no instructions, nor was he under obligation to anyone," says Isaac Bassett Choate in an article on "Columbus and His Friends" in the New England Magazine. By an act of spontaneous patriotism he put his influence and authority, his person and the persons of his brothers and other relatives, the ships that were his own,—in a word, the material of the expedition, —into the hands of Columbus, with perfect understanding that the latter was lacking the means and the influence to bring the fleet together. In addition to all this he advanced on this slender credit almost half a million of maravedis, or, it may be, the third part of the total expense. If the undertaking failed, Columbus would lose some of the illusions of his life, which constituted the sum of his investment, but if he did not lose all hope he would soon be found again as a suitor at some court. Pinzon on his part would sacrifice the half million without any hope that a poor foreigner, and one who was so wholly misunderstood, would ever find means to reimburse him."

Pig Feeding.

To make the production of pork profitable the stock must be kept growing steadily from infancy until ready for market. From three to four weeks old is the most critical period, and it often taxes the skill of the feeder to tide over this period without unfavorable results. The first requisite is to furnish a separate enclosure, in which the young pigs may dine unmolested by older hogs. This should be located near the feeding place of the dams. Prepare and place in this low troughs, such as are made by nailing together at right angles two boards, one five and the other six inches wide; this will make troughs about four inches high. Deeper troughs should be used as the pigs grow older. Keep the feeding place of the pigs clean, dry and inviting, by supplying straw in wet, muddy weather. The initial feed should be shelled corn, as young pigs will crack and eat kernels of corn before they will notice even the most dainty prepared slops, and in tempering the system from milk to stronger feed it has no equal, as it is not likely to produce dysentery.—Theo. Louis, in Farm, Stock and Home.

A Farmer's Well.

The well at Hull, in Sioux county, Iowa, is becoming famous. When the drillers got down some eight hundred feet they struck which they at first thought to be Sioux Falls quartzite. They are after artesian water, and it is known that there is no artesian water under that kind of rock. Specimens were submitted to various scientists, some of whom claim that it is jasper and others that it is not jasper. Prof. Colvin, geologist of the State University says that it is not jasper. J. W. Powell, director of the United States Geological Survey, expresses the opinion that it is jasper, and says, "it will take a chemical analysis to determine the dispute," and it is probable that he will be called on to make the analysis before long.

An Imperial Rescue.

Emperors and kings, when at home, are very much like other people, and it is doubtless in the small amenities of life that their real charatter shows itself most truly. An incident of the recent visit of the Emperor of Russia to his father-in-law, the King of Denmark, at the palace of Amalienborg, is creditable to the Czar, though it put him for a moment in a ridiculous light.

Early one morning, soon after the arrival of the Czar at Amalienborg, the sentinels who wer guarding the garden of the palace were astonished to see the Emperor come running out of the palace in slippers and shirt-sleeves, gesticulating wildly and shouting loudly.

The soldiers knew not what to do. Had the autocrat of all the Russias lost his reason, or been attacked by some mysterious enemy?

The Czar soon answered the question by rushing to a corner of the garden where a great barking and howling was going on. From the window of his sleeping-room he had seen one of his big dogs make an attack on the favorite black cat of King Christian of Denmark, and without waiting to summon a servant or even to put on a coat, he had rushed out to rescue the cherished pussy.

He saved the cat, and no doubt earned the lasting gratitude of the king, his host.

Why Certainly She Could Ride

"Some people are always saying the wrong thing, and I am one of them," said a young girl recently. "Just let me tell you the atrocious remark I made the other day to an elderly aunt from whom I hope to inherit a few cents, and judge for yourself what chance I stand for ever coming into even a smell of her fortune. She is positively the largest woman I ever saw, and is wonderfully sensitive on that point. In talking to me the other day she said: 'I really don't know how I will manage to get to see you as often as I would like now that the horses are sold, unless I buy a safety.' Do you think I could have one made for me?' Now, here was my chance to say something nice about surely she would not have one made to order, but, no; what do you suppose I remarked, like the dunce that I am? 'Oh, yes, I know you could, auntie, for I saw elephants riding them at the Crystal Palace, in England.' She didn't say anything, but something tells me my cake is dough so far as a future inheritance is concerned."—From the Harrisburg Patriot.

COPYRIGHT 1891

The best thing to do is this: when you're suffering from Sick or Bilious Headaches, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, or any derangement of the Liver, Stomach, or Bowels, get something that relieves promptly and cures permanently. Don't shock the system with the ordinary pills—get Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

They're the smallest, for one thing (but that's a great thing), and the easiest to take.

They're the best, for they work in Nature's own way—mildly and gently, but thoroughly and effectively.

They're the cheapest, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good you get.

What more can you ask?

But don't get something that the dealer says is "just as good." It may be better for him, but it's pretty certain to be worse for you.

BROUGHT OVER BY COLUMBUS

A Rare Old Bell Now Owned by a New Jersey Colored Church.

The congregation of the African Methodist episcopal church at Haleyville, N. J., has a rare relic in the shape of a large bell, which is said by those who have traced its history to be the oldest bell in the western hemisphere. The bell was procured by Captain Elias Newel on one of the Bahama islands and presented by him to the church. It is one of the bells, as stated, which Ferdinand and Isabella placed upon the Alhambra in 1492, and in 1502 was presented by Queen Isabella to Christopher Columbus upon his departure on his fourth and last voyage to America. It was placed in the chapel which was the beginning of the great cathedral of Carthagena in New Granada. In 1697, upon the siege of Carthagena, it fell to the share of the French ship La Rochelle. Afterward this ship was wrecked upon the island of San Andreas, one of the Bahamas. A few of the crew were saved, together with the bell. From the descendants of the survivors the bell and its history were obtained by Captain Newell, of the bark Ezra H. Fisk of Haleyville. There is a debt of $190 resting upon the church at Haleyville, and so highly do the people value the relic—the Columbus bell—that they will not place it in the church lest the latter may be sold for debt and they lose the bell, but it is securely kept at the residence of Trustee Alfred Green. It will be 400 years old next year, and, the Brooklyn Eagle says, it is proposed that it shall be exhibited at the Columbian exposition.

A Wonderful Signal Light.

The experiments with a powerful search light on Mount Washington have had some highly interesting results. The light, which is of one hundred thousand candle power, produces a sufficient illumination at a distance of twenty miles from the summit of the mountain to render ordinary print legible. A narrow beam shot upward at an angle of forty-five degrees was visible overhead at Portland, eighty-five miles away.

The elevation of the light above the surface of the earth at Portland must have been more than eighty miles. Yet when it was made to a flash "dot and dash" signals in the air, a telegraph operator at Portland readily interpreted the word thus transmitted to him, and to prove that he saw the signal, telegraphed the words back to Mount Washington.

He could not see the light on the peak, which was hidden by intervening clouds, but only the beam of light passing at a height of eighty miles above his head.

This fact seems more surprising when we reflect upon the excessive rarity of the atmosphere at such an elevation, for of course the beam of light would not be visible if it did not illuminate the air through which it passes just as a ray of sunlight, entering through a knot-hole, makes a luminous beam in the dusty air of a barn.

It is evident at a glance that these experiments have a most important bearing upon the art and practice of signal beams of light thrown high and far in the air may yet prove of immense use for military and other purposes on land, and in the guidance of vessels surrounded by perils at the sea.

NO FOOL LIKE AN OLD ONE

A CONSUL GENERAL IS ALSO A FORGER.

To Supply the Wants of an Extravagant Mistress the Consul General of Ecuador Steps From the Paths of Rectitude.

Her Hours of Ease.

New York, Oct. 17.—The police have a distinguished prisoner at headquarters. It is Deemingo L. Ruise, consul general of Ecuador, South America. He has been arrested on a charge of forgery. He admits having forged the name of Gustave Preston, vice consul of Ecuador, to two notes for $1,000 each. He says he gave the money to a woman whom the police say is his mistress. Consul General Ruise is seventy-one years of age. The police say that Friday afternoon Vice Consul Preston called at the headquarters and reported the forgery. The detectives found Ruise with Mrs. Bertha Laws, the woman to whom he gave the money.

Ruise was taken to Jefferson Market police court to-day. The prisoner's son was present in court with Lawyer Price, who had been engaged to defend him. During the brief proceeding before Justice Ryan the fact was disclosed that Mr. Ruise, who is in his dotage, had been for some time in the hands of a band of conspirators who have fleeced him out of $30,000, and in their greed for more money, induced him to endorse the two $1,000 notes bearing the forged signatures of Consul Preston. The principal in the conspiracy which has led to the downfall of the venerable consul general is said to be Mrs. Bertha Laws, his adopted daughter.

The friends of Mr. Ruiz, say the old man, has fallen completely under the influence of this woman, and has blindly obeyed her bidding for some years past, while she lived in luxury at his expense. He first became acquainted with her through an advertisement. His wife was in the country and his daughter in Europe, and he advertised for a housekeeper. Mrs. Laws answered the advertisement and she was engaged. She was then known as Miss Bertha Krundslat of Stockholm, Sweden. She soon got into the consul general's good graces and in a few weeks made him believe that she was his daughter by a woman other than his wife. She seemed to rejoice at her discovery of her long lost father, and was very affectionate to him. Mr. Ruiz, who is seventy-one years old and in his second childhood, finally adopted Bertha as his daughter. This led to an estrangement with his wife and children, and he went to live with the woman. A short time later Bertha introduced her husband to "her father." He was William Laws, a bookmaker and general sporting man, who is said to be now in St. Louis. The "father" was delighted that his "daughter" had married so well, and readily forgave her deception in representing herself as unmarried.

He continued to lavish money on her until he had expended $30,000, nearly all he possessed. Bertha needed more money and the consul general, acting under her guidance, went to Boston and called on Consul Preston. He told the consul that he needed $3,000 to make up a sum of $10,000 he was obliged to pay. Mr. Preston did not have that amount of money at hand, but he cheerfully gave him his note for $3,000, as Mr. Ruiz was a friend of his and had secured his appointment as consul for Ecuador at Boston. Then Mr. Ruiz and Mrs. Laws, who had accompanied him to Boston, returned here, and she proceeded to spend the $3,000. She had introduced him to Simon Epstein, who is well known to the police here, and he had advanced cash on the note. But $3,000 did not last her long, and in a few weeks she needed more money. As Mr. Ruiz did not know where to get any the conspirators concocted a scheme to raise it, believing that if the truth came out the consul general's friends would protect them to save him from disgrace.

A Newspaperist Nabbed.

New York, Oct. 17.—Charles H. White, representative of the London Illustrated News, was arested here Saturday charged with the embezzlement of $50,000. The charge is preferred by his wife, formerly Mrs. Magie, who lives at Cheyenne, Wyo. White was taken to the Jefferson Market court to-day and remanded. He will probably be extradited to-morrow. White in the first instance was also charged by his wife with having kidnapped her sixteen-year-old son, George H. Magie, with ulterior designs upon his fortune. Telegraphic dispatches were sent Supt. Byrnes by her attorneys that the lad was being secreted at the St. James hotel in this city, and upon their subsequent corroboration by the Cheyenne chief of police, two detectives were detailed upon the case. When they called at the St. James for the lad, however, they learned that White had left for Peoria, Ill., and that the boy had been sent to his mother's. This was just a month ago, and nothing was heard of the matter until Saturday, when the sheriff of Cheyenne arrived with requisition papers and a warrant under which White was arrested on the embezzlement case. White met Mrs. Magie, a wealthy widow, about a year ago while both were visiting Hot Springs. The acquaintance soon culminated in marriage, and White, as Mrs. Magie alleges, obtained from her shortly after by threat and duress $15,000 in cash and a promissory note for $75,000. In addition he embezzled from her $40,000 worth of stocks and bonds, and immediately upon disposing of these he fled. White, on the other hand, alleges his matrimonial consent was purchased for $100,000, but $20,000 was paid in cash. The balance was to be paid as soon as the widow could convert her securities. It was for the purpose of securing this balance, White says, that Mrs. Magie gave him her note for $75,000 and ample collateral security.

Going to Pieces.

London, Oct. 17.—The steamship James, from Christiana for Sunderland, was stranded on the harbor's sand early this morning. Heavy seas broke over her decks. In response to her guns life savers launched a life boat and after a hard struggle took off the seven men of her crew. The James was still ashore. Last accounts say she is going to pieces.

After a Century.

London, Oct 17.—It is announced that, owing to increasing competition, the business of the important copper spelter works of Pascoe & Drenfell at Swansea, established a century ago, will be wound up. The closing of the works will throw 700 persons out of employment.

A Feverish Sunday.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 17.—Racine has experienced what might be determined a feverish Sunday, owing to the enforcing of the laws and bringing about an old-fashioned Sabbath. The citizens' association has had three detectives on the ground. In consequence half of the saloons were closed, and the other half refused strangers liquor, and ran their places with closed blinds.

Raffled and Chopped.

Owatonna, Minn., Special, Oct. 17.—During a raffle for an accordian at Blxby today Joseph Ploiz struck John Schrum on the head with an ax, severely injuring him. Sheriff Barncard arrested the assailant and brought him to Owatonna to-night.

IN COLUMBUS' HONOR.

Services in Churches.

Baltimore, Oct. 17.—Columbus week in Baltimore began with special services in the Catholic church. Songs of the Genoese navigator were sung by choirs and he was preached about from pulpits. Cardinal Gibbons' request that all churches of the diocese hold special services to-day was acceded to with most gratifying results. The musical programmes were elaborate and brilliant. The services in the catheral were especially imposing. Cardinal Gibbons celebrated pontifical high mass and the sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. O'Gorman, of the Catholic university of Washington. Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate, and Dr. O'Connell of Rome were present. In the evening at vespers 250 seminarians sang the antiphons and psalms and the cathedral choir the Salvos Regina and the benediction music. Rev. Dr. J. Stafford preached on "Christ Over Columbus." Sermons on Columbus and the lessons to be drawn from his life and work, with long musical programmes, attracted immense throngs to all the Catholic churches in the city.

Cincinnati, Oct. 17.—The celebration of the discovery of America began today with exercises in Music hall, under Catholic auspices. The great hall was elaborately decorated by the national colors in all phases of designs, through all of which the stars and stripes were conspicuous. The celebration took the form of a grand concert by the combined Catholic church choirs and a chorus from the parish schools. An address was delivered by Rev. John Mackeye.

Des Moines, Oct. 17.—Columbus day was celebrated here to-day in the Catholic churches with special services and elaborate parades. The whole city turned out to witness the demonstrations.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—Services commemorative of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus were held to-day in the Chicago churches of all denominations. Excellent music and patriotic sermons characterized the memorial ceremonies, and all were largely attended. Signs of preparation for dedication week are becoming noticeable, most of the hotels and many business houses being already elaborately decorated. The public schools will be dismissed on Tuesday for the remainder of the week.

New York, Oct. 17.—Reports received here from points in the Southern, Middle and New England States indicate an almost general observance of Columbus Sabbath.

Rome, Oct. 17.—Special Columbus services were held to-day in St. John Lateran. Cardinal Rampola celebrated high mass and Mgr. Stoner officiated at vespers.

Pittsburg, Oct. 17.—Pittsburg is to celebrate Columbian week. There is to be a big parade on Friday, the largest ever held in Pittsburg. In all the Catholic churches of Pittsburg and Allegheny today were preached sermons on the life of Columbus.

Halifax, Oct. 17.—The 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus was commemorated at St. Mary's cathedral to-day. The 11 o'clock service was solemnized in honor of the most holy trinity. Archbishop O'Brien delivered a sermon on the occasion.

Good Duck Shooting.

Jamestown, N. D., Special, Oct. 17.—Within the next week duck and goose shooting in North Dakota will begin in earnest. So far the birds have failed to make their appearance from the north, owing to the unusually warm weather. The season is late and hunters who have come out to their accustomed resorts have been a little disappointed in not finding the usual sport. At present reports of the arrival of white brant and the Canada goose in the larger lakes are heard. Ducks are also beginning to come down. At Minnewaukan, on the Northern Pacific, the birds are reported as plentiful now. The next three weeks will furnish fine shooting all along the line. Single guns near Devils Lake are getting from fifty to 100 ducks daily. The variety of duck is very great. An increasing number of canvas back is being killed, and numbers of red-head. Jack snipe shooting is very good, and the wet weather this summer has left numerous marshes in fine condition for these lively game birds. The prairie chicken shooting has been excellent, and on the warm days the birds still lie well for dogs. One hunter near Minnewaukan killed fifty geese, all honkers, yesterday morning.

Imprisonment and Dismissed.

London, Oct. 17.—The court martial that tried Private Marshal, a member of "C" squadron of the First Life Guards regiment for posting on the canteen an article published in the Star on the recent mutiny of the squadron at Windsor, to-day sentenced him to eighteen months' imprisonment and to be dismissed from the regiment. Corporal Bayliss, who had charge of the canteen, and who, though he saw Marshall post the article did not report the fact to his superiors, was sentenced on Wednesday last to be deprived of his stewardship of the canteen.

Murdered in a Ball Room.

St. Louis, Oct. 17.—At Uhrig's cave at midnight William J. McKenzie, aged twenty-two years, attending a select ball, was fatally shot by Prof. Maurice Adams, a popular dancing master of the city. About seventy-five couples were on the floor at the time, and a panic ensued, men screaming and women fainting. When quiet was finally restored it was learned that Adams had made some remark about a young lady, a friend of McKenzie's, which the latter considered insulting. He struck at Adams, who then shot him. Adams is under arrest.

Episcopal Convention.

Baltimore, Oct. 17.—Much important business was transacted to-day by the triennial general Episcopal convention. A commission informed the deputies that the upper house had concurred in the amendment to Title I, canon 15 relative to the renunciation of clergymen. The committee on prayer book reported relative to the translation of the book of common prayer into foreign languages. A resolution authorizing the appointment of a commission to attend to the translations and report at the next triennial convention was adopted.

Canada's Cabinet.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—Changes in dominion cabinet are pending. T. M. Daly, M. P., of Selkirk, Man., will shortly be sworn in as minister of the interior, succeeding Hon. E. H. Dewdney, who will become lieutenant governor of British Columbia. Sir John Thompson will become premier upon the return of Sir John Abbott from England. He will be strengthened by Hon. W. R. Meredith, the present leader of the Conservative opposition in the Ontario legislature, and Hon. A. R. Angus, lieutenant governor of Quebec.

Perpetuating Humboldt's Memory.

Chicago, Oct. 17.—A monument of Alexander Von Humboldt was unveiled in Humboldt Park to-day in the presence of 10,000 people. A parade of numerous German societies preceded the unveiling, and several speeches were made in the park. The monument is the gift of F. J. Denis of Chicago to the Germans of the city.

Death of a Pioneer.

St. Peter, Minn., Special, Oct. 17.—Emanuel Moll, one of the oldest residents of St. Peter, died to-day from a stroke of paralysis.

Started in a Tenement.

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 17.—An early morning fire which started in a frame tenement did $125,000 damage, divided among the following firms: Vulcan Iron Works, $40,000; Theodore Smith & Bros., $25,000; Wallis Iron Works, $25,000; David Birdsall, $25,000; William H. Helnsinger, $10,000. The loss is covered by insurance. Origin of the fire unknown.

Wisconsin Y. M. C. A.

Appleton, Wis., Oct. 17.—The state convention of the Y. M. C. A. was brought to a successful close to-night with a farewell service by J. R. Pratt of Milwaukee. A mass meeting of the boys only was addressed by Mr. Mackenzie of Milwaukee and a young people's meeting was addressed by Guy Hunter of Madison.

The train was a couple of hours late again to-day.

James Dainard is in Crookston this week on business.

Max Ericsson, of Crookston, was in town last Monday on business.

G. S. Torgerson left last Monday for a short visit to St. Peter Minn.

Attorney Richardson, of Thief River Falls, was in town to-day on business.

E. H. Stranahan returned to-day from his trip to the southern part of the state.

Peter Mitgen, of Red Wing formerly of Crookston, was in town on business yesterday.

Mrs. Carl Johnson left last Monday for Minneapolis where she will visit friends for a couple of months.

S. M. Dainard received a carload of hogs last Monday. He had over a hundred and will fatten them here this winter.

Emil Holmes and bride arrived to-day from Goodhue County. The SPECTATOR offers congratulations.

Frank Gravel, the popular Crookston traveling man, was in town the first of the week on business.

Andrew Berg was around this morning with the information that he was the daddy of a baby girl born last evening.

The train was over four hours late last Monday. It was late out of Crookston but lost most of the time distributing ties.

C. G. Rapp received a telegram last Saturday from Mrs. Rapp at New York stating that she had landed that day. She is expected home in about two weeks.

Geo. A. Ralph, was in town las Friday on his way to the reservation. He says that he is progressing rapidly with his surveying contract and will finish in about a month more.

Dr. Barnes (Dentist) will be at St. Hilaire on Friday Oct. 21st to remain three or four days. Those wishing dental work done will please call on the Dr. the first day of his stay in town.

Dr. A. H. Dunlop and J. E. Morrissey of Crookston, and M. E. Bjerk of this place, who were hunting up north last week returned on Saturday. They report having a good time but state that the game is not very thick up there this season.

Ignatius Donnelly, the Peoples party candidate for governor, addressed the largest audiance Crookston has seen for a long time. Mr. Donnelly speaks in a convincing manner and makes Peoples party votes every time he makes a speech.

We have been asked to call the attention of Oscar Post to the fact that it would be well for him to tie up his dog when he goes to see his girl. The dog has a habit of staying very close to the door showing too plainly the whereabouts of his master.

Those in charge say that road from to Thief River Falls will be completed and ready to turn over to the company the last of this week. They expect to start a crew at work the first of next week, laying steel between here and Red Lake Falls. It will take nearly a month to complete the road to that place.

Village Marshall Johnson had some trouble with several men belonging to the railroad crew last Monday night. During the trouble several shots were fired but hapily no harm was done.

A number of the republicans of the village went down to Red Lake Falls last Saturday night to attend the republican rally. They have to draw them a long ways this year to fill a hall,

Dr. Barnes, (Dentist) will be at St. Hilaire on Friday Oct. 21st, to remain three or four days. Those wishing dental work done will please call on the Dr. the first day of his stay in town.

The Republican Nelson Octopus and Its Deadly Grasp.

Cannon Falls Beacon: A quiet wedding party assembled Wednesday evening, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Danielson, where at the hour of eight in the evening their daughter, Miss Emily Danielson, was united in marriage to Emil Holmes, the Rev. Stenborg performing the ceremony. The assisting grooms, and bridesmaids were as follows: Sidney Swanson and Selma Sanburg; Walter Holmes and Esther Danielson; E. H. Stranahan and Esther Holmes. The marriage has been arranged and the day appointed some weeks since, but owing to the recent bereavement of the two families, the death of Minton Holmes, there were no wedding festivities and only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present. Of those who came from a distance were E. H. Stranahan with the firm of Holmes Bros. in St. Hilaire, and L. W. Felt and wife of Chicago. Rev, J. J. Frodeen was present from Spring Garden. The young couple will leave, Saturday, for St, Hilaire where they will reside.

The day is close at hand when you will again be called upon to make choice by your ballots, of those who are to control the management of the great American Republic for the next four years. In times past the contest has been substantially between the two old parties, but in this year of grace, a new party has arisen, advocating new principles of government and new and humane ideas of the management of the most important affairs of the nation To those who are familiar and in sympathy with the new party and its principles, no arguments to convince them that they are in the right path to national success and individual betterment of condition, are necessary; but those who are still in the shackles of party prejudice, who in the whirl of a busy life have not had time to give the vital questions of the day and hour sufficient thought to allow them to form an opinion, we ask your attention: Of the many problems now before the people for solution, two only are of sufficient importance to require investigation or serious thought. These are the tariff and the financial questions. The Republicans advocate and demand a continuation of the protective tariff system by which the great and powerful manufacturers of the eastern states have during the past thirty years grown so enormously rich and arrogant, while you and all the common people of the country have steadily grown poorer until the protected classes are now able to dictate the terms of your further existence, Under this system you are no longer the free, proud, happy people you were wont to boast of, but on the contrary the servants of the rich man and the corporation with no hope of a better condition under the present rule In 1861 when the tariff was increased from twenty per cent to forty-seven per cent the sole excuse was, that the manufacturer in war-times was unable to compete with the manufacturer of foreign nations, because of inflated values, and when the war should close they would willing give it up. But when the war closed they had become so oppulent that they were and ever since have been, able to dictate the legislation of the country in their own interests; and when in 1890 the inequitious McKinley bill came up for consideration, these same manufacturers marshalled the hundreds of millions of which they had squeezed out of the pockets of the poor, earned by the sweat and incessant toil of the brawn and muscle of the nations support, and with it went to the nation's capital in swarms to lobby the fradulent, cruel, life sucking bill through an unfriendly house. How much of their ill-gotten gains were spent in "influencing" congress to grant them further and more exclusive rights to filch the people's substance does not matter, they acquired all they asked for and an increase of thirteen per cent was placed upon the statute books and long before this time they have been doubly reimbursed for the millions they spent in debauching the nation's servants. Under such conditions it does not seem possible that any voter of the great army of wheat growers can be led to believe by any argument however plausible that it is for his interest to grow wheat at 60 cents per bushel and pay out of his scanty store of net earnings 60 per cent clear profit to these robber barons of the east who manufacture the articles he needs and must have to carry on his farm and support his family, If you vote the republican ticket on the 8th of Novemner you vote to continue this condition of our affairs and the great drain upon your resources so long born without complaint will be kept up.

D. OCornor stopped off casually today to breath St. Hilaire ozone and says that he spent part of last evening in Fergus Falls listening to Cy Wellington at the Otter Tail court house, and part of his time he gave listening to "Old Ig." He reports that the Wall Lake Band (a farmer band) furnished music for the People's party, and the Fergus Falls band for Cy Wellington. The audiance at Cy's meeting was the band and a few old women, The audiance at Ig's meeting was the voters from miles around Fergus Falls numbering at least 2,000—no standing room left in the large opera house. If this is an indication of the result of the election returns, Donnelly will be the next governor of Minnesota. Not only is this the case at Fergus Falls. He informed us that he has attended similar meetings wherever he goes. He saw Knute Nelson's parade at Owatonna, He had 17 in line, 5 of whom carried torches. The Salvation Army followed up closely and they outnumbered Knute's following two to one. This year the people are thinking with their heads instead of their stomachs and will not be misled by the hireling, oily-tongued politician who says a duty is no tax and that cholera makes cheap wheat and all such gibberish. The honest yeoman has resolved for once and for ever to free themselves from the shackles of the railroad rings, wheat rings, bank rings, and all other bull in the rings. Put down all rings and put man on an equal footing with man, in open air, with an open and free market for everything, the consequences of which will be heralded to all the cardinal points of the compas.

Changed His Mind.

S. M. Dainard, the St, Hilaire stock man, was in the city this morning on his way home from a business trip to the southern part of the state. He was discussing politics quite freely during his short stay here, and said that this fall meant a victory for the National Democratic but that he had two to one to place upon Nelson's carrying the state. Before any of his bets were taken he took a train and left the city and thus he saved his money.—Crookston Times.

A CAMPAIGN OF VILLAINY.

Methods Which, If Not Repudiated, Will Disgrace the Fair Name of Georgia.

The Democratic party in Georgia are conducting the most infamous, villainous, and unprincipled campaign that ever cursed a state. Both party and press have demonstrated thus early in the contest the utter depths of degradation and dishonor to which they will descend in order to perpetuate a reign of ignorance and repression. It began some time ago with an assault on Watson and Simpson by Senator Gordon and that pious woman slanderer, Governor Northern, and has intensified upon these lines ever since. Nothing is too vile, slanderous or abusive to be used, and that, too, by those who assume to wear the garments of respectability.

If this is southern Democracy, free from disguise or concealment, then God pity the people of that section. If this is southern chivalry, robbed of its glint and glamour, how completely and wickedly the world has been deceived. If such infamous methods are based upon the distinction of being a "Georgian," let those who live in the slums and vilest sections of the country thank heaven they were not born to live in that state.

If this wicked, cruel onslaught does not react upon the party making it, justice and fairness has fled and the milk of human kindness is exhausted. Such conduct surely proves the crying need of reform and discloses the courage and self sacrifice of those engaged in the effort.

It is hard to believe that the common people—the farmers and laborers of the empire state of the south, those who are to be the final arbiters of this great contest, will consent to such an atrocious and outrageous course, since it is an open and unblushing attempt to coerce free speech and liberty of conscience.

If ancient Bourbon Democracy must rule in Georgia, if this political oligarchy must dictate the political principles of the people without objection or even criticism then indeed is the rule of the majority at an end and the sum of all villainies accomplished. Let the fair minded people of this great state arouse themselves to this danger and demand that these outrages upon common decency shall cease.—National Watchman.

Reasons for the Revolt.

The reasons for the present revolt which is going to sweep the Republican party out of power are to be found in the record. The record is bad: President Harrison is opposed to free coinage, the party is opposed to free coinage, votes against it persistently, and as the people of Colorado are almost to a man in favor of free coinage, they are going to vote for the People's party electors without any ifs or ands about it. They are going to vote for Weaver and Field because both the old parties are opposed to free coinage and the new party is in favor of it. The contingencies of "unless" and "provided" cut no figure, but "because" affords the true key to the situation. Do you understand, gentlemen? "because."

And so now there is no occasion to vote blind, and there is no use to prevaricate or lie, if you wish to vote against free coinage vote for Harrison, and if you wish to vote for free coinage vote for General James B. Weaver.—Greeley (Colo.) Tribune.

Getting Badly Mixed.

It seems that the festive darky is going into all parties and the place that now knows him will soon know him no more. It is well. No race ought to be arrayed on one side in a republic. A negro preacher refused to marry a "Democratic nigger" at Salisbury recently. Negroes have organized Cleveland clubs in some places, but the best evidence comes from Alabama. In the recent election there nearly all the negroes voted for Jones, the straight Bourbon Democrat, against Kolb Alliance men. This shows conclusively that there are changes going on. We cannot say a word against this. It is the only common sense way to settle the race question. Let the races divide in politics and the race question is a thing of the past.—Raleigh Progressive Farmer.

Not Very Sick.

With a flourish of trumpets the old party papers have announced Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota, sick or about to retire from the campaign. The chieftain is neither dead nor sleeping. He bounds, armor girt, into the arena in a ringing letter which concludes thus glowingly:

> We are advancing to certain triumph. The wiping out of the [illegible] majority given to Cleveland in Alabama four years ago, and the carrying of that state for the People's party ticket by [illegible] majority, is sufficient evidence that the whole line of southern states will go down in November next like a row of bricks, while the Republicans west of the Mississippi will scarcely have enough shreds of popular support left to cover their nakedness as they stand shivering before the bar of public opinion. No, Mr. Editor, this is not the time for the People's party of Minnesota to disrupt, dissolve or absquatulate. Yours in excellent health, IGNATIUS DONNELLY.

Teller's Declarations.

Senator Teller declared Mr. Harrison to be the "most potent and unrelenting foe to silver coinage in public life." Senator Wolcott declared that his (Harrison's) "re-election would depress silver fifty cents per ounce." This was before the Republican national convention. And now Senator Teller declares that there "is no relief from the present depressing influence to be expected from the Democratic party." We must then vote for Weaver, and we will.—Durango (Colo.) Herald.

California Alarmed.

Weaver's trip to California has certainly alarmed the Republicans. The Democrats rather enjoy the commotion, and as the labor vote is going for Weaver and many Blaine Republicans are sulking in their tents like Achilles "by the sounding sea," the Republicans of California are in a fair way to ask in November, "Where are we at?"—New Nation.

A Capitalistic Message.

The president's message was almost an insult to labor. With the militia under arms in five states he says the blessings of God have rested upon our people. "The workmen in our great industries," he adds, "are as a body remarkably intelligent, and are lovers of home and country." The manufacturers who furnish a large part of the boodle to be used in the re-election of Harrison treat labor, especially if organized, as though it were a foreign army, and many of them rely more upon the Pinkertons than upon justice to carry on their business.

Over a million laborers are out of work; as many more have been forced into tramps; the magazine writers and scholars of the land are crowding to the front with various remedies for an alarming crisis in our history; Europe wonders at starvation in the wealthiest of nations, and does not know what to make of Russian despotism in the land of the free. And yet Mr. Harrison with fatuous partisan blindness speaks of the blessings of God as resting upon our people. It is a mighty nation that can carry such divine blessings on its shoulders. The president is the agent of capital, and his message might have been prepared at a directors' meeting of railroad men.—New Nation.

A New Emblem.

The time has come for every American to rise up and go to the ballot box as free men and women, instead of going like sheep and cattle are sent into the incorporated butcher pens. Of course you know how the corporations have been shipping colored voters into Kansas. Since they found out we won't allow that class to vote, illegally they are trying to send them back under the scheme of Liberian colonization. I want to make a suggestion to the American people—when we can get representation through the law making power to have the American emblem changed to some more motherly looking bird—a hen hovering her brood of chicks, I think, would look more like a protective government than that giant vulture. It is too emblematical of those cannibalistic vultures that have been perched up on Capitol hill, at Washington, making laws for corporations and other millionaires. I feel much encouraged at the looks of the political situation. It will be a grand thing to have Mr. Lincoln's place filled in the White House, which has been a vacant chair to the people ever since his tragic death.—John T. Townsend, of Olatha, Kan.

A Learned Blacksmith.

Mr. O. E. Meitzen, of Hallettsville, the third party candidate for congress from the Tenth district, arrived in Galveston yesterday. Mr. Meitzen is known throughout the Tenth as the "learned blacksmith." In conversation with a News reporter he said:

"I left Hallettsville on last Sunday in a two wheeled gig, and have spoken wherever I could find a crowd to listen and have talked with whomever would argue with me. In all I have made, I think, thirty-nine talks. If I drove by a store and saw five or six or more men there I would jump out and talk with them and explain the people's party teachings. Then I would leave them a lot of circulars and would drive away, having made several converts. This I did on every occasion. If I met a man in a crowd of Democrats who wanted to discuss the political problems with me I always discussed with him—on the corner or anywhere else—and so I made converts among the listeners if I did not convert my opponent."—Galveston Cor. Dallas News.

New Jersey in Line.

The People's party of New Jersey held its state convention at Trenton, and nominated an electoral and gubernatorial ticket. The only state official chosen at the polls in New Jersey is the governor, who appoints all the other state officers. Benjamin Bird, of Hunterdon county, was nominated by the Populists for governor.

The platform adopted indorses that of the national party, declares that New Jersey is governed by corrupt politicians for their own gain, denounces the Reading coal combine, denounces the stand taken at Homestead by organized capital in its attempt to crush labor, denounces the prostitution of the national guard and favors the law compelling payment of wages every week.

Republican Insincerity.

Nothing more clearly illustrates the insincerity of the Republican party in its profession of love for the negro than the way it is doing in the elections in the southern states. The People's party stands firmly by the principle of a free ballot and a fair count. If the Republicans would stand squarely with us on this the negro would be enfranchised and Grover Cleveland would not carry a southern state. But so dead is Republicanism to everything but the triumph of [illegible] that they are turning their [illegible] to the Democrats of the south to help down the People's party by every species of fraud. It is surprising to see how little desire the Republicans manifest to "break up the solid south."—Nonconformist.

Protection from Monopolies.

We call upon congress for some form of national regulation of the coal supply to protect the people from the extortions of monopoly. It having been found that the authority could not be conferred upon the municipalities to establish coal and fuel yards, we demand extension of power to the legislature to authorize them to carry on any business, not for profit, but when necessary to protect their citizens from monopolistic combinations.—Massachusetts People's Party Platform.

The toiling millions lie prostrated and bleeding at the feet of the gold kings of two continents. Yet these millions toil and suffer on, never deigning to apply the balm that would most surely heal their wounds—the ballot.—Winnemucca (Nev.) Silver State.

Medicine Lake.

Medicine lake is a wonder that draws many visitors annually—a body of water that does not contain a living thing, and at certain hours of the day is full of a gelatinous, spongelike substance that sinks and leaves the water clear. At the lake are two mountains, one of pure obsidian, the other of pumice stone in layers.—Potter Four Corners.

"GOOD-BYE, JAKE."

A Pathetic Incident Attendant Upon the Death of a Brother.

Jacob Michael, 50 years of age, was killed near Cheektowaga by and Erie railway train, says the Buffalo Commercial.

Michael was a bachelor, and with a bachelor brother kept house near the city line.

The brothers were wealthy. For several years they owned a small farm just east of the city and by hard work they managed to make a bare living, then the boom struck the locality and they suddenly found themselves the owners of a very valuable tract of land. Agent after agent called upon them making what seemed to them fabulous offers for the property.

As each offer was made one of them marked it upon the stove-pipe, and they firmly declined to sell. The figures grew as the column mounted upward toward the smoke-begrimed ceiling. Finally an offer of $650 per acre was made them, and, as the stove-pipe would hold no more figures, they concluded to accept it, and the farm was accordingly sold.

A pathetic incident in connection with Jacob's death was the identification of the body of his brother Nicholas.

The body was placed in a plain coffin after the accident and word sent to Nicholas.

The surviving brother hurried to the station and when the cover was lifted from the coffin he stooped down and raised the dead man's head reverently. He gazed fixedly at the face for a full minute. "Yes he said in broken English, "That's Jake—Good-bye Jake, I hope you are in heaven. You will have a better time there than you ever had here. I'll never see you again—good-bye Jake," and he let the dead man's head sink back into the box, while big honest tears ran down his wrinkled, weather-beaten face.

GREAT ON KISSING.

An Interesting Japanese Programme for Home Rule.

A Government official in Kumamoto, Kodama Koichiro, of Yokohama, was married in July of last year to the charming daughter of a wealthy resident of Yatsushiro, Kumamoto-ken. The bride was 19 years of age and the groom 25. The man is described as "peculiar," a term which will suggest itself after perusal of the following extraordinary regulations which he drew up for the guidance of his young wife after marriage. They may possibly recommend themselves in some particulars to a few of the younger married couples of Yokohama, the number of which, by the by is rapidly on the increase.

MORNING.

5.30—Rise and perform ablutions.
5.20—House cleaning.
6—Worships God Buddha; a kiss; conversation and tea.
7.30—Breakfast.
7.8—Lessons to wife (?).
8-8.45—Private study and a kiss afterward.
9—Leave for office with tiffin.

AFTERNOON.

3.30—Return home and at once a kiss.
3.30-4—Ablutions and another kiss.
4.5—Lessons to wife and a kiss afterward.
5-6—Bath and a kiss afterward.
6—Supper.
6-7—Private study.
7-8—A walk in town and a kiss afterward. In case of rain conversation on history.
8-9—Music.
9—retire to bed.

The regulations conclude: "During my (the husband's) absence at the office, attention should be paid to cleansing the house inside and out, directing O-Roku, name of maid, and learning tailoring, penmanship, ikebana, flower arrangement, and chanoyu, tea ceremonial. The kissing is frequent enough to satisfy even an engaged young man.

AN "ELECTRICAL" SPRING.

Shrewd Device by which the "Greenies" Were Gulled Successfully.

The Electrical Review publishes the following about a wonderful "electric spring." It was but a plain mineral spring, but the cups that the patients drank from were fastened by a brass chain to an iron bar which inclosed the mouth of the bubbling spring. You were prevented from coming too close by another circular iron railing about eight feet across. The ground around the spring was naturally moist and it was either this ground or the iron which was one of the ends of an open electrical circuit. The end held by the chain was the other end. The person drinking simply completed the circuit through the body and when he had finished the attendant kindly and immediately removed the cup from his hand. The drinkers always felt that "delightful tingling sensation," and rejoiced that they had found the fountain of youth. Some imagined they even felt the new blood coursing through their veins. A small induction coil ingeniously concealed and connected with the cup and railing was a cheap method for producing that "invigorating feeling."

Did He Spend the Money Properly?

Washington Special—The report of Inspector Miller, of the interior department, upon the action of Special Agent Cooper is now before the secretary of the interior. It is a very huge document, and the testimony covers over eighty-seven typewritten pages. The investigation was conducted on the claim being made that Cooper had not properly expended the money entrusted to him for Sioux Indians in South Dakota. It will be some weeks before a decision is reached.

Merely Individual Claims.

Washington, Special The report of the commission sent to the Crow Indian reservation to straighten up the difficulty that existed there, consisting mainly in rival claims of the Indians and the white men to tracts of land on the ceded portion of the reservation, has been received by the secretary of the interior, but as yet no action has been taken confirming the recommendations of the commission. The report involves no great public question, but it is more in the way of a settlement of individual rights and the adjustment of individual claims.

A SOUTH WIND.

A romping wind blew from the south,
And woke the dreaming wood,
It kissed the rose's crimson mouth;
Rumpled the poppy's hood.

It crisped the waters of the brook;
Loosed pine-scents on the air;
And round her pallid temples shook
The dead girl's silken hair.
—James B. Kenyon, in New England Magazine.

HESTER'S ROMANCE.

The spring was very sweet that year, the orchard blossoms were heavy and rich on the fresh, warm air, and the Barnards' brown farm-house, with its mossy roof, fitted perfectly into the landscape of the gently undulating prairie land, but Joshua Barnard never noticed it; thirty years' companionship with his wife, Jane, had thoroughly eradicated the æsthetic part of his nature. She was a woman whose face gave one the impression that it had been rudely carved out with a sharp knife and not polished down; she accentuated this by dragging her hair back into a tight knot at the wrong angle of her head. Mrs. Barnard was noted in the country round about for her sharp voice, good butter, and obstinacy.

How she was ever induced by her enduring husband to let him send their only daughter, Hester, away to school had been the marvel of the gossips for months. Whatever topic was introduced it always branched off on to the Barnards. Pity for the head of the family, backbiting for the wife, and covert, envious remarks for Hester were alluring snares of wickedness that could not be resisted. Hester had come back that spring for good, her college days were finished and she was trying to settle down again in the old life that seemed a dream.

Four years of city life, with the refining influences she had met, had worked a marvelous change in the brown-eyed, quiet girl. She thought at first her father and mother had changed, and was puzzled, but when the real truth broke upon her she felt suddenly alienated, as though she were a stranger. They were where she had left them, while she moved a notch higher; it made her more tenderly kind towards her father, whom she loved; more charitable towards her mother, who was at once proud of her and dissatisfied and on account of this sometimes trying. It hurt Hester to hear her mother boast to a neighbor of her daughter's accomplishments; it filled her with chagrin to be pushed forward at the little gatherings, whose atmosphere had become distasteful, and to see the envious sneers on the faces of her former friends.

At first when she came back she had tried to meet them on the old footing, but she could not become interested in their gossip and beaux and they could not comprehend her. So, little by little, she fell back upon herself for companionship, much to the anger of Mrs. Barnard, who was ambitious for Hester to shine in the country side; her ambition went no higher.

"You are ungrateful, Hester," she said sharply one evening, as she cleared the suppertable. "Look at the money spent on your schooling, and now you won't go anywhere, but stick at home like a nobody."

Hester did not reply—she had learned better—and stood looking out of the window in a hopeless sort of a way. She had earnestly tried to do her apparent duty, but life seemed very hard of late, cut off from congenial pursuits and friends. Yes, it was the friends, she thought, with a flush.

"And then refusing to go to the sociable to-morrow night with Nat Parkins," her mother went on in her rasping voice, "when every one will be there, and he is the richest farmer in this region, and all the girls would give their eyes to——"

"Mother!" Hester broke in desperately at last. "I do all in my power to please you, but I will not go with Mr. Parkins—I detest him!" and she fled to her room, where she threw herself sobbing upon her little bed. She felt so hopeless, so homesick for—well, for what? And in her abandonment of grief she repeated a name to herself as if it comforted her. She had not known when she left the city how she loved Herbert Strong, who parted from her at the depot with that reproachful look in his eyes.

What caprice had moved her to tell him no? At that moment she felt as though she would give the world to pour out her sorrow and penitence to him, but he was lost to her—gone to some far western town.

So she lay and sobbed herself sick. It was the natural result of her self-controlled trouble; she had not so completely owned to herself before how much she regretted the past.

When she rose in the morning she saw such a white little face and swollen eyes in the glass that she dreaded to go down stairs. A sort of apathy had seized upon her, however, and she quietly slipped into her place at the table with hopes that her mother would not notice her especially. But the sharp eyes of that busy woman took her daughter in quickly. She intended to watch her more closely hereafter, her dislike for Nat Parkins must be overcome.

"Hester," she cried in surprise, "what have you been doing to yourself?"

"Nothing," Hester said, wearily, bracing herself for the attack. Mrs. Barnard, after a moment's look, set down the coffee-pot and opened her lips, but suddenly, to everybody's surprise, Mr. Barnard who usually kept a discreet silence during his wife's tirades, laid his toil-worn hand on his daughter's shoulder.

"Now, Jane!"—her husband spoke with the authoritative tone he rarely used save when his daughter needed defense—"I want you to drop this nonsense about marrying Hester off to Nat Parkins. He is not her kind at all." In his blind way Joshua Barnard felt the difference between his gentle daughter and the bluff, rough young farmer.

"After she went up stairs last night," he went on, "I passed under her window, and the child was crying fit to break her heart, and look at her pale face this morning. Can't you see it?"

"Yes, I see it," his wife said, crossly. It always roused her temper to be opposed unexpectedly by her husband, for she usually had to submit. "I see it, and it's all nonsense! Some good-for-nothin' city fellow, I'll warrant!" with which shot she left the table and began rattling the dishes in a way to prevent further conversation.

Joshua Barnard slowly left the house for the field. It was a new idea that his wife had suggested, yet Hester had never said anything to him about it, and there were few things she did not confide in him. He thought of it all the long, warm morning, till the terrible heat drove all the workers to the welcome shade, of the trees along the fence by the roadside.

The dust lay thick and dry on the ground, the insects shrilled monotonously—nothing stirred. A cloud of dust came down the road and Joshua Barnard and his men watched it curiously. Who was foolish enough to drive horses so fast under such a blazing sun?

It did not take much to check the exhausted span of bays, who stood panting and dust-begrimmed, and they turned to the light buckboard.

A man lay there, fallen under the seat, with his face a dark red and his clothes dust-covered.

"Drunk!" was the disgusted cry, but Joshua Barnard, who looked more closely, said, "A sunstroke. Take him to the house carefully," and followed, wiping his heated brow. He felt charitable now towards all strangers. Was it not a stranger that Hester perhaps loved?

There was confusion in the brown farmhouse immediately, for Jane Barnard was in her elements when she had a sick person on her hands, and she unceremoniously left Hester with the housework below while she took possession of the sick room. She was attracted by the unconscious man, with his handsome face and refined appearance.

"How is he?" Hester asked when her mother finally descended.

"He'll be all right after my nursing," that worthy personage remarked; and forthwith launched into a glowing description of her patient.

Hester's curiosity was aroused; so like—from her mother's description, yet—— A wild thought flashed through her head, and she stole upstairs with a beating heart and paused on the threshold. She felt dizzy and closed her eyes. "It could not be," she kept saying, "he is miles away from here." Yet when she finally did look at the unconscious face of the man before her a look of passionate joy came into her eyes.

"Thank heaven, Herbert, darling!" she cried, and as if the spell were broken he looked at her. A smile of recognition came to his lips and with a murmured endearment he tried to draw her to him.

"I have found him, mother!" her daughter said, with a smile through her tears, and as though this explained it all she turned to her father's open arms.

When Herbert Strong recovered and went away with his young bride even Jane Barnard had become reconciled to her new son-in-law, and never again in her life did she mention Nat Parkins' name. She accepted her defeat.

Origin of Mathematical Signs.

The sign of addition is derived from the initial letter of the word "plus." In making the capital letter it was made more and more carelessly until the top part of the "p" was finally placed near the center, hence the plus sign, as you know it, was gradually reached.

The sign of subtraction was derived from the word "minus." The word was first contracted in m, n, s, with a horizontal line above to indicate that some of the letters had been left out. At last the letters were omitted altogether, leaving only the short line.

The multiplication sign was obtained by changing the plus sign into the letter X. This was done because multiplication is but a shorter form of addition.

Division was formerly indicated by placing the dividend above a horizontal line and the divisor below. In order to save space in printing, the dividend was placed to the left and the divisor to the right. After years of "evolution," the two d's were omitted altogether, and simple dots set in the place of each. As with the others, the radical sign was derived from the initial letter of the word "radix."

The sign of equality was first used in the year 1557 by a sharp mathematician, who substituted it to avoid frequently repeating the words "equal to."—Philadelphia Press.

Venus.

The planet Venus continues to puzzle the astronomers. It is a world so closely resembling the earth in size that one might naturally enough expect to find many other resemblances between them.

But there is some peculiarity in Venus's atmosphere which renders the telescope study of the planet's surface exceedingly difficult. In fact, its atmosphere seems to be so extraordinary cloudy that only the merest glimpses of the globe beneath can occasionally be caught.

A recent review of the results of twenty years' observation of Venus by Trouvelot, the French astronomer, indicates that the surface of that planet is no less extraordinary than the atmosphere which covers it. Trouvelot thinks that certain white spots seen on Venus are the tops of vast mountains which protrude above the cloud-laden atmosphere. Curiously enough these mountains are nearly all in the neighborhood of the poles.

Observations by J. J. Landerer on the polarization of light reflected from Venus appear to bear out Trouvelot's conclusions. Landerer believed that the phenomena observed by him indicate that the whole surface of the planet must be covered by a thick layer of clouds, except in the polar regions, where parts of the surface extend above the clouds.

Death From A Broken Heart.

At an inquest on the body of a man who had died very suddenly, a post-mortem examination showed an immense blood clot almost filling the bag of the heart. The walls of the heart had a rent about an inch long, and the cause of death was syncope from the broken heart. The doctor said that it was a very rare thing to meet with a broken heart; and the coroner remarked that some were the result of mental and some of physical causes. The jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

COST OF SOME BIG THINGS.

Buildings, Paintings, Books, Horses and Cigars Which Represent Large Amounts.

The magnificent national capitol at Washington has cost, since the laying of the corner-stone in 1793, very nearly $16,000,000, but the state capitol of New York at Albany, although not yet completed according to the architect's designs, has already cost almost $20,000,000, and is the most expensive building of modern times. The largest and most expensive city hall in the United States is that of Philadelphia, and its principal tower is to contain the largest clock in the world. The greatest price ever paid for a horse was $150,000, given by Malcom Forbes, of Boston, for Arion, which he bought from Senator Stanford, of California. Axtell, the trotter, brought $105,000 when 3 years old, while in 1891 St. Blaise was sold for $100,000. One hundred and three thousand dollars has been offered and refused for a Hebrew bible now in the library of the vatican at Rome. This makes it the most valuable book in the world, so far as dollars and cents go. In 1635, when the entire Dutch nation was crazy upon the subject of tulips, a single bulb was sold for $2,200. At such prices it would pay better to raise tulips than to own the most valuable gold mine in the world.

Speaking of gold mines, where do you suppose the most valuable bit of ore ever smelted in the world, so far as known, was found? asks Harper's Young People. In California or Australia or India? No, indeed. It was a lot containing 200 pounds of quartz holding gold at the rate of $50,000 per ton, and was found in a mine at Ishpeming, Mich.

The costliest cigars ever exported from Havana were a quantity made expressly for the Prince of Wales and valued at 1.87 apiece in the factory. The largest sum ever asked or offered for a single diamond was $2,150,000, which the Prince of Hyderabad, in India agreed to give the jeweler who then owned the imperial, which is considered the finest stone in the world. The shah of Persia and the sultan of Turkey each possesses a prayer mat, or rug, made of diamonds and pearls, and valued at something over $2,500,000 apiece. The largest and most expensive rug in the world, made of the ordinary materials of which such things are manufactured is owned by the Carlton club, of London. A broken wooden horse with which Napoleon Bonaparte played when a child was recently sold for 1,000 francs. Think of paying $250,000 for a single meal. That is what a wealthy Roman once did when he wished to impress a dozen guests with his disregard for riches. The most valuable of modern paintings is Meissonier's "1814," which was bought by a Frenchman for $170,000. The same gentleman paid $150,000 for "The Angelus," by Millet, of which you all have doubtless seen photographs or other reproductions.

In the Coils of a Python.

Not many persons have been hugged by an angry and hungry python fourteen feet long and have escaped. One man had that experience recently, and he probably would not now be alive had assistance not arrived just in time. He is Superintendent Stephen of the Cincinnati Zoological Gardens, and he was engaged in taking all the snakes out of a cage and putting them into a box in order to make some changes in the cage. There were several boa-constrictors and one big python, and all were active, as they had not been fed for some time, which with a big snake means for a week or two.

Mr. Stephens had succeeded in putting all the snakes into the box except the python, which, when his back was turned, made a rush at him. He saw it coming, and as he could not escape, he seized the great serpent by the neck with his right hand, and with his left clutched its body about a foot behind the head where the muscles are strongest. The snake instantly coiled about Mr. Stephen's legs, and a contest of strength and endurance began.

Finally Mr. Stephens was obliged to loosen his grip upon the serpent's neck. Instantly the great mouth seized his hand and swallowed it to the wrist, closing its jaws as it did so and breaking a fang in the man's flesh. The pain roused him, and he clutched the snake's throat until it gasped for breath, when he drew out his imprisoned hand. At that point attendants rushed into the cage and beat the python until it uncoiled, and Mr. Stephens was released. Fortunately the bite of the python is not poisonous.

Lively for the Letter-Writer.

The carelessness of danger which characterizes certain soldiers does not always extend to certain persons about them. The French Marshal, Bugead, was once dictating, very near a battle-field, a letter to his secretary. As the general spoke the words of his letter, a bomb from the enemy's camp fell just in front of the door of his tent. The general went on talking, but the secretary seized his paper and half rose from his seat.

"Why are you stopping?" asked the marshal.

"The bomb!" gasped the secretary.

"Have I said anything about a bomb?"

"No—but—the—bomb—the bomb!"

"Now what," said the marshal, impatiently, "has the bomb got to do with the letter I am dictating to you? Go on with your writing!"

He resumed his dictation.—Tit-Bits.

The Rattler Showed Fight.

Dr. Johnston, of East Branch, over in Sullivan county, had quite a thrilling experience a short time since. He was called to see a patient at Read's Creek, a few miles distant from East Branch, and while on his way in his buggy a rattlesnake in some way coiled himself around one of the fore wheels of the wagon and came up with it, jumping into the buggy and showed fight. The doctor was full of courage and belligerent also, so he jumped on to the buggy seat with his feet and thus standing erect killed him with his whip.

It is No Wonder
That People Speak Well of HOOD'S. Mr. R. J. Brundage of Norwalk, Ct., of the firm of Buxton & Brundage, expressmen, 159 Main Street, writes his experience below: "For a long time I have been troubled with a weak stomach, followed by Mr. R. J. Brundage.
Indigestion and Dyspepsia
A short time ago I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and took three or four bottles. Result, I have not felt so well all over for years. My food seldom troubles me now. My sister, who was troubled about the same way as myself, took Hood's Sarsaparilla with very pleasing results. I do not wonder that patrons all along the line speak so well of
Hood's Sarsaparilla
Don't see how they can help it." R. J. BRUNDAGE, Norwalk, Ct.
HOOD'S PILLS act easily, yet promptly and efficiently on the liver and bowels.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Its Superiority to Others Recognized Now All Over the World.

In 100 years the United States will probably have as many inhabitants as China, and it is not likely that Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the Cape will fall much short of half their total, especially if England be reckoned with them, says Macmillan's Magazine. Some have even been found to maintain that English will not be the language of the whole even of the United States, while others point to the vigorous vitality of the French spoken by the French Canadians and the recrudescence of Welsh in the British islands as hints that such languages die hard. But it is impossible to suppose that such considerations can affect the main question.

There are already signs that English is becoming the literary language of Europe. Prof. Vambery, a Hungarian, published his autobiography first in an English dress; the Dutch author of "The Sin of Joost Aveling" wrote his novel, "An Old Maid," in English, and the author of "The Crustacea of Norway," himself presumably a Norwegian, frankly owns in his advertisements that, to obtain the largest possible circulation for his book, it will be written in the English language.

If a Man Can Write, Let Him Write.

If a man believes that he has some talent for writing, it is indeed strange that he can allow himself to be directed by a master or by the rule of any school, no matter how great the master may be or how skillfully devised the rule may seem. In the first place, is it possible for a writer, no matter how much he may wish to believe it, to belong to any particular school? No, and very fortunately, it seems to me.

A writer should do what he wishes to do, and do it in his own way, obeying only the all-powerful impulse that he has felt rising from the depths of his nature, without accepting any other judge than the wholly spontaneous impression his own work gives him. What an author has written in this way, whether it be memoir, phantasy, romance, drama, poem, or any other name you please, whether it can or cannot be put into a school catalogue, whether it have or have not success with the mob—all this is immaterial; for all true lovers of artistic work will surely recognize it if they find in it the breath of life, without which nothing can exist for them.—Pierre Loti, in the Forum.

Sheep as Beasts of Burden.

Sheep are not commonly regarded as beasts of burden, but in a large part of northwest India thousands of sheep carry for many miles the commodities purchased by the sale of their own wool. The mountain paths among the foothills of the Himalaya are so precipitous that the sheep, more sure-footed than larger beasts, are preferred as burden carriers.

The load for each sheep is from sixteen to twenty pounds. The sheep are driven from village to village with the wool still growing, and in each town the farmer shears as much wool as he can sell there, and loads the sheep with the grain which he receives in exchange. After his whole flock has been sheared he turns it toward home, each sheep having on his back a small bag containing the purchased grain.

A spell of sickness is due when the system's weakened, and the blood impure. It's what you must expect.
But it's what you must prevent, too. And Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery prevents as well as cures. It invigorates the liver and kidneys, purifies and enriches the blood, sharpens the appetite, improves digestion, and restores health and strength. For Dyspepsia, "Liver Complaint," and every form of Scrofulous, Skin, or Scalp Diseases, as Salt-rheum, Tetter, Erysipelas, or any blood-taint, it's an unequaled remedy.
It's not like the sarsaparillas, which claim to be good for the blood in March, April and May. At all seasons alike, and in all cases, the "Discovery" alone is guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, you have your money back.
It's the cheapest blood-purifier, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar, for you pay only for the good you get. But it's the best, or it couldn't be sold so.

The hypophosphites of lime and soda combined with cod-liver oil in Scott's Emulsion improve the appetite, promote digestion, and increase the weight.
They are thought by some to be food; but this is not proved. They are tonics; this is admitted by all.
Cod-liver oil is mainly a food, but also a tonic.
In Scott's Emulsion the cod-liver oil and hypophosphites are so combined as to get the full advantage of both.

EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK IN A CONDENSED FORM.

The Latest and Most Important News of the World, Culled From the Telegraph Reports of the Press Associations.

In Washington.

V. A. Cook has been appointed postmaster at Boulder Valley, Mont., vice George Preffe, deceased.

Mr. Blaine has communicated through Secretary Foster to the president an expression of sympathy with him on account of Mrs. Harrison's dangerous illness.

Ex-Secretary Blaine is expected to return to his house in Washington soon. He will be accompanied by his family, and will take up a permanent abode for the winter.

The navy department has received from the state department the indemnity of $75,000 brought from Chile to be distributed among relatives of sailors of the Baltimore that were killed in Chile.

George F. Underhill, formerly United States consul at Cuidad Bolivar, Venezuela, complains that, while engaged in his pursuit of ship repairing, he was arrested and roughly treated to prevent his lending aid to the revolutionists through the medium of his shop. Capt. White, of the Concord, will investigate.

Accidental Happenings.

Several persons are frozen to death in Colorado's great storm.

Heavy damage is done by a storm in England and ships are wrecked off the coast.

The British bark Lizzie Bell is reported ashore off the mouth of the Columbia river. The bark is in ballast, and is bound from Victoria, B. C., to Portland, Or.

During a Republican rally at Emporia, Kan., a cannon burst and fatally injured two men. John Kowalski had both arms and Lane Adair had his right hand blown off. Both will die.

The four children of Josh Matthews, living near Claremont, S. C., were burned to a crisp. The father and mother had been in attendance upon some religious observance and had locked the children in the house, which caught fire.

During a Republican parade in Pittsburg a cable car rushed down an incline and through the ranks of the marchers. Henry Apel was killed. Ward Ruffner fatally injured and several others badly hurt.

At Portsmouth, Ohio, two boilers in the rolling mill of the Burgess Steel and Iron works exploded. Richard Fleming and George Bressler were killed, twelve others are seriously and some probably fatally injured, and a score are more or less injured.

Personal Mention.

Mr. Moody is growing much stouter than he was, and a good deal of silver has crept into his hair.

Ex-Secretary Boutell, who is on the stump in Massachusetts, began to speak in public half a century ago.

Charlie Ross' mother is a remarkable looking woman, with a face that tells its own story, and hair prematurely white.

Goldwin Smith spoke at an annexationist meeting in Ontario the other day, declaring that the whole country was either at a standstill or declining in prosperity.

Lord Roseberry's farm ought to be intelligently conducted. He provides his plowmen with the daily and all the leading agricultural papers.

The bar room of a hotel at Bordentown, N. J., is decorated with a pair of elegant chandeliers that were brought from Spain by Joseph Bonaparte.

Gen. F. T. Dent has for several weeks past been very ill at the hospital at Fort Logan. He has, however, so far improved that he was removed to his residence in Denver. Gen. Dent is a veteran of the Mexican war, and brother-in-law of Gen. Grant.

M. Patenotre, the French minister, who is at home for the purpose of being married, has presented to his government for consideration the question of purchasing the residence of Vice President Morton, in Washington, for the French legation.

The young American artist Shannon, who has just turned 30, is the fashionable portrait painter of the day in London. Society has honored him with many commissions, and the highest ladies of the land have sat before his easel.

Among the Wicked.

Two men are lynched in Wyoming.

A large number of laborers are robbed in St. Paul by a swindler who had offered them employment.

At San Diego, Cal., an old couple named Grieser were murdered by an Indian burglar. He was arrested.

At Crawfordsville, Ind., Walter Layne shot himself dead because his sweetheart went buggy riding with a rival.

Edward Goodaire, manager of the New York branch of Redferns, has been arrested on the charge of smuggling.

Tommy Warren, the feather-weight pugilist, charged with the killing of Clem Slovall, a saloon porter, was indicted by the grand jury at Waco, Tex., for murder.

The skeleton of a murdered man, believed to be J. A. Launtz of Grant, Neb., has been found half-buried near an Alameda county (Cal.) village.

The City of Mexico El Universal says that the general manager of a New York life insurance company has been accused of embezzling $30,000 of the company's funds and has fled.

At Hazelton, Pa., 'Squire O'Donnell, a prominent politician and justice of the peace, was shot and killed by his constable, Isaac Phillips. The men were engaged in a political discussion.

Divens, the slayer of Clergett, seducer of his sister, in New York, was adjudged insane by a jury after 20 minutes deliberation and was discharged. The shooting created a sensation, it taking place in the court room during Clergett's trial.

John Wagner, proprietor of the Catney House, Emerson, Man., was shot in a bagnio a mile west of the town recently. The inmates of the house are under arrest in the Pembina jail. The murderess was Nellie Dunn, keeper of the house.

A fatal prize fight took place in the rooms of the "Philip Garrigan club Association," of New York, which came to the police office recently. John McGarry and William J. Neary fought to settle an old grudge. In the fourth round Neary received a blow in the chest from the effects of which he died.

From Other Shores.

The Aaron Meyer bank at Buckebourg, Germany, founded 107 years ago, has failed with liabilities of 1,500,000.

The parade held in Havana Sunday as part of the Columbus fetes has never been excelled in Cuba.

Herr Miquel, Prussian minister of finance is very ill. He has not left his bed for some time.

The Carmaux Mining company has approved the proposal made by Baron Reille in the French chamber of deputies to arbitrate the trouble between the company and its striking employes.

Some fighting with revolutionists is reported to have occurred at Santiago del Estaro, the central province of Argentine Republic. The insurgents captured the governor of the province and a few persons have been killed.

It is announced that, owing to increased competition, the business of the important copper smelter works of the Pascoe & Grenfell, at Swansea, Wales, established a century ago, will be wound up. The closing of the works will throw 700 persons out of employment.

At a large meeting held at Madstone, Ont, recently to discuss the future of Canada, under the auspices of the Patrons of Industry a resolution requesting the government to take a plebiscite upon the question of which form of government is the most suitable for Canada, was carried unanimously. A vote taken showed that political union with the United States was most popular with the meeting.

The London Chronicle's Paris correspondence says that the French government suppressed a portion of a recent dispatch from Col. Dodds, the French commander in Dahomey, in which the colonel accused Germany of supplying King Behanzin with ammunition and helping the Dahomeyans to raise earthworks of a European style. The alleged interference of Germans in Dahomey will, it is said, form the subject of a serious diplomatic controversy.

The Political World.

The County Democracy decides to put up a full ticket in New York city.

Ex-Secretary Blaine decides to write another political letter.

Judge Gresham denies the report that he will vote for Cleveland.

Mrs. Victoria Woodhull Martin gives out her letter of acceptance as the presidential candidate of the woman suffragists.

The Tennessee Republicans and Populists fuse on congressional and local candidates.

It is stated that Gov. Gray of Indiana will be Cleveland's postmaster general in the event of Democratic success.

Railroad Circles.

The Northern Steamship company has finally withdrawn its reduced rates on freight from New York to St. Paul.

The Great Northern has opened two new stations on its system the past few days, one at Parkdale, six miles east of Fergus Falls, and the other at Omemee, eight miles east of Bottineau, N. D.

The world's fair book published by the Great Northern company is quite an elaborate arrangement. It comprises a rapid sketch of the history of the discovery of America by Columbus, and which follows a concise and interesting presentment of the resources of the Northwest. The engravings which are numerous, are very fine.

Sporting Trifles.

This season the mile record is a very shifting thing.

The latest English wheel only weighs 17 1-2 pounds.

Cincinnati has released Meakin, the well known pitcher.

Charles J. Currie, at Winnipeg, breaks three world's records in putting the shot.

A cablegram was received from London by the Olympic Club, stating that Hall agrees to meet Fitzsimmons before the club but will not fight him before March. It is quite probable that a date can be agreed on satisfactory to all parties and that the two great middleweights will be brought together.

Recently in San Francisco Paddy Ryan resented some abuse of Sullivan by Duncan Harrison and knocked the latter down.

A deal between St. Louis and Cincinnati for the exchange of Gleason and Mullane next season is among the probabilities.

Labor.

The Boston granite manufacturers and the Boston branch of the granite cutters union have settled their differences.

The protective boards of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen of the Atlantic & Pacific systems of railroads in session at San Francisco recently, have elected the following officers of their organization: Chairman of general board, H. H. Norton of San Antonio, Tex., vice chairman, S. M. Green of Los Angeles; secretary, H. L. Walther of Dunsmuir, Calif.

Miscellaneous Items.

Will M. Cook, a young colored man, proposes to give a display of negro opera at the world's fair.

At Batavia, N. Y., during a Columbian celebration, an Englishman who had hoisted a British flag and refused to display the stars and stripes was bombarded with Roman candles and his flag torn to shreds.

Temporary receivers were appointed, for the Dartmouth Spinning company, of Augusta, Ga. The total indebtedness is $194,000, $50,000 of which is secured by bonds.

The second annual meeting of the American Warehousemen's association began in Chicago recently. There were present representatives of the association from twenty-one cities.

An unknown man who was found dead in New York has been identified as Frederick Archer, the ventriloquist. The actors' fund has taken charge of his body. Archer, it is stated, was the son of an English clergyman.

The law library of the late Nathaniel C. Moak of Albany is to go to the school of law of Cornell university. It is the most complete law library in the world, and cost Mr. Moak $75,000. This addition will make the Cornell law library 23,000 volumes—the largest law school collection in this country.

The claim of W. H. Beers, former resident of the New York Life Insurance Company, for $37,500 for acting in an advisory capacity to the company, was argued in the New York supreme court recently and decision reserved.

Alex Shaw, a coal operator of Baltimore, has begun suit against the Secretary of War Elkins and Ex-United States Senator Davis. He charges that he has been systematically robbed by Elkins and Davis, who own a portion of the stock and manage the affairs of the West Virginia Central & Pittsburg Railroad company, in which he, too, owns stock. He wants an accounting.

MRS. HARRISON IS DEAD.

HER LAST FEW DAYS FREE FROM PAIN.

She Quietly Passes Away at 1:40 This Morning—She Meets Death With the Patience and Resignation of a Devout Christian.

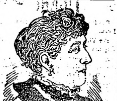
Review of Her Last Hours.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Harrison is no more. At 1:40 a. m. came the end.

For the second time in the history of the White House a president's wife has died within its walls.

Mrs. Harrison met death with the patience and resignation of a devout Christian and her last days were comparatively free from pain.

For twenty-four hours the family had been in almost constant attendance at her bedside. Last night was without special incident, but the president was never away for any length of time.



MRS. BENJAMIN HARRISON.

All of the family in Washington were present at the deathbed except the three little grandchildren and the venerable Dr. Scott, the father of Mrs. Harrison. They were: President Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Lieut. and Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Dimmick and Mrs. Newcomer. In addition Mrs. Harrison's faithful maid Josephine and Miss Davis, the trained nurse, were in the room. The members of the family spent a few minutes around the lifeless form. When they emerged with sorrowful faces the president repaired immediately to his own room and closed his door. The other members of the family, respecting his evident wish, allowed him to remain unmolested to contemplate his bereavement and commune with his Maker. They also retired and gave place to Dr. Gardiner. One glance of his practiced eye told the story of death.

The doctor went home, the last of the many questions put by the knot of waiting newspaper reporters were answered by Mr. Halford, the lights were dimmed and the quiet of the grave lay upon the great white mansion. Several policemen, who had been summoned in anticipation of the event, were stationed at all the entrances of the grounds to prevent people from intruding on the privacy of the president and family in their bereavement. Telegrams conveying the sad intelligence were also at once dispatched to all members of the cabinet absent from the city and to Judge Scott, Mrs. Harrison's brother, who is now on his way to this city, in the vain hope of reaching here before the end came. He started from Port Townsend, Wash., yesterday, and is probably now as far as Bismarck, N. D. The funeral arrangements were completed as follows: Religious services will be held at the White House Wednesday morning, after which the remains will be taken to Indianapolis, where the interment will be made at Crown Hill cemetery Thursday.
